UNEMPLOYMENT HITS CAR SHOPS IN JOLIET, ILL.

But Railroads Show Large Profits

By PATRICK SARSFREED.

JOLIET, Ill.—The Elgin, Joliet & Eastern Ry. was one of the few important roads in the country where the great shopmen's strike of 1922 resulted in a drawn battle.

The wages of the men remained at the same level as previous to the Labor Board decision that precipitated the great national struggle.

The economic crisis of 1924 has however not failed to affect these men severely. In the great shops at East Joliet, the main terminus of this railroad, 400 men have been laid off since Jan. 1, 1924 and those who were fortunate enough to retain their work have been working but four days per week since May, 1924.

The hourly rate for skilled car builders is 73 cents per hour and eight times 73 is $5.84 per day. $5.84 times four days is $23.36 to support a wife and a growing family.

This is the top wage and hundreds of men make only 40 cents, 53 cents and 63 cents per hour.

The E. J. & E. railroad, in the fiscal year ending June 1, 1924, listed excess earnings of $2,500,000.00.

The capital stock of this road is owned entirely by the Illinois Steel Co., a large subsidiary company of the U. S. Steel Corporation.

Local conditions in other industries are even worse. The following figures will give some small idea of the terrible unemployment now prevailing with no signs of improvement.

J. S. Heggil, boilermakers, two plants, 400 men employed in 1923; 100 men in 1924. Phoenix H. S. Co., one plant, full time in 1923; half time in 1924. Steel Company corporation, working at fifty per cent. Gen. Ref. Co., two plants, working only half time.

Trying to Make Len Small Disgorge State Funds Kills Mortimer

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Sept. 30.—Funeral arrangements for C. F. Mortimer, state's attorney of Sangamon County, were to be made this afternoon. Mortimer died suddenly Sunday after two years of failing health. He attained considerable prominence as chief of the prosecution in the trials of Gov. Len Small.

Communist Candidate for Governor of New York

QUAKER CITY TO SEE 'BEAUTY AND THE BOLSHEVIK'

Dramatic Russian Film Very Entertaining

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Sept. 30.—The Beauty and the Bolshevik will be shown in Philadelphia, Saturday, Oct. 4.

This is the first feature film from Soviet Russia and was produced by Proletkino in Moscow with the co-operation of a Red Army brigade.

The comedy is a real slice of Russian life especially is this true of the smaller towns. The role of the Red Army units in the life of these little communities is graphically pictured.

The film shows a Red Army commander—"Kombrig Ivanov"—leading his Red Army units into a little Russian town. Then follows the stationing of the troops in the houses of the rich. Krombrig Ivanov is stationed in the house of a rich czarist priest. There is a beautiful daughter and of course the inevitable occurs. This situation is handled with a fine touch of humor which delight the audience to the very end of the film.

It is worthy of note that Kombrig Ivanov is a bald headed hero, something unheard of in American filmdom but to Russia even film traditions are not holy.

The Beauty and the Bolshevik has had a spectacular eight day run in New York and the unanimous verdict of the audience was that the film is the most splendid yet to come from Russia and may be favorably compared with any American production as far as technique and acting are concerned.

With the Beauty and the Bolshevik will also be shown the three reel film "Russia in Overalls" which deals with the most recent industrial developments in the Soviet Union.

The films will be shown at the Lulu Temple, Broad and Spring Garden Sts. on Saturday evening, Oct. 4. There will be two shows, hours 6:30 and 8:30 p. m. Admission 50c.

CANDIDATE FOR GOVERNOR WILL OPEN CAMPAIGN

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 30.—James P. Cannon, assistant executive secretary of the Workers Party and its candidate for governor in New York, will formally open the gubernatorial campaign on Oct. 2.

The meeting will be held at Hunt's Point Palace, Hunt's Point Road and Southern Boulevard, Bronx, the scene of many revolutionary meetings in the past. The date is Thursday, Oct. 2.

To Explain Communist Stand.

Cannon, who is a most capable speaker, will outline the platform of the Workers Party and point out the differences between the Communist and LaFollette position.

It is especially urgent for workers to attend this rally in view of the confusion created by the socialist party thru its adherence to the LaFollette fake movement, thus giving up the vestige any revolutionary spirit that it may have had. This betrayal will be dealt with in the proper manner by Cannon who has been in close touch with political developments in this country.

Workers are urged to come early since a large crowd is expected to overflow the hall.

CAPITALIST LAW WON'T LET MAN DIE HIS OWN WAY

DETROIT—A resident of Detroit is going to be brot to trial for trying to end his misery with death.

A court is going to decide whether it is a crime punishable with imprisonment, for a human being to attempt to take his own life. The defendant is a drug addict overcome with despair. But despondency overy poverty caused by unemployment or despondency over illness from natural causes would obviously have the same status under the law.

Church Agrees with Heavan.

The church holds that it is a crime in the eyes of heaven for a man to take his own life or attempt to take it. But if death and the church don't get you in the event of a successful suicide, the law and the police will if you fail, if Paul W. Voorhies, prosecuting attorney of Wayne county, wins his case against Duber Harris.

There is no law on the statute books. But the prosecutor is going to bring Harris to trial under the common law on a charge of "attempted self-destruction." Harris has taken the drug cure three times. After being released from a sanitarium he returned to work at the Ford Motor Co. plant in Highland Park. He had not worked there long before he slashed his wrists in a desperate attempt to die. But he recovered. He is now in custody.

FOUND CHECK FOR $62.20 IN HAT; OWNER LOCATED—DID NOT WANT IT

There are certain things that happen only once in a blue moon. Elbert Hubbard, former bard of Aurora, now dead, was one of them. Mother Hubbard and her bare cupboard made a deep impression upon him in his safety-pin days. Elbert Hubbard's cupboard was never bare, as a consequence.

The other day, in Toledo, Ohio, a check for $60.20 was found in a hat. The hat had been passed up and down the aisle of a meeting. The meeting was a Communist rally.

We'll let A. W. Harvitt, one of the best DAILY WORKER agents in the party, tell the story:

"When we counted the collection we found a check for $60.20 in the hat. We thought the worker who gave it meant to make a small donation out of this large amount. We made inquiries, found the owner of the check and were told by him that he wanted the whole sum to go towards the Communist campaign. He had earned this money working overtime at his trade, he said. As his trade was not organized he could not rebel at overtime on the basis of work for the unemployed, and this made him feel that the entire sum should be given to the party that had an unemployed policy and a revolutionary program."

Things like this, too, only happen once in a blue moon. If they would happen oftener, the Workers Party cupboard would never be bare, no matter what the campaign or the need. A thousand workers giving $60.20 each—figure out for yourself what this would amount to and what we could accomplish with it.

THE ELECTION CAMPAIGN IS NOW AT ITS PEAK. DURING THE NEXT FOUR WEEKS MANY, MANY DOLLARS WILL BE NEEDED. EVERY DOLLAR WILL PAVE THE WAY TO REVOLUTIONARY ACHIEVEMENT. As we have said before—IN WITH THE DOLLARS!

Unemployment! Why It Occurs and How to Fight It

WHY WE CAN'T WORK.

Unemployment: Why it occurs and how to fight it, by Earl R. Browder, published by the Literature Department of the Workers Party of America. Price, 5c.

COMING at a time when serious suffering because of the scourge of unemployment is growing in the ranks of the workers, this pamphlet which clearly analyses the causes of unemployment under the capitalist system should have a wide circulation.

The opening statement of the pamphlet deals with the causes of unemployment, showing that there is always or usually an industrial reserve army under the capitalist system made up of workers whom capitalism cannot employ. This industrial reserve army becomes the great army of the unemployed during those periodical crisis which are the regular phenomena of capitalism. We need only look back to 1893, 1907, 1914, 1921 and 1924 to see how regularly there come periods when capitalism is unable to employ a large proportion of the workers. The cause of these crisis innate in the capitalist system are clearly outlined in the pamphlet.

Dealing with the present economic situation, the effect of the European war upon the capitalist system are reviewed and the destruction of the means of production during the war are presented.

The developments in Europe and the developments in relation to the capitalist system as a whole as a result of the war are correctly set forth. In dealing with the situation in the United States, the author declares "The American capitalist class (personified in the figure of J. P. Morgan) profited greatly from the war as did the capitalists of every other country—but with this essential difference that in America the means of production were injured only indirectly and to a much less degree than in Europe." And later states "but if the direct effect of the destruction of the means of production have not been a large factor in America. . . ." In these statements there is a misconception of the effect of the war on the United States. So far as the means of production in this country, considered as a unit, are concerned, there was no destruction of the means of production. Rather the reverse, the machinery of production in the United States expanded greatly during the war so that at the end of the war we could produce greatly in excess of our power of production at the beginning of the war. It is true that building operations of a certain type fell behind during the war and the railroad owners have claimed that the government did not make replacements in the railroad system, but even granting this to be true, there was not an impairment of our system of production considered as a whole and in making the argument that there was a destruction of the means of production in the United States the authorers.

Another error is made to the effect of the Dawes plan. The author states, "and in the now developing crisis with more than two million workers already unemployed the United States is fervently planning the subjugation of the European market thru the Dawes' plan." The context here indicates that it is the view of the author that the Dawes' plan will create new European markets for American products and thus relieve unemployment in the United States. This of course, is not the case. Quite the contrary, the Dawes' plan has as its purpose the re-establishment of the European financial system and European industry—to repair the damage to the means of production which resulted in Europe from the war. It is only thru the re-establishment of the capitalist system of production in Europe on a sound basis, if that can ever be accomplished, that the general collapse of the capitalist system can be even temporarily averted.

This re-establishment of European industry means new competition for American industry rather than favorable markets. So far as the American capitalists are concerned, the Dawes' plan is not a proposal for the creation of markets for American industry but a plan to secure the control of European industry thru the investment of American capital and thus to exploit European workers and take the profits from European industry. This is the view expressed by the Fifth Congress of the Communist International in declaring on this subject "therefore, the European and in particular the German working class was to be exploited not in America itself as immigrants, but in Germany. Bank capital—above all, the Morgan interests, also took part in order to grant a large loan and at the same time secure control over the German iron industry".

Continuing the discussion of the situation in the United States the pamphlet points out a revolutionist's solution of the unemployment problem as against a reformist proposal. It outlines a constructive program for the organization of unemployment councils and a series of slogans which have as their purpose to make the capitalists pay the cost of unemployment.

In spite of the two incidental errors pointed out above the pamphlet should be of great value in the unemployment campaign which the Workers Party is now conducting.—C. E. RUTHENBERG.

A REPLY TO RUTHENBERG.

COMRADE RUTHENBERG has been too hasty in his criticism of what he calls "two incidental errors" in my pamphlet. For he makes more than two errors in his own happily short article, and at least one of them is of more than incidental importance. Let me deal very briefly with my supposed mistakes.

Comrade Ruthenberg seems to think that my pamphlet argues that the indirect destructive effects of the war upon the means of production in America caused a crisis. Quite the contrary, and it is rather astonishing that he should have received that impression. For the very sentences which he quotes in part, go on to say that the replacements of the war losses formed the basis for "a period of unexampled industrial activity that bret American industry to a new high point of productive capacity." And I go on to state, quite definitely, that it is the conjunction of the agrarian crisis and the dislocation of the world market that constitute the major factors in the present crisis. I am sure that very few, indeed, who read the pamphlet with any care could possibly receive the impresison that Comrade Ruthenberg conveys.

But Comrade Ruthenberg made an error even more serious than that merely of misunderstanding me. He denies that the war caused any deterioration in the means of production in the United States. He admits "it is true that building operations of a certain type fell behind during the war and the railroad owners have claimed" that replacements were not made. Which must mean that Comrade Ruthenberg thinks that it was only dwelling houses that were not built during the war, and that the claims of the railroad owners were largely false. The slightest examination into the facts will disclose that all building operations fell behind during the war except that of war industries and for governmental purposes which are not an integral part of the machinery of production and which since have been almost entirely scrapped. And however much graft may have been included in the railroad claims, the fact remains that it is precisely these railroad replacements and building operations to make up the war shortage which have been the major factors in three years of industrial boom.

Comrade Ruthenberg tries to make me say that the purpose of the Dawes plan is to reduce unemployment. This is ridiculous and entirely out of harmony with what I said. It is hard to understand how any one could drag such an interpretation out of a paragraph which finishes with this statement: "The internal policy to accompany the Morgan plans for world-domination carries with it the corruption and pacification of the small section of organized and highly skilled workers, with the brutal suppression of the masses, and the destruction of all effective labor organization."

But again Comrade Ruthenberg has done more than misunderstand me. Again he has himself made a fundamental error. He denies that it is the purpose of the Dawes plan to "subjugate the European markets" to Morgan. He says "Quite the contrary, the Dawes plan has as its purpose the re-establishment of the European financial system and European industry"—which "means a new competition for American industry rather than favorable markets."

Comrade Ruthenberg's naive faith in the preamble to the Dawes plan, with which he is thus in agreement, is hardly a Marxian attitude. It is not the attitude of the writers who carry great weight in the Comintern. For example, Comrade Eugene Varga writes in the Inprekorr for Sept. 4: "Germany is to become an American colony. But, not Germany alone, strictly speaking, but France as well, and, in further perspective, the whole of the continent of Europe." If this is true, that all Europe is to become an American colony (and I doubt it Comrade Ruthenberg would take issue with Comrade Varga on such a fundamental point) what then becomes of the notion that the Dawes plan "means new competition for American industry rather than favorable markets?"—EARL R. BROWDER.

And yet there were unemployment, a low standard of living and low wages for the workers. The cockroach capitalists will do no more for the workers than the large capitalists have done, if LaFollette is put in power.

"LaFollette is against the trusts that are in opposition to the small capitalists. But even Theodore Roosevelt with his "Big Stick" could not smash the trusts. The combine of the Standard Oil Co., was dissolved by the United States government but the Standard Oil Co. is richer today than ever before."

The capitalist class itself, he said, will be replaced by a Communist social order.

Industrial Center.

A part of the significance of the Gitlow meeting lay in the fact that it opened in the industrial heart of Michigan the first Communist campaign in the history of the United States. And it was held on the thirtieth anniversary of the formation of the First International.

Among the immediate concrete results of the meeting were a collection of $325 for the Workers' Party campaign, 58 new subscriptions to the DAILY WORKER, a profit for the campaign fund of about $105 from the sale of flowers and Workers' Party buttons and the effect on the Detroit industrial workers of the distribution at that time of thousands of leaflets.

Well Advertised.

The day dawned with rain. Clouds hung over the city all day, with rain falling intermittently until the early afternoon. But the party workers and the Young Workers' League had planned well, heralding Gitlow's coming with automobile banners, posters, leaflets and a special Detroit edition of the DAILY WORKER. Rain could not dampen or clouds obscure the significance and spirit of the day.

Cyril Lambkin, chairman of the Workers' Party state central committee and the party candidate for attorney general in Michigan, outlined the history of the First, Second and Third Internationals, aplause following his statement that the Third International is "the real heir of the First."

Barney Mass, Young Workers' League organizer, made the appeal for the DAILY WORKER that brot in the 58 new subscriptions and stimulated the sale of the special edition in the hall.

Owens Defiant.

And Edgar Owens, district organizer of the party and chairman of the meeting, took time enough to say, in part, "Two years ago we were in jail. And now we can say, 'To hell with the jails!'"

The meeting was held eight days after a state convention, at the House of the Masses here, qualified William Z. Foster, Gitlow and party candidates for four state offices for a place on the ballots in Michigan, Nov. 4.

"He is not a laboring man. He belongs to no labor union. He has never been identified with any activity by a labor organization in the interest of labor," Gitlow said in turn of Calvin Coolidge and Charles G. Dawes, of the republican party, John W. Davis, of the democratic party, and LaFollette.

Heard Master's Voice.

"Sen. Burton K. Wheeler, vice-presidential candidate of LaFollette's Conference for Progressive Political Action," Gitlow said, "did not accept the nomination until he received a telegram from a gentleman in New York City. And the man who sent the telegram was Frank A. Vanderlip, retired millionaire banker, former president of the National City Bank, of Wall Street, New York City."

Gitlow also reviewed the events leading to the formation of the LaFollette campaign organization by representatives of dissatisfied groups. There, he said, were groups of farmers who were disillusioned by the withdrawal of republican party support from the grain market; capitalist class elements disgruntled by the overshadowing power of the trusts; industrial workers who were groping blindly for independent political power after learning of democratic and republican scandals in the United States shipping board, in the national treasury department, in the war veterans' bureau, in the department of justice and in the Teapot Dome affair.

The Third International.

Forecasting the preparation at the present time in the United States and Europe for another and more terrible world war, Gitlow said, "The Third International is a militant political organization, representing the work ing class in its very core. And if the capitalists of the world threaten to draft the workers into another imperialist war the Third International will be there to say: 'If you do, the working class of the world will turn your imperialist war into an international revolutionary war.'"

SLEUTHS GET DON CHAFIN ON BOOZE WARRANT

Scabherder Butted in on Bootleggers' Game

HUNTINGTON, W. Va.—State laws against murder and lesser crimes mean nothing to sheriff Don Chafin of Logan county, the principal figure in the West Virginia coal operators' campaign of violence against the miners' unions. But when Chafin, who helped to nominate John W. Davis at the democratic convention in New York, joined the get-rich-quick crowd in the bootlegging business the federal grand jury indicted him and he is to come up for trial in the next term of federal district court. The specific counts are conspiracy to violate the Volstead act and unlawful participation in the retail liquor business.

Buries Organizers.

Sheriff Chafin has taken operators' money for years and is interested in coal mining himself. He has had free access to the company treasuries to pay sluggers and gunmen engaged as deputies to beat up and shoot union organizers who come into Logan county to better wages and working conditions.

In the mine war of 1921 Chafin's armory and munition stores would have supplied a healthy Balkan revolution. In less troubled times his deputies board all trains entering the county and push pistol barrels against the ribs of men suspected of being union organizers. The suspects have to get out at the next station with a return ticket or else see the undertaker.

Chafin Undertakers' Friend.

The Chafin-operator gang controls the Logan sheriff's office and the courts. Any trace of unionism is smoked out and sent over the border with clubs and shots or put underground for good in a pine-board box.

Unionists think it a grim joke that Don Chafin can literally get away with murder in West Virginia and then get picked up by a federal grand jury for a few drops of Dago Red.

A number of his deputies, his partners in the liquor business, are also indicted.

THE YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE IN NEW YORK ELECTION CAMPAIGN

By JACK STACHEL
(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—There still exist the remnants of the social-democratic party in our ranks. Not only as to the form of organization (functions of social-democracy required territorial branches only while the Communist party must have its roots in the workshop hence the necessity of making the shop nucleus the unit of our organization), but also on methods and means of waging our struggles. While it is true that this inheritance is party outrooted ideologically, one still finds many comrades who have not yet completely freed themselves from the social-democratic ideology particularly is this true of the parliamentary campaign.

In the present campaign waged by the Workers Party we still find members of the Workers Party who believe that the sole function of the Young Workers' League is to assist the party, and members of the Y. W. L. who believe their whole role in the campaign is to assist in whatever the party is doing. The Young Workers' League does not assist in the election campaign as some organization that might come to the assistance of the party in this struggle. The Young Workers' League energetically participates in the campaign, because the party puts forth the immediate demands of the young workers and both the Y. W. L. and the party are working towards the same end—the dictatorship of the proletariat. The Young Workers' League is a political organization.

We reject the slogan—that the youth must not participate in politics. The young workers who are such, a mighty force in social production are also a mighty force in the working class political struggle. This struggle is the basis for the Communist education of the Young Workers. In this campaign we must fight side by side with the party; we accept the political leadership of the party and must mobilize the young workers for the Communist campaign.

The Young Workers' League of the New York District, as well as the junior section are active participants in the campaign. In securing signatures to place the candidates on the ballot they played an important part. In every branch there is a comrade in charge of the campaign and a committee to assist him. These committees work in conjunction with the committees of the party in their section. They participate in the conduct of street meetings, in the sale of literature, in the selling of campaign stamps, collecting money on subscription lists, etc. Thru the District Office speakers are sent to the various parts of the city in some cases holding the campaign meetings under the auspices of the Young Workers' League and in other cases speaking from the platform of the party. Today the Young Workers' League holds a dozen meetings weekly.

During the remainder of the campaign our work will be greatly intensified. Workers' quarters and factories will be invaded with literature, subscriptions to the Young Worker and DAILY WORKER will be sold, voters will be canvassed. Subscription lists for the raising of funds for Foster and Gitlow campaign are now circulated among all of our comrades, and money is being collected. Our campaign now depends upon the money we have at our disposal. We must now intensify our drive for funds. Every member of the Y. W. L. and of the junior section will be enlisted in this campaign for funds. More street meetings, and indoor meetings will be held in the last few weeks of the campaign.

Comrade Ruthenberg tries to make me say that the purpose of the Dawes plan is to reduce unemployment. This is ridiculous and entirely out of harmony with what I said. It is hard to understand how any one could drag such an interpretation out of a paragraph which finishes with this statement: "The internal policy to accompany the Morgan plans for world-domination carries with it the corruption and pacification of the small section of organized and highly skilled workers, with the brutal suppression of the masses, and the destruction of all effective labor organization."

Open Air Meetings in New York State Are Well Attended

By HARRY WINITSKY
(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 30.—Rose Pastor Stokes, Workers Party candidate in the 13th Congressional District, New York City, held meetings in the cities of Albany, Schenectady, Troy, Gloversville, Utica, Syracuse, Auburn, Geneva, Buffalo, Rochester, Niagara Falls and Jamestown. These meetings were a tremendous success. The committees report that at each meeting there was a crowd of at least three or four hundred people. Comrade Stokes sold a great deal of literature, DAILY WORKERS, and party platforms at each meeting, as well as taking up a collection.

The campaign committee has already received from Comrade Stokes $110.00, profits from her collections at these meetings.

Comrade Stokes will spend another week campaigning for the state ticket as well as the local candidates in Buffalo, and will then proceed to Pittsburgh to help the comrades there put over their local ticket.

The campaign committee is planning to send other speakers thru the state of New York and New Jersey. Comrade Rudolf Volgraff, candidate for U. S. senator in the state of New Jersey is also being sent on a tour thruout the state of New Jersey. In addition the campaign committee will send New York speakers.

SHOE WORKERS CONTINUE FIGHT FOR UNION UNITY

Time Declared Ripe for Amalgamation

(Special to the DAILY WORKER)

LYNN, Mass., Sept 30.—A group of militant shoe workers of the Amalgamated, Protective, and Leather Workers' unions responded to the call that was sent out by the International Amalgamation Committee of the shoe and leather industry for the purpose of formulating policies and tactics to be carried out in the shoe industry and try to reach an agreement upon some practical plan of action.

For Real Amalgamation.

In the absence of the secretary, John Ballam, organiser for the Workers Party, and candidate for governor of Massachusetts on the Workers Party ticket, called the meeting to order. Ballam stated the purpose of the meeting and Harry Wilham, one of the courageous rebel shoe workers was elected by acclamation as secretary for the meeting. Harry Ross reported upon the last amalgamation convention held in this city last month. He told of the election of a committee of five which was to arrange for a conference of all independent unions. In conclusion, Ross advised the militants of the unions to get together and work for a real amalgamation movement.

Delegate Checkoway, an energetic shoe worker, declared the time is ripe for amalgamation for the betterment of the wretched condition of the shoe workers.

Elect Committee.

A committee of fifteen was elected in order to carry on the work necessary for the consolidation of all shoe unions into one industrial organization. The agenda for the meeting of the committee of fifteen was announced as follows:

Election of permanent secretary treasurer.

Preparation for the calling of a nation-wide general shoe workers' convention.

Propaganda, leaflets and finance.

Organization of shoe workers rank and file committees in Haverhill, Chelsea, Salem, Beverley, the Brockton, Brooklyn and St. Louis districts.

General statement of aims to be drawn up and mailed to active and militant workers in all shoe centers.

Elections of sub-committees to carry out the plans.

HEARST'S CHIEF PEN PERVERT WILL VOTE FOR CALVIN COOLIDGE

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—Arthur Brisbane, one of William Randolph Hearst's most prized newspaper performers and often proclaiming, on paper, that the workers should have their due, announces to the Rotary Club that he will vote for Coolidge, tho "whoever is elected we shall have an honest man in the White House." Brisbane blatted praise about the candidates of both major parties and said that he would not advocate LaFollette's election any more than that of William Jennings Bryan, with whom he says he disagrees "from monkeys to beer. Charles Bryan, he calls "level-headed" and "second McKinley." Brisbane is incidentally one of the biggest owners of real estate in choice New York sections.

LABOR BOARD ASKS AID OF BOSSES' TOOL

Judge Wilkerson Called in On Railroad Fight

Federal Judge Wilkerson, who issued the Daugherty injunction against the striking shopmen in 1922, has been called to the aid of the instrument of the railroad owners, the Railroad Labor Board, and asked to force the railroad union brotherhoods to recognize the jurisdiction of the board and appear before it to give testimony.

Wilkerson has been asked by district attorney Olsen and attorneys Kirklan and Robert N. Golding, "special assistants to the attorney-general of the United States," to order John McGuire, of Chicago, and D. B. Robertson, of Cleveland, to testify before the railroad labor board.

These officials of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen have twice refused to appear before the board charging that it strongly favors the railroad carriers. Attorney Donald Richberg, their lawyer, charges the petition filed before Judge Wilkerson does not correspond with the facts and he will file an answer.

Strike-breaker Cal, Whiskered Charlie, at Fink's Funeral

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—President Coolidge, secretary of state Hughes and representatives of the Persian government, this afternoon attended the funeral services for Major Robert W. Imbrie, American vice consul and intelligence officer who was killed at Teheran, Persia.

Burial was in Arlington cemetery.

Editor's Note—According to an article that appeared recently in the New York Times, Major Imbrie was a United States stool-pigeon in Soviet Russia after the Bolshevik revolution and was a vicious hater of the Workers' Republic. The Times suggested that the "notorious Cheka" got even with him for his espionage in Petrograd, after Kerensky fell. While in Persia he was acting in his accustomed role of spy and agent of the Standard Oil Company.

BELGIAN COAL OPERATORS FORCE WAGE REDUCTIONS ON MINERS AS DAWES PLAN GETS INTO ACTION

The Strike of the Belgian Miners.

Comrade Miners! The Belgian capitalists are now engaged in a ferocious attack upon the miners. For three weeks have the miners of Borinage, Belgium, been forced to strike owing to the employers' arbitrary attempts to enforce a 10 per cent cut in wages contrary to the existing collective agreement.

Why did the Belgian capitalists take up the offensive? Because owing to the [illegible] payments of German coal, they have accumulated large stocks of coal.

Now, with the aid of these stocks and under the pretext of German competition, the Belgian mine owners try to dictate their will to the Borinage miners. The struggle now waged by the Belgian miners will soon have to be taken up by the miners of other countries also.

For the Dawes' plan which was accepted by the London conference will force Germany to increase its production and export of goods to foreign markets. This will lead to the accumulation of new coal stocks in France and Belgium, and the capitalists of these countries, as well as those of England, Czecho-Slovakia, etc., will cut wages and lengthen the working hours of the miners in order to be in a better position to compete with German coal.

Dawes Plan in Action.

The Dawes' plan is only beginning to be materialized; yet it has already led to the German mine owners imposing an eight, eight and one-half and nine hour day upon the German underground miners and a ten hour day upon the miners working above ground. Now, the German capitalists want to cut the miners' wages by 20 per cent. In Belgium the coal barons are forcing a 5-10 per cent wage cut upon the miners. The French mine owners declare that if the longer work day remains in force in Germany, they too, will have to lengthen the hours of the French miners.

Supported by Socialists.

Thus, the Dawes' plan which is supported by all the social patriots and reformists and which is being put into effect, thanks to their shameless betrayal of the workers' interests, threatens us, the miners of all countries, with such a very serious lowering of our conditions as could not have been anticipated before. It represents a true conspiracy of the capitalists of the world against our interests, a conspiracy which is being put into effect with the active assistance of the social patriots of all countries.

The First Victims.

Our Belgian comrades are the first victims of this murderous conspiracy.

The threat faces each one of us, no matter whether we work in Germany, France, England, Czecho-Slovakia, Poland, or any other country.

Therefore, comrades, miners of all countries, on to the aid of the Borinage miners. Support their struggle against the effects of the London agreement!

Demand the destruction of the conspiracy of the capitalists against the workers of all countries! Fight against the execution of Dawes' plan.

Demand a stop to the reparations payments!

Long live the Borinage miners!

Down with Dawes' plan!

Long live the International struggle of the proletariat against capital.

International Propaganda Committee of the Revolutionary Miners.

WEAVERS URGED TO STAY AWAY FROM NEMASKET MILLS

MIDDLEBORO, Mass., Sept. 30. The weavers of the Nemasket Mills of Middleboro, Mass., are out on strike. They call on all textile workers to keep away from the town till the strike is settled.

All wage workers in the Nemasket Mills are urged to attend a mass meeting of the strikers at the Owl Hall, Middleboro, on Friday night at 7 o'clock. A representative of the Amalgamated Textile Councils (National Office in Providence, R. I.) will address the meeting.

GROWING APPLES GOOD BUSINESS FOR MERCHANTS

Fruit Raisers Taking to the Trestles

By SYDNEY WARREN

(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

SUMMERLAND, B. C.—"An apple a day may keep the doctor away," but unless the fruit growers of the Okanagan valley get a better price for their fruit this year they stand a big chance of bringing in the bailiff.

Thieves in Abundance.

Travelling up and down this picturesque and most fertile valley of western Canada, I heard the same old story—high irrigation rates and taxes—thieving commission men and high-binding freight rates. Men are giving up their ranches after spending years in developing and improving them, unable to make a meager existence.

One man told me that this year he was giving up a 16 acre ranch that he had bought five years ago for $11,000 and had paid all but $2,000 of this amount. In Prairie valley near Summerland all but nine fruit growers in the valley were unable to pay their irrigation rates and the government took a first mortgage on this year's fruit returns to protect the water charges.

Apple Growers Soaked.

It costs about 60c a box to grow and pack apples and if the grower can get from 90c to $1 a box he considers himself lucky. Yet apples are sold to the consumer for from $1.75 to $2.75 a box and the middle man pockets from 100 per cent to 200 per cent velvet on each box of first grade apples. On second grade or fancy and C grade fruit the grower seldom gets more than the bare cost of picking and packing. This year despite the fact that the apple crop will be a third less than last year, I saw wagonload after wagonload of edible apples of lower grades hauled away to the dumps or fed to the pigs.

Economic pressure is gradually forcing the fruit growers of the Okanagan to adopt co-operative marketing that will eliminiate the big steal of the commission men and the railway companies on every box of apples.

LOCKED OUT CLEANERS GO BACK TO WORK

New Contract for Year Also Signed

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—The Guarantee Window Cleaning Company, thru which the Amalgamated Window Cleaning Employers' Association of this city inaugurated a test case for the purpose of breaking the Window Cleaners' Union, gave up the fight and took back its 23 locked-out employes. Not until the union's demands were granted and full recognition of the union was won, however, did the men resume their work.

It will be remembered that on Aug. 21 this company issued an ultimatum to its 23 employes to take their choice between the union and their jobs. The men immediately left their work and since the ball was started rolling by the bosses they decided to gather some moss.

They put in a demand for higher wages, better working conditions and of course full recognition of their union.

Lockout a Test Case.

The men knew the fight was started in an effort on the part of the Employers' Association to make this a test case in the strength of the union. For five years the employers have been wanting to break the backbone of the union.

The regular yearly contract with all the employers comes to a close tomorrow and if the strike had continued it would have involved all the window cleaners in New York City. The settlement comes just in time to avert a complete tying up of the entire window cleaning trade.

There are still two shops holding out for the open shop: the American Window Cleaning Company, 61 Great Jones St., and the Nordam Window Cleaning Company, 32 East 2nd St. It is expected that these two remaining shops will soon fall in line with the rest of the employers and accept the union.

The demand for an increase in wages has been left to an arbitration committee which will function in conjunction with the Labor Board of New York.

Against Children on Stage.

SAN FRANCISCO.—The Northern California branch, child labor commission has two amendments to the state child labor law which would keep children under 14 from appearing on the stage except at benefits or in the legitimate drama. The legislation is directed at performances by pupils of dancing teachers, in which it is claimed the children receive no compensation and are compelled to take part in vulgar and degrading entertainments.

Strikers Brave Police.

WALTHAM, Mass., Sept. 30.—Police were again called to the gates of the Waltham Watch company, whose employes have been on strike for four months, in an ineffectual attempt to intimidate the strikers. The strikers have been conducting mass picketing in spite of the police and have staged demonstrations in front of the gates in order to let workers looking for a job know there is a strike in progress.

Goslings Get Hurt.

SACRAMENTO, Cal. — "Torture rites" practised in initiating members into the Sacramento high school fraternities, resulting in serious injury to several students, have led the principal to substitute scholarship tests for all other initiation ordeals. The fraternities will not be abolished but transformed into "vocational guidance clubs," and no other associations will be allowed.

MILLIONS JOBLESS IN AMERICA ALL THE TIME, SAYS NEW REPORT OF RUSSELL SAGE FOUNDATION

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 30.—This time it is not the Communists who are making the astounding declaration that millions of workers are idle all the time in the United States.

The findings of the Russell Sage Foundation in its recent investigation of this problem is worthy of considerable study.

"Averaging good and bad years, 10 to 12 per cent of all the workers in the United States (several millions of men and women) are out of work all the time."

The investigation, which extended into more than 70 cities in 31 states and Canada, has just been completed. The full report, covering more than 600 printed pages, will be issued shortly. The survey was conducted by a staff of trained field investigators, all of whom had previously been engaged in employment work, under the direction of Shelby M. Harrison, director of the foundation's department of surveys and exhibits.

A Thoro Investigation.

Practically every known means for bringing work and the worker together was studied. The "want ad" pages of newspapers, the fee-charging labor agencies, the free public employment office, the labor union's method of securing work for its members, the fraternal order's activities in this field, the practice of applying for work at the factory gate or the office door, all were investigated.

A special study was made of the situation in Ohio, Wisconsin, Massachusetts, and New York, where there has been the greatest development of organized public employment work. Separate studies were made also of the special problems of farm labor, migratory and casual workers, junior workers, handicapped workers, immigrants, Negro workers, and professional workers.

After citing the fact that each year from 1,000,000 to 6,000,000 persons are out of work for weeks and sometimes for months at a time, the introduction to the Foundation's forthcoming report says:

Revolt of Workers Inevitable.

"There is something which we are just beginning to recognize—a resentment on the part of the workers against an industrial situation in which such insecurity and uncertainty of employment are possible. It is not only unemployment but the fear of unemployment—the knowledge that any job is uncertain and insecure, subject to the fluctuations of economic change—which is responsible for much of our present industrial unrest."

This situation, the report will show, has been aggravated by the fact that the unskilled worker who has sought employment thru certain types of labor agencies in many cases has been subjected to such abuses as: paying a fee and then failing to get a job; being sent to distant points where no work or where unsatisfactory work exists but whence he could not return because of the expense involved; being employed thru collusions between the agent and employer and after a few days work being discharged to make way for a new workman while the agent and employer divided the fee.

Difference Between Dictators

(By Federated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—Most of the European powers having recognized the government of the military junta which has overthrown the constitutional republic in Chile, secretary Hughes maintains cordial relations with this new regime, without giving formal recognition. He does not state, as he did in the case of a possible future violation of the constitution of Nicaragua, that he will not recognize a government that does not stand precisely on the constitution. He watches and waits and makes no promises.

HALF NECESSARY FUND FOR REED COLONY RAISED

Grand Duke's Estate is Now Children's Home

SEATTLE—Half of the $5,000 needed by the John Reed children's colony at Kvalinsk in Russia to take over the 1,000-acre grand duke's estate with excellent farm buildings is now on its way to the workers' republic.

Rev. Sydney Strong of Seattle announces that he hopes to collect the rest from readers of this story and other sympathizers before another month is gone. The first $2,500 came thru the publication in the Communist press and elsewhere of Anna Louise Strong (Anise's) story of her visit to the amazingly plucky and resourceful colony for orphan children established in John Reed's name on the Volga. She is Strong's daughter.

A Model Farm.

"They are still hoping," Anise had written in her first story, "that from somewhere will come money to take the fine estate down river and to let in the scores of children who come drifting to them down the Volga, drawn by the news of the John Reed colony. And to make a really efficient farm, a model to the peasants, I am hoping too that they will get this. But meantime they have gone ahead, without waiting. There are hundreds of thousands of pioneer children like these in Russia."

Strong announces that he will forward to his daughter any checks that may be sent for the colony. His address is 508 Garfield St., Seattle. Money sent direct should go to Anna Louise Strong, Hotel Continental, Moscow, Russia.

Mother of Communes.

In her most recent letter to her father, Anise pictures this future for the John Reed colony: "So that our colony should become in the end, not a single commune, but a Mother of Communes, drawing in the homeless children and in decades to come also the peasant children, and training them thru several years in co-operative labor thru all the basic forms of work based on village life, and sending them out, those who choose, to their individual jobs in city or home farm and others in organized groups to take up land elsewhere in Russia."

Stir the Shops!

The very best place to carry on a working class campaign is in the shops and factories where the workers gather to earn their living. It is there that minds are open to the measures, parties and candidates that stand for concrete solutions of the problems of bread and butter facing the working class. It is in the shops that the workers will see more clearly, for example, the difference between the union organizer and fighter for the workers, and LaFollette, the lawyer and fighter for the middle class. Provoking Japan

"Japan Admits Dream of War on United States," says the Chicago Tribune in a six-column headline over the story of Adachi's outburst at Geneva.

War with the United States is not merely a dream of the Japanese ruling class, it is a nightmare. The clashing interests of American and Japanese imperialism make war between the two nations just about as certain as anything can be in this unstable world altho it is probable that neither the rulers of Japan or the United States want war right now.

Internal unrest affecting all sections of the population other than the aristocracy and the big capitalists has not yet reached such intensity that a war for the defense of the national honor appears to be the only way out for the Japanese rulers. That it will before long afford them only this alternative to surrender is known to every student of Japanese internal affairs.

Our rulers have given the Japanese governing classes the finest kind of an excuse for a war—an excuse that for millions of Japanese workers and peasants might easily disguise the real causes of an armed struggle with the United States. The Japanese exclusion act is being used to weld together the Japanese masses, not with the success that might be expected among a people whose reputation for national pride is of the highest, but with some success nevertheless.

If a desperate Japanese ruling class can be provoked into an attack upon the United States it will certainly be a rich dish for our war-mongers.

We have held from the first moment that the agitation against Japan began that the handful of Japanese in the Pacific states and their skill in acquiring property was not the real basis of the campaign, but that the real reason for the hostility that culminated in the exclusion act was the rivalry of the imperialists of the two countries aroused by the desires of each for the unrestricted opportunity of robbing and oppressing the masses of the Orient, China particularly.

We are of the opinion that the present Japanese government will be swept out of existence by the outraged masses, that the Koreans will revolt and a government with strong leanings toward Soviet Russia will take its place in the event of war with the United States.

The workers of the United States then will be faced with the task of preventing their rulers making war upon the revolting Japanese workers and peasants and subjugating them as they did the Filipinos.

We must not be fooled by lies of the imperialist press. Not a single American worker has anything in the Orient that needs defense from Japan. If we take care of our own war-mongers the Japanese masses can be trusted to take care of theirs. The probability is that they will have their job almost completed before we start on ours, if we can judge by the rapidly increasing power of working class organization and the growing discontent in Japan.

The Agricultural Year

The latest agricultural year book just issued by the department of agriculture ought to find its way into the hands of every workingman and poor farmer. It is an official volume of evidence giving the lie to all the roseate contentions now made by the reactionary politicians about the conditions of the farming masses.

We draw the attention of our readers to such outstanding findings as these in the survey of what the farming masses are up against:

Within the last five years the value of farm property has declined more than twenty billion dollars. Within a single year more than a million farmers were driven from their homes by the severe economic depression and their inability to make ends meet. Since the close of 1922, 23% of the farmers of the wheat and corn states have been bankrupt. The proportion of tenant farmers who have been robbed of their property has been even greater.

Worse than that. The social degradation visited upon these farming masses who were dispossessed is a curse that no figures and no statistical reports can plumb adequately. Let us take the picture of this damnation of the farming population out of their months, out of the records prepared and supervised by secretary of agriculture, Wallace, himself. He says:

"The losses have not been due to an inefficiency on the part of the farmers. Practically all of them were incurred by men who had been doing fairly well until they entered the period of drastic deflation. The nation has suffered in another way. The drastic economics which have become necessary on the farms have greatly reduced the standards of living. They have compelled overwork by the farmers, unaccustomed farm work by farm mothers, increased work by children kept out of schools—in too many cases the older children taken out for good."

This is the plight of the farmers. We wonder how many of the million who have been driven off the land are sharing in the wheat spurt. It is gruesome five years that the farmers have gone thru. That is where they are today. Dreary facts speak louder than dishonest election talk even from our Puritanic president.

Fit for the Public

Secretary of the Navy Wilbur, who has in a brief period of office distinguished himself rather auspiciously as an agent of the government that does too much talking at the wrong time, is again coming to the fore. His time the unrestrained secretary is not attacking the Japanese or the Negroes. Mr. Wilbur is now a censor of the fitness of a certain play before New York audiences.

"What Price Glory" is a play that has aroused considerable approval among many New York workers because if tells the truth about the life and sufferings of the marines. The play sheds a light on the realities of war which all too many workers in the metropolis know from their own costly experience to be true.

This has brought a storm of protest from the arch-demagogic Tammany liskspittle, who is now the mayor of the greatest city in the land, John F. Hylan. The shadow of the once notoriously corrupt boss, Charles F. Murphy, has appointed a committee of citizens, leading ones of course, like admirals, police commissioners, and major-generals, to decide on the fitness of the play for public consumption. Then, not to be outdone in the concern for the welfare of the morality of the masses, the secretary fo the navy breaks into print along the same Puritanic lines.

Mr. Wilbur has had plenty of experience in preventing the working masses from going "wrong," that is from doing anything against the interests of the employing class. Mr. Wilbur is to a no small extent responsible for the fact that Tom Mooney is in jail today. The same "safety-seeking" secretary of the navy is even threatening to invoke the federal statutes against the players. Mr. Wilbur's modesty is overcome by the fact that the play is "full of gutter language" which, he would have us believe, is no longer to be found in the navy. Then, how can one associate the uniform of the United States navy with vulgarity! The heavens protest! And what will the Haitians, the Nicaraguans, the Mexicans, and the Dominicans say about such misrepresentation of the gentle marines who have treated them so kindly in their civilizing expeditions?

Here is where the real difficulty lies. Here is why the navy officials who are sworn to defend the so-called sacred rights of freedom of opinion, speech, press, and assembly guaranteed by the constitution are the first ones to serve the employers in denying these much-vaunted rights to the masses. The moral outburst on the part of Mr. Wilbur and the insignificant Hylan is only a screen. It is not the vulgarity but the truthful picture of war that the play in question presents which is causing the concern of our employing-class hooligans in and out of uniform.

What of Bulgaria?

A censorship in which more than one government must be co-operating has prevented any news of the progress of the revolt of the Bulgarian masses reaching America for the last ten days. Had the revolt been suppressed, it is reasonable to suppose that the welcome story would have been cabled to every reactionary sheet in the world. No news is therefore good news for the workers of other nations who sympathize with the Bulgarian workers and peasants in their struggle against the bloody Zankov government.

That the Communist party of Bulgaria is playing a leading role in the uprising is certain because more than six weeks ago it issued a manifesto to the workers of the world telling of the crimes of the Bulgarian rulers, the numberless and indescribable outrages inflicted upon the workers and peasants since the fall of the Stamboulisky government and the failure of the revolt that followed it. The manifesto stated that all elements of the working and farming masses were combining against the Zankov regime and that its overthrow was expected.

Alexandrov, the leader of the Macedonian faction that backed the Zankov government, has been assassinated and a portion of his forces have joined the revolutionists since the manifesto of the Bulgarian Communist party was issued. The Macedonians have usually held the balance of power in Bulgaria and their defection probably means the downfall of the Zankov government.

In the absence of news from Bulgaria we can only hope that our analysis is correct and that the Bulgarian masses have won their struggle for freedom and under the leadership of the Communist party are at last on the way to a Soviet republic. In this event the eulogies that the capitalist press will print of the departed Zankov government will be the best proof that the social revolution is advancing in the Balkans.

Rail labor chiefs have warned MacAdoo that if he supports Davis, his popularity among the rail workers will go up in smoke like his candidacy for the presidency. They might promise him, in return for his neutrality, the secretaryship of the Interior in the LaFollette cabinet. Mac would locate any stray oil wells that Fall missed.

The Political Muddle in Colorad

By MAX SHACHTMAN.

OF the political messes into which the workers have been dragged this year, the one now existing in Colorado threatens to be a serious contender for first place. The situation there is a good reflex of the confusion existing in the politics of the organized workers of America following on the endorsement everywhere of the sleight-of-hand artist from Wisconsin, LaFollette.

The Colorado State Federation of Labor has not only given its endorsement to LaFollette and Wheeler, but also to Alva B. Adams, junior senator, for re-election to the Millionaire's Club. Adams, it will be recalled, was appointed by Governor William Sweet to fill the term left vacant by the death of Nicholson. Sweet, who cashes in on a nice bit of lucre annually as a bond broker, is supporting John W. Davis, democratic candidate for the presidency. And Sweet has the endorsement of the American Federation of Labor in Colorado.

Bob's Committee Headed by Traitor.

Now! The gentleman who has been put in charge of the Colorado campaign of LaFollette is John R. Lawson. Lawson was once a fighter. He headed District 15 of the United Mine Workers of America, and was the leader of one of the most glorious strikes in the history of the American working class, the Ludlow strike. As a result of that walk-out, which was an uprising of the United Mine Workers because he maltreated—and perhaps correctly—that the international officials of the union had refused to give the strike the support it needed and deserved. For this, he was expelled by the international from the U. M. W. of A.

For some time, the name of John R. Lawson was not heard until he finally turned up as an employe of none other than the Colorado Fuel and Iron Co., of the same Rockefeller, that is, whom he had previously fought and who had been instrumental in framing him! In view of his new job suspicion was aroused at his previous actions, but today they are all silenced. He is state director of the LaFollette campaign and, like Brutus, he is an honorable man.

But the same gang that is backing LaFollette is also backing Sweet and his appointee who is now running for senator, Alva B. Adams. To analyze Adams a bit will give an insight into the type of a labor supporter that Sweet is.

Adams—Anti-Labor Lawyer.

Sweet appointed Adams to fill the term left vacant by Nicholson at the time that the shopmen employed on the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe railroad were still locked out. Sweet had only a short time before been elected to the governorship with the support of the American Federation of Labor's Non-Partisan Political Committee. His first act of generosity and appreciation to labor was the appointment of the lawyer of the Santa Fe, one of the worst labor hating corporations in the country, to the United States senate. As you suspected, dear reader, this lawyer was none other than Alva B. Adams!

On the board of directors of the Santa Fe can be found, among others, a gentleman by the name of John W. Davis, who happens to have been nominated by the democratic party to run for president. Davis only withdrew from his directorate after his nomination, holding on to this Morgan job with all energy up to the very last minute. Other directors on this road are such men as Edward J. Berwind, of the notorious anti-labor union mines in Pennsylvania; Ogden L. Mills, one of the biggest stockholders in the N. Y. Central Railroad; W. B. Storey and W. E. Brown, of the famous Brown Brothers in Philadelphia, who engineered that little imperialist conquest in the Caribbean a few years ago.

It is for this railroad that Alva B. Adams, now supported by organized labor in Colorado, was the attorney.

In case there should be any doubt as to the policy of the Santa Fe, it is sufficient to recall the railway strike of 1922, when this road spread the lie about the abandonment of passengers in the "desert" at Needles, California. This canard was later exploded by the district passenger agent, E. H. Dallas, and by Albert E. Coyle, editor of the Locomotive Engineers' Journal. Coyle is now also supporting LaFollette!

A Silent Adam.

Adams was the attorney for the Santa Fe at the time the road was carrying on its bitter struggle against the workers, and he uttered not a single word in support of the strikers. Today he gets the support of the labor movement there.

Aside from the Adams buncombe being spread by [illegible] ers in the state, there is another element of confusion. The political field is cluttered up by a would-be "progressive party," which put up a slate of presidential electors for LaFollette and Wheeler in the hope of attracting votes, but was later repudiated by Frank A. Harrison, LaFollette's regional director. It is composed of disgruntled elements who failed to receive an opportunity to feed at the Davis pork barrel.

And on top of it all comes the farcical Farmer-Labor party, which is neither farmer nor labor, and which will probably have a state ticket in the field this fall. For the last few years a few individuals have been paid by the republican party to navigate this decoy in order to draw some votes away from the democrats.

A Political Chinese Puzzle.

What a muddle! Labor endorses LaFollette, whose campaign committee is headed by a traitor to labor; also Adams; Adams gets the O. K. of Sweet, who in turn supports Davis; Adams was attorney for the reactionary corporation on which Davis was director. Then again: Labor endorses Wheeler, who is running with LaFollette; Wheeler supports Walsh for senator from Montana, altho Walsh has been condemned by the Montana State Federation of Labor as an enemy of the workers; Walsh supports Davis; Davis gets the aid of Adams who is endorsed by labor organizations that are backing the opponent of Davis, LaFollette.

No, this is not a Chinese puzzle. It is only an example of the maze into which labor has been drawn by its failure to follow a policy of independent political action.

The only party in Colorado that takes a clear stand on questions affecting the workers on all fields of life, is the Workers Party.

When the workers of Colorado ask us to show them what is their support in the coming elections it is well to remember the terrible result of the futile policy of supporting friends and punishing enemies. It is well to recall that the hor[rors] Ludlow massacre, when the [agents] John D. Rockefeller, Jr., murdered workers, their wives and children, occured under the administration of the [men] posed of such "friends of labor" as the following, elected in 1912, when the Colorado work[ers] scored a great "political victory." Here is the list:

Governor—Elias Ammons, Democrat, Farmers' Union.
Lieutenant Governor—Benjamin Montgomery, Democrat, Farmers' Union.
Secretary of State—James H. Pearce, Democrat, R. R. Telegraphers.
Superintendent Public Instruction—Mary C. C. Bradford, Democrat, Women's Trade Union League.
Congressman—Edward B. Keating, Democrat, Typographical Union.
State Senators—Joseph Berry, Democrat, Locomotive Engineers; A. J. Gorman, Democrat, Typographical Union; S. S. Bellefield, Democrat, Typographical Union; Ralph Tuttle, Republican, Trainmen's Union; William Matz, Democrat, Conductors' Union; John Cross, Democrat, Farmers' Union; John I. Tierney, Democrat, Typographical Union; Ben Lyons, Republican, Locomotive Engineers; John Hurd, Democrat, United Mine Workers.
House of Representatives—Williams, Democrat, Bookbinders; Phil McCarthy, Democrat, Structural Engineers; William R. Kinney, Democrat, Machinists; Charles J. Hawich, Democrat, Carpenters; Frank Turnbull, Democrat, Metal Workers; Jack Slattery, Democrat, Hotel and Restaurant Workers' Union; John Kavanaugh, Democrat, Street Railwaymen's Union; William Dalley, Democrat, Typographical Union; Newton, Republican, Typographical Union; J. McDonald, Machine Helpers.

They served in office from January, 1913 to January, 1915. The Ludlow massacre occured on April 20, 1914. It should be an unforgettable lesson.

TWO TIMELY BOOKS :: By Jay Lovest

American Agriculture and The European Market, by Edwin G. Nourse.
Russian Economic Reconstruction, by Leo Pasvolsky and Harold G. Moulton.
Published by McGraw Hill Book Co., 370 Seventh Avenue, N. Y. C. Price, $2.50.

HERE we have two timely volumes issued by the Institute of Economics. The first volume was written by the generally recognized foremost agricultural economist in the country. Not many words while books on the development of American agriculture have been prepared in recent years despite the fact that there has, for some time, been an abundance of material at hand. "American Agriculture and the European Market," is a pleasant exception to the general, conjectural literature on the state and development of rural economy in the United States.

Dr. Nourse deals with the development of American agriculture from the pre-Civil War days to the present moment. The early period are treated briefly and the more modern are accorded the more thoro treatment. The analysis of the effect of the world war on American agriculture is the most complete we have seen. Nor must one accept all the interpretations and the specific forms of the reasons given by the author to recognize the value of his analysis of the course and effects of the boom and depression of 1919-1923.

Especially timely and worth while are the concluding chapters dealing with "The Problem of 1924 and After." A critical examination of the valuable data massed in these chapters will do a good deal towards helping one see thru the fraud of the present farm prosperity that being sold so widely. Also in the light of the fictitious and exaggerated claims made for the Dawes' plan to wage the next war, it is interesting to note that the author concludes, upon the basis of unimpeachable evidence that "agricultural exports may be expected to drop still further in 1924 and thereafter. For American agriculture to plan her future building on the foundation of an expected revival and growth of the European market would, therefore, mean building on quicksand."

On the whole, "Agriculture and the European Market" is a very readable volume containing invaluable material on the biggest industry of the country and dealing in a scientific manner with one of the most important problems facing the working and farming masses.

Perhaps in no country in the world is there such an abundance of ignorance about the economic potentalities and conditions of Soviet Russia as there is in the United States. This little book, by Pasvolsky and Moulton, should prove of help in dispelling some of this dangerous ignorance. Because the volume is primarily a study of fiscal and foreign trade questions it deals with the most vital points involved in the development of Soviet Russia's international relations. This is true despite the fact that the authors set out to deal only with the problems of public finance and not at all with the present economic conditions and diplomatic status of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

This book does not deal with the prevailing economic condition of Soviet Russia. It limits itself to the official pre-war facts of Russia's foreign debt, the effects of the imperialist war on Russia's international status in the capitalist realm of commerce and industry, Russia's pre-war export and import capacities, her budgetary trend, and her financial standing.

The author's discussion of the role of the United States in Soviet Russian reconstruction is interesting. The crux of their attitude is most instructive, as can be seen from the following: "American exports of wheat to the continent of Europe were on the wane before the war. Profound economic dislocations produced by the war and its aftermath temporarily gave a great stimulus to American wheat and other agricultural exports, but the tide is already ebbing. Looking forward, exports of American wheat to the continent of Europe will be of dwindling importance, even if Russian wheat production does not regain its former position. . ."

Then discussing the possible e[ffect] of Soviet Russian competition [on] tain branches of American [agri]ture, the writers show that one [is] more than easily "set off" certain [ad]vantages that would be de[rived] from a recovery of Russia. [The] rival capitalist economic [forces] Central and Western Europe [that] would attend the rehabilitation [of] sound conditions within Russia, the re-opening of her trade rel[ations] with the rest of Europe would [be] flected in expanding trade in [the] factured products between the U[nited] States and Europe, [which] would also doubtless improve [the] ropean markets for such agricu[ltural] commodities as tobacco and cot[ton].

This point knocks into a cocke[d hat] the argument so often used b[y] enemies of Soviet recognition in [the] attempting to mislead the w[orld] and farmers as to the true effec[ts of] restoration of normal relations [with] the Union of Socialist Soviet R[e]publics would have on their eco[nomic] conditions.

The book also has a valuable [ap]pendix containing authentic [in]formation about private investments [in] war Russia, the text of the Sov[iet] decree on the annulment of the [pre-]debts, the Soviet's reply to the [Genoa] Conference Memorandum, the [ex]position of the United States [Gov]ment towards Soviet Russia and important official documents.

Dawes Plan to Sweat Germans Doom

Dawes' plan sentences Germany—its working and farming masses—to pay the international capitalist imperialists an unnamed staggering sum for an unnamed period of years.

In the plainest words spoken in the diction of Wall Street, a first mortgage will be placed on Germany's railways, transportation system, sugar tobacco; her customs will be regulated and determined as has been done in Santo Domingo and Nicaragua; her taxation system will be arbitrarily fixed to yield the greatest loot in the name of reparations; her budget and currency will be manhandled with the[ments], such a gigantic tribute, from one country to others, over and above the normal industrial and commercial operations, been demanded. The sanctions in view, and the hours of labor and cost of living will be driven upward and the conditions of employment, standards of living, and wages downward so as to assure the allied imperialists, led by the American group, the maximum tribute—ranging annually from a billion to two-and-a-[half] billion gold marks.

The first lien laid on the industries and resources of Germany, under the guise of stabilizing her currency and safeguarding the initial loan of two hundred million dollars, is a prelude to the complete program of the Yankee imperialists. The hundred million dollars flotation allotted to the United States is only a drop in the bucket of what the American capitalists are planning to put into private industrial investments. In this light it is easy to understand why the German Finance Minister Luther said on Sept. 1, 1924 of the first, the reparations loan: "This loan is the safest investment in the world, because it has priority on all reparations payments and is backed by the whole German national wealth controlled by an American."

But this turning of Germany into an American sweatshop, into a vassal colony of Yankee imperialism, is only the first step in the Balkanization of Europe, in the turning of Europe into a pawn in the hands of America's financial and industrial overlords. The role of General Dawes follows closely upon the role of General Pershing in the evolution of Wall Street's receivership of Europe. It was American military prowess, under the leadership of General John J. Pershing, that firmly set the first foot of the conqueror of Europe on the continent that made possible the allies' crushing of Germany and the dictation of the Versailles pact. Today, it is American economic prowess, under the leadership of the House of Morgan, whose tool Dawes is, that is firmly setting the second foot of the American capitalist conqueror on the continent of Europe. In 1918 the German Junker-capitalist clique surrendered to the overwhelming forces of American militarism camouflaged by the fourteen points of peace. In 1924 the whole European employing class has yielded to the supremacy of American capitalist imperialism openly represented in the capitals of Europe by the fourteen leading Wall Street bankers.

Doomed to Failure.

And just as Persing and the Versailles Treaty could not restore Europe and world capitalism to its pre-war health, so will Dawes and his London pact fail. The latest plan to save capitalism thru the establishment of the world hegemony of American imperialism, reeks with too many contradictions. For one thing the Dawes plan does not answer the paramount question: in what form of goods is Germany to pay the reparations? What class of goods can the capitalists accept as repa[yment] without bringing about serio[us] rangement in their own and t[he] of the capitalist world's indust[ry]

This contradiction is insol[uble] cause it is inherent in the [sys]tem of capitalism. Interesting [com]ment on this point is to be f[ound] the statement of Mr. Hartley [Wi]ers, the London correspond[ent] Barron's Weekly in its issue [of] 1, 1924. We read in explan[a]tion: "So that the real problem we all wanted the Dawes com[mit]to solve was evaded. It told what Germany could pay he[avy] tors, but how many marks [or] could be collected, for these [pay]vert, if they could, into the currencies. And this evasion [is] core of the problem, seems [to] been largely unnoticed by t[he] eral public in the creditor co[un]which assumes that it is goi[ng] ceive what the Dawes report can be collected."

More than that. The reparations that the French will be less than what they [are] to pay to the capitalists of Britain and the United [States] meeting their debts.

JAPS SOON TO RECOGNIZE RUSSIA

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

HERE is good news for LaFollette from California. Much better than the supreme court decision which forced him to fall back on the electors of the socialist party. A fifteen cent raise in the hundred pounds of sugar went into effect in the Golden State a few days ago. This means that the sugar Mahatma, Spreckles, can afford to drop a few more thousand dollars into the campaign coffers of the Wisconsin senator. A contributor, with fine sarcasm, suggests that we call this fact to the attention of LaFollette, so that he might have his freind Spreckles "go back to the prices prevailing in 1776."

THE booby prize which we considered handing to E. B. Ault of the Seattle Union Record for the most asinine defense of MacDonald's "endowed automobile" is held in cold storage pending delivery to the editor of the Milwaukee Leader, unless we receive in the meantime the considered opinion of Albert B. Fall in the matter. Here is Berger's apology:

"THE fellows who got stung with the Teapot Dome think they have a comeback against Labor Premier MacDonald for accepting a car from a man whom he knighted. It was rather daring of MacDonald to do such a thing, but everybody who knows him understands that there is nothing dishonorable about that matter. Anyway the Teapot Domeers have no right to throw stones." Almost like saying: "Ramsay took a big chance and got caught but he is no worse than other crooks."

POLICE COMMISSIONER ENRIGHT of New York, declared that the "third degree" method for securing evidence was a thing of the past. From now on, declared the commissioner, humane interrogation of prisoners will take the place of the "gold fish" room, the rubber hose, and other variations of the third degree. Which is as the Indians would say: "heap big hokum." The police will not use intelligence instead of brute force because the latter is more in evidence than the former on the police force. The third degree weapons may be changed but if these is any change it will be toward a refinement of cruelty.

THE use of the police third degree in securing confession is illegal, but only on rare occasions do judges dismiss the charge against a victim forced to testify against himself on pain of death. We had some splendid examples of brutal third degreeing of prisoners here in Chicago not very long ago. A school teacher was arrested and charged with the death of the Franks boy. He was taken up to the top of a skyscraper hotel and

JOHNSTONE SPEAKS AT CAMPAIGN MEETING THIS THURSDAY NIGHT

J. W. Johnstone, Workers Party candidate for congress in the 9th congressional district, will explain the problems confronting the workers as they prepare to vote in the coming election, at a mass meeting at Imperial Hall, 2409 N. Halsted St., near Fullerton, Thursday, Oct. 2, at 8 p. m.

Johnstone, who is assistant secretary of the Trade Union Educational League, is a member of the Painters' union, and has had many years of experience in the interests of the working class. The Workers Party has secured enough signatures to place Johnstone's name on the ballot.

MOBILIZE FOR SHOP DRIVE

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 1.—The shop collection drive is in its final stage. Reports so far reaching the office, indicate that large sums of money have already been collected. The final drive has been set for the noon hour of Friday, Oct. 3. At that hour comrades holding subscription lists are requested to circulate them among their fellow workers in the shops. Comrades, join in the work and see how easy it is to fill up your list.

Remember Friday, Oct. 3 at noon! All subscription lists must be filled and the funds of the shop collections drive should be in at the office of the campaign headquarters not later than Saturday evening. Promptness in turning over campaign funds collected is almost as important as the collecting in itself. We must pay large bills for printing and signs early next week.

Send all funds to the Workers Party Campaign Committee, Charles Krumbein, Treasurer, 210 East 12th Street, New York City.

MAYOR DEVER TURNS BACK ON TEACHERS

Refuses to Talk to the "Committee of Three"

Three Chicago teachers' organizations, the Chicago Teachers' Federation, the Men's Federation of Teachers and the Women's Federation of High School Teachers, have joined forces to combat the suppression of opinion among teachers, injected into the Chicago school system since William McAndrew has become the superintendent of the board of education.

On Friday, Oct. 3, the three teachers' organizations will hold a mass meeting at the Auditorium Theatre at 4 p. m.

The teachers will make their reply to the members of the board of education, who voted to gag them at their teachers' councils by placing the principals in control of their meetings.

Mayor Turns Them Down.

Mayor Dever was invited to speak. He answered in his usual style when confronted with a conflict between boss and employe, "I don't know anything about it." With these few words Mayor Dever turned his back on the teachers' committee, that called at his office to ask his assistance in their fight.

The teachers will learn more than one lesson about the system of government that belongs to the bosses before they are thru in this fight. And among them is the fundamental lesson that the antiquated policy of labor leaders offering the support of their organization before election to the tools of big business is the bunk.

Last year Margaret Haley, business agent of the Teachers' Federation, electioneered for Mayor Dever. She gave her office and her time to putting Dever's candidacy over. Today mayor Dever shows her committee the door.

Meanwhile, McAndrew is pushing the fight against the teachers. Backing him all the way is Charles M. Moderwell, president of the Board of Education, and owner of scab mines in West Virginia, and his little office boy, Edgar Greenebaum, of Greenebaum Sons Bank and Trust company. Edgar is a nice boy who obeys orders with minute precision. He typifies the Success Magazine ideal of "the boy who will rise to be president of the corporation." Here is an example of how he works:

McAndrew submits a recommendation. Edgar immediately moves it to be accepted and then Moderwell seconds the motion.

Moderwell Cannot Vote.

Mrs. W. S. Heffren threw a monkey wrench into their machine at the last meeting of the Administration Committee of the Board of Education, when she challenged the right of President Moderwell to vote. Mrs. Heffren held that the president of the board sat with the Administration Committee in an advisory capacity and had no right to vote. She was upheld by James Mullenbach and attorney Frank S. Righeimer, attorney for the board who replied that, tho a member ex-officio of all committees, the president was not entitled to a vote.

And it was this ruling that succeeded in putting off the recommendation of Superintendent McAndrew that the principals be authorized to call the councils together after school hours and be invited to sit in the meetings. The matter was not dropped but will come up again at the meeting of the Board of Education which meets next Wednesday afternoon.

AGRICULTURAL WORKERS OF I. W. W. URGED TO AFFILIATE WITH RED INTERNATIONAL

(The convention of the Agricultural Workers' Industrial Union of the Industrial Workers of the World is of more than passing interest to the revolutionary movement of the world. To the Workers (Communist) Party, American section of the Third International, whose program has rallied millions of exploited farmers and farm workers to the social revolution; it represents the expression of the only organized and therefore the most militant elements of these oppressed American workers. The DAILY WORKER, official organ of the Workers (Communist) Party, in publishing the following communication to the convention from the International Affiliation Committee of the Red International of Labor Unions, expresses its solidarity with the Agricultural Workers' Industrial Union in their job struggles and urges upon them the necessity of viewing these struggles as part of the world conflict between the world's workers and every phase of capitalism which can be conducted in a revolutionary manner only by becoming part of the organization of the one revolutionary trade and industrial body in the world —the Red International of Labor Unions.

With the the revolutionary land and forest workers of the rest of the world the Agricultural Workers' Industrial Union No. 110 will then hasten its march towards its goal—the conquest for the workers of the power now held by the capitalists, which is based on the ownership of the land, machinery and other necessities of life.)—Ed. note.

Cuban Sugar Strike May Lead to General Walkout

(Special to The Daily Worker)

HAVANA, Cuba, Oct. 1.—A general strike of sugar mill workers, which threatens to become sympathetic and halt the machinery of all Cuban industries, loomed today as labor leaders of the Sugar Mill Workers' Union started a movement to keep all laborers from reporting to work when the mills open unless "radical increases in pay and shorter hours," are granted by employers.

GITLOW SPEAKS TONIGHT IN BIG STEEL CENTER

Our Vice-Presidential Candidate at Gary

GARY, Ind., Oct. 1.—Benjamin Gitlow, Communist candidate for vice-president of the United States, and running mate of William Z. Foster, invades this steel trust town dominated by the United States Steel Corporation, in a speech here tonight in Turner Hall, 14th and Washington Sts.

Gitlow, who is expected to attract a large crowd of workers in the steel trust mills, will tell the workers of Gary why they have nothing to gain by supporting LaFollette, and will state the platform of the Workers Party—the only political party in the campaign which has a remedy for the problems of unemployment and capitalist domination now scourging Gary.

Has Successful Tour.

Gitlow has just completed a successful tour of Ohio and Pennsylvania where he spoke to rousing meetings in all the large industrial cities. The steel trust slaves are again attempting to organize in Gary in their fight for livable conditions, and Gitlow is expected to have an important message on the amalgamation as opposed to craft union organization drives.

Midwest Is Hit by Killing Frost; See Big Damage to Crops

A killing frost, over virtually the entire midwest from the upper lakes region southward across the Ohio river valley, was reported today by the United States weather bureau here. The frost was accompanied by a minimum temperature in the affected region of 41 degrees, registered at 6 in the morning. No detailed report of the extent of the damage to crops had been recived by the bureau.

Miners Ignored by the Union President

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Oct. 1.—Shoes are needed for children in the Kanawha valley of West Virginia so that the little ones can go to school this winter. Clothing is also required.

The fathers of the children are union miners thrown out of their jobs when the operators declined to accept the Jacksonville national agreement and decided to cut wages to the starvation point. The families have been evicted from the company houses and expect to spend the winter in canvas tents.

Hit From All Sides.

Now truant officers of the district who are under company influence threaten to arrest the fathers if their children do not attend school. The families have no money for school books and none for the shoes and clothes needed to equip the children for the daily trip to the country schoolhouse.

Mrs. C. L. Jarrett, president Woman's Union Label league, will acknowledge any gifts of money, shoes or children's garments that are sent in for the miners' boys and girls. Woman's clothing will also be welcome since many of the miners' wives are theradbare. Mrs. Jarrett's address is care of The West Virginia Federationist, 18 Alderson St., Charleston, W. Va.

Must Row to Work.

CARPENTERS' MEET ENDS IN BIG UPROAR

Hutcheson's Rulings Anger Delegates

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 1.—The twenty-first General Convention of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners adjourned on the afternoon of September 30, much after the fashion of the famous adjournment of the last convention of the United Mine Workers in Indianapolis, while the delegates were on their feet demanding a roll call.

W. L. Hutchenson, who ruled the carpenter's convention with an iron gavel raised such a storm of opposition against his autocratic decisions that, toward the closing hours of the convention there was a possibility that the delegates would go out of hand.

One Man Rule.

Cries of "czar" came from all parts of the hall, and the delegates furious with anger asked loudly why they had wasted their time coming to a convention where only the opinions of one man carried any weight.

From the opening day until the close of the convention, the general president, W. L. Hutchenson, set his face sternly against the slightest concession to progressive policies in the union. So extremely reactionary is the policy of this bureaucrat that even the resolution endorsing the new political departure of the American Federation of Labor was ruled out of order on the ground that it was partisan politics. Even Gompers is a "progressive" to Czar Hutchenson.

Against Workers Education.

Another resolution which felt the heavy hand of the machine was one urging the Brotherhood to affiliate with the Workers' Educational Bureau, a harmless institution wet-nursed by Gompers and his pet poodle, Matthew Woll and directed by a collection of "intellectuals" who are perfectly safe and sane so long as the Gompersian check book smiles on them.

Yet education of any kind is considered dangerous by the ultra-reactionary labor fakers so the Workers' Education Bureau will not have the affiliation of the Brotherhood and the financial stimulus that such affiliation would bring.

During the discussion the red specter of Communism, then Frank Duffy, secretary of the Brotherhood, made a speech against it which deserves to be quoted extensively. He said in part:

"The United Brotherhood has always been in favor of education, but education of the right sort. Now, if you will carefully consider the names of these two bureaus or leagues you will find it is confusing. As a representative of the American Federation

Increase in United States Export Trade While Work Slackens

Washington, Oct. 1.—Exports from the United States to Europe increased more than $100,000,000 during the first months ended September I. compared to the same period last year, the Department of Commerce announced today.

Of total exports of $2,607,000,000 in these months, Europe took $1,339,000,000. Asia and South American trade increased heavily.

Great Britain continued as America's chief customer, having taken goods valued at $900,000,000. German purchases increased from $191,000,000 to $237,000,000 in the period ended September 1.

U. S. INVOLVED IN EUROPEAN ENTANGLEMENTS

Financial Ambassadors Are on the Job

By JAY LOVESTONE
(Second Article)

The United States is now involved up to the belt in European political and financial affairs. American ambassadors of finance are today the highly honored and still more feared figures of the political centers of Europe.

House of Morgan Rules.

After four years of war and six years of acute economic disorganization the Bank of London, once the world's money centre, has been forced into an alliance with the House of Morgan.

This alliance makes out of the British bank an annex of the "House At The Corner," the firm of J. P. Morgan and Company, the kingpin of American high-finance.

Not a single event in international politics and industry since the Versailles Treaty transcends in importance the London Conference which prepared the immediate ground for the adoption of the Dawes Plan by France and Germany. This conference brot into bold relief the supremacy of American imperialism. To the masses of Europe American capitalism appears today in the single robe of a money-lender, the international Shylock.

Nor let any one have the notion that this policy of aggression on the part of the Yankee imperialists is the result of eleventh-hour despair. The Dawes plan is the product of the most careful observation, the most deliberate planning, and consummate manipulation on the part of the best Minds of our ruling class. The Dawes plan does not have a scintilla of idealism in its intents or purposes, despite all the inspired humanitarian talk in which it is enshered. It is put forward, at a time judged most appropriate by the guiding spirits of our employing class, as the plan best suited to the conditions at hand for the perpetuation of international capitalism thru the establishment of the hegemony of American capital.

Towards An European Receivership.

In October 1919 the special correspondent of the New York Wall Street Journal cabled from Germany to the effect that there was but one solution of the European crisis and that was "a straightforward receivership for Germany." The same journal had then also suggested that Brigadier General Charles G. Dawes be chosen to untangle the reparations knot. On April, 1924 the Wall Street Journal proudly oasted that "The essence of the Dawes Report, the one possible means by

166 MINERS KILLED IN AUGUST; MAKES TOTAL IN YEAR OF 1,628

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—Coal mined in the United States during August of this year cost in accidents 166 men killed, making the total killed in the first eight months of this year 1,628 men.

The Bureau of Mines states that this means, for August, a rate of 3.97 men killed for each million tons of coal mined. August of last year had a death rate of 5.46 men per million tons. For the ten-year period just past, August has averaged 4.17 killed for each million tons.

The anthracite mines showed, for this August, a rate of 4.94 as against the bituminous mines' rate of 3.77 deaths per million tons. The eight months' fatality rate this year was 4.58 for all coal, as against 4.12 in 1923.

NEGOTIATIONS NOW ON MAKING GOOD HEADWAY

Five of Eight Articles Are Agreed On

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PEKING, China, Oct. 1.—Early recognition of Soviet Russia by the Japanese government is at last promised as the result of the progress made in negotiations between L. M. Karakhan, Soviet ambassador to China, and Kenkichi Yosjizawa, representing the Japanese government.

Karakhan has already induced the Japanese representative to accept five out of eight articles of a draft upon which the two countries have been working as the basis for a Russo-Japanese agreement.

Sakhalin Island Issue Up.

One of the main points of contention between the two countries has been settled, it is announced, the Soviet government agreeing to waive demand for immediate evacuation of northern Sakhalin island by the Japanese, which is said to be impossible at present due to the cold weather. The Japanese have agreed to evacuate next spring.

The looked for recognition of Soviet Russia by the Nipponese will crown with success a fight for an agreement waged for over two years by the Soviet government.

Many Conferences Held.

In the summer of 1922, conference held at Changchun, China, broke down, and another meeting between representatives of the two governments held in Tokyo, in 1923, also failed to bring about an agreement.

Yoshizawa, before his appointment as minister at Pekin for the Japanese government, was chief of the far eastern department of the foreign office in Tokyo.

CHANG OPENS BIG DRIVE ON PEI FU'S ARMY

Chekiang Forces Still Holding Out

MUKDEN, Oct. 1.—Gen. Chang Tso Lin's Fengtien troops today launched a general attack on all fronts against Marshal Wu Pei Fu's central government forces.

Especially heavy fighting was reported around Shanghai-Kuan, important railroad town and seaport.

SHANGHAI, Oct. 1.—The combined Kiangsu and Fukan forces opened an attack on Sungkiang today, thereby completing the circle around the Chekiang forces near here.

Fighting continued on all fronts with no gains reported for either side.

Will Fingerprint Suspects.

SYDNEY, New South Wales.—The New South Wales anti-Labor government has given the police power to take the fingerprints of persons arrested on suspicion. Labor members opposed the proposal contending that the police would be able to rope in anybody on suspicion and secure the fingerprints. Labor members claimed that no fingerprints should be taken unless a person was convicted of a crime. They charged the government with instituting this law against the radicals.

Fear Girls Kidnapped.

Dorothy Dowden, 16, of 1224 Brook side Avenue, Waukegan, Ill., was one of two girls being sought by police here today following reports that the girls probably were being held by male kidnapers. Dorothy had been in Chicago only a short time. She disappeared from her room Saturday and was gone until Monday evening.

Get the Difference.

The board of directors of the New York Central railroad lines arrived here in a special train and dined aboard their private dining car yesterday. The train crew "dined" in a five and ten cent hash house, as usual.

NO POLICING OF BUSINESS, SAY BANKERS

Want No Interference with Hold-up Game

The bankers assembled in the gorgeous Astor hotel theatre here for their annual convention, yesterday joined a united front with the anarchists, speakers declaring against "government policing of business," for "individual enterprise," and stating that "that government is best which governs least."

The bankers are afraid their railroad interests will be taken away from them by the workers, so they denounced state control of railroads.

Fight For Their Profits.

They are afraid that legislation to better the economic conditions of the farmers will eat into their profits so they declared against such legislation. There are times, however, when political meddling is a good thing for the business men, and therefore S. M. McAshan, vice-president of the South Texas Commercial National Bank, spoke for greater powers to be given to the comptroller by amendments to the national bank act.

It will be a serious blow to the capitalist class when the farmers and workers unite politically, so T. R. Preston, president of the National Bank Division of the American Bankers' Association, declared he would hate to see this happen.

"Political remedies for farmers' ills always will fail," said Preston, making the wish father to the thought.

"The farmers must be the architects of their own fortunes. The real remedy is to give them an equal chance with other classes of business. The government could help by quitting the policing of American business and reduce the burden of taxation. There is a perfect mania for the government to attempt to solve all problems and to attend to all things."

For Individual Rights.

"Our nation has developed as the great defender of the rights of the individual," said C. H. Markham, president of the Illinois railroad, which was not so solicitous of the rights of individuals in the shopmen's strike of 1923. In reality, Markham revealed that he was speaking for the rights of private property and of the railroad trust to monopolize the railroads built by the workers, for he said in the next sentence: "Private property is the cornerstone of our industrial structure. We have had to regulate many private businesses, including railroads, but we have always managed to avoid confiscation." We have never forced government ownership as a national policy and we have therefore never been called on to decide definitely just how far it should go.

"If the railroads are taken over by the government we must face the fact that the big step in the reversal of our old settled policy will be taken and there will be no stopping the force once we have let it loose. If there is no particular reason why the government should not own and run the railroads, is there any reason why it should not take over the banks, stores, factories, farms, until all of us are government employes and the ideal soviet is attained?" Markham spoke feelingly as to how horrible it would be if the workers took his railroad away from him.

Has Crime Wave Cure.

R. H. Bronkhorst, president of the Chicago Bank Auditors' conference, spoke in favor of a national organization of bank auditors, claiming it is needed to check the crime wave among surety companies and banks.

William E. Knox, newly elected president of the A. B. A., attributed his success to hard work and to his immense knowledge to which he freely admits.

COMMUNIQUES FROM TROUBLED FRONTS GIVE THE LATEST WAR NEWS

MADRID, Oct. 1.—A Spanish column in the Tetuan sector of the Moroccan battle front destroyed the headquarters of the local commander at Beni-Mazadan and two villages, said a war office communique today.

British Turn Down Hussein.

LONDON, Oct. 1.—Great Britain has refused the request of King Hussein, of the Kingdom of Hedjaz, for airplanes to aid him in fighting the Wahabi (Mohammedan Arabs).

Turks at Mosul.

LONDON, Oct. 1.—Turkish troops are still refusing to withdraw from disputed territory in the Vilayet of Mosul, on the Irak frontier, despite the presence of British troops, said advices to the foreign office today. Turkey so far has not answered the British notes of warning.

U. S. DEEP IN EUROPEAN NET

which its suggestions can be carried out, is a receivership."

The coming political events, the steps taken by the Washington state department, further forecast the dark shadow of American decisive participation in Europe thru the Dawes Commission of Reparations Experts. As soon as Mr. Hughes assumed the toga of the secretaryship of state, he instructed Royland W. Boyden to take part in the meetings of the reparations commission in Paris, "unofficially" of course.

In April 1921 the German government sought American mediation in the reparations controversy and asked the administration to "fix the sum to be paid to Germany." Hughes promptly and curtly replied in the negative. However, he assented to transmit to the Allies any proposals which the German government might formulate. Within three days the Germans answered the Hughes offer. Little attention was paid then to the reply, which coincided with the attitude of the American dollar diplomats. The German proposal had in it the essence of what, in a few years, was to become the present Dawes report—the appointment of an international committee of experts to decide on Germany's capacity to pay, the flotation of a huge international loan to the Reich, and the fixing of approximately twelve and a half billion dollars as the total reparation payment.

Hughes Takes a Hand.

Hughes informed the Germans that their plan did not afford "a basis for discussion acceptable to the Allied governments." He did not transmit the proposal as he had promised to do, because official action of this sort, at that moment, would have aroused Allied imperialist suspicions of an opposition to the United States Government. Nothing was done by Washington till the Fall of 1922 when Hughes broached the idea of a committee of experts to the Franco-British imperialist spokesmen. The Hughes suggestion evoked no response.

The agricultural crisis was becoming so sharp in the United States that the Government was compelled to make at least an audible and visible pretense at procuring relief. In order to forestall action on the Borah resolution calling for an international conference, in order to avoid legislative action on American foreign relations as provided for by the Constitution and thus to limit the consideration of these matters to executive, backdoor treatment, Hughes went to New Haven in December 1922 and suggested, in a public address, the appointment of a committee of experts.

French Imperialists Yield.

Another year intervened before the European financiers were compelled to yield to the American monopoly class whose trump card was economic pressure, economic prowess. On December 5, 1923, Louis Barthou, the French president of the reparations commission, asked Colonel James A. Logan, the American unofficial member of the board, to ask the Washington government would "acquiesce in the acceptance of invitations by American experts.

The die was cast. The American imperialists had now crossed the Rubicon of their campaign for the industrial and financial conquest of Europe. What followed, followed quickly. The Banker-Generals Dawes, Young and Robinson became "unofficial" members of the last experts' committee. The Dawes report soon appeared, Colonel Logan, Ambassador Kellogg, Secretary of State Hughes, Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, Thomas W. Lamont, J. P. Morgan were all "unofficial" observers at or near the London Conference. But "unofficial" or otherwise, the financial barons of no national capitalist group have ever acted in so dictatorial a manner as the American bankers and diplomats did at this reparations conference.

Full Government Support.

On April 14, 1924, at the Annual Luncheon of the Associated Press, in New York City, President Coolidge called on the country to back the American share of the Dawes loan soon to be floated by the biggest banks. The President said: "I trust that private capital will be willing to participate in this loan." "Sound business reasons" were advanced by Coolidge for his plea.

In his address of acceptance of the republican presidential nomination delivered at Washington on August 14, 1924 Coolidge further called for support of the Dawes plan when he said: "I shall do what I can to encourage American citizens and resources to assist in restoring Europe, with the sympathetic support of our government."

Add to this the report of the Foreign Securities Committee of the Investment Bankers' Association of America as delivered before its last convention at Cleveland, Ohio, on September 24, 1924. The report proposed the establishment of a special foreign loans bureau of the United States Department of Commerce which shall be charged with the task of furnishing "all the special information pertaining to the terms and provisions of issue and to the actual conditions of the country involved."

The next logical proposal is now being put forward—a demand for open, frank protection of these investments by the government. Writing from Geneva, Paul Scott Mowrer, the well-known European correspondent of the Chicago Daily News, in its issue of September 27, 1924, made it plain that "the protection of American capital is not only a legitimate governmental preoccupation, but an actual duty."

Dollar Diplomacy Supreme.

As a result of this first direct attempt, in time of peace, of the United States government to encourage, even unofficially, the purchase of a foreign issue, we have the complete receivership of Germany in the hands of the American financial oligarchy. The Germans are speaking of the American banker, Owen D. Young, as "Owen I," with more power than the Kaiser ever had. An American capitalist is now serving as one of the arbitrators in the transfer of reparations payments. An American banker is director of the new German Bank of Issue. The first general reparations agent is the American corporation lawyer, S. Parker Gilbert, Jr.

This is the full fruition of the reactionary republican policy of "hands off Europe" while at the same organizing to secure a stranglehold on the industries and resources of the continent and the world.

IRISH BOUNDARY BILL EXPECTED TO PASS HOUSE

Tory Die-Hards Will Fight to End

LONDON, Oct. 1.—Colonial Secretary J. H. Thomas today took charge of the government's side in the Irish bill debate in commons.

Passage of the measure is now practically assured despite opposition of the tory "diehards."

This bill empowers the government to create a commission to settle the Irish Free State-Ulster boundary dispute without consulting Ulster, if the Ulster government refuses to participate.

Hastings Under Fire.

Sir Partrick Hastings, attorney general, is under fire from liberals and tories for his withdrawal of prosecution against J. R. Campbell, acting editor of the Workers Weekly, official organ of the Communist Party of Great Britain.

The offices of the Communist organ were raided by Scotland Yard, men under the direction of Arthur Henderson, secretary for Home Affairs. The editor was charged with inciting the soldiers and sailors of His Majesty's government to rebellion, but there was such a strong protest from the ranks of organized labor against the arrest that the attorney general seized a convenient excuse to drop the charges against Campbell.

Feared Trial.

The government learned that the Communist editor was a war veteran and was decorated for bravery. What they feared was that his arrest would have a damaging effect on MacDonald's career.

In explaining to the House of Commons the reason for withdrawing the charges against Campbell, Hastings said, that no jury would convict him and the Communists were only too glad to have a martyr. Debate will be held next week on the subject.

Carson and MacDonald.

A sensation was created in political circles here today over the announcement that premier MacDonald had invited Lord Edward Carson, to represent Ulster on the boundary commission. Lord Carson was formerly one of the most active of the Ulster unionists and leader of the fight in opposition to the Home Rule Bill which was passed in 1914 and signed by the king.

Led by Carson, the Ulster reactionaries defied the British government and imported arms and ammunition from Germany to equip the volunteers which were ready to come to gripe with the government in defense of the Empire. The Ulster unionists were backed up by the British tories, important military and naval leaders like General Roberts and Lord Beresford openly siding with Carsonites.

Connolly and Carson.

The war prevented a showdown, the Asquith, liberal premier, surrendered to the tories. John Redmond, leader of the Irish Nationalists joined hands with Carson, leader of the unionists, in pledging their respective followers to defend the Empire, but Redmond soon lost his following and in 1916 James Connolly, the proletarian leader, raised the banner of revolt against the British Empire. Connolly was executed by Asquith's government, or Arthur Henderson, today home secretary in the MacDonald, was a member. But Sir Edward Carson, now Lord Carson, was given one of the highest offices in the power of the disposal of the British government.

Didn't Finish the Job.

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 1.—John Buchanan Pirie, a bookkeeper, walked into a police station this afternoon saying that he had murdered his wife and two children and would have killed himself had not his courage failed him. He was arrested. Police went to the home and found Mrs. Pirie and her two children dead in their beds.

WAR ON NEGRO GIRLS SEEKING AN EDUCATION

Bootleggers Welcome on the North Side

"Bootleggers welcome—'niggers' keep out!"

This is the stand taken by the small business men of Chicago's silk-stocking district, organized into the Loyola-Sheridan Business Association, in attempting to prevent the lease of the building at 6344-46 Broadway as a boarding school for colored girls.

It Was Former Cabaret.

The building was formerly occupied by the Northern Lights cabaret, a notorious bootleg joint. This brought no protest from the Loyola-Sheridan Business association. In fact, members of the association had to call in their attorneys to discover that the place had been ordered closed by the courts, and that it had been re-opened in contempt of court.

But the information that a school for colored girls might opened in the same building resulted in the calling of a special meeting of the Loyola business men.

And the Loyola business men, fearing the effect which the presence of self-respecting colored girls, trying to get an education, might have on real estate values, will do everything in their power to prevent the signing of the lease.

Make "Jim Crow" City.

The action of the Loyola association is in keeping with the campaign of small business men of Chicago with the aid of the police to prevent the Negroes from breaking thru the set boundaries of an established colored zone. few days ago a colored man and a white woman, walking together, were aproached by a policeman and forced to separate.

Every possible help in the plans to Jim-Crow the city is being given by the Chicago Tribune, which characterizes the news of the possible establishment of the school as a piece of "disconcerting intelligence."

Boy Shoots Father.

POTTSVILLE, Pa., Oct. 1.— Shot three times by his 17-year-old son in their home at Fort Carbon near here, August Dewitt, a plumber, died at the Pottsville Hospital today. William Dewitt, who did the shooting, is being held in the county jail pending investigation.

The boy is alleged to have opened fire when his father came home intoxicated and made threats against his wife and daughter.

STEEL WORKERS HEAR ABOUT THE FIGHT OF THE DAILY WORKER

The Workers Party of Gary is conducting a whirlwind campaign to introduce the DAILY WORKER to the steel workers of Gary. Posters have been distributed thruout the town, the pool halls have agreed to sell the paper, and the DAILY WORKER is now conducting negotiations to have the paper on the Gary news stands.

In connection with the DAILY WORKER drive in Gary, the City Central Committee is instituting the shop nuclei form of organization among the Workers Party members who work in the Gary steel mills. Comrade John Heinrichson, circulation manager of the DAILY WORKER for Chicago, declares that "Gary will be the first to have a well organized shop nuclei movement of any Workers Party branch in the country."

At a special meeting of the C. C. C. last Sunday, the DAILY WORKER drive was taken up and a DAILY WORKER committee of seven elected, with John Rusak, DAILY WORKER agent for Gary, as chairman.

Business men in Gary inform DAILY WORKER agents that as members of the Chamber of Commerce they cannot give advertisements until the Chamber of Commerce approves. Hence most of the business men of Gary have sabotaged the DAILY WORKER. The Negro population has become interested in the drive, and as a result Gordon Owens' meeting there is expected to be especially well attended.

Workers Party members have been getting up and selling the DAILY WORKER in front of the steel mill gates every morning at 5 o'clock.

In conjunction with the DAILY WORKER drive in Gary, Karl Reeve has been writing a series of articles on the conditions prevailing among the steel trust slaves there.

An American Bishop Fears Aid Russians May Give to Chinese

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, an American churchman raises the cry that Soviet Russia may exert some influence upon the Chinese situation. He is very much afraid that Bolshevik support of the cause of Sun Yat Sen may prove detrimental to the cause of the imperialist plunderers in the Orient.

* * * *

This fear was voiced by Bishop L. J. Birney, in charge of the Shanghai, China, area of the Methodist Episcopal Church, at the opening of the 85th Annual Session of the Rock River Conference of this same Methodist Episcopal Church, held at Sterling, Illinois.

This is the feature of the story that the Chicago Tribune's expert on church matters, the Rev. W. B. Norton, sends in to his paper, and the headline writer falls into the spirit of the news by putting a headline over it as follows: "Soviets Worst Peril in China, Bishop Asserts."

* * * *

The Bishop confesses that he has much greater interests in the Orient than converting the "Heathen Chinese" to the Christianity of John D. Rockefeller and J. Pierpont Morgan. He is looking much more to the pocketbooks of the great American bankers and industrialists, than he is to the souls of the Orientals.

"The constitution follows the flag," is one of the sayings that constitutes the backbone of America's colonial policy. But the American missionary, financed by the great wealth poured into the churches by the nation's multi-millionaires, precede both the flag and the constitution, in developing possible foreign fields of exploitation.

* * * *

The Bishop tries to dismiss the present troubles around Shanghai as something of no consequence. Internecine war, fomented by American and British gold, to weaken Chinese resistance to the foreign invader, does not concern the clergyman. Thousands slaughtered in order that the Almighty American dollar might win a little more advantageous position in the Shanghai sector, does not spur him to notice the blood upon his own hands.

* * * *

True, the fighting around Shanghai is only incidental to the greater effort of American and British bankers to crush the national revolutionary movement in China, and overthrow the rule of Sun Yat Sen at Canton. Listen to the Bishop proclaim:

"The real danger is the attack on Peking, with the aid of Russia. The Southern General, Sun Yat Sen, has openly proclaimed himself a Bolshevik. The general who is leading the attack from the North, Chang Tso Lin, is commonly believed to be in sympathy with the Soviet Government.

"There are already 500 Russian soldiers in the Northern Chinese army. If this number is increased to 5,000, there will be a real danger of the fall of Peking and of the government."

* * * *

Well, what of it?

There are good American precedents for all the aid that the Russians may desire to give to the Chinese revolutionists.

During the American revolution, in 1776, when the colonists were fighting valiantly to overthrow British rule on this side of the Atlantic, LaFayette, Von Steuben and a host of other sympathizers with the cause of the colonists crossed the Atlantic to fight on the side of the revolution. Without the aid of foreigners, it is doubtful if the American cause would have succeeded as well as it did. Even in the British parliament there were statesmen who raised their voices, on behalf of the American revolution, in defiance of the king.

* * * *

We do not know how many Russians there are fighting on the side of the Chinese revolutionists.

The only regret of American workers should be that the bishop was not compelled to claim that many Americans were enlisted under the revolutionary standards of Sun Yat Sen.

With the bishops and missionaries on the side of the Oriental headquarters of Standard Oil and Wall Street, surely it behooves America's working class to offer some assistance to the courageous Chinese masses fighting the efforts of foreign imperialists to wipe out what progress they have won during the years of hard struggle since the emperor was overthrown and hurled into the discard.

* * * *

Where is LaFollette, who claims he is opposed to Wall Street? Not a word does he utter on the Chinese situation. The Chinese revolutionists have not a single friend in congress. This is easily understood when it is realized that all the fair weather friends of Russian Recognition have taken to their storm cellars during this campaign.

* * * *

Yet it is fitting that only the Communists in the United States should raise their voices on behalf of the oppressed in China. Even the MacDonald "labor" government in England, falls in line to support British imperialist designs against the Chinese revolution.

* * * *

It is well that the bishop brought up the Chinese question. Many workers will get a little more interested in his task in the Far East.

Jay Lovestone, in his pamphlet, "American Imperialism," shows how the church falls in line with capitalists seeking foreign markets. On page eleven he points out that:

"Our capitalists are interested even in the wildest thickets of African investments. In the recent Tangiers controversy, involving about half a dozen European countries, the United States, that is, the Stone and Webster Electric & Power interests, were represented by Father Denning (Catholic), who was supposed to be bringing the Light of Christianity and the Power of the Saviour to the backward tribesmen."

* * * *

Bishop Birney's speech at the Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church ought to place him in line for a good, high salaried job, many of which are at the disposal of the great American interests that have profitable business enterprises in the Orient. When Bishop Birney gets the job, let the workers and farmers understand why he got it. Then they can be the better persuaded to fight on the opposite side from the bishop and his rich friends.

JAP DIPLOMAT DENIES ANTI-U.S. WAR MOVE

League Still Chatters About Peace

(Special to the DAILY WORKER)

TOKYO, Oct. 1.—Replying to the charges made in the American press that Japan was lining up the League of Nations against the United States, Foreign Minister Shidehara, today in an interview declared that "Japan had no intention of submitting the American immigration problem to the League of Nations for arbitration."

Shidehara said that if the league was created to minimize the chances of war, league competency should as a matter of principle be extended to all varieties of differences between nations.

This attitude appears quite logical, but nothing is logical except force under the present social order and the most powerful capitalist nation in the world, the United States, is not going to tolerate any interference with its ambition to go out and take what it wants when it wants it. Irritating Japanese race pride may not be such a bad thing for the Japanese ruling class for the moment, it enables them to cover up their exploitation of their own subject classes behind a smoke screen of anti-American feeling, and the American ruling class can arouse more emotional insanity in the form of patriotism over the "yellow peril" that it could over the exploitation of the Orient.

While the diplomats in Tokyo and Washington make peaceful gestures the respective governments are building up their military and naval forces for the next great conflict.

Nobody expects that a war between Japan and the United States can be localised. When the storm breaks the League of Nations will die with a loud gasp and the workers of all nations will again be thrown into the blood-red arena, unless in the meantime they take the power of government out of the hands of the master class.

League Still Talks.

GENEVA, Oct. 1.—The arbitration protocol draft, containing the Japanese amendment was formally placed before the League of Nations today. M. Politis of Greece, and Dr. Benes, of Czecho-Slovakia, introduced the draft to the assembly in plenary session.

The sponsors of the peace protocol show a naive faith in the capitalist governments, that is not shared by the newspaper correspondents or indeed, by the diplomats from whose lips the words of peace flow so gently. If nations begin hostilities impulsively, the League will simply proclaim an armistice, and of course, "the impulsive nations" will pack up their deadly weapons and go home shamefacedly! It is to laugh loudly and uproariously.

The heads of two small nations were given the honor of bringing in the latest peace-baby. But it will take more than the product of Ramsay MacDonald's cracker factory, to bring it to maturity.

WORKERS LOSE SAVINGS IN BIG BUSINESS GRAFT

Stock Sold for $65 a Share, Worth $.00000

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 1.—Morton S. Hawkins, head of the Hawkins Mortgage company, with home offices at Portland, Ind., and eighteen other defendants indicted in the Hawkins and subsidiary companies, faced trial in federal court today on charges of using the mails in a scheme to defraud.

A nation-wide plot to defraud home builders is charged against the defendants who include William Sacks, St. Louis millionaire capitalist and politician, and for whom a continuance was asked on a representation that Senator James A. Reed, his attorney, was too ill to appear in court.

Lost Millions.

Stockholders in the Hawkins Mortgage company and others which included the United Home Builders, the Welfare Loan company, the Co-operative League of America and others, have lost millions, according to government attorneys, who claim that stock sold at $65 a share, was in reality worth less than one cent.

Not So Sick.

Judge John R. Caverly, who sentenced Nathan F. Leopold, Jr., and Richard A. Loeb to "life and 99 years" for the slaying of little Robert Franks, today sent word to chief justice John A. Swanson of the circuit court that he will be on the bench Monday, following completion of treatments at the Mercy hospital here for a nervous breakdown suffered two days after he imposed the sentence Sept. 21.

CROWDS BRAVE COLD WINDS TO HEAR SPEAKERS

Minor and Maurer Talk on Northwest Side

Workers stood in large numbers, ignoring the biting cold [illegible] Tuesday evening and listened to Workers Party speakers explain the class struggle from their open air platforms.

At W. Division and N. Washtenaw Sts., "Bob" Minor explained to an interested crowd of workers the development of the capitalist class in this country, the changes brot in America's social and economic structure by the Civil War, and the part the Negroes have played in this development.

Two Opposing Slaveries.

Minor showed how the civil war was in reality a fight between the feudalistic chattel slave system of the south and the system of industrial wage slavery that had developed in the north. He showed how the freeing of the slaves was merely a step taken by the north to break the economic power of the south. Minor then related the rapid progress of the industrial wage slave system after the civil war and described the present conditions among the Negroes.

George Maurer spoke at this meeting, explaining why John Davis and Cal Coolidge, democratic and republican candidates for president, are prattling so much about "preservation of the constitution."

"Davis and Colidge are anxious to preserve for the capitalist class the autocratic powers of the supreme court," Maurer declared.

Maurer Hits Supreme Court.

"They are anxious to prevent the gaining of more power by congress." He described how the supreme court is continually being used against the workers in the interests of the large exploiting industrial institutions.

Ella Reeve Bloor left for Moline, Ill., where she spoke last night, after a good street meeting at the corner of Wilton and Belmont Sts., Tuesday night. The Workers Party speakers had been threatened with arrest, but all was peaceful on this corner Tuesday evening, the crowds of workers standing around muffled in their overcoats to hear Mother Bloor tell about the workers' and farmers' government of Russia. Comrade Bloor speaks in Peoria tonight.

Coming Open Air Meetings.

Street meetings in Chicago for tonight and Friday are as follows:

THURSDAY, Oct. 2.—

62nd and Halsted Sts.—Speakers: Pete Herd and others.

47th St. and So. Ashland Ave.—Speakers: J. Louis Engdahl and others.

14th St. and 51st Ave.—Speakers: Karl Reeve and others, including Italian speaker.

Roosevelt and Marshfield.—Speakers. George Maurer and others.

26th and Homan.—Speakers: Robert Minor and Mrs. Kalousek.

North Ave. and Orchard St.—Speakers: Joseph Manley and others.

FRIDAY, Oct. 3.

Lawrence and Sawyer Sts. — Pete Herd and Comrade Cline.

North Ave. and Fairfield St.—Speakers: George Maurer and Samuel T. Hammersmark.

Roosevelt and Homan.—Speakers to be announced later.

ATHLETIC CARNIVAL FOR WORKERS PLANNED IN EAST FOR THIS SUNDAY

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 1.—A large turnout is expected at the first Athletic Carnival and Picnic arranged by the Workers' Sport Alliance, for Sunday, Oct. 5, at American House, College Point, Long Island. Many running and jumping events have been arranged for, but aside from that the Scandinavian Club will participate in a football game against the Hungarians. The Yugo-Slav workers will partake in gymnastic exhibitions.

This is the first real attempt to run an athletic carnival where sports will be participated in by workers' organizations exclusively. The bourgeois organizations have closed the doors against all attempts of the workers to enter their athletic meets. But the workers will have to organize their own clubs if they desire to have sports. The Workers' Sport [illegible] organization that has this aim in view.

The place is easily reached by taking the train to Clason Point then the ferry to Long Island. The Picnic ground is near the park.

CARPENTERS END MEET IN UPROAR

of Labor, and as a member of the Executive Council, I object to the name that the American Federation of Labor has given its bureau, because it will confuse our members so that they will not know which is which. . . . The one that is being promoted by Foster is known as the Trade Union Educational League, and if a member did not know the difference he would rather take the Trade Union Educational League, because naturally that is a catchy phrase.

"The Trade Union Educational League, you know, stands for the One Big Union and the Industrial Workers of the World, it stands for doing away with the industrial organizations. . . ."

Amendment Lost.

Duffy finally ended his crazy twaddle with hoping that the American Federation of Labor would change the name of its education stripling so that anything suspiciously suggestive of education might not lead the carpenters to imbibe Communist propaganda, trade union solidarity, industrial unionism thru amalgamation or any other of the progressive measures which the reactionaries hate like poison.

After the Duffy tirade the amendment went down to defeat.

The left wing opposition in the convention was led by delegate Morris Rosen of New York, candidate for general president against Hutcheson. Rosen introduced several resolutions which were ably supported by several delegates but which went down before the well-oiled and well-paid machine.

A resolution condemning mayor Hylan of New York for forcing carpenters to work under unfair conditions was voted down after delegate Halkett, the Hutcheson henchman, and Brindell successor, declared that passage of the resolution might arouse the anger of mayor Hylan. The New York carpenters should be allowed to settle their own problems, he said. The resolution was lost and Hylan's equanimity was not endangered.

For Job Control.

A resolution introduced by delegate Rosen calling for job control was nonconcurred in by the committee on the ground that it would create a revolution. Delegate Hackett declared conditions in New York were good and called another delegate as a witness. This delegate responded by charging delegate Rosen with being a publicity hunter because he was running for general president.

A resolution calling for a five-day week was carried, even Duffy speaking for it. This was evidently a sop to the delegates in order to stem the rising tide of discontent.

Delegate Rosen introduced a resolution calling for the election of the rules committee by the convention. The machine opposed this on the grounds that the delegates may elect members to the committee who could not make rules, therefore their selection should be left in the hands of the president.

An amendment requiring that applicants for membership in the carpenters' union should show proof that they had applied for their first citizenship papers was opposed by delegate Rosen on the ground that it would keep out of the brotherhood a large percentage of carpenters and is a danger to the strength of the union as every carpenter who is outside of the union is a menace to the organization.

Foreigners Good Unionists.

It as a fallacy, he declared, to think that only American citizens made good union material as could be proven by the needle trade unions, which were largey composed of foreigners and yet these unions were the most militant in the country. The amendment carried.

The suspension of delegate Burgess of Philadelphia from the union by President Hutcheson, because the former's name appeared on the stationary of the Labor Defense Council in Philadelphia, was sustained by the convention. Hutcheson ordered Burgess to withdraw his name from the defense Council, and on Burgess refusing to do so on the ground that he had a perfect right to lend his name to a worthy cause, he was immediately suspended. The action of Hutcheson and his payrollers at the convention caused much discontent which was increased when delegate Mulcahy, previously beaten up by the Hutcheson thugs, rose to speak for his appeal against the Old Age Home, and in favor of pensions only. Hutcheson ruled Mulcahy out of order and as the latter appealed from the decision of the chair, the Czar expelled him from the convention.

At this stage the convention was in an uproar. Diegates rose in great numbers shouting: "Let us go home so that Czar Hutcheson can rule the empty chairs," and "we were sent here from our locals to support Hutcheson, but now we are going back to tell them what fools they are."

The rank and file of the carpenters' union have the opportunity in the election for general president to replace the autocratic and reactionary capitalist tool, W. L. Hutcheson, with a progressive, Morris Rosen, Hutcheson's opponent, for the position. Rosen stands for every issue that means progress in the carpenters' union and in the entire labor movement. He is for amalgamation, independent working class political action, recognition of Soviet Russia and for the united front of the workers against the capitalist class.

Hutcheson stands for the opposite. No more confirmed enemy of labor exists among the grand dukes of the American Federation of Labor. It is up to the rank and file of the carpenters who feel the weight of Hutcheson's reactionary policy to organize the progressive forces inside their organization for the overthrow of th reactionary Hutcheson and his machine.

PHILADELPHIA TO SHOW RED ARMY PICTURE

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Oct. 1.—The new feature comedy film, "The Beauty and the Bolshevik," which is to be shown at Lulu Temple, Broad and Spring streets, Saturday, October 4, has been made with the co-operation of the Red Army Brigade. The film is a romance between the commander of the brigade and the daughter of a rich farmer of the village in which the red army settles after four years of severe warfare.

The activities of the red army in the village are the background for this romance and stirring scenes of the army in action, fighting the white guards or helping the village poor, provide many thrills in a picture that holds the interest of the audience from the very first moment to the last. A review of the picture in the labor press has declared it to be a view of the revolution in miniature.

In addition to "The Beauty and the Bolshevik," a new graphic picture of Russia's industrial development, "Russia in Overalls" will be shown. A special musical program has been arranged for. There will be two performances beginning at 6:30 and 8:30 p. m. Admission is 50 cents. This showing is under the auspices of the Committee for International Workers' Aid.

Young Workers' Soccer Team to Play Game Sunday

By AL SCHAAP.

Sunday will witness the beginning of the fall soccer season for the Young Workers League. The League soccer football team will play the Sparta Union at the latter's ground, 27th and Kostner Streets.

During the spring the Y. W. L. soccer football team has shown the best form since its organization and affiliation with the International Soccer Football League. This league has among it several industrial organizations, including the Western Electric Co. The Young Workers League team is also affiliated with the newly organized Workers' Sport Alliance.

The Workers' Sport Alliance has taken on a national character. Branches are organized in New York as well as in Chicago.

All workers, young and old, should come out and cheer the Yowl huskies, who are facing a formidable opponent. The park can be reached by transferring to the 26th Street car, riding to 4400 west, then walking one block south. The game starts at one p. m., and admission is fifty cents.

MINES FILLED; MANY DEAD IN EASTERN STORM

Fireman and Brakeman on Engine Killed

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 1.—Nine persons dead, hundreds of homes damaged, mines filled with water, bridges washed away and thousands of dollars worth of property destroyed was the toll of the fierce wind and rainstorm which swept eastern Pennsylvania for 48 hours before spending its final fury last night.

Six of the victims were drowned, one a woman, and three killed. W. H. Linn and Edward Keller, both of Catawissa, fireman and brakeman on a freight engine were killed at Girard Manor, near Bloomsburg, by a landslide that destroyed hundreds of yards of track.

Wall Gives Way.

Henry Herman, contractor, and Louis Eickhoff, his assistant, were drowned at Mauch Chunk, where a retaining wall gave way.

William Collins was drowned at Wilkesbarre when his motor car plunged into a creek.

Many Are Drowned.

Landis Travis was electrocuted at Wyoming near Wilkesbarre by a live wire blown down by the storm. Mrs. Agnes Notosh was drowned at Miners' Mills. The other victims were drowned at Jermyn, near Scranton, when a bridge gave way.

May Censure Brookhart.

Des Moines, Iowa, Oct. 1.—Following Senator Smith W. Brookhart's startling denunciation of General Charles G. Dawes, republican vice-presidential nominee, B. B. Burnquist, chairman of the Iowa state republican committee, has called a meeting of the state committee for tomorrow at the meeting steps may be taken to censure Brookhart.

Bandit Head Wears Uniform.

DUQUOIN, Ill., Oct. 1.—Shortly after a dance ended at the Fairview dance hall, south of here, early today, an dwhile the ochestra was being paid off, six unmasked bandits entered, lined up ten men and women, collected about $500, all watches and diamonds, looted the counter of cigarettes, candy and chewing gum, an descaped in an automobile. The leader of the bandits wore a uniform and carried a sawed-off shotgun.

ATTENTION, NEW YORK!

Come ye all to the grand reunion of branches one and six, of the Young Workers League. All comrades are urged to come and make this affair a realsuccess. The place is the Park Palace (The Carlton). The date and time—the 18th of October, at 8 p. m. A real jazz band will furnish the music.

THE Chicago detective bureau is another hole where the ingenuity of the police is strained in the endeavor to inflict mental agony on the unfortunate people who are thrown in there on suspicion. It is the custom in this filthy cellar to take the prisoners out of their cells three times each day, when the detectives answer roll call, preparatory to going on duty. After the "dicks" get halled out by the lieutenants, the prisoners are lined up and abused individually while the detectives look them over. Not alone are they looked at but it is also the custom to "give them a little medicine" as the lieutenant says, which means a beating. These brutal pleasantries are officially disavowed by the police authorities, but they are part of the system under capitalism and will no more be stopped by the "humanitarian" twaddle of Enright than war will be outlawed by the diplomats that run the League of Nations.

WALTER W. HEAD, who opened the bankers' convention here delivered a wild attack on "radical proposals." Congress must be held in check, declared the bloated plute, the supreme court, must be held inviolate and the integrity of the United States must be preserved—for the bankers. This wind bag denounced blocs and organizations that appeal to classes yet his speech was a brazen defense of the rule of the bankers and manufacturers over the country. Congress is looked upon by the bankers as a necessary evil, which does not always obey the Wall Street rudder, but the supreme court comes in handy whenever the capitalist politicians go wrong from the Wall Street point of view.

THE capitalists do not like government "by blocs" except the bankers' and manufacturers' bloc. Banker Head denounced legislation that interferes with industry and in the same breath endorsed the Dawes plan which commenced to work only when the German reichstag passed the necessary legislation. Democrats and republicans were at the bankers' convention but they got along nicely.

IT is safe to say that no other city of its size has such an antediluvian street railway system as Chicago. To make up for the deficiency in service the management has resorted to publicity. This week those who are not so crowded that they cannot look at the roof of the car can read a legend credited to an old motorman, who is honored in his old age by having his picture accompany the story. The old worker says that whereas several years ago you could ride four miles for one fare today you can ride thirty-five miles.

THE conductor is still a conductor and a not very vigorous one at that. Judging by his picture he is ready to go into his coat of lumber, without those physiognomical signs of wealth which the great progress made by the street car company would entitle him to exhibit, seeing that he served his master so faithfully and well. Patrons of the street cars may travel farther for one fare than they did thirty years ago, but the fare has also traveled onward and upward. The people who own the company have grown fatter and richer but the men who run the street cars are still fighting to force the company to pay them enough to keep themselves and their families

BILL TO SETTLE IRISH BOUNDARY IN PARLIAMENT

Orange Stronghold Will Not Be Coerced

LONDON, Sept. 30.—Premier Ramsay MacDonald this afternoon moved second reading of the Irish bill in the House of Commons saying:

"It is the essential duty of every government to fulfill its obligations. I resent the charge that we are about to coerce Ulster. This is not a party bill."

The Irish bill empowers the government to create a commission to settle the Free State-Ulster boundary dis without Ulster's consent.

The premier said every effort had been made to obtain a settlement of the Irish issue, but it has proved impossible.

"No one wants the Anglo-Irish treaty to be a dead letter," he added.

Mac Appeals For Unity.

Premier MacDonald appealed to commons to "pass the Irish bill with such unanimity that it will be an imperial appeal to Ulster.

Former Premier H. H. Asquith, a liberal, promised to support the measure.

Former premier Stanley Baldwin, a tory, announced the tories will move amendments to the bill when it reaches the committee stage.

Orangemen Adamant.

Under the government of Ireland act of 1920, it was laid down that northern Ireland (Ulster) shall consist of six counties—Antrim, Armagh, Down, Fermanagh, Londonderry, and Tyrone. Ulster contends that this act constitutes her frontier for all time and that it cannot be abridged without the consent of the government, parliament and the people of the province.

Insists on Letter.

The Free State, on the other hand, insists on literal interpretation of the boundary section of the treaty. The government says that the boundary commission which must be set up under the treaty to determine the frontier must have a free hand to re-make the frontier "in accordance with the wishes of the inhabitants."

Discussion of the Irish bill is sure to result in the most acrimonious debate the Commons has known in years.

OMAHA LABOR UNIONS READY FOR BONEYARD

A. F. of L. Organizers Are Good Rum Sleuths

(By an A. F. of L. Unionist.)

OMAHA, Neb., Oct. 1.—Omaha labor unions are not ready for the boneyard, that is the headway that the A. F. of L. system holds out for the downtrodden wage worker. In fact, never in the history of labor unions in Omaha has organized labor been in the deplorable condition it is in today, and with no hope of getting out of the rut in the near future.

Omaha labor unions, with a very few exceptions, are mostly in need of an undertaker—they are as dead as they will ever be and yet retain their charters.

The trouble with Omaha unions, and particularly of the central body, and the state federation, is that they have for the past dozen years been rapidly passing into the hands of agents of the captains of industry. The most notable feature of union meetings nowadays is the unanimity of these agents in their attempts—usually successful—at leading the membership off into some blind trail whenever any question is presented that promises to really bring advantage to the workers.

Workers of Ancient Vintage.

With rare exceptions, of recent years the labor leaders of Omaha have been men who have not been in touch with a day of actual labor in years. Regardless of the fact that reforms should come from within, the rank and file has been betrayed so often that it is impossible to get a movement in that line started, and consequently the membership of the unions has dwindled until there are barely enough to hold their charters. The funny part about these "borers from within" is that they are all staunch supporters of the A. F. of L. and are continually blaming coalitions into the "Reds," "Communists," "Bolshevists," etc. Not long ago the president of the Omaha Central Labor union presided at a meeting that placed a local meat market on the unfair list and then went to said market to purchse his meat supply. He and an adventuresome machinist of days gone by started a raid on the "Reds" in the Central Labor union for the purpose of diverting attention, and after considerable noise about the army of "Reds" here they finally discovered one lone delegate who admitted he was not in accord with the A. F. of L. antiquated policy of dealing with labor questions. The delegate was unseated with an accompanying fanfare of trumpets and front-page space in the daily papers.

After that, of course there was no one to blame things on, and as a consequence the rank and file became more and more convinced that the situation is hopeless until some of the local leaders die of old age, as there is little chance of ever getting them to go to work.

They Are Slipping Out.

These so-called labor leaders apparently are not ignorant of the conditions they have brot about in Omaha labor circles, for practically every one of them is planning to land a political job as a result of the November election.

Several years ago Omaha unions purchased an abandoned church property in a desirable portion of the city with the idea of converting the property into an up-to-date labor temple. The control of the labor temple (used as such in the meantime) got into the hands of the same bunch of four-flushing incompetents that have mis-directed the destinies of organized labor here, with the result that the outlook is bright for losing about $20,000 that the local unions have put into the property.

Some Wise Heads.

As an example of what business sagacity those in control possess, and how much they really care about the welfare of labor interests, the treasurer of the board has been panhandling business men for funds without so much as making any report to the stockholders as to who donated and how much. Neither does he take the stockholders into his confidence as to what organizations meet in the temple and what they pay in. Everything is "jimped" and nobody except the treasurer knows what the true state of affairs is, except that each month there is a deficit of around $150. That incident ought to give your readers an idea why labor unions are in need of an undertaker in Omaha.

Good Prohibition Agent.

Anyway, Omaha is a good field for the A. F. of L. to use as a "horrible example."

The last organizer sent here only stayed about a month, but in that time he had the correct location of every bootlegging joint in town—and never accomplished a thing otherwise.

Letters From Our Readers on Many Subjects

A Socialist Protests.

Editor's Note.—In another part of this issue, there is a story of the breaking up of Comrade Bloor's meeting by Milwaukee policemen. The following letter was received by The DAILY WORKER from an eye witness to the action of the police and is a copy of a protest sent by him to Mayor Hoan of Milwaukee:

SEPT. 24, 1924.
BOX 573,
MILWAUKEE, WIS.,

MAYOR HOAN:—
"Dear Sir:

"Permit me to compliment you for the efficiency with which your police department manages to suppress free speech and free assembly in this, the only socialist city in the United States.

"At about 8 p. m. this date, as I passed along the corner of 4th and Wells St., I heard in a crowd of approximately 100 persons who were assembled around a woman speaker, representing the Workers Party. Everything seemed quiet and orderly; there was no shouting, or even applause, or disturbance of any kind, altho everyone seemed to listen with considerable interest. It was as orderly a meeting as any that I ever saw.

"The speaker took especial care to so marshal her audience that traffic on neither sidewalk or street would be interfered with. Directly across the street a Salvation Army progressed, with enough noise emanating from its drum, to drown out the voice of our speaker. I had listened only a minute or two, when a policeman appeared. This officer's cap-badge, I noticed, was numbered 267. He stepped up to the speaker, and said, 'Lady, have you got your permit?' She replied that she had, today (it seems that there had been a similar interruption at her attempt to hold a meeting on this street corner the previous evening) had a telephonic conversation with you, regarding the matter of permit to speak, and that you had informed her that never during your mayorship has it been, or will be necessary to secure a permit to speak on a street corner in Milwaukee, and that you had expressed the hope that any city with a socialist administration would abide by our constitutional guaranty of freedom of press, speech, and assembly.

"Upon receiving this information, No. 267 disappeared, saying as he went that he would find out what action should be taken about it. Within a few minutes he returned, and shortly thereafter I noticed that two additional policemen had arrived. I do not claim to be a mind-reader, but the whole thing gave the impression that they were fairly itching for an opportunity to break up the meeting.

"The lady was allowed to speak for perhaps another five minutes or so, when one of the additional policemen stepped up to her, and informed her that the meeting had been in progress sufficiently long, the audience was commanded in true militaristic goose-step style, to disperse, and the meeting thus came to an end.

"Needless to say, I was under the impression that the speaker was taken to the police station for questioning, as tho she were a suspected criminal.

"My object in bringing the above facts to your personal attention is, to learn whether such actions under the endorsement of the socialist administration of Milwaukee, or are they taken independently, without your approval, or without your ability to prevent them, by our enemies, with the view of bringing discredit upon the socialist administration, in the eyes of the workers.

"I have been supporting socialism since 1915 or 1916, have talked for it, argued for it, to the extent that I could, have been enrolled as a member of the party, paying dues to it for about two years, altho I am not at present a member, have perhaps even suffered more or less of persecution for it. At this coming election, if I had been a resident of this city and state the requisite time to become a voter, there would have been one more vote to count for "Fighting Bob," as well as the other candidates that are endorsed by the Leader.

"I would have done so in the belief that socialism in power would practice what it preaches, namely: A free press, free speech, and free assembly. Tonight's incident on the corner of 4th and Wells Streets has considerably shaken this belief. Socialism in power, it seems, would consider itself perfect, and any effort beyond that to improve this world would meet with just as stern repression as socialism has met from the old capitalistic parties.

"I still am of the opinion that the speaker had her wires hopelessly crossed when she placed our "Fighting Bob" in the same class as the abominable Coolidge and Fascist-leading Dawes, but much of what she said, on other matters, was absolutely true. And even if she had been granted every privilege that is granted to the Salvation Army and other "soul-saving" busy-bodies, and the Coolidge-Dawes, Davis-Bryan, and La-Follette-Wheeler, speakers.

"If the Workers Party can not safely be given the same privileges, then we can draw only one conclusion, and that is that the verbal propaganda, as well as printed literature, of the Workers Party is so true, and so convincing, and so superior to socialism, that the masses would immediately fall for it, and therefore, it is necessary to resort to the same tactics that have been used, and are still used, by the capitalist parties against the Socialist Party, if the Workers Party is not to be allowed to flourish and grow and conquer."

Respectfully yours,
ARTHUR ACKLAND.

We Get Some Compliments.

To the DAILY WORKER: I wish to compliment you on the DAILY WORKER. A person who reads it is fully informed on all questions of interest to the wealth producer, he need not read any other periodical to keep abreast of the times.

Farmers Are Broke.

I am a farmer and as such speak from observation of my surroundings. The farmers are broke, they are not going broke, they are broke. Some farmers who thought themselves wealthy, and retired to live in a fine city home are today mortgaging the home and are trying on their land all the loan companies dare to advance. This farmers' deflation and enslavement is one of the most interesting phenomena of modern times. No producer of wealth would be benefited by the collapse of the robber system as would the farmer.

Only Outlook Poorhouse.

He is a long ways from being a class conscious Communist, but I feel certain he is equally far from joining the fascisti. He has quit worrying about adverse weather, crops and prices, he is acting like a fatalist. He says the poorhouse will be a very decent and respectable place because so many people with those qualifications will go there. The city people are paying each other high salaries, but before long the economic disease of the farmer will be contracted by the city worker for the disease is highly contagious.

Farmer For 41 Years.

I have farmed as farm owner in this part of the country 41 years. I was made a socialist by "The Coming Nation" 27 years ago. I have kept myself informed on the economic questions without sparing my eyes or my money during this time.

I feel certain the new civilization will be realized even by the old generation. It is at the gate. A little more deflation will make the slaves open the gate.

Yours for the big change, otherwise called revolution,
H. T. Ahrens, Mondovi, Wash.

No Jobs For the Idle.

To the DAILY WORKER:—The 500 men employed by the Peabody Coal company who have been idle since April 1st, are still idle. They have finally put the seal over this mine and things look pretty blue for us here. 'But the owners still are at the old game of creating rumors to keep the men from seeking employment elsewhere. Their reason is obvious. The shacks the miners live in, are owned by the mine owners; a good many food stores are run by them; so they let the men stay on and get into debt. Then if there should be some work, the miners' wages are docked to pay their debts. They've got us coming and going.

Miners' Hopes Fed on Rumors

The new rumor going the rounds now to keep the miners here is that the Consolidated Coal company has bought the mine.

For the last five months we have been fed up on all kinds of rumors. Some miners have even been made to believe that the reason this mine shut down was because our pit committee man (equal to shop committee) was too radical, he was fighting the company too hard. These deluded individuals in desperation from prolonged unemployment, went as far as waiting on the District Superintendent with a promise that the pit committee man will be removed if he will open Mine No. 21.

Wants DAILY WORKERS.

I wish we had a whole lot more like our pit committee man.

Float a few more DAILY WORKERS in here and see if we can't knock some horse sense into some of these boys.

A Miner, Stonington, Ill.

(Anyone wishing to contribute copies of the DAILY WORKER to Stonington, Ill., will send in their orders to this office to the "Editor of Our Readers' Column" or address a letter to us for the name and address of the author of the above letter.—Ed.)

Socialism is Dead.

To the DAILY WORKER:—"Socialism is Dead—Long Live LaFollette." Here is a suggestion for a campaign slogan that will undoubtedly meet with the approval of all our socialist friends! Including parlor socialists, near-socialists, socialists for convenience and all the other would-be socialists, for altho the funeral oration has not as yet been heard, nevertheless, the old socialist party has "collapsed" according to the frank admission of its own High Priests on the floor of the National Convention recently held in Cleveland, Ohio.

Having adopted LaFollette as its new Savior and discarded its old-time principles as "Bunk," it has given birth to a "new school" of socialism which might be properly called by the name of its Messiah.

Stripped of its revolutionary character this new socialism becomes a sort of second cousin to democracy as it is practiced in America—a mixture of all the reform movements with a sprinkling of the idea of evolution to give it its color.—A Reader.

EDUCATION NOT NECESSARY, SAYS NORMAN THOMAS

Declines Challenge to Debate with Cannon

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 1. — Norman Thomas, socialist and progressive candidate for governor, in a letter made public today, evades an offer to discuss his support of LaFollette. Mr. Thomas was recently challenged to debate by James P. Cannon, Workers Party candidate for governor, on the following topic: "Resolved that LaFollette does not represent the interests of the workers." The reply reads as follows:

To Busy to Debate.

"My dear Mr. Cannon: If you will get the candidates of the old parties to participate in a general discussion of the best way to promote the interests of the workers of America, I shall be glad to take part in it. I will not take part during this campaign in any debate on socialist vs. Communist tactics. The tactics of the socialist party for this campaign have been decided upon after pretty careful discussion. For me to engage in an aggressive effort to carry them out in order to carry on a kind of family quarrel with you or the socialist labor party candidate who has also invited me to debate, would be, in my judgment, an unwarranted expenditure of time and energy.

"Sharply as I disagree with you on many very important points of tactics and social method, I have felt that I had a more valuable service to render at this time than by making public attacks on you or the Workers Party. I gather that your party has not shared this view of the requirements of the situation, for your speakers at the street corner meetings, which I have listened to, spend most of their time not in any attack upon the present social order but upon the socialist party. Yours for LaFollette, Ramsay MacDonald, and others."

"After the campaign is over and the demands on my time are less, I shall be willing to consider arrangements for a general discussion on the issues between socialists and Communists under proper auspices. Until then I suggest that you may well be satisfied with the Nearing-London debate. Even if I thought the kind of debate you suggest would be a useful campaign measure, I should think that the Nearing-London debate ought to cover the question so far as this campaign is concerned.

Very truly yours,
NORMAN THOMAS,
Socialist Candidate for Governor."

Evades Important Issue.

Commenting upon the apparent unwillingness of Thomas to meet the issue, Cannon says: "It is most surprising that Mr. Thomas as a representative of the socialist party cannot find the time during the campaign to discuss before a working class audience, the reason for its complete disavowal of the policy it has followed for the last 20 years or more. As late as the year 1920, the socialist party platform declared that the middle class, which LaFollette represents, are "staunch upholders of the existing order of social inequalities."

"Mr. Eugene V. Debs in the New York Call of June 18, 1912, declared: 'What difference is there, judged by what they stand for, between Taft, Roosevelt, LaFollette, Harmon, Wilson, Clark and Bryan? They do not all alike stand for the private ownership of industry and the wage slavery of the working class?' The last convention of the socialist party came out in favor of the recognition of Soviet Russia. LaFollette excludes this item his platform entirely. LaFollette, whom Thomas supports, has endorsed reactionary candidates of both republican and democratic parties, altho in 1920 the socialist party declared that 'both the republican and democratic parties are the political instruments of the master classes.' In reference to the Nearing-London debate, we propose to present to the workers our position on LaFollette as expressed by an official representative of the Workers Party. Assuredly Mr. Thomas has much to explain to the workers. One can interpret his evasion, if we offer only as an indication that both he and the socialist party, cannot and will not defend their conduct before a working class audience."

Cannon will be the principal speaker at a mass meeting on Thursday evening, Oct. 2 at Hunts Point Palace, 163 St. and Southern Boulevard. On Friday, Oct. 3 he speaks at the Queens County Labor Lyceum, 785 Forest Ave., Brooklyn, and on Saturday, Oct. 4 at Oddfellows' Hall, 72 North Broadway, Yonkers.

LEWIS POLICY IS AS POISONOUS AS DEADLY GAS, IS OPINION OF REBEL JAPANESE MINER

(The following article is by a Japanese coal miner, formerly employed in the mines of the Kemmerer Coal company at Sublet, Wyoming, where the recent disaster occured. The article has been edited very little as we wished our readers to enjoy to the full the delightfully terse style, that many of our other contributors more familiar with the English language would do well to study. We hope in the future to have other articles from the pen of Comrade Nishimura.—Ed. Note.)

By YOSHIO NISHIMURA.

"Cause Unknown!"

Do disasters of coal mines come from the devil's ray sent out from Mars? If so it must be planned by the capitalist class of Mars in order to excuse their friends on Earth. This time to help Quell, president of Kemmerer Coal company, Wyoming. Let Wall Street stock exchange boys believe it but we must not.

I was in the Mine Number Five in Kemmerer and knew what will happen in the future. We expert miners know when roof rock will cave in by sounding just a little so we can detect any approaching collapse.

"Dust explosion," not Mars death ray, is responsible for the disaster. I thought it would come and it did. Kemmerer Coal Co. was not interested in spending much money to make house cleaning work in the mine. They were only interested in protection for profit and nothing else. Frontier mine of the same coal company had the "cause unknown" disaster only a year ago about this time and now Sublet. Devil knows which comes next. The company hired gunmen were busy to show hatred of the company's president and high officers and so they were content of sudden fame and forget to do preventive work in numerous mines which they own hand in hand with Wall Street.

"Cause unknown" is the most horrible criminal report. Because the word means the capitalist would not spend a cent for the preventive work, namely, cleaning the mine, building walls, etc. Yes, "cause unknown," the capitalists would say, "We don't know what to do until the cause is known, tho we will try our best, meantime."

The cause will remain unknown until American workers take hold of the mine and produce for human happiness. Cause will remain unknown until professors, scientists and special lists, paid by working class, sent into the bottom of the mine and make a thoro investigation with the motive to save the miner's life.

Four hours before miners take their daily place, the so-called gas boss enters the mine and inspects every corner. If there is anything different, so he reports. The company man's gas test complied with his years of experience is pretty reliable but how did this disaster happen right after his O. K. report?

It is from accumulated power in the coal dust provoked by electric current or some other force near by. Instead of capitalist research, if we substituted labor research, we may be able to find out a new force originated from the chemical compound which is formed by dust explosion and that substance together with oxygen or something else caused a second explosion, the real big disaster. The force might be a hundred times stronger that that of T. N. T. Maybe we can generate the force and drive machinery. We miners are tired of "cause unknown" reports from brass check newspapers when the cause is clear as daylight—capitalistic production.

Sublet mine situated on a dreary rolling plateau over 6,000 feet elevation from the sea level, and nine miles from the nearest town, Kemmerer, a little place where the Central Labor Council is, and formerly was called No. 5, as it is fifth property of the Kemmerer Coal company, but now No. 5 as well call it No. 2 (second mine), with No. 3 coming up after another year. Since 1914, American industrial expansion put a heavy tax on the miners' shoulders, and output was unusually great, thereby leaving anarchistic conditions in every mine thruout the U. S. A.

Capitalists do not spend to the work this does not pay today or tomorrow, indeed the inner entries, rooms and cross cuts in many cases were abandoned for convenience sake. Ten years of rush work decayed the whole system and it seems to be time now that miners pay for the capitalist's negligence. Sublet belongs to district No. 20 of U. M. W. of A., but too many nationalities and difference of languages and lack of class conscious leaders made it an easy mark for the big capitalist companies and as a local the union is rather weak. The condition is just the same with any other mine in the state of Wyoming, that is to say too weak to protest to the company for safeguarding their lives.

According to John Lewis, the miners' union is the strongest organization in America. Yes, it is very strong when the operator's associa is empty. Mr. Lewis you must stop piping his shoulder in a fashionable hotel, but it has a weak foot. Too strong a head with weak legs—I mean rich professional leaders who get money from both sides and say nothing of the terrible disasters and the way to prevent them. Evolution or revolution are bound to come to the organization—feudalism to the workers' dynasty. I call it feudalism because it's head prospers while his followers are killed day by day in the pit.

Do not expect capitalists to pay attention to the lives of the miners. WE, the MINERS ought to have more interest in our lives. It is nonsense to look upon the feudal lord to spare our lives from certain destruction. Every member of U. M. W. of A. must do their part in rebuilding the union for the workers' dynasty under a regime that will consider our lives first of all. In the case of a disaster the engineer you need not protest to the railway company because being unsafe to the engineer means danger to the passengers, therefore the company takes care, but the miners' case is different.

"Indifferent feudal lords like Lewis and Farrington must be sent out to St. Helena or else many must die under their flag—no principles, just as poisonous as after-damp which exterminates human beings in the expoided mine.

CANNON TO LECTURE ON COMMUNIST EDUCATION AT NEW YORK SCHOOL

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—James P. Cannon, educational director of the Workers Party, and Communist candidate for governor of New York State, will speak on "What Is Communist Education" on Sunday, Oct. 5, 8 p. m., at the Workers School headquarters, 208 E. 12th St., New York City.

Cannon, who will begin a tour of New York State for the campaign early in October, will spend only a short time in New York City. The lecture arranged by the Workers' School offers the only opportunity of hearing him on Communist education, and all comrades and sympathizers interested in the educational work of the Communist movement should avail themselves of it.

Music and dancing will follow the talk. Hence every one, whether of a serious or a merry turn of mind, is assured of a instructive and enjoyable time.

SAM SCARLETT WINS FIGHT ON DEPORTATION

Canadian Government Cancels Writ

By SYDNEY WARREN.
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent.)

VANCOUVER, B. C., Oct. 1.—The Canadian government has ordered that the deportation writ issued by the immigration department against Sam Scarlett, I. W. W. organizer, be cancelled. This action followed a vigorous campaign against the deportation order which was waged not only by radicals of Vancouver, but by all the elements of the labor movement. It had its culmination in a big mass meeting here when representatives from all labor groups voiced their protest against the immigration department edict.

So flagrant was the unfairness of the order that one of the capitalist dailies carried a front-page editorial denouncing the immigration officials.

Scarlett was arrested and ordered deported from Canada on three obsolete provisions of the war hysteria immigration act and even on these charges there was not a semblance of fact to warrant the order. He was tried secretly by the immigration authorities and altho all the evidence submitted indicated that he had committed no offense that would serve as a pretext for deportation, he was ordered to leave the country. This judgment, it was shown, was already prepared before the trial was held.

California Fight for Free Speech Scores Big Victory

(Special to the DAILY WORKER)

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Oct. 1.—A red letter day in the California fight against criminal syndicalism was marked when the cases were dismissed in Sacramento against William Flanagan and Albert Strangeland, who have already served a year in San Quentin and Folsom prisons.

The reversal by the appellate court means more than appears on the surface, for it was a Sacramento case and except for San Jose there has been more intensive prosecution of the criminal syndicalism law here than anywhere else. The court confirmed the convictions of Homer Stewart and Peter Wukusich, thereby adding force to the claim of criminal syndicalism victims that the court's decisions are purely arbitrary.

Every criminal syndicalism conviction in the state has been based on mere membership in the I. W. W. without proof of any overt act and either all should be dismissed or all confirmed.

80 YEARS OLD; TRIES TO GET NAMES FOR COMMUNIST PETITIONS

Who will take this comrade's place? Here's a comrade 80 years old who volunteered to get signatures to place the Workers Party candidates on the ballot but his health went back on him!

We print the following letter received by Arne Swabeck, district organiser, from a comrade in Peru, Indiana, for the message it contains to all the members of the Workers Party in connection with the present election campaign:

Dear, Comrade Swabeck.—When I received your letter and request I had a cold. Expected to get over it quick and then would get those signatures but I have a real La Grippe now and am not able to do this work. I am past 80 years of age but never refused anything for the cause before but I do not feel able to do this now. I tried to get some other comrade to do the work but they all belong to the "Robert Clubs."

Yours for the Cause,
H. J. HERBERG.

Japan Threatens?

Let no one put much stock in the numerous lengthy columns of fulminations now appearing in our employing class press against the war-like attitude supposedly shown by the Japanese representatives in the League of Nations.

The Japanese delegates are now proposing three amendments to the latest "peace" protocol under consideration. These amendments are: To strike out the provision that the country which refuses an arbitral reward of the world court shall be deemed an aggressor; and the prohibition of taking before the League of Nations an issue which the world court has ruled involves primarily a dispute of domestic concern.

It is patent to all that the issue involved here is the opposition of the Japanese to the immigration restriction enacted by the last session of congress. Japan is threatening to vote against the entire pact unless she meets with satisfaction on these two points. The British imperialists, above all others, are especially anxious to avoid such action by the Nipponese imperialists. Great Britain's ruling class has all to lose and nothing to gain by such a mortal blow being struck at the fiction of the League of Nation's entity and existence.

The situation is somewhat akin to the days of the Versailles negotiations. Then Japan was standing pat on the annexation of Shantung. Woodrow Wilson, in the name of the Yankee aristocracy of gold and finance, had assured the Chinese that the United States would stand up for the restoration of this territory once held by the German capitalists. It was this promise that precipitated China's entry into the world war. At Paris, however, Wilson sold out China and yielded to Japan's claims to Shantung. He did this in order to save the League of Nations, he said.

Since then times have changed. American foreign policy is different. The supremacy of the United States in the realm of finance and industry is far more assured. Under these conditions there is very little likelihood of Japan's being able to swing American influence on the pain of breaking up the league. The Dawes plan is the American guarantee and hope today. The Japanese imperialists know this. Their threats are made with an eye to the future, rather than as an immediate challenge to America. But for the Japanese and American workers it is high time to be aware.

Just recently they tried two boys who played with murder like new toys. For months you read it in the papers—the crime, the trial, the expert capers.

Well then perhaps, you haven't missed that "Babe" wuz called an atheist, find et up Nietzsche by the ream, until, "twuz the word, in short, to dream that he wuz some real superman with morals fit for garbage can.

Well, preachers and smug moralists just chewed on that word Atheist, and so used up a lotta time explaining twuz the cause of crime. Twuz what the kids had fatled to believe that made their addled brain conceive that they wuz master of the art of killing with malignant heart.

Here's one experience we gain—that explanations don't explain.

Well, say, their sentence wuz just in when papers had fresh streams of sin. A preacher, who should fight Old Nick, had done it with some arsenic, with which he flavored food and stuff until his victims had enuf. His wife wuz swiftly put away, his sweetheart's husband had his day. Believing in the realms above, they killed to have illicit love. The preacher did not share atall the views on women of St. Paul. Ordained this world of sin to purge, he suffered from the kosmik urge. To joys of flesh he sure would turn; 'twuz better far to kill than burn.

The preacher's boss gave out a hope that pagan minds won't get the dope that Methodism wuz the cause why Brother Hight had broke the laws. From which you see that Methodism don't act as cause like atheism.

All which, I say, does go to show, it ain't what folks believe or know, or Christ or Nietzsche in their mug, that lands 'em in the county jug.

BEAUTY PARLOR WORKERS' UNION TO TRIM BOSSES

Permanent Wave of Discontent Growing

By ESTHER LOWELL
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent.)

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—"We're with you all right!" the girls who work in beauty parlors of the Eastside enthusiastically exclaimed when the organizers of the Independent Beauty Parlor Workers' Union told them it was up to them to boost the organization among their fellow workers. The girls expressed their eagerness for action and urged the organizers to spare no effort in getting the manicure and beauty parlor workers of the whole city into the new union so that the girls could effectively demand decent conditions and living wages.

"We work ten and twelve hours a day and 'half day' on Sunday from 10 a. m. to 6 p. m.," the girls declared, "and so we don't have a chance to get any more than the girls in our own shops to come to the union meetings. We want a big mass meeting when everyone can come."

Beauty Bosses Scared.

Organizer Charles A. Norman, formerly of the Bargemen and Lighterers' Union, affiliated with the Marine Transport Workers in New York, told the second meeting of Eastside beauty parlor workers that the employers were already so scared that they had formed an association and tried to bind themselves to Sunday closing, but that they "scabbed on one another" and the girls would have to fight for the better conditions. He told how his wife, who is working her fifteenth year in beauty parlor work, often came home late at night after working over some late customer who was fussy and wearying and made the workers to tired she had no energy left to go out.

Must Fight to Win.

Maxwell Drescher, formerly organizer with the cutters' local of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union, is directing the organizing of beauty parlor workers. He emphasized in speaking to the girls that they can win but that victory will depend on steady building up of the organization. He announced that the next meeting would be called on the Westside, in the so-called "high-class" district. Several men workers from beauty parlors attended the union meeting.

YOUNG BRITISH DOCTOR CALLS U. S. ROBOT REPUBLIC AND HE'S PRETTY CLOSE TO THE TRUTH AT THAT

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—The United States is called a robot republic by Dr. William McCullagh, a young physician who was not allowed to enter the country to marry his sweetheart. McCullagh has taken back photographs showing the distressing conditions at Ellis Island and says he will offer them to London newspapers, according to word received by his friends in New York.

"Ellis Island is a hell, an island of sorrow and despair," the doctor asserts. "The strongest men break down there and the women weep for days. But the callous treatment of friend and respectable immigrants doesn't shock me so much as the injustice of officials who pass judgment on their own initiative before the board meetings are held. An assistant commissioner remarked in my hearing that I was like the Chicago murderers and should be chained and locked up and sent out of the country."

McCullagh is planning to tell British hearers of his experience in a small room with 200 men speaking 17 languages and allowed to go out only onto a caged balcony. He states that "apparently any citizen can hold up an incoming individual by accusing him of such things as drug taking and insanity, as in my case." He says that Ellis Island is worse than a prison and that he means to call attention to conditions there to get the place humanized.

Members of Shoe Workers' Protective Carry on Strike

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Oct. 1.—The Shoe Yorkers' Protective union strike against Zweier and Grossman, manufactories of ladies' shoes uppers, continues with pickets constantly on the job. Two pickets have been arrested on charges of disorderly conduct and of obstructing the traffic.

Isadore Grachkowitz, business agent of the union, states that the fight has hinged on the activities of the so-called American Union, which is, he says, really a scab-agency organized during the 1919 strike of shoe workers. The shop is closed except for a couple of workers who are kept by the bosses to testify against the pickets.

Shoe Workers' Protective union is an industrial union, according to organizer P. Pascal Cosgrove. All the shoe workers including box and wood-heel makers are eligible.

The strike at the Comfort Sandal factory in Long Island City is being successfully conducted by the Shoe Workers' Protective union. One of the employers was arrested on charges of union members.

Advocates of Heavy Armaments Cash in on Round World Flight

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—The navy board appointed by secretary of the navy Wilbur, at White House direction, to study the relative value of aircraft, submarines and battleships as the nation's first line of defense held its first session today.

At the outset the scope of the inquiry was broadened when it was announced that army experts would be called into conference to express their views on the airplane versus battleship problem. It was the success of the world flight by army aviators that caused President Coolidge to issue instructions to Wilbur to name the board.

Admiral Eberle, chief of operations, is chairman of the board.

Coal Miner Freed; Show His Wife Died from Heart Trouble

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Oct. 1. — George Nicora, 40, a coal miner, was freed instead of going to trial on charges of killing his wife with a butcher knife. The body was exhumed and an autopsy showed that Mrs. Nicora died of heart trouble.

Nicora was indicted when officials were told he and his wife quarreled because she had made his stepchildren beneficiaries of her insurance. The children ran from the house screaming that Nicora had killed their mother with a butcher knife.

BRITISH TRADE UNION CONGRESS "PROGRESSIVE"

Revolutionary Virgin Is Wooed Cautiously

HULL, Eng.—Progressive, but not radical, with a healthy but friendly wariness of the Labor government, the British Trades Union congress, which concluded its 10 day session at Hull, is going to advance as far it comfortably can without too much risk.

This is the impression to be gained from both debate and resolutions. Ramsay MacDonald's Russian treaty went through ace high but his war department's treatment of unionists was censured.

The general council is given power to deal with all labor disputes in which more than one union may become involved regardless of whether the union involved wants intervention by the council. The council also has power to call a special congress to decide on labor's policy in case of war. "Not a man, not a gun" was cheered.

The Dawes reparations plan was bitterly denounced, particularly by the miners and conditions in the British colonies were pointed to with horror. Pres. A. A. Purcell, for example, declared "I regard the condition of our fellow workers in industrial India as an unspeakable horror." The only favorable thing he saw there was that working hours have been reduced to 12 a day.

The cooperative societies were threatened with a cutting off of diplomatic relations if they did not do better in settling disputes with their workers.

The workers' charter with its demands for nationalization of the mines, railways and land, a maximum working week of 44 hours, a legal minimum wage for each industry, adequate provision for unemployment, a national housing program, full educational facilities, and liberal pension schemes was enthusiastically adopted.

Further amalgamation into industrial unions, a process that has already gone a very long way in England, was ordered. The general council is to draw up the plan.

America's Feeble Effort.

NEW YORK.—The Oct. 1 issue of The Nation, a liberal weekly, carries an article on the Hull congress of the British unions written by H. J. Laski, former professor at Harvard. "I may perhaps add a word of disappointment," he concludes, "at the effort of the fraternal delegates from America. Beyond an interesting reference to your labor banks, they confined themselves to a feeble echo of Mr. Gompers' worst pronouncements."

WORKING WOMEN OFFER HELP TO SILK STRIKERS.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct.1.—The United Council of Workingclass Women at their last meeting held here sent the following letter and resolutions to the Paterson Silk Mill strikers, who are waging an heroic battle against their employers, and their hired thugs and police, in their present struggle for better working conditions:

Offer Assistance.

"Strike Committee of the Associated Silk Workers' Union,
291 Market Street,
Paterson, N. J.

"Dear Sisters and Brothers: The United Council of Workingclass Women recognizes the class struggle. We also recignize that all working class women's organizations and leagues regardless what their political beliefs may be, must bind themselves for a common struggle and that the unorganized working class women must be organized.

"We seek close understanding with organized labor so that we may be able to protect the workers' interest in the best way.

"We know that you are engaged in a bitter struggle for many weeks to maintain your union and to obtain better living conditions. Your bosses, with all their forces, have not succeeded in breaking down your resistance. We offer our help to you. Enclosed find resolution.

"With best wishes for a speedy victory, we are,

"Yours truly,
"CENTRAL COMMITTEE,
"Gate Gitlow, Secretary."

Resolutions Adopted.

"WHEREAS, the brave strikers of the Associated Silk Workers' Union are engaged for many weeks in a bitter struggle with the master class, going thru hardships and sufferings with their wives and children, to maintain their union and to obtain better living conditions, and

"WHEREAS, we, the Central Committee of the United Council of Workingclass Women recognize the class struggle and maintain that we are a part of the class struggle, and

"WHEREAS, the Associated Silk Workers' Union issued a call for help, therefore,

"BE IT RESOLVED that we, the women of the United Council of Workingclass Women offer our help, and be it

"FURTHER RESOLVED that we urge all our affiliated organizations to do likewise, and be it

"FURTHER RESOLVED that we forward this resolution and letter to the strike committee.

"CENTRAL COMMITTEE,
"UNITED COUNCIL OF W. W.,
"Gate Gitlow, Secretary."

Chinese Footballers Make Friends.

AUCKLAND, New Zealand, Oct. 1. —Assailing the citadel of fear against the so-called yellow peril, a Chinese football team has been making many friends for the yellow race in its tour of New Zealand. Their polite but effective playing and their refined intelligence off the gridiron are upsetting the common notion that Chinese are inferior to the average white.

Stir the Shops!

The very best place to carry on a working class campaign is in the shops and factories where the workers gather to earn their living. It is there that minds are open to the measures, parties and candidates that stand for concrete solutions of the problems of bread and butter facing the working class. It is in the shops that the workers will see most clearly, for example, the difference between Foster, the union organizer and fighter for the workers, and LaFollette, the lawyer and fighter for the middle class. Hungarian Workers Awaken

The acquittal by a Hungarian court of the Piroska brothers and other defendants, members of the Awakening Hungarians, who threw bombs into a mixed crowd in the ballroom of a Jewish society about a year ago causing a number of deaths, will probably have the same effect upon the fascist Horthy government that the defense of the murderers of Matteotti by Mussolini had upon his regime—a popular revolt.

According to dispatches, indignation is at a high pitch and the acquittal of the assassins has become a major political issue. The Awakening Hungarians have been the chief support of the Horthy government. Formed of ex-army officers and, as a dispatch to the New York Times states, members of the "most ignorant sections or of very young people, besides a large number of lawless elements who find convenient cover for their evil deeds under a patriotic guise," the Awakening Hungarians are kindred of the terroristic organizations of capitalism everywhere.

Such is the resentment aroused by the acquittal of the acknowledged murderers, among whom were the highest leaders of the organization, that the Horthy government must curb drastically the power of this semi-official organization or abdicate. Inasmuch as the Horthy regime retains power by terror alone any curtailment of the activities of its most effective supporters is tantamount to surrender.

There is discernible already in the capitalist press a note of pessimism relative to the future of this bloody tool of the League of Nations on which so much praise has been lavished when it was crushing the revolts of the Hungarian working class.

The next chapter will be the renaissance of the Communist movement in Hungary.

MacDonald's Latest Boast

"I defy Liberal or Tory to say that the name of the country, the reputation of the country, the position of the country in the eyes of the world, have suffered in the least degree by the existence of the Labor government."—Ramsay MacDonald in the House of Commons, September 27.

"The eyes of the world" to which Premier MacDonald refers are the eyes of the capitalist world. After all, only one-sixth of the world is under the control of the working class—the territory of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics. If England, under the rule of MacDonald's party, has not suffered in the eyes of the capitalist world—and in this he is quite correct—it follows that his government must have shielded capitalist interests. Shielding the interests of the capitalists is hardly the role of a working class government. So far from the interests of the capitalists lie the interests of the workers that to protect capitalism and capitalists is to betray the workers.

The remark of Premier MacDonald is both interesting and informative. It is one that those workers who are intrigued by the admiration the Wheelers and LaFollettes express for this socialpatriot, would do well to chew over.

Aid for Paterson Workers

True to the traditions set up thru many years of battle with the capitalists of the silk mills, the Paterson workers carry on uncomplainingly. The police close their halls, arrest their pickets and break up their meetings but the strikers return to work only in mills that have met their terms.

The silk workers of Paterson had little enough funds to start with and the long drawn-out struggle has almost exhausted them. They need assistance and the Workers (Communist) Party of America, whose members are taking an active part in the fight, is lauching a campaign for strike relief.

The raising of substantial funds is the objective in this campaign, but of just as much importance is the spread of the news of the strike and its causes—the organized oppression of the silk workers by a powerful section of the American capitalist class.

This is a revolutionary task for which no discipline will be required to rally the membership of the Workers (Communist) Party of America.

Prosperity and Lies

Chicago is now the scene of a mass convention of bankers. Ten thousand financial vultures are gathered in the city to hold their annual convention.

There are many questions these leading citizens will consider. There are many decisions these rulers of the country will make. There can be no denial of the fact that the councils of the employers' associations, of the bankers, the manufacturers and the foreign trade corporations function as a sort of a super-legislative and extraordinary executive department of the government. In truth these bodies are the invisible but guiding hand that is the government, that runs the country and ruins the working and farming masses.

We know what the actions of the American Bankers' Association will be. We know from the achievements of their forty-nine years of conventions that here there will be laid, overtly and covertly, many plans to perpetuate the exploitation of the workingmen. Here many lies will be concocted which will then be spread broadcast as the gospel truth by the well-kept press of the land.

The bankers are already bringing prosperity tales. We assume that they are speaking for themselves. In that instance there is an altogether too large measure of truth in the glorious reports on the economic conditions. But if these apostles of high-finance are referring to the conditions of the working and farming masses thruout the country, they are simply mangling the truth.

The bankers' prosperity tales are yarns woven out of the whole cloth. There is more reason, at best, for confusion than optimism in the present economic situation of the United States. The increased demands that have been expected from Fall buying have not come anywhere near expectation. The copper market is glutted. Steel is unsteady. The September steel figures are expected to indicate a renewal of the sharp decline that we hayes been witnessing for months in the bookings of orders. The high figures in car loadings are to be accounted for more by the transfer from shelf to shelf than by the manufacture of new commodities. A further recession is expected in the automobile industry. The employment situation is showing no signs of improvement. All in all, hand to mouth buying and business persists.

This is what we have with us in the economic conditions of the country. The bankers know the actual situation. They are only attempting to throw sand into the eyes of the masses for their own class political and economic purposes.

The Brookhart Bolt

The republican party is noted for the powerful propaganda machine that it has under its control. One need but turn to the manner in which it advertised the Mellon scheme to save the biggest business interests from taxation. Just now it is working at break-neck speed in bluffing the country into the belief that it is all over but the shouting in so far as the election of Coolidge goes.

All of which may be necessary attempts in the drive to psychologize the country for the strike-breaker president. But there are obstacles in the way. The machine is beginning to show signs of creaking. Not all is smooth on the road. Smith W. Brookhart, United States senator from Iowa, has openly demanded that Dawes be taken off the ticket or else he will be compelled to bolt. This demand is, of course, only a signal for the withdrawal of Brookhart from the republican fold. There is every likelihood that Senator Norris will follow suit.

The mere withdrawals of Brookhart or of Norris are in themselves not the most ominous phases of the situation confronting the republican party. Neither Brookhart nor Norris ever was counted upon by the reactionary national committee for unstinted support. The primary purpose of the Coolidge clique was to prevent these individuals from jumping off the reservation openly in order to prevent the signs of the deep-going party demoralization becoming evident to that mass of followers that is wavering. This refusal of Brookhart to be on the Coolidge bandwagon definitely shows that many of the so-called doubtful republican states are a good deal more doubtful than many have thought them to be. In fact they appear to be so doubtful in their regularity that even the hesitating Brookhart and the wavering Norris are prepared to come out openly, far in advance of the time LaFollette or they themselves thought they could safely do so.

Another significant fact of the Brookhart bolt is this. The incident shows the close ties still existing between by far the vastest portion of the LaFollette following and the regular Coolidge clientele. The differences between the two camps certainly cannot be fundamental and permanent if the alignments shift with such ease. Brookhart delayed his departure from the republican fold only in order to be able to make secure some of the regular republican votes for himself and to clinch his place on the ballot. Norris did likewise. Assured of this support, the senators feel secure in challenging the Coolidge republicans and becoming LaFollette republicans.

Malcolm MacDonald, son of the British premier, is here. He is not the object of as much attention as the Prince of Wales was, but the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad offered to him a guide. The railroad magnates evidently are not afraid of his father's socialism.

When the great earthquake shook Japan, millions were subscribed to bring relief to the suffering people. But the Communists pointed out then that the American ruling class would subscribe billions to kill more Japanese than fifty earthquakes could, when the interests of the rival capitalist nations clashed.

The round-the-world flight of the American aviators was not merely for pleasure. They took their time about it. There was no effort to break speed records. Evidently the flyers stayed long wherever they could pick up any useful information for their masters in Washington. The big flight was a scheme of the United States war department.

Spargo The Trail Blazer

By William F. Dunne

JOHN Spargo has made the circuit from reformism to reaction with more rapidity than some of his former colleagues but his career, culminating in the support of Coolidge, is merely a sort of trail blazing for the Hillquits, Oneals, Bergers and Wallings. They have taken a more roundabout route but with the rest of the leaders of the second international they find themselves supporting one of the parties of capitalism because their own organization was too weak to function effectively as such.

In his denunciation of his former pals published in the New York Times of September 28, Spargo, now snugly ensconced in the arms of the blackest section of the American capitalist system, feels safe enough to tell at least part truth. He says: "Life has placed socialism upon the shelf—my socialism equally with that of the socialist parties of the world. That is why Morris Hillquit and his associates in the socialist party are today supporting the man to oppose whom and nine principles the national executive committee of the socialist party voted special appropriations when Mr. Hillquit and I were both members of that body."

Life has certainly placed the socialist parties of the second international and their castrated socialism upon the shelf. Life for revolutionary organizations depends upon constant struggle against capitalism in all its phases. The socialists of the second international at first negated and then abandoned and denounced the struggle of the working masses against capitalism and as an organization having any other role than that of enemies of the social revolution it ceased to exist.

In every country of the world today the parties of the second international are, in the words of Comrade Zinoviev at the Fifth Congress of the Third International, "the third parties of the bourgeoisie."

"With the grotesque and fantastic exception of Russia—no socialists in office would seriously consider, let alone actually attempt, the carrying into effect of any substantial measures of a distinctively socialist program," says Spargo. Russia is just as "grotesque and fantastic" an exception to Hillquit, MacDonald and Ebert as it is to Spargo for the very good reason that in Russia, under the leadership of the Communist Party and the Communist International, aristocracy and capitalism have been wiped out and a Communist society, that visualized by Max, and instituted by the Marxian method, is being built.

Life has placed the socialist parties of the world on the shelf because they ceased to fight for Marxian socialism—the Communism of the Communist Manifesto. In England and Germany, in Poland and in Austria, where the second internationalists have power, they make no attempt to carry into effect any "substantial measures of a distinctively socialist program" because this would mean revolution—the exact antithesis of their present protean role of nursemaids to a dying capitalism and hangmen for the capitalists.

The gap between the saviors of capitalism of the second international and the enemies of capitalism of the Third grows wider every day as the breach between the Spargos and the Hillquit grows narrower. The progressive decay of American capitalism that has brought about the present revolt of the middle class, bringing as it will a far more widespread revolt of the exploited working and farming masses, tends inevitably to create a united front of all those who have a stake in the capitalist system. In the not far distant future the Spargos, Wallings and Hillquits will be united once more—under the banner of counter-revolution to whose black folds John Spargo hastened a little in advancle of others of this type.

The issue in the United States today, as in all the rest of the world, is capitalism or Communism.

wages and intellectual darkness, the 2,000,000 agricultural wage workers of the United Statest stand out as the most victimized portion of the American proletariat.

The workers who gather the wheat harvest are an especial class within the American agricultural proletariat, and the good fight the A. W. I. U. No. 110 has put up to organize these workers deserves and receives the admiration and support of the Red International Affiliation Committee. At the close of a good crop year and other favorable conditions, it is a credit to the A. W. I. U. No. 110 that it has not only succeeded in initial organization work in the wheat harvest, but has—according to your Bulletin No. 31—attained some measure of success in co-ordinating job action by a system of centralization around stationary delegates in definite districts. If this plan has the results it promises, it should be made permanent in such districts and extended to unorganized territory.

Your convention will, of course, have in mind the problem of organizing the great mass of exploited agricultural wage workers of this country, of which the summer drive for the organization of the migratory harvest workers is but an infinitesimal fraction. The great mass of 2,000,000 agricultural wage workers are totally unorganized. The reactionary unions of Gompers and Company have completely ignored the workers of this industry. If they are to be organized at all, it will be by an organization which uses in this larger field the same spirit and persistence the A. W. I. U. No. 110 uses in the wheat harvest.

Anyone who approaches this gigantic task with a serious purpose of accomplishment will feel the need of profound consideration of objective conditions, not only of the national situation but of conditions obtaining in the agricultural industry thruout the world. The question, moreover, for a revolutionary union, presents itself quite differently than it does for a conservative union which does not see beyond the present undoubted need for more wages and shorter hours, the overthrowal of the capitalist system and the rule of the working class.

With the vision of an ultimate revolutionary goal in mind, the problem of course, appears more difficult. But with a program which harmonizes with those definite tendencies which, within capitalism, are working for its destruction, the work of the revolutionary industrial unionist may be so directed as to go forward with the current of social forces instead of against them. To determine future action a broad view of political economy is required. And what do we see?

Capitalist production internationally is in historic decline. The imperialist contradictions and rivalries which brought about the war, far from being solved by it, have become aggravated by it, and the struggle is now on a higher plane of ferocity. Finance, the life blood of capitalist exchange, has collapsed in most of Europe, dragging industrial production down with it, and operating to such a wide extent that a crisis in agricultural production has spread thruout the world. In America, where the concentration of wealth in agriculture has taken the form of financial centralization—while nominal ownership is left in the hands of the farmer—we have seen 2,000,000 farmers bankrupted and great masses driven into the wage working class. The subject to temporary relief, agriculture, in common with all capitalist production, is, in a series of curves declining. Capitalism has reached that period of continual crisis explained by Marx as the forerunner of proletarian revolution.

But revolutions do not proceed automatically from a formula of—"production, crisis, revolution." Revolution must proceed from the workers' conscious action in preparation and execution. Between the proletariat and its emancipation, stands the collosal power of the capitalist government with its dictatorship over the minds as well as the bodies of the workers. Any struggle for power on the part of the workers immediately clashes with government authority, supposedly impartial, but actually and wholly capitalistic. Three courses confront us. First, to quit the struggle, which is not only cowardly, but impossible for a whole class. Second, to under-rate the decisive importance of political power and "ignore" the government, which is folly leading to disaster. Or, third, to organize consciously to overthrow the dictatorship of the capitalist class and to establish the dictatorship of the working class, under which it gradually erases resistance, prepares both the backward workers and the obstinate capitalists alike, for a classless and Communist society.

It is this necessity for realizing and fighting the struggle for political power—not merely for seats in capitalist parliaments like the reformist socialists advocate—that forms a point of difference between the Communist viewpoint and the ideas held by many, but not by all, members of the I. W. W. We shall accent rather than conceal this difference. But its existence sets no bar between close co-operation of the revolutionary workers of the I. W. W. and the Communists, who believe that the struggle for power requires both an ideologically united revolutionary political party with its basis and active unit as the shop nucleus and equally important great industrial unions uniting workers of all ideas according to economic interest only.

But is is necessary to success that a number of international as well as national factors be considered, if we would build up in America an industrial organization of agricultural workers anywhere approaching a majority of the 2,000,000 workers engaged. The wages and hours the A. W. I. U. must fight for in the wheat harvest, must be calculated upon wheat harvest workers in France, in India, and in Soviet Russia—the only country on earth where agricultural labor is really enjoying the eight-hour day—recieve. More. If the A. W. I. U. would organize the cotton workers of the south, it must consider the status of cotton workers in Egypt and China. Any attempt to organize the sugar workers in beet and cane fields should be reckoned upon organizations existing among German, Cuban, Indian and Javanese workers. The case is similar in rice and tobacco.

The Red International of Labor Unions unites the revolutionary industrial unionists of all these countries, and offers to the A. W. I. U. No. 110, the practical help of its international experience and organization, thru the International Propaganda Committee of Land and Forest Workers' unions. The A. W. I. U. would profit greatly by maintaining friendly contact with the International Propaganda Committee of the R. I. U. Land and Forest Workers.

But such contact of the A. W. I. U. with other agricultural workers of the world is but a limited and unsatisfactory connection for a subordinate part of the General Administration of the I. W. W., and the fullest benefit of international solidarity will develop when the I. W. W. as a whole affiliates with the Red International of Labor Unions. The class struggle is international, and in matters of defensive and offensive operations the proletariat confronts an enemy thoroly organized internationally. Hence, the revolutionary industrial unionists in the A. W. I. U. No. 110, will not complete the duty of international solidarity until they have done their part in bringing about affiliation of the I. W. W. to the R. I. U.

Fellow workers, the task laid upon the revolutionists is never light. The type of workers to be organized in the A. W. I. U is not easy to reach. The most skillful plan devised will have its difficulties. But the spirit which built the A. W. I. U. is the shining spirit of the migratory, revolutionary proletariat. It is the best guarantee that the agricultural workers of America will be organized. Moreover, the migratory revolutionist is the important link between the city proletariat and the backward agricultural workers who, as we see, are in every country the material for Fascist reaction. In this country Fascism is, in the agricultural regions, represented by the Ku Kluz Klan.

Fellow workers! The task you face is a serious one. The revolutionary workers in the agricultural industry must fight not only the unmerciful capitalist enemy, but also the sluggishness, ignorance and prejudice of the bulk of workers. But always in the struggle to extend your organization, to win and keep better wages and shorter hours for your members, to defend yourselves against the savage persecution of capitalist authority and the murderous attacks of the K. K. K., to build up in this country and thruout the world a powerful industrial union of agricultural workers, and march forward to proletarian revolution. In these tasks we offer you the utmost support of the revolutionary industrial unionists of the whole world, thru affiliation with the Red International of Labor Unions.

With revolutionary greetings,
The RED INTERNATIONAL AFFILIATION COMMITTEE,
Harrison George, Chairman.

NEW ELECTION LOOMS IN BRITAIN

Bankers Forget Fear of Communism in Revel

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

J. H. THOMAS, minister for the Colonies, in His Majesty's British socialist government, recently visited South Africa. At a gathering of the Basuto nation, which was attended by the Earl of Athlone, Princess Alice, Lady May Cambridge and General Hertzog, the prime minister of South Africa, J. H. Thomas, informed the natives how anxious the king was for their welfare. "The King's son," declared the British "labor" minister, "will pay you a visit next year." He did not say that at that particular moment he was keeping United States bootleggers busy as they had never been before.

IF the prince is not too drunk, no doubt he will pay a visit to South Africa next year, provided a Volstead law is not passed there in the meantime. J. H. Thomas told the Basutos that he would convey their expressions of loyalty to His Majesty, and assured them that he himself would never forget their interests and welfare. The Basutos were advised by Thomas to take the advice of the High Commissioner and they would not go wrong. Faithful servant of royalty! And the "republican" Hertzog took it all in.

HOW many of our readers ever heard of King Feisul of Iraq? Yet he has a history. It was during the days that self-determination stalked abroad in the land and the prophet Wilson stirred the multitudes exceedingly with strange words about the rights of small nations and the perfidy of divers autocrats, chief among them being Kaiser Wilhelm—it was in those days that the star of Feisul began to dawn. It happened that the Iraq is short on towel goods but is long on oil, so the British government which exudes humanitarianism wherever the oil gushes, sent a gentleman by the name of Sir Percy Cox,

DANCER, NEARLY NAKED, STAR ON NIGHT PROGRAM

High Jinks in Largest Masonic Temple

Denouncing Communism by day.

Hold high revel at night.

That is the business of the American Bankers' Association meeting in Chicago.

C. H. Markham, president of the labor-hating Illinois Central railroad, got rid of the following at the Auditorium Theater meeting of the bankers:

"The broad principle to be considered is whether the people desire more government in business, and eventually all government in business, which is Communism."

Cheer Barelegged Dancer.

But a couple of hours later the thousands of bankers, jamming the Medinah Temple on the North Side, were lustily cheering a bare-legged dancer, and bare nearly everywhere else.

Nero had to do his own fiddling. But the bankers, at their Medinah Temple "smoker," that lasted into the wee sma' hours of the dawn, and considered the biggest event of the gathering here, had several jazz orchestras, the huge pipe organ, and their own voices. They sang, accompanied by the pipe organ:

"How dry I am! How dry I am! Lord only knows, how dry I am! A-a-a-men."

But this was quickly followed by, "Hail! Hail! The Gang's All Here. So what the hell do we care? What the hell do we care! What the hell do we care, NOW!"

And They Don't Care.

And why should they care? Here was the pick of the bankers of the country. Thousands of them! They fill the auditorium of Medinah Temple, hailed as the largest structure under the jurisdication of the Masonic Order.

They left their wives at the hotels in "The Loop." They rode to the Medinah Temple on the North Side in scab Yellow Taxicabs, on free passes furnished by the "local committee." Many of them got their early, around seven o'clock. They wanted the front seats, because they knew there was something special on the program. Many protested when they learned that a huge block of seats, directly in front of the big stage, had been reserved for the officials and select members of the American Bankers' Association.

When Farmers Go to Bed.

It was about the time that the farmers out in the grain belt were turning in for the night, to recuperate for the next day's labor, that the bankers got under way with their high jinks.

In the words of the announcer, "It is to be a memorable event." And it was. If the Machinists' Union, or some other union, had tried to put

"Sacco and Vanzetti Must Die"---Judge Thayer

BOSTON, Oct. 2.—Nicola Sacco and Bartholomeo Vanzetti, two labor organizers of Italian birth, who were convicted on the charge of murdering the paymaster of a big shoe manufacturing company, at Bridgewater, Mass., were refused a new trial by Judge Webster Thayer.

The conviction of Sacco and Vanzetti aroused national and international anger on the part of the workingclass. Not since Tom Mooney was railroaded within an inch of the electric chair was the prosecution of a labor case surrounded with so much perjury and manufactured evidence as was the case of the two Italian radicals.

Since the conviction of Sacco and Vanzetti defense lawyers have been active securing affidavits from those who testified at the trial in which their former testimony was repudiated. But in the prejudiced heart of Judge Webster Thayer those workingclass leaders were guilty because they served their class.

But the workers must see that Sacco and Vanzetti will not die at the hands of the Massachusetts ruling class.

TEACHERS MEET TODAY TO FIGHT 'SUP' M'ANDREW

Mayor Dever Ignores Appeal for Aid

A call to action against the exploitation of teachers and the militarization and standardization of the schools by big business has gone out to the militant teachers of Chicago in the form of a circular announcing a mass meeting to be held at 4:30 today at the Auditorium theatre.

The notice has been signed by Mary Abbe, president of the Chicago Teachers' Federation, E. B. Colletto, president of the Chicago Federation of Men Teachers, and Florence C. Hanson, president of the Chicago Federation of Women High School Teachers.

The circular reads in part:

"The last meeting of all public school teachers in Chicago will be held this week on Friday, after school at 4:30 p. m. A statement to the public of the critical situation confronting the schools will be presented for approval as directed by the Student baker mass meeting last week."

Obedient Robots.

At this meeting, the teachers of the city will make final decisions on the action taken against the continued aggression of such men as William McAndrew, superintendent of schools, and the representatives of big business on the school board who have been backing him in every move he has made to reduce the teachers to the position of serfs to an official oligarchy and the schools of the city to huge factories for the turning out obedient servants of the industrial machine.

Unlike William McAndrew, who has seen fit to present his case only to such organizations as the Chicago Chamber of Commerce and the principal's association, the teachers are appealing to representatives of the organized labor movement for help.

BOOZE! BOOZE! EVERYWHERE AT THE AMERICAN BANKERS' MEETING HERE

By CARL HAESSLER
(For The Federated Press)

Booze is inseparable from the bankers' big meet in the Congress hotel. Some of the speakers performed as tho they had just had a smell of some of the good stuff. Listen to president John E. Edgerton, National Association of Manufacturers, who told this 50th annual convention of the money lenders that:

"The so-called child labor amendment is dangerous because it presents a rose that unfolds a tarantula. It is meant to restrict production and to compel uneconomic advances in wages and to expand the powers of the federal government as to require the creation of more public offices and a further excuse of raising the cost of government."

If you walked into the inner executive offices of the convention you were offered a drink of "the real thing" before you could tell the mission on which you entered.

In the rooms devoted to publicity every other fellow was offering a flask of "pert with a punch" or talking about the one he had just helped to empty.

Doctors' offices were kept busy writing out prescriptions. "Yah see," said a high-up secretary uncertainly to his convivial assistant, "yah just shay Three Slips and give the address—not Congress hotel, but Congress street and—well make it Wabash. Doc—he knows. Call him up shay Three Slips."

Pres. Arthur Reynolds of the Continental and Commercial banks of Chicago was not thinking of Charlie Dawes when he told the convention that the country must be rid of "mountebanks and their fallacies, half truths, malice and ambitions." He was pointing his big business banker's finger at LaFollette. In fact Dawes seemed ace high at the convention despite, if not because of, his shady banking record in the Lorimer bank scandal, for which the Illinois supreme court held the Dawes bank to account for the "money so wrongfully taken."

The convention opened with all the bankers repeating the Lord's Prayer in unison: "Forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors." After this

TRADE UNION EDUCATIONAL LEAGUE URGES HELP BE SENT TO COAL MINERS OF DISTRICT 18, WESTERN CANADA

SINCE April 1st, this year, the miners of District No. 18, United Mine Workers of America, (Alberta, Canada), have been on strike against a wage-cut. The strike involves about 11,000 miners and their wives and families. The ranks of the miners have been firm in face of all the pressure brought to bear on them by the operators and the capitalist press and government of Canada.

Prior to the commencement of the strike in April the officials of the District demanded of the coal operators' association that the present wage scale be extended for three years on the basis of the Jacksonville agreement between operators and the Miners' [illegible] in the so-called central [illegible]etitive field in the United States.

The operators refused to do this; on the contrary, they demanded a cut in wages amounting to $1.17 a day. This would mean the loss of the war bonus gained by the miners in 1919.

On Strike Six Months.

Rather than accept the operators' terms, the miners struck, and they have been on strike for the past six months.

For the first six weeks of the strike the miners of District 18 did not receive a cent from the Lewis administration of the United Mine Workers. The only support they received during this period came from the rank and file of the labor unions of Canada owing to the campaign waged by the Canadian Communist Party for assistance to the miners.

The officialdom of the Canadian labor unions and Trades Congress did not raise a finger to aid the miners in their struggle.

Get Small Pittance.

Since July the miners have been receiving only a few dollars each week to keep them and their families. The 11,000 miners and their families are determined to stick with the battle to the last, but the operators have the deadly enemy, HUNGER, on their side. The stores have long since stopped all credit. In many camps miners and their families are being evicted from their shacks because they are unable to pay rent.

Naturally the operators are using this situation to attempt to break the ranks of the miners. The capitalist press has been flooded with propaganda against them. Agents of the mine owners have atempted to set up company unions, as happened in Fernie, British Columbia. But this atempt did not last long, because of the bitter opposition of the miners. The rank and file even fought the policy of signing agreements with individual operators when that was proposed by the district officialdom.

Strikers Decide to Fight to Finish.

At the special district convention held this month, there was no suggestion from the rank and file delegates that the fight should be abandoned. They demanded from the district officials that more relief should be gotten from the Lewis administration of the International Union to help them win the struggle. As an answer, they were told that the International could not do more than it was doing because of the great unemployment existing among the miners in the rest of the districts of the union.

In spite of all this: evictions, scabherding, foolish leadership, and HUNGER, the miners of District 18 have stood as one man in opposition to the wage-cutting schemes of the bosses.

The Trade Union Educational League appeals to all militant and revolutionary workers to aid the striking miners of District 18 in their struggle against the operators. It must be apparent to all militant workers that the defeat of the miners of District 18 will be the entering wedge in the ranks of the miners for the operators to cut the wages of miners in other districts. Already we have seen the operators in the Illinois field organizing their forces to fight for a wage cut. If the miners of District 18 are defeated and forced to accept a wage cut the operators will have a better chance of forcing wage cuts elsewhere.

To all the adherents of the Trade Union Educational League we say:

Help the miners of District 18 fight against a wage cut by sending them financial help!

Organize collections for the miners in your local union, in the work shop, wherever there are workers who understand that only by solidarity in the fight against the bosses can the workers hope to even defend their interests!

Send all money to Robert Peacock, Secretary-Treasurer, District 18, United Mine Workers of America, Burns Building, Calgary, Alberta, Canada.

National Committee of the TRADE UNION EDUCATIONAL LEAGUE.
William Z. Foster, Secretary.

Kolchak's Colonel Again Defeated in Another Con Game

DETROIT.—The Detroit police are investigating a "love lottery" operated by the Perpetual Endowment society for financing weddings, the president of which is Nicolai Sokolowski, former colonel with the Kolchak counter-revolutionary forces in Russia. Several brides and bridegrooms have complained the former anti-Soviet adventurer defrauded them. Sokolowski has been stopping at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York City, after leaving his wife and two babies with $12 to live on in the Detroit industrial suburb of Hamtrmack.

OIL KING DOHENY PLANS TO BUY ISLAND IN PACIFIC OCEAN WHICH IS WORTH 2,000,000 FALL DOLLARS

SANTA BARBARA, Calif., Oct. 2.—E. L. Doheny, oil magnate, was said today to be preparing to buy Santa Cruz Island, 30 miles off the California coast near here with the intention of developing it as a resort similar to Catalina Island, property of William Wrigley, Chicago gum magnate.

The sale price of the island was said to be more than $2,000,000.

FOSTER CALLS ON U. S. TO STOP WAR ON CHINA

Challenges Candidates On Big Issue

William Z. Foster, candidate for president of the United States on the Workers (Communist) Party ticket, has issued a challenge to the three capitalist candidates, Calvin Coolidge, John W. Davis and Robert M. LaFollette, to join him in a public demand that this country withdraw its armed forces from China and cease its interference with the internal affairs of that country.

The statement reads as follows:

To Calvin Coolidge, John W. Davis and Robert LaFollette:

The imperialist interferences of our bankers, government officials and naval forces in the affairs of China have already produced a move of retaliation by the capitalists of Japan which threatens us with a new war between the two countries. This bloody war between this country and Japan, which our party has been constantly warning against, is apparently coming upon us much sooner than expected.

The statement by the Japanese delegation in Geneva is already being made use of by the capitalist press for mobilizing public sentiment in favor of war against Japan. As candidate for president on the ticket of the Workers (Communist) Party of America, and in the name of my party, I condemn this attempt to embroil the masses of this country in a new war and demand that the American government immediately withdraw all its armed forces from China and publicly instruct our government officials to cease interfering in the internal affairs of that country.

Since you, as a candidate for president, claim to stand for the well-being of the masses of this country and are appealing to the masses for support, I challenge you to join me in the public demand that this country immediately withdraw all armed forces from China and that our government cease interference with the internal affairs of that country. Your action on this question will show where you stand on the imminent danger of war between America and Japan.

WILLIAM Z. FOSTER,
Candidate for President on ticket of the Workers (Communist) Party of America.

Hardworking Bosses Setting Bad Example to Their Wage Slaves

Laziness and loafing by the boss in the printing business is attacked in the September Bulletin of the Franklin Assn., an organization of Chicago master printers.

"During the easy money days of 1919 and 1920," writes one of their number, "we all acquired habits of indolent luxury which we are loath to give up. Records from the beginning of business prove that as income goes up, productivity goes down. It's a human trait.

"The boss gets down at nine, takes two hours for lunch and goes home at four. Then he takes a day off on Wednesday or Thursday because the links are not so crowded as on Saturday when he plays at his own club.

"What has somebody said about precept and example?"

COMMONS SCENE OF TUMULT OVER SOVIET TREATY

Tories and Liberals Jibe Laborites

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Oct. 2.—There were disorderly scenes on the floor of the House of Commons this afternoon when questions relating to Soviet Russia were put to the government. The tories shouted taunts and the laborites replied in kind.

It is now accepted as almost a certainty that a general election will be held before Christmas.

John Robert Clynes, on behalf of the government, announced that the motion censuring the government for quashing the court cases against the editor of a Communist newspaper, would be taken up on Wednesday.

It was reported persistently in semi-official circles that premier MacDonald is prepared to resign if a vote of censure is passed by Commons next week or the Anglo-Russian Treaty is rejected. In the event of resignation a general election will follow automatically.

The general impartial opinion is that the laborites will hold their ground in the election.

Conservatives United.

The tories and the liberals evidently have decided to bring about the downfall of the labor ministry at an early date. The liberals over the signature of former prime minister Asquith put down a motion of censure of the government over the Russian treaty. The conservatives hopped on the labor government over the withdrawal of the indictment against the acting editor of the Workers' Weekly, Communist organ.

While the labor party is determined to make a strenuous campaign in the general election, there is a strong sentiment for deposing Ramsay MacDonald as leader of the labor party. Since his assumption of office he has completely lost touch with the trade union movement which placed him in office and has angered large sections of labor by his open espousal of the capitalist side in labor disputes. His refusal to meet a delegation from the powerful miners' federation while he had plenty of time to hobnob with bankers and capitalists made a very bad impression on the British working class.

MacDonald does not want to quit office if he can possibly avoid it, but the trade union movement is willing to fight for the Russian treaty and a rousing campaign is expected.

French Government Suplies Chang with The Sinews of War

PEKING, Oct. 2.—Formal protests have been handed the French legation here by the Peking government over the shipment of 18 airplanes on the steamer Chantilly, enroute from Hongkong to Mukden for Chang Tso Lin's forces there.

General Chang's armies captured Chenping City on the morning of September 29. The Chihlian forces are retreating before the forces of the Manchurian war lord.

COOLIDGE'S SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY TRIES TO CHEER UP FARMERS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.— America's 1924 wheat crop will put $1,000,000,000 in the hands of farmers, secretary of the treasury Mellon, announced today, following an investigation of the situation at Chicago, by Eugene Meyer, Jr., managing director of the war finance corporation.

"It is a matter of great satisfaction that this year's great wheat crop was grown on a ten per cent smaller acreage than last year's," Mellon said.

GITLOW SPEAKS TO BIG MEET IN MUSKEGON, MICH.

Flays Silent Cal; Crowd Roars Approval

By JOSEPH MANLEY
Campaign Manager, Workers Party.

Benjamin Gitlow, vice-presidential candidate of the Workers Party, addressed a large and enthusiastic campaign meeting at Muskegon, Michigan. A big audience at a Communist campaign meeting in a city of the size and type of Muskegon is truly remarkable, and indicates the drift of the workers in the large industries towards revolutionary and Communist ideas.

Outlying centers like Muskegon were formerly bulwarks of reaction. Muskegon is one of those typical Main Street towns, which the trusts have converted into a modern capitalist hell. Large factories were built in Muskegon in order to escape the militant and discontented labor of the big cities.

Today the workers of Muskegon are thoroly proletarianized, and reduced to a condition of unspeakable misery. One third of them are unemployed; a majority of those employed are working part time. Forty cents per hour is considered high wages. Ten hours constitutes a minimum days work.

Well Organized Meeting.

In this Michigan outpost of manufacturing capital Comrade Gitlow made a memorable communist address. His meeting was well organized and arranged, for which the comrades in Muskegon deserve credit. The chairman of the meeting was Comrade C. Thorson. Foster and Gitlow campaign posters were posted up all over town, alongside of posters advertising the Ku Klux Klan. Hundreds of tickets, charging twenty-five cents admission to the Gitlow meeting, were sold.

The large audience which assembled to hear Gitlow listened in rapt attention to his onslaught on the capitalist candidates. Gitlow said: "A severe unemployment crisis faces the working class of America already, even before the approach of winter. Thousands are unemployed, in the large cities and the textile and mining industries of the country. These unemployment crises are but the normal manifestation of capitalist society. The only remedy is the abolition of capitalism.

"The Workers Party advocates immediate unemployment relief. Unemployed wages to be paid by industry and the government." Gitlow aroused great enthusiasm by his denunciation of Coolidge and Davis. His exposure of the LaFollette movement, as a menace to the working class was applauded eagerly. "LaFollette is a republican lawyer for forty-five years and now he stands for the capitalist system—and its product, Wall street.

For Cheap Labor.

"The same capitalists and their system that came to Muskegon looking for cheap labor are now going to Germany to further enslave the German working class, with the Dawes plan. This plan and its consequent operation with American capitalist gold will in conjunction with the slavish conditions to which the German working class has been reduced will produce commodities at a much cheaper rate than they can be produced in America. This will lead to still greater American unemployment. Eventually, as a result, the operation of the Dawes plan and the struggle of American capitalists for supremacy in world markets, will lead to war.

Fight For Workers.

"The Communist parties of Germany and of Europe are the only parties that fight for the working class against unemployment, against capitalist wars, and against the misery and exploitation of the workers.

"The solution of the many problems confronting the workers of the United States lies in the election of the candidates of the Workers Party, the official American branch of the Third Communist International, on a platform of abolition of the capitalist system and reorganization of the United States government into a Soviet Republic, modeled after that of Russia."

Count With Fancy Name Takes Count In 'Frandsico Court

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 2.—"Count" Alexander Dudley de Beaufort, asserted Belgian nobleman, today began serving a sentence of four months in the county jail imposed in federal court for impersonating an American army officer.

De Beaufort, who is said to be a former husband of Irma Kitzallen, Chicago actress, pleaded guilty to the charge following, it is said, receipt of information that the department of justice was prepared to produce a record of his activities for the past seven years.

NEGRO WOMEN IN INFAMOUS PRISON GET EMANCIPATION DAY PRIVILEGES

AUBURN, N. Y., Oct. 2.—Two hundred Negro women incarcerated in the Auburn State Prison here, where many Communists have been incarcerated, were permitted as a special dispensation to celebrate Emancipation Day, which occurs on Nov. 1. Permission has also been granted to eat a regular meal on that day, and discard the prison fare for one day, if the Negro women buy the food themselves.

These women are destitute, however, and they have communicated with the DAILY WORKER, asking aid in the raising of funds. All funds must be sent to Warden El. S. Jennings, 135 State Street, Auburn, for the "Emancipation Committee."

CANNON EXPOSES TAMMANY SMITH AS LABOR FOE

Helped to Put Over Morgan's Man Davis

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y., Oct. 2.—James P. Cannon, Workers' Party candidate for governor, in an interview today characterizes Al Smith, the democratic candidate for governor, as "enemy of the workers of New York State." Cannon is to be the principal speaker at mass meetings to be held on Friday, Oct. 3 at Queens County Labor Lyceum, 785 Forest Ave., Brooklyn and on Saturday, Oct. 4, at Oddfellows' Hall, 72 North Broadway, Yonkers.

The Workers' Enemy.

"Alfred E. Smith, my democratic opponent for governor is not now and never has been a real friend of labor. By his acts and utterances, he has proven himself to be an enemy of the workers of New York state. It was Al Smith who withdrew his name as a candidate for the presidency in favor of John W. Davis, the attorney of J. P. Morgan and the Standard Oil Co.

"It is only thru Smith's powerful support that Davis was finally nominated by the democratic convention. Smith is therefore responsible to the workers of this state for the selection of a man for the presidential nomination who has been engaged repeatedly by the powerful interests to fight the workers in the courts as he did in the Coronado case against the United Mine Workers of America.

Smith a Militarist.

"Smith is the man who indorsed and carried out Coolidge's order for a military demonstration on Mobilization Day. Smith is the governor of one of the states which still retains on its statute books—a criminal syndicalist law. He must shoulder the responsibility for the scrapping of the welfare program, which he pledged himself to carry.

"What does this 'friend of labor' say about unemployment, which is becoming more and more of a pressing problem? What does he say about cutting down the state constabulary which is used against the workers in strikes? Nothing. By juggling a few progressive phrases, Smith has obtained for himself a reputation of being a friend of labor, but actually he is for business, as are all the democratic candidates and he is for the same reason opposed to the workers."

The young folks of New York City are preparing to hear Oliver Carlson on Monday evening, Oct. 6 at Stuyvesant Casino, Second Ave. and 9th St. Carlson who has been traveling thru Europe and Soviet Russia for the last 20 months will tell of conditions in the countries he visited.

Labor Candidate Who Licked His Boss Barred from Office

VANCOUVER, B. C.—In order to deny Labor representation in the British Columbia lower house at the coming session, the Burnaby municipal council refuses to grant Frank Browne, Labor member-elect from Burnaby riding, a suburb of Vancouver, leave of absence from his work as municipal accountant. Browne, running as the candidate of the Canadian Labor party, delegate Alexander K. McLean, reeve of the municipality, runing on the old line ticket. As reeve of the municipality, McLean is Browne's boss and he is now attempting to prevent Browne from attending the autumn session of the provincial house.

The Vancouver Trades Council intends to take legal action to compel leave of absence. Meetings are being held and the people told the reasons for the council's action.

"Every phase of labor is affected by the action of the Burnaby council, and unless labor makes a determined stand at the present time, we might just as well quit as a political organization," said Harry R. Neelands, Labor member for South Vancouver.

White Collars Affiliate.

BRISBANE, Queensland.— At the annual conference of the Queensland civil servants' union, a motion was carried by a large majority indorsing the executive's action in affiliating with the Trades and Labor council. This is the first time that government employes in Australia have affiliated with a labor council. Hitherto, civil servants have considered themselves too classy to mix with workers.

CAL WAVES FLAG THAT STANDS FOR THE TEAPOT DOME

Good Judges Put Oil in Burglars' Lamps

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—Connection between the scandal of government by oil companies and the defense of the federal court oligarchy in the Coolidge campaign has become so nakedly evident that the bosses are sending out an alarm to all the states. From now until election day the flag must be grabbed and waved an exclusive possession of the Coolidge administration. The Constitution must be associated in the moron mind with the Coolidge campaign textbook. Nothing short of hysterical noise, and persecution of those who want to know why the laws are violated will save the day.

History a Nuisance!

Somebody has dug up a set of clippings from the New York papers of January 3, 1923, devoted to President Harding's statement to the press that Secretary Fall had decided to retire to his ranch. This was nearly nine months after the senate had adopted a resolution for the investigation of Fall's illegal giving away of the naval oil lands. It was at the time that Fall was reported to be retiring from the cabinet in order to become counsel for the Sinclair Oil Co.

Fall "Got" His Man.

Fall did not dare go on the supreme court; he knew that somebody was bound to discover his crookedness, and that this would be a blow to the prestige of the whole judicial crowd, from Bill Taft down to the last district federal judge. Besides, he knew that someone might discover that he had once been a democratic federal judge in New Mexico, and had been kicked out by President Cleveland after he shot a lawyer dead at his courtroom door.

How much Sinclair and Doheny and Standard Oil had to do with Harding's offer of a place on the supreme court bench to the notorious Fall may never be disclosed. The significant thing is that, but for the oil investigation resolution, he probably would have taken a like job as a "bulwark of the Constitution" against the demands of the people and the acts of the elected congress.

When he failed to take the place, a hardshelled railroad attorney from St. Paul, denounced by organized labor as one of its bitterest foes, was selected. And today the country is waiting to learn which one of the oil lobbyists and lame duck reactionaries at Coolidge headquarters is next to be given the black robe as an associate of Bill Taft in the nullifying of national laws.

Mondell Had Taking Ways.

Will it be Phil Campbell of Kansas, now lobbying for Standard Oil, or Secretary Wilbur, who repudiated the navy's fuel conservation policy in his recent speech to the Petroleum Club at Taft, California? Or will it be Frank Mondell of Wyoming, the man T. R. said he would not trust "with a branded steer in daylight?"

Mitchell Palmer, when bullying his way toward a hoped-for nomination for the presidency from the office of attorney general, secured the appointment of a long list of corporation lawyers—such a fanatical enemy of the workers—to federal judgeships. Harry Daugherty made that his most important personal task. When he wanted a railroad strike injunction, he made a judge, and then called on that judge for the violent injunction he used against the shopmen. Palmer and Daugherty were the creators of a large section of the sacred federal court dictatorship that Collidge is now clamoring to save. Palmer worked for Standard Oil; Daugherty served the oil crowd without discrimination, so long as his boss Smith and Harvard Manningtons and Bill Burnses were satisfied.

Sinclair and Doheny and Standard Oil have not given up hope of holding on to the naval oil reserves. Their hand-picked federal judges are on the job, and they have Coolidge and perhaps the next attorney-general, if Coolidge wins. Harry Daugherty may again be attorney-general, or he may go to the supreme court, giving Campbell or Mondell the department of justice.

Many Want Air Races.

DAYTON, Ohio, Oct. 2.—Two cities want to entertain the international air races in 1925. They are: St. Paul, Minneapolis, Detroit, Atlantic City and Denver. The National Aeronautic Association which opened informally today at the Miami Hotel, is considering all five. Decision will be made Friday or Saturday.

TREACHERY OF LEADERS FEARED IN I. L. G. U. STRIKE

Reactionary Officials Play with Al Smith

(By Federated Press)

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—A strike which is termed by officials of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union as the beginning of an intensive organization drive in the ladies' tailors' shops is to be declared within a few days. The workers in this section of the needle trades are highly skilled and work on the most expensive fine-tailored custom costumes which retail at $150 to $1,000 or more. Theatrical costume makers and alteration hands are also in the jurisdiction of the union, local 38 in New York City.

Demand 40-Hour Week.

The union demands are for the 40-hour week and for 44 weeks' yearly work guaranteed and a 10 per cent increase in wages. The greatest problem of the industry is the overwhelming number of unorganized workers. In tailor shop employing 25 skilled ladies' tailors, there will be 200 girls working on custom dresses, private dressmakers who are not organized. Local 90 of the International has jurisdiction over these non-union workers but report only 125 shops with 1,000 workers organized out of 249 shops and about 10,000 workers in all.

43,000 Unorganized.

Samuel Lefkovits, vice-president of the International, is in charge of the miscellaneous trades section in which both the ladies' tailors' and dressmakers' locals are listed. According to Lefkovits' statement there are about 43,000 unorganized workers in the 13 trades of this section and only 8,000 organized. The greatest percentage of non-union workers are in the waistmaking, white goods, and children's dressmaking trades. Local 25, waistmakers, has 28 union shops with 400 workers; and there are 250 open shops with 7,000 workers. Local 62, white goods workers, has 79 union shops with 2,500 workers; and there are 350 non-union shops with 5,000 workers. Local 91, children's dress makers, has 78 union shops with 2,000 workers; and there are 550 non-union shops with 15,000 workers. Embroidery, raincoat, button workers, and tuckers, pleaters and hemstitchers are proportionately better organized.

Left Wingers Active.

Trade Union Educational League members are predicting that the strike in the ladies' dress shops will be the same sort of stoppage as the cloak workers experienced last spring. The left-wing unionists say that the International officials have already settled with teh bosses and that the workers will get the wage increase (with a deduction of 2 weeks' work to nullify it) and will not get the shorter week nor the guaranteed minimum of weeks. The T. U. E. L. members of the union declare that the special mediation commission appointed by Gov. Al Smith with the consent of the International will be called into this strike and that the workers will be the losers again. They expect considerable rebellion to develop among the rank and file of the workers when the actions of the International officials are announced.

Wool Trust Boosts Price.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—American Woolen Co., which recently ommitted its dividend and ordered wage cuts for its workers, has now declared an increase of from one to 32 cents a yard on wholesale woolen fabrics for spring materials. Republican campaign backers are interested in this concern, particularly William Morgan Butler, and are using strategy to convince the people that the present exorbitant tariff must be retained to protect them. President William M. Wood of the company said that there is a shortage of wool in the world which justified higher prices. Clothing manufacturers predict increased costs to retailers and a consequent boosting of prices to the consumers. With diminishing returns from their work and increasing prices of living necessities, workers do not see themselves buying new spring suits.

"Gallant" Hell an' Maria Dawes Dodges Brookhart Challenge

MUSCATINE, Iowa, Oct. 2.—"I am not going to descend to personalities. I have fired into a flock of political 'Pee-Wits' and some of the wounded birds are fluttering. Perhaps you can identify them. I don't know."

This was the answer of Gen. Charles G. Dawes, republican vice-presidential candidate today to a request for an answer to the demand of senator Smith W. Brookhart that he resign as "Cal" Coolidge's running mate. The answer was given to a crowd which gathered about his special train here enroute to Kansas City where he made the first of a series of 10-minute rear-platform addresses which are to be a part of his invasion of Iowa, Missouri and Indiana today and tomorrow.

Never once in his formal address did the general refer to Brookhart or his attack.

Wisconsin's Campaign Issue Shows the Daily Worker's Possibllities

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the DAILY WORKER issues its special "Wisconsin Presidential Campaign Edition." It is only one of the many "Special Editions" being put out during the campaign. But it has many characteristics all its own.

According to original plans these "Campaign Specials" were to make over the first page only. But not so for Wisconsin. The comrades of this state spread themselves over three special pages. And they are making it pay.

Wisconsin had a first page. On it the comrades carried their message to the tens of thousands of workers they will reach with this special issue. There was an "Open Letter" to the membership of the Wisconsin Socialist Party, since it is in this state where the socialist misleaders maintain their last stronghold. This is also the state of LaFollette. His position is analyzed from the Communist viewpoint.

Superior, Wisc., up at the head of the Great Lakes, insisted on having a page for itself. It made good by getting enough advertisements to pay for it. This is a tribute to the way that our Finnish comrades do things. It is an explanation of how they manage to maintain three dailies in the United States, in addition to other weekly and monthly publications.

One of these dailies, Tyomies, is published at Superior. It is a veteran of the class struggle. It was published formerly at Hancock, Mich., but following the great copper strike, of 1913, which was lost after a long and heroic struggle, it was moved to Superior, where the Finnish comrades also have a large publishing plant.

Our advertising manager, Comrade Sam Hammersmark, went to Milwaukee, and got the advertisements that appear on page five. They help pay for more Communist propaganda.

What Comrade Hammersmark achieved in Milwaukee shows what can be accomplished in a large number of big industrial centers thruout the country. The big department stores in Chicago will not advertise in the DAILY WORKER. Neither will other big advertisers come in. They give their advertising to support the big capitalist dailies.

But in every city there are advertisers, in working class districts, who depend exclusively upon workers' trade. They need the workers. The workers do not need them. They can be forced to give their advertising to the DAILY WORKER. A score of cities, with the advertising solicitation for the DAILY WORKER well organized, would relieve Our Daily of its financial burden. It could be made to pay for issuing Our Daily.

Not only that, but the basis would be laid for regular Special Editions of the DAILY WORKER, for every day in the year.

If the Wisconsin comrades could duplicate, every day, what they have done in this Special Edition, they would have a Special Wisconsin Edition delivered in their state every morning. It could carry more news, more articles dealing exclusively with the class struggle in that state. It could carry the fight every day, into Wisconsin, more effectively against the sinister forces of socialism, under Berger, and "progressive" republicanism, under LaFollette. We could wage a real campaign for the organization of the unorganized in this notoriously "open shop" state. We could raise, and carry to victory, the slogan of the "Class Party" against the collaboration of labor politicians with professional old party office holders.

Then, when the foundation has been well laid; when the Communist movement is firmly rooted in the working class masses of Wisconsin, it would be possible to establish another DAILY WORKER, in some Wisconsin city, like Milwaukee.

These are the future possibilities that all comrades should have in mind as they plan their Special Campaign Editions of the DAILY WORKER. We do not build alone for this campaign. We plan and prepare for the seizure of power, and the building of the Communist Society. The best time to start building, and building effectively, is TODAY. The distribution of a Special Campaign Edition of the DAILY WORKER is a first task in this year's presidential struggle.

Good Intentions Will Not Stop War Under Capitalism

HALYCON, B. C.—Gen. F. E. Burnham, president, Canadian White Cross society, names E. D. Morel, British pacifist member of parliament, as the nominee of the organization for the Nobel peace prize. Morel was jailed by the British government during the war, following his exposure of pre-war diplomacy.

Gen. Burnham was for over eight years in charge of medical work in the Balkan states and saw first hand the suffering left in the wake of the world war. What he say convinced him that another war would mean the collapse of civilization.

"After the severest ordeal in human ken, the central idea of soldier and humanitarian is the resumption of peace with justice and liberty," says Burnham. "The cancellation of all indemnities and the restitution of all territory wrenched away from enemy states by the late world war would be the greatest move of all time toward universal peace."

State Extends Insurance Field.

MELBOURNE, Australia.—The Victoria Labor government will extend the state insurance office to include general fire insurance. It will issue personal accident policies to employes and others, undertake fidelity guarantees for workers, and accept fire risks on government buildings and property, and other public semi-government, or municipal buildings, including town halls and offices.

NEGRO WORKERS SEE ONLY HOPE IN COMMUNISM

Capitalist Chicanery No Longer Misleads Them

By GORDON W. OWENS.
(Communist Candidate for Congress in the First Congressional District.)

The current issue of the Negro Bolshevik-baiting newspaper, the Chicago Defender, reproduces an editorial from the Paris edition of the New York Herald-Tribune.

The editorial states that Negroes cannot be made converts to Bolshevjk anarchy. This editorial was written as a result of the Negro problem coming up before the Fifth Congress of the Communist International.

"Defender" Capitalist Lackey.

This capitalist newspaper, in stating tht Negro, exploited and oppressed workers, will not join hands with the Communists, the only people who fight the battles of both Negro and white workers, makes itself more than ridiculous. It is like a frightened boy passing a graveyard, whistling to keep up courage.

The world capitalists and their editorial hirelings already see the handwriting on the wall. They know that the Communists are already digging the grave for dying capitalism. "If we can only keep the Negro workers from becoming imbued with Communist ideology we can live a little longer." frantically say the world exploiters. And the exploiters in their efforts to prolong their lives, bribe the Negro editors to misrepresent Communism to the Negro masses.

Dark Races Are Awakening.

But today, awakened Negroes, the world over, are in Communism their only hope of delivery from the yoke of capitalist oppression and exploitation. They see in the workers' government of Soviet Russia their true and only friend.

The Communist International, the general staff of world revolution is training Negro, Chinese, Hindu, Japanese and other workers from the darker races, to stir their fellow workers to revolt against all capitalists, native and foreign, black and white.

Communism Their Hope.

Gradually and surely the barrier walls of race, color, nationality and religion, erected by the capitalists, to keep the workers separate and divided, are being battered down and are crumbling before the sledge hammer blows of the Communist International. The awakened Negro workers, the world over, are lining up behind the scythe and hammer, and will follow the workers' emblem to emancipation.

The Negro workers of America were the shock troops who crushed chattel slavery in America, and dealt a death blow to the slave owning aristocracy. The Negro workers of the world will be the shock troops to crush capitalist wage slavery, and deal a death blow to the capitalist class.

Plans to Hop Pacific.

SHANGHAI, Oct. 2.—Undaunted by the prospect of severe weather of his round the world flight, Major Zanni, who arrived here today at 11:53 a. m., from Chefoo today, announced his determination to cross the Northern Pacific in spite of warnings that the Pacific hop at this time of the year would be well nigh impossible.

Complete Membership Mobilization

Upon this day every one of the 1,297 party branches will meet.

Upon this day every member will go to the meeting of his branch. He will there deposit fifty cents for his 137-piece literature unit.

UPON THIS DAY WE PREPARE!

RED WEEK, October 26th to November 2nd, has been decided upon as distribution week.

Twenty-two thousand members will go forth to shops, mines and mills, to homes and street corners during this week and distribute three million leaflets, stickers, pamphlets and DAILY WORKERS.

DURING THIS WEEK WE ACT!

NOVA SCOTIA MINERS BUSY ON CONVENTION

O. B. U. Busy Trying to Split Union

GLACE BAY, Nova Scotia, Oct. 2.—The miners' locals here are busy electing delegates to attend the special convention called by the Lewis henchmen after the return of Houston from Indianapolis. In calling the special convention for the purpose of electing a temporary district committee which will take charge of the district until regular elections are held Lewis is running away from the fight which is bound to come next January when the present contract with the British Empire Steel Corporation expires.

Prior to his visit to Indianapolis, Houston had an interview with McLurg, superintendent of the corporation, who informed him that the corporation was going to put a wage cut into effect at the expiration of the contract and demanded that the Lewis gang see to it that there was no opposition from the miners. Immediately Houston rushed to Indianapolis to consult Lewis. The result is that Lewis has decided to restore the charter of the district rather than have his administration responsible for the fight that is coming.

Lewis Unwilling to Fight.

In this action Lewis has run true to form. He withdrew the district charter to crush the fight of the miners against the troops sent against them by the Canadian government in July last year. Today he restores the charter rather than show that he is unwilling to fight the corporation to defend the wages of the miners. Once he has got rid of the responsibility for the conduct of the district he can simply stand by and see the miners beaten by the corporation and not raise a finger to help them.

O. B. U. Defeated in Cape Breton.

The One Big Union apostles have abandoned Cape Breton and have concentrated their efforts on Pictou County. The determined stand of the militants among the miners against splitting the union finally convinced them that it was useless to continue working in Cape Breton. Therefore they transferred their activities to Pictou where the miners are much less militant and where patriotism is rampant resulting in the miners listening more eagerly to the plea for a purely "made in Canada" union.

Legere had got himself in bad with the miners owing to his vicious attacks on the Communists. He slavered at the mouth when he spoke of them and denounced them as "Besco stoolpigeons." This feeble-minded conduct finished him with the miners here since they know the Communists and have the greatest confidence in their integrity as fighters against capitalism.

Boasts of "Victory."

The O. B. U. Bulletin is making a great noise about the great victory the O. B. U. has won in Pictou county. Stellerton local union endorsed the O. B. U. and this is claimed as a great victory. But the fact of the matter is that Stellerton local consists of a large number of foreign workers who never attend the local meetings. The ones who attend are notorious for their overwhelming desire to crawl into an office no matter by what means. Since they have always been defeated in the U. M. W. district elections because the miners of Cape Breton, who compose the majority of the membership, would have nothing to do with their reactionary, patriotic ideas, they think that by going with the O. B. U. crowd they will be able to gratify their ambitions and become officers a last.

It is possible for the O. B. U. to swing the miners of Pictou county for a split simply because in Pictou the miners have lagged greatly behind the miners of Cape Breton in class consciousness. It is a well known fact that when the militants held the district offices before Lewis deposed them the miners of Pictou were used by Lewis against the "reds." Now the so-called revolutionary O. B. U. is making progress only among the most backward of the miners. This only proves that the O. B. U. is seen in its true light by the miners of Pictou—as a "made in Canada" product.

Communists Will Lead Fight.

But it is unlikely that the miners of Pictou will go along with the O. B. U. now that the district charter has been restored. Much as these miners dislike the "reds" they know that the only ones who are able or willing to lead them in the struggle against Besco are the Communists. For this reason it is expected that the Pictou county miners will abandon the O. B. U. and get themselves in good standing with the U. M. W. and join with the rest of the miners in the district in fighting against the wage slashing program of the corporation.

GREAT CRIME WAVE SWEEPS SO. CAROLINA; MUCH POLITICAL UNREST

By JACK METTE.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Oct. 2.—Suth Carolina is being run over with a crime wave that grows larger as the year nears its end. Already noted for its killings and general lawlessness the state is expected to reach the highest peak in years for killings. Some of the most brutal crimes in the history of the United States have taken place in the Palmetto state within the last year.

Crime continues but the governor spends his time in praying for the welfare of the people. There is no action by the authorities. The state's police force is the gang of strike-breaking boys who comprise the National Guard.

The majority of all crimes committed within the state are by boys or young men of the cotton mills who have never had the chance of an education and have been forced to work in the cotton mills from the time they were able to work.

The governor, Thomas G. McLeod, is the one that made South Carolina the laughing stock of the world when he set aside a day for the people to pray for the extermination of the boll-weevil.

Some of the people of the state are doing their best to improve the conditons that now exist. The political unrest can be noted by the failure of Senator Dial, child labor advocate, for re-election.

EMME REVIEWS VICTORIES WON AT CONVENTION

Machinists Are Against Heresy-Hunting

J. F. Emme, member of the Workers Party, candidate for congress in the fourth congressional district of St. Paul, Minn., on the Farmer-Labor Party ticket, who was a delegate to the convention of the International Association of Machinists just ended in Detroit, declared to the DAILY WORKER that the "B. & O." plan put over on the convention by President William H. Johnston is an aid to the employers.

"The 'B. & O.' plan, which must now be submitted to a referendum vote of the machinists, overlooks the fact that the interests of the employers and the workers are directly opposed," Emme told the DAILY WORKER as he passed thru Chicago

Proposed Expulsion Hit.

"Altho the left wing moves for amalgamation were defeated and La-Follette was indorsed," Emme declared, "The machinists' convention overwhelmingly voted to table a motion aiming to expel Workers' Party and Trade Union Educational League members. I vigorously opposed this resolution pointing out that Johnston wished to autocratically expel men for political beliefs without even inquiring into the individual merits of their cases."

Emme declared the "B and O" plan to be nothing short of a sell-out of the membership of the union by the reactionary leadership to the employers of the machinists.

Emme in Congresional Race.

Emme, who is running against Oscar Kellar, Coolidge republican, and Dan W. Lawlor, corporation lawyer running on the democratic ticket, declared that the Thompson-O'Connor machine, which controls both republican and democratic candidates, has sent out the word to unite on Kellar against the Farmer-Labor party.

President Johnston and secretary-treasurer Davison, have returned to Washington, where they have issued a statement declaring themselves "pleased that the plan of co-operation with the management of the railroad companies" passed the convention.

Many Australians Unemployed.

SYDNEY, New South Wales.—The Australian federal bureau of statistics reports 90,000 workers unemployed. This does not include persons of work thru strikes and lockouts.

Unemployment was greatest in the anti-labor state of New South Wales, with 12 per cent. In the five labor-governed states of Australia, the unemployment figures ranged from 4.4 per cent to 6.3 per cent.

Sheetmetal Workers Knit Up.

HUNTINGTON, W. Va.—A tristate council of organized sheetmetal workers in Ohio, Kentucky, and West Virginia is meeting regularly in Huntington and other towns to knit up the common problems of the Sheet Metal Workers' International Association in those three states. C. R. Pyles, Local 323, Portsmouth, O., is secretary of the council.

LA GUARDIA IS TRYING ON NEW PACIFIST COAT

Puts Aside Uniform for Campaign Purposes

By BEATRICE CARLIN
(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 2.—Captain Fiorello H. LaGuardia, spruce young officer in the American Flying Corps, 100% booster of the war aims and programs of our late-lamented democracy-faker, will have a hard time living down his record of war patrioteering and convincing his constituency of the sincerity of his right-about-face pacifism.

It is permissible, of course, according to capitalist political ethics, for an aspirant to public office to have a complete or partial change of heart in accordance with the direction in which the political wind happens to be blowing.

Has Ear to the Ground.

LaGuardia has evidently been keeping his ear to the ground, and has not been slow to capitalize popular rumblings of anti-war and anti-Defense day sentiment.

The workers of America who were trained so nicely to eat "democratic" pap out of the hands of the war-makers, seem to be developing a little revolutionary pep, and so they must be soft-soaped for a while until they get over it.

But they may not get over it. They may have learned a few things since those early war days in 1917, when the representative from New York marched in full war regalia in the monster parade of drafted men in the District of Columbia. That parade of fourteen thousand drafted workers was led by the pious peace president himself, who sent them off to the European shambles to make the world safe for the profiteering imperialists at home.

He Didn't Fight Much.

Not that LaGuardia did much actual fighting according to all accounts. He seems to have spent a good deal of time flying his gallant Caproni from one Italian city to another boosting the Italian war loan, dining with King Victor Emmanuel and his bedizened generals and assuring the Italian imperialists that President Wilson's bunk about democracy and self-determination need not be taken too seriously. It was good stuff for keeping up the fighting morale of the workers, but the Italian brethren who had a covetous eye on Trent, Trieste and Istria, need not worry; the great democracy-faker had their "aims and aspirations" well in mind.

At a demonstration staged in Rome in January, 1918, LaGuardia eulogized "our unselfish motives" for entering the war and grandiloquently proclaimed that "our determination to bring about justice to all concerned while asking nothing for ourselves was established forever." If the mayor of Rome, the princes of the blood, the jingo senators, and the goose-step embassies listened to this patriotic dribble with tongue in cheek, still they knew it was good stuff with which to feed the workers they were deluding with hopes of peace and democracy.

For Trent! Trieste! Istria!

At any rate this glib compatriot from America knew how to speed up the "nationalismus," of the Italian dupes in the factories and the trenches. At a mass meeting in Milan under the auspices of the Italian Parliamentary Union, speaking of the largest war loan, he said, "The slogan of your minister of the treasury will be Give! Give! Give! Then your General Diaz can cry 'Forward! Forward! Forward!' And foreign minister Sonnio's cry will be: 'Trent! Trieste! Istria!'"

The pacifist LaGuardia must look back somewhat ruefully on those days of vociferous patrioteering, but he need not despair—the day may not be far distant when his record will stand him in good stead, and if he does not commit himself too rashly in his present bid for workers' support, he may yet be able to serve his real masters, the capitalists and imperialists of America, and once more be gathered to the bosom of the National Security League, who endorsed him in July, 1918 when he ran on a fusion ticket against Scott Nearing, at that time socialist candidate in his (14th) district.

Wanted Nearing to Join.

"I have never seen Scott Nearing," he said, when he landed in America covered with glory and an Italian war cross, "but if he is a young man, I shall ask him what regiment he comes from."

And in this campaign LaGuardia is a pacifist. Does he think the workers do not know that soft words butter no parsnips?

PHILADELPHIA TURNS OUT SATURDAY FOR THE "BEAUTY AND BOLSHEVIK"

The new Russian film, "The Beauty and the Bolshevik," which has created such a furore in Moscow and New York City, is coming to Philadelphia at LULU TEMPLE, Broad and Spring Streets, this Saturday, Oct. 4, beginning at 6:30 p. m., and continuing until 11:00 p. m.

This story is based on the events in Soviet Russia toward the end of the civil war. A Red Army Brigade settles down after four years of fighting, in a little village—there it became the center of the village life. It brings joy to the poor and rouses the resentment of the rich landowners. The Red Army soldiers are sequestered in the homes of the villagers. Kumbrig Ivanor, the Red Army commander finds himself housed in the home of a rich priest, Kulak. There is a young daughter—the Beauty. . . .

As inevitably happens they find much in common and are seen making love together. She wants a high church ceremony with full ritual. He has thrown off the superstitions of the past and insists on a civil marriage. The eventual outcome of this story must be seen to be fully appreciated. It is replete with action, humor, with the intimate touches of their daily life. The people of Philadelphia are very fortunate to see the first story of Russia after the revolution.

Tickets are already on sale at 521 York Avenue. Admission is 50 cents. This picture is given under the auspices of the Committee for International Workers' Aid.

STATE AND ARMY FIGHT FOR RIGHT TO HANG BUGLER

Fear County Officials May Drop Charges

TACOMA, Wash., Oct. 2.—With the selection of a jury completed early today, counsel for the defense of Roland R. Pothier, accused of murdering Major Alexander P. Cronkhite at Camp Lewis, October 25, 1918, was expected to raise the question of jurisdiction today in district judge Edward E. Cushman's court where Pothier is on trial for his life.

If defense attorneys are successful in their contention that Major Cronkhite died on state land and therefore the case belongs in the state superior court, Pothier may never come to trial.

Held for Two Years.

Pierce County officials once before have refused to file a charge against Pothier and should judge Cushman remand the case it is thot probable that the charge may be dropped. District attorney Thomas P. Revelle, however, contends that since the army was using the ground at the time, it was therefore under federal jurisdiction, tho the formal transfer from the state to the federal government was not recorded until a year later.

Pothier, former sergeant-bugler of the 318th engineers, has been in custody for two years. Albert Rosenbluth, former army captain, jointly charged with Pothier, will go on trial October 22. He is now at liberty on $22,000 bail.

Indicationts that the government would demand the death penalty were not wanting yesterday when the trial opened. James H. Osborne, special assistant attorney general, excused several veniremen from jury duty when they admitted they had conscientious scruples against capital punishment.

Call Many Witnesses.

More than 80 witnesses from all parts of the United States are here today, including major general Adelbert Cronkhite, U. S. A., retired, father of the slain army officer, and now a resident of Baltimore, Md.

It was General Cronkhite who forced the inquiry into his son's death after an army board declared the fatal wound accidental and self inflicted.

SILENT CALVIN COOLIDGE UNDER THE MICROSCOPE

'Always Willing Tool of the Bosses

(By Federated Press)

WASHINGTON—Lynn Haines, in a special number of his Searchlight on Congress, demolishes the Coolidge myth Taking the man from his college days and following his public career down to the present time, Haines shows him a furtive, indecisive machine-loyal creature of the late Murray Crane. He rose thru the misfortune of others and thru wholesale misrepresentation of evident facts to the White House.

Even Opposes Union Stamp.

In the Massachusetts legislature in 1907, for instance, Coolidge voted against a bill protecting the trade union stamp; in the same year he voted for a special joint committee to "consider the expediency of legislation with respect to the relations between employers and employes" to which labor was then opposed; in 1907, also, when labor wanted the state to establish old age pensions, he voted against it. In 1913, when labor favored a "9 in 11" bill regulating the hours of street railway employes, Coolidge voted against it.

He later voted against the passage of this bill over the governor's veto. In 1913 labor had an amendment to put teeth in a legislative investigation of the Lawrence strike; he voted against it. On four occasions he voted referendum on items of public business. Whenever railroad interests were involved, as in the legalizing of unlawful acts of the New Haven merger crowd, he voted with the railroad financiers.

So thru his career in the two branches of the legislature, and as lieutenant governor and governor, up to September, 1919, when the police strike, forced by police commissioner Curtis, gave him his safe road to national advertising, Coolidge was the colorless servant of special privilege, worming his way forward while accepting no risks.

Strikebreaking Made Coolidge.

"Had there been no Boston police strike there would be no Calvin Coolidge in national politics."

Coolidge was advertised, and 1,100 policemen's families were falsely made a byword in the city their men had served at a starvation wage.

They have not always received from the officials of the labor organizations the concrete help which they need. Victor Olander, vice-president of the Illinois State Federation of Labor, failed to appear at the last mass meeting of the teachers, or to send any message expressing his views, altho he had been urgently invited to come.

Working Class Unity.

But the teachers know that it is only thru unity with other working men and women that they can win their fight against business aggression.

That any hope for relief which the teachers have in such representatives of the present system as mayor William E. Dever has been seriously misplaced has been amply demonstrated during the past week. Always evasive and indefinite on the very issue on which a large proportion of the teachers of the city helped to elect Dever last Fall, the mayor has now come out with a definite repudiation of any promises which he may have made to the teachers by his open refusal to attend any of the protest meetings which the federatons have held. A committee of three teachers sent him for the purpose of learning his stand, were turned away without encouragement.

Opening Wedge.

To an outsider, the uproar over the question of whether teachers' councils are to be held on school time or on teachers' time may seem like a tempest in a teapot. Wide-awake teachers of Chicago know that to refuse five hours of school time in the course of a year for the purpose of allowing teachers a voice in the management of the schools, while it may not be in itself a serious matter, is the entering wedge whereby the business oligarchy that seeks complete control of the schools of the city can gain its final ends.

When William McAndrew this Fall began his attempt to prevent the teachers from holding councils during school hours, the organized teachers predicted further aggression.

The teachers predicted, for example, that if the councils were pushed out of the regular school program, the superintendent would next proceed to a complete annihilation of the councils as they are now organized, and an attempt to reorganize them in such a way as to have principals, district superintendents and other officials of the system present at every gathering of rank and file teachers.

Bankers Make Ruling.

Already a ruling has been made by the bankers, the manufacturers and the lawyers who make up, for the most part, Chicago's board of education, completely wiping out the organizations of many years' standing and permitting the superintendent to reorganize them as he sees fit.

The teachers predicted that their union organizations would thus be the object of as much attack as they were subject to when Jacob Loeb, as president of the school board, threw the union leaders out on the streets and forbade teachers to affiliate with labor bodies.

And already Superintendent McAndrew has framed a resolution asking that teachers be prevented from receiving notices of meetings of organizations. Another resolution of McAndrew awaiting action by the board would make the time of the teachers during every one of the twenty-four hours of the day subject to the whim of the officials.

Attack on Salaries.

The certainty of the teachery that the attack on their councils would be followed by attacks on their salaries has been justified by the letter sent last week by McAndrew to the principals, asking that a committee be appointed to revise salary schedules.

That this attack on salaries, coupled with the insistent refusal of the board to abolish the custom of secret markings, is nothing more than an attempt to re-establish the conditions under which the system was operated by Superintendent Cooley — in which teachers were ruthlessly cheated out of their salaries—is the unanimous opinion of the school teachers.

It is now quite certain that the teachers will send representatives to Springfield for help early next year.

But the most effective and sensible action on these matters the teachers of the schools have not yet considered. There is no reason why the teachers, deprived of their "legal right" to meet for a few moments of the school day to discuss their school problems, should not take matters into their own hands, dismiss their classes at an appointed time, and hold their councils among themselves.

Drop Fight on the Young Workers League At Minneapolis, Minn.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 2.—When the four Young Workers League members arrested here for speaking on street corners came before Judge Ganner Nordbye yesterday morning they found that the case was practically dropped. There were no police officers or Nabisco company officials anywhere in sight and Judge Nordbye the third judge in the case, informed the comrades, Carl Cowl, Morton Green, Jergy Pett and Leslie Hart, that there would be no further trouble and no more arrests made if the league confined its meetings to two speakers.

The arrest of the three comrades from the Young Workers League has stirred up so much interest in the party work here that the authorities feel the arrests had just the opposite effect desired—attracting the attention and public sympathy to the party.

PEACE DECLARED BY LEAGUE BUT SKEPTICS GRIN

American Eagle Begins to Flap Wings

The fifth assembly of the League of Nations today ratified the protocol and the document now will go before the respective governments.

The protocol had been introduced in the assembly only yesterday, having lasted only half a day.

Adoption of the arbitration and disarmament protocol is regarded as the first step towards calling an international disarmament conference. This will probably be done early next year. The protocol pledges the league to prevent war or to stop war if it is started summarily.

Election of non-permanent members of the league council for the coming year followed the adoption of the protocol. Forty-seven states voted and a majority of 24 was necessary to elect. The vote was: Uruguay,43; Brazil, 40; Czecho-Slovakia, 40; Spain, 36; Belgium, 34; Sweden, 27.5; Holland, 15; China, 14.

Following a speech by President Motta, in which he lauded the late Woodrow Wilson and appealed to Germany and France to continue their efforts at reconciliation, the fifth assembly meeting adjourned.

When the elections to the league assembly were announced and the Chinese delegates learned that China had no representative on the assembly, they took their departure.

The famous peace protocol is expected to have hard sledding from the respective governments.

In the meantime the United States' eagle flaps its wings and prepares for war with Japan.

OPPOSITION TO BRITISH RULE IN INDIA GROWS

Noble Lord Stumbles on Hornet's Nest

By CHAMAN LALL.
(For the Federated Press.)

SIMLA, India.—By skillfully wielding its limited power over its own purse India is forcing the Labor government of Great Britain to a showdown on self determination.

In Bengal and the central provinces, where the Indian Independence (Swaraj) party has captured the majority of the legislative councils, the salaries for the government officials have been refused by a close vote. In Bengal it was 62 against 60, despite heavy bribe pressure brot by government officials on legislative members. This vote was the second successive defeat of the government on this issue. The governor ordered the council adjourned and the ministers handed in their resignations.

Death Knell of British Power.

C. R. Das, the independence leader, declares the vote is the death knell of the British attempt to share the ruling power to a limited degree. He urges the Indians to capture all the other legislative councils and bring the constitutional machinery to a standstill, forcing the government either to rule autocratically or to grant the Indians provincial autonomy.

Mahatma Gandhi and the Independence party, formerly at loggerheads, are coming together on a policy yet to be worked out in detail but which will permit a united front against British alien rule.

Lord Insults Women.

The country is in great excitement because of an insult to Indian women offered by Lord Lytton. Several women have brot charges against the police involving assault. The case is still pending but Lytton declared he was surprised that Indian women would concoct charges against their own honor for political purposes. Over 100,000 men and women assembled at Calcutta to protest against Lytton's slander. It is resented the more because his sister, Constance Lytton was a militant suffragette in England and suffered barbarously from the British police while under arrest.

Women are agitating for the right to sit as members in the legislative bodies. A committee is in session at Simla to inquire into removal of sex disabilities.

The national legislative assembly, which meets in Simla, is considering several labor bills, including protection of workers' contract rights and maternity benefits for women in industry.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2. Herman P. Wills, legislative representative here of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, states that the Howell-Barkley railroad labor bill will be pressed for passage in the House when that body meets in December.

$900 A Year Average Wage.

MELBOURNE, Australia.—According to the Australian bureau of statistics, the percentages on the value of manufactured production in Australia for last year are wages, 21.79 per cent; fuel and light, 2.65 per cent; raw materials, 56.9 per cent; margin for profits, miscellaneous expenses and charges, 18.57 per cent.

The number of workers in manufacturing industries in Australia at the end of 1923 was 305,882 males and 106,528 females. The average wages paid per employe (all workers) worked out at $900 for the year.

Doings in Hollywood.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 2.—Suits asking an aggregate of $300,000 damages for alleged false imprisonment are to be filed against the alleged "Peeping Toms and eavesdroppers" on whose complaints Jules Lebaron, well known motion picture director and 19 other persons were arrested by Hollywood police on the night of Sept. 4, during a spectacular raid on a Laurel Canyon residence, according to a statement issued by attorneys for the defense today.

Silk Weavers' Strike Still On.

NEW LONDON, Conn.— The silk weavers' strike continues at Edward Bloom mill with other workers, warpers and winders, operating half time. The strikers insist upon gaining the three cents a yard wage increase. Thruout the year, according to the company's books, the weavers' earnings vary from $12 to $64 per week. The difficulty is that the high wage does not continue over a sufficient period of the year.

RAILWAY MAIL CLERKS RUSHED; SERVICE POOR

Volume of Mail Goes Up, Help Goes Down

WASHINGTON.—Speeding up the railway mail clerk and at the same time reducing service to the public is the achievement of the republican administration in the last four years of that branch of the postoffice department.

This is made plain by secretary Henry W. Strickland, Railway Mail Clerks' union.

"Service to the public has been reduced over 10,000 car miles annually and while the volume of mail has increased 30 per cent, the number of railway mail clerks has been reduced 4½ per cent. The men have been overworked and underpaid," Strickland said, "and service is growing worse.

"Every railway mail clerk has been compelled to do 25 per cent more work than the average man should handle, resulting in a lowered morale and decreased efficiency. At the same time, the official reports of the post office department shows that railway mail service mileage has dropped from 144,760,655 in 1920 to 140,660,502 in 1921; 139,692,312 in 1922 and 138,579,633 in 1923.

"Rapid growth of the parcel post together with the decrease in the space of many mail cars from the 60-foot to the 15-foot cars, has jammed the railway postoffices so that at times the clerks cannot move about except with great difficulty. Has restricted working space below the actual needs of the service, and has increased the difficulty in handling mails.

STILL BUSY UNSNARLING THE WAR

treaty—a treaty of war and dismemberment.

Second: Germany must annually raise sums varying from a billion gold marks in the first year to two-and-a-half billion gold marks in the fifth or normal year and for an indefinite number of years thereafter. The execution of this decision is contingent on Germany's ability to raise these funds from taxation and from other specified sources without disrupting the currency and fiscal systems of the country. All reparation payments are to be adjusted accordingly.

Thirdly: All funds raised within Germany are to be transferred to the Allies. This transfer is contingent upon its not unsettling the exchanges, currencies and budgets of Germany or its creditors. The collection of these funds is to be suspended, if it is impossible to transfer them without such injuries.

Fourthly: The committee estimates the sums to Be collected, but does not attempt to decide he sums that are to be transferred from Germany to the Allies. It is further decreed that the payments to be real must consist of real wealth—money being only a medium of transfer. Hence it is recognized that Germany can pay reparations to foreign capitalist creditors only by rendering services and exporting a far greater volume of commodities than it imports. This presently unforseen, if ever predictable, excess is held to be the decisive measure of Germany's capacity to pay reparations.

Machinery of Dawes' Plan.

Considering the two other chief questions: How is the German budget to be balanced and its currency stabilised, at the same time providing for adequate reparations to the Allied governments, that is to the Entente imperialists, the Dawes' committee proposed the following:

1. A foreign loan of eight hundred million gold marks is to be floated to aid in the establishment of a new bank of issue, the stabilization of the currency, and towards the payment of the first year's reparations.

2. A bank of issue with a capital of four hundred million gold marks, raised in Germany and abroad, is to be established. This bank is to have the exclusive right of "issuing and circulating bank notes in Germany" for fifty years, the period of its charter. It will be the depository for reparation funds and will serve as the banker for the committee charged with the transfer of reparations. This bank is to be administered by a German board of management whose chairman will be the president of the institution. Side by side with, but above this managing board there is to be a general board of fourteen, seven of whom will be foreigners—Belgian, British, Dutch, French, Italian, Swiss and American.

It is this general board which will appoint the bank's president, who is to be its chairman and who is to choose the personnel of the managing board. The general board also appoints the commissioner who is to be one of its members and will be charged with the enforcement of "the law establishing the bank, and the regulations relative to its issue of notes and the maintenance of the bank reserves."

The careful provisions of the foreign capitalists to control and determine Germany's currency is obvious, despite the roundabout and somewhat complicated machinery set up. The bank is to be the fiscal agent and depository of the German government, but is to be privately owned and free from government control.

3. The new bank is to maintain a gold reserve of 33 1-3 per cent in order to help stabilize the currency.

Sources of Revenue.

4. The following will be the sources of revenue: The foreign loan of eight hundred million gold marks as part of the first year's payment; a mortgage on German railways, a mortgage on its industries; a transport tax, revenue from the general budget, guaranteed by the "controlled revenues" specified below.

(a.) The railways: There are to be issued eleven billion gold marks ($2,750,000,000) first mortgage 5 per cent bonds, with one per cent sinking fund, against the German railways. Two billion marks of preference shares, of which only a half billion marks are to be in the hands of the government, will also be issued. Common stock for thirteen billion gold marks will be turned over to the government. Thus it is expected to get 660 million gold marks from this source.

(b.) A transportation tax of 6 per cent on gross receipts from railway traffic will net 290 million gold marks annually.

(c.) Industries: There are to be issued five billion gold marks of first mortgage five per cent bonds, with one per cent sinking fund, against German industries, excepting agriculture. Interest payments will gradually rise up to this rate beginning with two and one-half per cent in the second year. Three hundred million gold marks are to be plucked annually in this fashion.

(d.) "Controlled Revenues": The Treaty of Versailles declared that the rate of taxation in Germany must not be lower than in the Allied countries. On this basis it is declared that the German budget will permit, until 1928-1929 the payment towards reparations of a sum up to 1,250 million gold marks. These revenues are to be secured thru taxes on tobacco, alcohol, customs, beer and sugar. Whatever is raised above this sum reverts to the German government. A commissioner of controlled revenues, aided by five assistants, supervises these revenues.

The taxes on alcohol, customs, beer and sugar are to be considered as collateral security for the payments chargeable to the general budget. In the first five years alone the reparations are expected to total 7,670 million gold marks.

Masses to Pay to the Limit.

The Dawes' committee further declared that in its opinion these reparations schedules could be met without hardships by Germany thru 1928-1929. After that year the increase in payments is to be based, of what it calls "to call an "index of prosperity." This measure is determined by the totality of German exports and imports, the budget of receipts, the railroad traffic receipts, budgetary yields, total population, vital statistics, emmigration records and consumption of coal and lignite. The League of nations is to arbitrate all disputes as to the use of this index.

In order to make economically possible the maximum payment by the German masses and in order to make secure the foreign investments that are about to be made on a grand scale in Germany, the evacuation of the Ruhr by the Franco-Belgian forces is to be completed within a year.

Consequently the German masses are to be called upon to pay as much as they possibly can. The more they will seem to be able to stand, the more and the heavier will be the burdens placed upon them

Injured Workers Are Considered Suspicious Characters by Bosses

The latest in blacklist bobs up in the Chicago printing industry with a suggestion in the master printers' official Bulletin that they keep their eyes open for workers who, it is alleged, "constantly get themselves injured for the sake of the workmen's compensation benefit.

The Bulletin is published by the Franklin Assn.

"With more intimate general knowledge of the compensation laws, and the activities of hungry shyster lawyers," the Bulletin declares, "it behooves employers to be on guard against certain workmen who dishonestly and unscrupulously take advantage of every technicality in order to obtain the largest possible reward in the face of a minimum or trifling accident.

"Compensation laws properly interpreted and applied are a legitimate part of our business structure, but like so many other good things, there are those who will prey and take advantage by false and dishonorable means of an otherwise just institution, and therefore they must be watched, recorded, and if necessary put on an undesirable list."

Unionists ironically suggest that employers might also treat any printer who has already sustained injuries as a suspicious character, willing to get killed for the money there is in it.

PHILADELPHIA COMRADES WORK AND PLAY HARD

Organize Big Meetings, Concerts and Dances

By R. BAKER.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Oct. 2.—The City Central Committee of Philadelphia has stopped from the campaign work just long enough to elect a committee to arrange details for our concert and ball to be held Saturday, October 18, at the beautiful Eagles' Temple, 13th and Spring Garden streets.

The International Concert Orchestra will surprise the audience with some new charming selections and will furnish the music after the concert. The Philadelphia Freiheit Singing Society will appear for the first time this season and will render some of their new songs.

The Philadelphia music lovers are assured of a real treat and many new surprises amond them the splendid tenor, Frank Reiper, who is being introduced to our comrades for the first time, and Lucy Erbe, whose wonderful songs still linger in our memories from the last season, has consented to appear at this concert.

Thos who love to dance will have a thrilling time after the concert and the others will for the first time this season have an opportunity of meeting all the Philadelphian comrades and friends. The committee promises a variety of refreshments that will tempt the most fastidious appetites into action.

In the meantime our campagn work goes on. Kensington Labor Lyceum at 2nd and Cambria streets has been chosen for a huge mass meeting with Rose Pastor Stokes as speaker, Friday, Oct. 10. The friendly attended open air meetings in the Kensington industrial district assure us of an overflow meeting for Comrade Stokes.

Philadelphia has crossed the $100 mark in the campaign stamp drive with the South Slavic branch in the lead with $30 to their credit. Lithuanian branch No. 12 has established a record on the campaign fund lists by sending $47 to the national office in one list, other branches are invited to better these records.

The central English branch carries the laurels for the largest number of open air meetings with the Jewish branches making up for lost time. The campaign committee is conscripting all the available speakers for a series of 15 to 20 open air meetings for Saturday evening, Oct. 25. Arrangements are being completed for a huge mass meeting for Gitlow on Oct. 24. 50,000 copies of special Philadelphia edition of DAILY WORKER will be distributed just before the Gitlow meeting.

NEAR-NAKED DANCER STIRS BANKERS

on a similar show, it would have been raided by the police.

But instead the Policemen's Octette, eight singers from mayor Dever's police department were there, with the compliments of the mayor and the chief of police, as part of the program.

They Waited Patiently.

The thousands of bankers, most of them little fellows from the outlying towns, the kind that make up the backbone of the Ku Klux Klan, that organize the rope parties when labor organizers come to town, that are responsible for lynching bees, not only against Negro workers in the South, but against all radical workers everywhere.

The eats went on tap in the huge banquet room at ten o'clock, with a special orchestra. And it was at midnight that the lights were dimmed and the graceful dancer slipped out but against all radical workers everyfrom LaSalle Street as well as the little fellows from "the sticks" leaned forward.

They want more Light.

"More light!" yelled these pillars of capitalist society, all of them members, without doubt, of their Christian churches back home, as the dancer writhed and wriggled, always swaying back and forth, with the throbbing music of the jazz band.

They howled and howled for more and more until the dancer was carried, almost in collapse, from the stage.

"This is the stuff," commented the bankers, starting back to their wives in "the loop" hotels, riding in the same from the wings, as the big bankers

Pepper Likes Bootlegger Supreme.

Characterizing Washington's most famous bootlegger and expert in aluminum deals, secretary of the treasury, Andrew Mellon, of Pittsburgh, as "the leading citizen of Pennsylvania," Senator George W. Pepper, also of Pennsylvania, promised to vote for the banking interests, in an address before the American Association of Bankers in the Auditorium Theater yesterday.

Pepper, gray and sly as a hungry fox, manipulator of a huge vocabulary of words which, boiled down, assured the bankers, "I will do your future bidding." Pepper praiseu secretary Mellon, millionaire banker and friend of rich tax-dodgers, and declared, "I am sure we all have a very affectionate regard for him."

Pepper Backs National Bankers.

Pepper devoted most of his speech to support of the "measure designed to improve the position of National banking," House Bill 8587. The McFadden Bill, upon which Senator Pepper declared he voted favorably as a member of the senate committee on banking and currency, "aims to increase the power of the national banks in outlying districts of cities of over 50,000 population with a smaller capital than $200,000 upon approval of the controller of currency and regulates and limits branch banking. It simplifies procedure necessary for consolidations, and removes restrictions on real estate loans," Senator Pepper stated.

The McFadden Bill enlarges the power of the national banks and centralizes and strengthens the control of the large bankers over America's finances. Senator Pepper, amid the applause of the assembled plutocrats, assured the bankers, "I now anticipate that I will vote for the McFadden Bill in the senate." Pepper regreted that in "In the rush of business incident to early adjournment, the bill was not acted upon and is still pending."

After taking time in passing to extol the boy scouts movement as a means of patriotically bringing up the boys of the country, Pepper proceeded to earn the patronage of the bankers by whooping it up for their pet scheme for more control of America's finances.

"After all, however," said the senator from the cossack state, "It is your consensus of opinion that will be authoritative because I assume that you take that for all sorts and conditions of men and banks and that you will not willingly afflict or grieve any of them."

Under Bankers' Influence.

"My business is to educate myself so as to be able to distinguish between measures framed in the interests of some and measures framed in the interests of all."

Senator Pepper freely admitted that the bankers were the ones that influenced his opinions on the bill. "You are the professional experts in this field. I am here to learn from you, to confer with you. I never saw such a large faculty and such a small class."

"bankers' friend," "with aggregate tered under the state laws," said the "bankers' friend," with aggregate resources of $33,000,000,000. There are about 8,085 national banks with aggregate resources of $22,000,000,000. "The Federal Reserve system has been established as a measure to substitute harmony for the conflict of these two forces. The difference of opinion is due largely to the number of state institutions that have not entered the Federal Reserve system.

"The national banks have entered by compulsion. Fifteen hundred and seventy-one state banks have entered voluntarily. Nineteen thousand, seven hundred and seventy-nine state banks remain outside.

Judge Also Speaks.

"The question is whether in states where branch banking is permitted, national banks should by Federal legislation be given some branch banking privilege. I believe an affirmative answer should be given."

Judge James C. Cropsey of the supreme court of New York preceded Pepper and was wildly applauded when he declared, "There is no influence in the world commensurate with the power and influence of religion." Cropsey pleaded for entrance of all the bankers into religious and boy scout activity. This was necessary, he said, because the large radical vote in New York and elsewhere shows the youth of the country are going to the dogs and must be controlled, to "make them patriotic in peace times as well as war times."

Lee's Agent Repaid For Aid to Coolidge From Trainmen's Chief

(By Federated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—W. N. Doak, legislative representative here for W. G. Lee, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, is to be made the republican nominee for the senate from Virginia, against Sen. Carter Glass, and will have the active support of the machine politicians. Doak comes from the same district in southwest Virginia as Rascom Slemp, secretary to Coolidge, and they are close friends. Doak has been conspicuous in Washington for his persistent opposition to the policies of the other labor representatives, and for his frequent dressed suit appearances at banquets of the chamber of commerce element, where he has denounced public ownership and lauded the tory politicians.

Politics Makes Cold Bedfellows.

ST. LOUIS.—Is a wife's political activity as a candidate for office sufficient grounds for divorce? August Baurer thinks so. He complains that his wife neglected him and treated him "cold" during her campaign for republican committeewoman of her ward. He says "She spends all of her time and much of my money in politics."

CARPENTERS ON WAY HOME, WILL FIGHT HUTCHESON

To Support Rosen for General President

Delegates to the convention of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters who called in to the DAILY WORKER office on their return home from Indianapolis, were in an angry frame of mind over the action of General President Hutcheson in illegally bringing the convention to an end before the business of the delegates was transacted.

Indescribable scenes were witnessed when the czar of the carpenters' union expelled delegate Mulcahy of Providence from the convention because he appealed from the ruling of the chair. Ninety-five per cent of the delegates stood up for Mulcahy, but Hutcheson ignored them.

Faker Learns Lesson.

Evidently taking a lesson from his rival in reaction, John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers of America, who brought the last convention of that organization to an end while more than half of the delegates were on their feet clamoring for a roll call, Hutcheson concluded that surrendering to majority opinion is a dangerous weakness on the part of a labor leader who rules with the aid of strong-arm men.

To Fight For Rosen.

The carpenters are going back to their locals, the DAILY WORKER is informed, determined to expose the actions of Hutcheson and to push the candidacy of Morris Rosen, leader of the progressive forces at the convention and Hutcheson's opponent for the office of General President.

"Morris Rosen made a splendid fight at the convention," our visitors declared. "Friends of delegate Brown of Peoria, who is also a candidate, were busy urging Rosen to withdraw and leave the field to Hutcheson and Brown. But the progressives know that Brown cannot be relied on. He took no stand at the convention, while Rosen fought the machine every minute. Brown is simply a trimmer and his candidacy has the object of splitting the progressive vote. If Rosen withdrew then Brown might be induced to bury his own candidacy."

The progressive carpenters know that there is more involved in the election campaign than merely replacing the autocrat Hutcheson. It serves an educational purpose and a solidifing of the radicals in the carpenters' union, for the purpose of making of their organization a weapon to fight the bosses and not the private property of a labor gangster.

Stir the Shops!

The very best place to carry on a working class campaign is in the shops and factories where the workers gather to earn their living. It is there that minds are open to the measures, parties and candidates that stand for concrete solutions of the problems of bread and butter facing the working class. It is in the shops that the workers will see most clearly, for example, the difference between Foster, the union organizer and fighter for the workers, and LaFollette, the lawyer and fighter for the middle class. LaFollette and the Workingmen

The pride of the LaFollette movement is the so-called "Model Commonwealth" of Wisconsin. Invariably the LaFollette champion will point to Wisconsin as the why and the wherefore of the working masses supporting the Badger state senator in the present campaign.

Fortunately there is an abundance of facts—incontrovertible facts—that smash to smitherines all claims laid to labor's support by the LaFollette organization. Given all the accepted standards of measuring one's service to the working masses, we cannot but conclude that LaFollette's greatest achievement—the "Wisconsin Experiment"—is an unassailable argument against his getting the support of the workers.

In LaFollette's Wisconsin the average wage of the workers falls well below that prevalent in more than half of the states of the country. Wisconsin is twenty-ninth in the monthly wages paid workers. The LaFollette machine which has been in power for more than a score of years has done nothing to attempt to improve these conditions.

Nor has LaFollette made the slightest effort to raise the low standard of long working hours prevalent in the manufacturing industries of his state. At most only one out of every three workers in these industries have the 8-hour day.

And when the workers of Wisconsin attempted to fight against the powerful open shoppers dominating the biggest industries of the state by seeking the enactment of a law against private detective agencies, it was the LaFollette legislative solons who undermined the effort.

In no small measure, therefore, are LaFollette and his allies responsible for the weakness of organized labor in Wisconsin, for the failure to carry out even the limited sanitation laws, and the state government's lending aid and comfort to the anti-union groups. One need but turn to the annual proceedings of the Wisconsin State Federation of Labor convention to find long list upon longer lists of labor bills defeated by the so-called progressives who are now seeking the votes of the workingmen.

With the socialist party having committed suicide thru assuming the unenviable role of a fig-leaf for the ugliest side of LaFolletteism, there is only one political party in Wisconsin that can put forward any claims to being worthy of the support of the workers of the state. This is the Workers Party—the Communist political organization speaking and fighting for the working class against the bosses.

To attempt to marshall all the reasons of the employing class for supporting Coolidge would be impossible. To attempt to add reasons to the already well-known ones would be carrying coal to Newcastle.

But the reason for employing class support of Coolidge, just given the other day by one of the leading exploiters of the country, is of timely importance and deserves special attention. Mr. W. W. Nichols, president of the American Export Manufacturers' Association, is the author of the declaration of support. He has returned from Mexico after making an extensive survey of the investment and trade possibilities for American capitalists. Mr. Nichols is a plain talker. He says that the reason for his and his kind supporting Coolidge is this:

"I intend to vote for President Coolidge, because he has been notably in favor of the expansion of American business. Primarily the American people are concerned in the expansion of their trade. . . . Fortunately, they have as president a man who is keenly alive to the value of business expansion in foreign lands. It serves as an advertisement of American enterprise, it fathers confidence."

At this time when the employing class of the United States is bringing up all its reserves for establishing American commercial and industrial supremacy, such an attitude of a presidential candidate is an especially worthwhile reason for his support by the bosses. But what of the working masses? What of the farming masses whose support Coolidge is pleading for? What does this trade expansion mean to those who work for a living?

Coolidge is a war maker. He is the candidate of the imperialist clique that is preparing another war for the United States by aiding and abetting every effect, every maneuver of the employing class to extend its spheres of influence and investment. The trade expansion Mr. Nichols speaks of is only another name for the subjugation of weaker peoples. It is only the prelude to the civilization of the dollar and bayonet—a civilization whose advanced guards are the marines who broke up the Haitian republic and the missionaries who crucify the native population on the cross of gold.

How It Works

September building permits, according to Fred Armstrong, head of the committee to enforce the Landis award—the euphonious title of the Chicago open shoppers—show a drop of more than 25 per cent below the figures of September, 1923. A year ago September permits reached a total of $27,847,000. This year they total $22,000,000, a decrease of approximately $6,000,000.

The Armstrong explanation of this rapid decrease in productive activity of a great basic industry is typical. It is that the high wages of building tradesmen are responsible. The truth of the matter is the housing needs left unfilled by the mobilization of production for war necessities during the great crusade for Dawes plan democracy, have almost been supplied and that the building industry is facing a slump that affects unfavorably other industries from which it draws materials.

Mr. Armstrong lets go of another morsel of information that throws much light on the manner in which the lower middle class and the upper strata of skilled workers are fattened for the periodical slaughter which takes place during the depression that follow boom periods like the one that is now closing. Says this seer of the realtors' association:

"The building activity of today is confined principality to home building and the erection of two-flat buildings by small investors. High rents of the last several years started the ball rolling and home building will continue for some time."

This means that, irritated by the exactions of landlords and inspired by the slogans of "own your own home" weeks and "build now" campaigns, a great number of workers with small savings and middle-class elements with a little plunder to invest buy property and erect buildings when prices are at their peak. The boom "bursts," as our English comrades say, and the process of shaking down the small investor begins amid shouts of glee from the banking fraternity who assure the workers with sanctimonious earnestness that the home owner is the bulwark of the nation.

This method of disillusioning the elements that have faith in the high purposes and complete stability of American capitalism is a painful one but extremely effective. It operates almost automatically and with increasing vigor. Following war prosperity, during the depression 1920-21, the basis was laid, thru the ruin of millions, for the present wave of discontent expressed by the third party movement. In the coming period of depression the number of casualties will be multiplied tenfold. So widespread will be the disillusionment and the misery of the masses that a mass Communist Party will be possible.

Historical Processes at Work

The California supreme court decision, ruling the LaFollette electors off the ballot, has produced some very interesting developments in that state of sunshine, real estate sharks, anti-Japanese hysteria and prison sentences for workers.

The rumor persists that Hiram Johnson is to come out for LaFollette in protest against the court ruling which is obviously one of those tactical errors so easily made in a state notorious for its judicial corruption. We hope he does. It would be the final touch needed to align all the hypocritical middle-class elements behind candidates whose slogan of "back to 1776" gives a correct idea of their economic vision and conception of realities in an imperialistic epoch.

It has taken a good deal to arouse Hiram Johnson's sense of justice—probably something in the nature of a promise of a cabinet position. It is a matter of record that Johnson has been one of the bitterest enemies of Tom Mooney who lies in San Quentin prison for a crime the world knows he did not commit, and that he has tacitly agreed to the wholesale imprisonment of members of the Industrial Workers of the World by the official tools of the lumber and shipping interests.

Support by such individuals as Johnson can be purchased only by their sharing any power that may be acquired, altho by reason of their class interests they belong with the LaFollette group. It becomes plainer every day that when this process of dividing power is concluded the share of the deluded workers and farmers in this movement will be negligible.

This is the historical process by which the middle class elements secure power. They enter into a struggle with the big capitalists. They convince masses of discontented workers that their interests are identical with the middle class, but they allow the masses no organizational guarantees. The destruction of farmer-labor parties by the LaFollette henchmen is an example of what is meant. To retain power, middle-class groups enter into coalition with the representatives of big capital and industrial and rural masses find themselves worse off than before.

The support of Hiram Johnson, which will be secret if not open, means that the group of capitalist cliques, slightly inferior in strength and influence to finance and trustified industrial capitalists, have thrown their support to the LaFollette movement. In other words, the LaFolletteites have begun the process of compromise with powerful enemies of the masses even before they have secured power.

Upon the Communists devolves the task of exposing this systematic policy of hoodwinking and selling the working class and the remedy for it—organization of the workers in industry for resistance, led by the mass Communist Party, to slave conditions disguised with the blue and buff of 1776.

The Campaign in Milwaukee

By ELLA REEVE BLOOR

IN Milwaukee they do things with a bang. The Workers Party believes in advertising. My two really enormous street meetings at Allis and Chalmers shop, and the two held at the International Harvester company's plant were advertised by early morning visits by young comrades with leaflets, which announced, "Mother Bloor at your factory today."

At the last noon meeting over one thousand men rushed out of the shops at exactly twelve, having hurriedly eaten their lunch in the shop and literally swarmed the Workers Party stand. The platform was plastered with the large Foster-Gitlow posters. The hall meeting Sunday was announced and many DAILY WORKERS were sold and literature distributed.

The Sunday meeting in Miller Hall was attended by a number of the men from the Harvester shop, who came with their wives. The evening meetings held on the street were equally successful in fact, entirely too large to suit the "socialist" administration. Two evening meetings were harshly broken up by the police. The first time the policeman shouted, "I've told you three times to stop. You can't talk without a permit. If you don't stop, I'll call the wagon." Then he promptly chased the crowd down the street, men bitterly protesting.

I announced that we would conduct a meeting on the same corner the next evening. The next day I called up the socialist mayor, Hoan, and asked him if it was necessary to have a permit. He answered, "No. I have never issued a permit in the city of Milwaukee. We believe in free speech."

I then asked him why his police had broken up a perfectly peaceful meeting at 4th and Wells[illegible] the republican party were holding meetings the same day on Grand street, which is a congested district. Mayor Hoan muttered something about "Restricted zones," and said his secretary would take it up with the chief of police and that he would telephone me. Of course he was simply passing the buck, as no message came.

An immense crowd was awaiting me that night. The salvation army held forth on the opposite side of the street beating their drums and singing hymns for 40 minutes. The crowd increased until about 500 people were there, and then the police came again. Seven of them chased the crowd away and finally took me to the station house where again the night chief prated about "Restricted zones." But it was obvious to all that the "zones" were only restricted where the Workers Party was concerned.

One humorous incident occurred during this meeting. A drunkard with flowing moustaches and an appearance of assumed dignity, shouted, "Don't listen to that woman. She's in favor of Russia. I can't stand it. I'm one hundred per cept American." Finally the crowd complained of his antics and had him arrested. When I arrived at the station he was being "investigated" as follows, by the police sergeant:

"How old are you?"
"49."
"Any wife?"
"No."
"Any home?"
"No."
"Any job?"
"No."
"Any money?"
"No."
"Where were you born?"
"Germany."

Some one hundred per cent American! No home, no job, no money, no wife, and a German.

One Sunday in Milwaukee I spoke on "The Issues of the Campaign" to a crowded hall. The audience voted spontaneously and unanimously that I come back in the evening and deliver another talk on "Russia of Today." The hall was again filled in the evening. At seven o'clock I addressed a crowd at an entertainment held by the West Allis South Slav branch.

At Racine and Kenosha I spoke at hall meetings. I found the comrades of Racine doing especially good work in selling campaign literature. At Kenosha the Young Workers' League is growing and helping the party in many ways.

In Milwaukee on Sunday after the hall meeting the Junior League gave a play which stirred the audience more than any other kind of propaganda could.

The Hungarian branch then gave some revolutionary tableaux, and a young comrade of five years of age also made an address.

Thruout Wisconsin I find the rank and file of the socialist party, disgusted with the LaFollette leaders, are leaning toward the Workers Party, while the reactionary Hoans and Bergers are calling in their police to try and check the growing prestige of the Workers Party in Wisconsin.

Bankers Take Anarchist Position

By KARL REEVE

THE organized forces of American capitalism, the American Bankers' Association, meeting in Chicago this week to strengthen their grip on the working masses of the country and devise ways and means to increase their hold on the government, while they indiscriminately praise their two privately-owned political parties, echo the decay of their class by championing the "principles of democracy" and declaring for the anarchistic position of "less meddling legislation."

The discontent of the workers with Wall Street "reign of Dome government" is fully recognized in the convention at the same time the groundwork is laid for the capture by the bankers of the "social democratic" movement which spouts "democracy."

Calvin Coolidge and Charles G. Dawes, the republican figureheads, were proudly claimed as the bankers' private property by Walter W. Head, in his last address as retiring president of the bankers' association. The Dawes plan, which effects the throttling of the governments of Belgium, France, and Germany, with the cooperation of the aristocratic cracker king, Ramsey MacDonald, was praised and applauded.

"The large measure of individual credit goes to Charles G. Dawes and his two associates for the stabilization of Europe" said Head on the opening day of the convention. "It will be observed that two of these three men are bankers. The appointment of such a commission was formally advocated and persistently urged by this association at a time when such action was by no means popular in many other quarters."

John Davis, the personal lackey of J. P. Morgan, who has for many years fattened off the fees thrown his way by the bankers, also comes in for his share of praise, for denouncing moves to curb the power of the supreme court. "Mr. Davis is right," said Head, "Exactly right, and president College is right when he says the people want a government of common sense."

It is interesting to note that the bankers' association uses the same arguments as are put forward by the anarchists. "'Once we kicked against taxation without representation", said T. R. Preston to the delegates on Wednesday. "Now we have too much of both. Decentralization of the central government is most important. What the voters ought to do is to lift the yoke from the neck of the American people. The government could help the farmer by quitting its policing of American business."

"The necessity that economic problems be solved by economic remedies rather than by political tampering—applies to the entire field of commerce, industry and finance," said Walter Head in opening the convention. "We are oppressed by a multiplicity of restrictive laws and administrative regulations. We find ourselves constantly waging a defensive war against plans and progrms which will hamper individual initiative still further which will crush individual ambition and destroy individual opportunity."

The American bankers wage war against government when it restricts their industrial oppression of the workers and threatens to take their profits away from them. But when it is proposed to abolish their tool of government, the autocratic power of the supreme court, they take a right about face.

While the spokesmen for American capitalism are thus pretending to be on the defensive at this convention, by complaining against government interference with their control of industry, and anticipating the time when the discontent of which they speak will grow so strong as to make the government a hindrance when the heralded discontent finds political expression, in reality they are planning further onslaughts on the fight of the workers for emancipation from their rule.

The American bankers are already laying their lines to fight against encroachments of working class parties on their privately-owned politicians and are preparing the fight against government, when big business control is threatened by political parties representing workers and farmers.

TO THE YAKUTSK INDIANS

By ANISE.
Federated Press Staff Writer.

I read in a Moscow paper:
"We have published
The FIRST political pamphlet
In the Yakutsk language.
It tells all about
The life and works of
LENIN
And is intended
For distribution
Among the nomad tribes
Of the Far North."

And I pictured
That vast untamed region
In the northeast corner of
Siberia.
Just across Behring straits from Alaska,
With its tossing miles of snow-peaks,
And its wilderness of tundra,
And its few thousand
Wandering NATIVES
Living on fish and reindeer,
Just like Alaska Indians,—
And its scattered settlements of Russians
Many weeks away from railroads
Like our own early
Hudson Bay posts.

And I thought of the Romance
Of that PAMPHLET
Scattering to the far north a message:
WORKERS OF THE WORLD, UNITE.
And the news
That far to the southward was a world
That hailed them brothers!

And I remembered how WE also
Sent PAMPHLETS northword
The life and works of Jesus,
Or something else from the Bible,
To tell the Alaska Indians
That all mankind were brothers.
And we followed it up with
WHISKY,
And a few schools, and a lot of gold-seekers,
Who took away their lands,
And their fish and their furs,
And gave them in exchange
OUR DISEASES.

So I think those Yakutsk folks
Won't care so much
About the PAMPHLET—
As about the FOLLOW-UP!
And that all the words of Lenin
Won't impress them
Half so much as just the fact,
That the Russians coming north
Are helping them to organize
CO-OPERATIVES
For selling their FURS
And are making them in all things
EQUAL SHARERS,
Rulers of their own lands, organizers
Of their own Republic.

THE POWER COLUMN

Twice every week—this column uncovers to your view the motive power behind the DAILY WORKER. Here for the interest and inspiration of every reader—and especially the DAILY WORKER agents and committees—are tried and proven suggestions and accomplishments to drive the DAILY WORKER to further conquests.

Here is POWER—the power of brain and effort of men and women of the working class who not only believe—but ACT!

ANNOUNCING A CAMPAIGN FOR MORE POWER TO THE DAILY WORKER

Beginning Today and Until November 7

THE DAILY WORKER is gathering up steam. More drive to its power is coming with slowly increasing subscriptions and more bundle orders to meet the campaign needs. This is not enough for "The National Labor Daily." Beginning today the DAILY WORKER is going to "give 'em both barrels."

In This Way

1. Every reader of the DAILY WORKER will receive two bricks (REAL bricks to "Build the DAILY WORKER"). YOU will receive them. And we expect everyone—meaning YOU—to "heave 'em back" at us properly filled and with remittance. Thousands of bricks will be carried in this way to raise a mighty daily working-class newspaper.

2. Every branch of the Workers Party will be asked to take off their collars and get into overalls—until November 7. A load of bricks is being mailed to each secretary and this will be another section of energetic building Bolsheviks.

3. Every live member of the Labor movement will get bricks from the DAILY WORKER brickyard to aid in the building of a still greater newspaper to lead and express the will and ideas of the American worker.

All These Builders

will be united in this effort in the livest campaign of the

The D. W. B. U.

(The Daily Worker Bricklayers' Union.)

Every city sending bricks will be a local. Every worker sending in a brick will be a member. Competition will be keen and each member and local will be mentioned in the pages of the DAILY WORKER. We want the Labor movement to know who are the live wires working hard to build up a great newspaper to better fight the workers' battles—to add punch to the power of the DAILY WORKER.

On a page of this issue is the first brick. HEAVE IT BACK. And carry the others you will receive to "Build the DAILY WORKER." Beginning today and until November 7—there is no unemployment in the trade of helping the working class.

to Iraq to "establish a local government in accordance with the sentiments of the majority of the inhabitants."

THIS happened in the year 1920, while Lloyd George was premier of Britain and while the Black and Tans were forcing British conceptions of "self-determination" on Ireland with gun and torch. But Iraq was different. After Sir Percy discovered how the people of Iraq took to the proposition, he set a fellow by the title of The Naqib of Bagdad up in business as president of the concern. It was a sort of holding company—holding the Iraq oil for the British capitalists. The British ruling class are nothing if not condescending, so an electoral law was to be framed which would give the Iraqians power to make their own laws and everything.

BUT there was an Ethiopian in the lumber, in the form of Mr. Feisul of no man's land. That gentleman mysteriously appeared in Iraq when the "people" were about to have the boon of self-determination bestowed on them. It is true that Mr. Feisul arrived on an English ship and it is also true that he never saw Iraq until the very day he placed his big feet on the soil of that country. Another ambitious gentleman who it must be said to his credit, had lived in Iraq, but had designs on the kingship or leadership of that country, was ceremoniously deported by the British from the country, fearing himself and Mr. Feisul might begin to scratch each other's eyes out.

FEISUL declared himself king without saying "as you please" to the people of Iraq. The Naqib of Bagdad made himself scarce. Feisul crowned himself king at breakfast and before he reached the toothpicks the British "recognized" him. It took the Iraqians a little time to get acquainted with him and as they are naturally suspicious of strangers, several of them could be seen testing the sharpness of their blades preparatory to testing the protective hide around Feisul's windpipe. But there is oil in Iraq and the democratic British government provided Feisul with plenty of guns to protect himself against the knives of the people he was sent to rule over. He is still there. But he may not be there very long.

THIS bit of history may enable our readers to understand the little items that trickle thru the foreign dispatches these days telling of the fighting between the Turkish and British troops for the possession of Iraq. The British "labor" ministry will fight for Iraq and its oil to the last proletarian British soldier. It will defend the right of self-determination of the Iraqians and by Saint George, it will never stand for the enforcement of Mohammedanism on the half dozen oil engineers who are bringing civilization to that territory.

THE capitalist politicians are "seeing things" these days. One of the most painful sights from the working class viewpoint, tho perhaps not entirely unexpected, was the endorsement of Strikebreaker, Calvin Coolidge by "Mother" Mary Jones, the old battler for the miners, who now in her old age sees fit to lend the influence of her name to the most subservient lackey of Big Business in the United States. The miners for whom "Mother" Jones risked the bayonets of the soldiers and went to jail for, are still fighting the same fight and their most bitter enemy is Calvin Coolidge, the man she favors for president of the United States.

DETROIT, Sept. 30.—Ben Gitlow, vice-presidential candidate of the Workers Party of America, opened at Arena Gardens here yesterday the Communist political campaign in Michigan.

Fifteen hundred men and women cheered his explanation of the Communist purpose, delivered as a powerful but simple conclusion to a statement lasting two significant hours.

The larger part of his statement was an analysis of the attitude which he said must inevitably be taken toward the working class by the democratic and republican parties and the political organization which has grown up around the personality of the aged Wisconsin senator, Robert M. LaFollette. The republican and democratic movements, he said, are bristling with anti-strike injunctions and are yellow with the fumes of Teapot Dome.

Little Capitalists.

"And the government of LaFollette," he continued, "would be a dictatorship of the little capitalists instead of a dictatorship of the large industrial and financial capitalists, who are represented by the republican and democratic parties. COLORADO MINERS - -

By ELLA REEVE BLOOR

WHILE working as field organizer this summer in Colorado, I visited the large mining districts of the state. In Delagua, where we used to have a good miners' union, with a real "Red" for president, Charlie Lanque, the union has been completely paralyzed since the strike of 1922. As we drove into the camp and halted in front of the "company store" an old Wisconsin senator, Robert M. LaFollette, an Italian comrade, came running to speak to us. He told us that all the active union men had been forced to leave town, that the superintendent watched continually, and miners, either indoors or outside.

We drove from Delagua to Ludlow, a distance of nine miles, and found many deserted mine villages with the mines completely abandoned. In Ludlow, we stopped by the cave where thirteen children were shot by the militia watched some miners from another state looking curiously at the monument erected by the United Mine Workers' Union of North America. It is an impressive statue of a miner and his wife, with a child at their feet —with the inscription, "Erected to the children who died in freedom's cause, April 20, 1914."

In the Standard Oil district below Trinidad, and west of it, we visited John Rockefeller's "model mining camp" nearby. The buildings are somewhat better than the average, but the "average wage" is incredibly low, with the mine shut down more than half the time, a Y. M. C. A. building, which the miners find too expensive, but the clerks, superintendent and small bosses appreciate, also John's visitors when he takes them thru to all his possessions about once a year in his palatial train.

In Trinidad, a town controlled by the Colorado Fuel and Iron Co. (a part of the Standard Oil), we visited Comrades Grace Marians, candidate for lieutenant governor on the Workers Party ticket, and her father, John Barnhouse, candidate for elector. He is now eighty-two years of age but strong and virile. They live in a house which is historically part of the fearful class war in Colorado. When soldiers were mounted on top of the Colorado Fuel and Supply building, surveying the entire city, the union men and women met in this old home and planned their defensive against the force and violence of the thugs, soldiers and gunmen.

Every letter, every syllable of the Dawes Plan to salvage and finance the capitalist system breathes the spirit of another and even more infernal imperialist conflict.

A Bridge to War.

The Dawes Plan is not a bridge to world peace, but a bridge leading to the crossroads of a new world war. Its operation marks the most momentous step — bold — starkly naked — brutally frank—in the development of American imperialism.

The Dawes' plan bears all the earmarks of that most fraudulent and "purest" of capitalist democracies—the United States. Actually a gigantic war plan, it is being hailed as a peace plan. The very manner in which it was conceived, in which it was adopted, symbolizes with painful clarity the fact that the leading capitalist power, which in the last war was prating so feverishly about "open covenants, openly arrived at" is in reality, an adept in secret, backstairs diplomacy. Machiavelli, Metternich, Talleyrand, Disarelli, have never, at their worst, displayed more brazen effrontery than did Hughes, Mellon, Colonel Logan, Ambassador Kellogg, J. P. Morgan and the lesser financial satellites in the negotiations at the recent London Cogference which brought about the acceptance of the plan by Europe.

And to this very day the loyal lackeys of our ruling class at Washington are protesting that they are not involved in European affairs, while they are working overtime consolidating and extending their hold on the war stricken continent.

FOSTER BACK IN COLORADO FOR MEETING

Deportation in 1922 Is Now Recalled

By JOSEPH MANLEY
Campaign Manager, Workers Party.

William Z. Foster, the Workers Party candidate for president, was deported from Colorado in 1922 by Pat Hamrock and his constabulary, agents of the Rockefeller Colorado Fuel and Iron company. Foster's deportation created a state-wide protest.

It became the issue in the elections and the democratic candidate for governor stated in his campaign speeches that if elected, Foster, or anybody else could speak in Colorado.

Well Known in Colorado.

Regardless of the politicians, Pat Hamrock and his constabulary, Foster returned to Denver and held a great meeting where he received a big ovation from a large audience aroused and incensed over the high-handed action of Hamrock. As a result of this dramatic incident Foster is well known to all Colorado workers, and all indications are that his coming meeting at Denver to be held in the great City Auditorium will be a very successful and enthusiastic one.

Colorado's history is replete with labor struggles. In years gone by the metal miners of Colorado, organized as the Wetern Federation of Miners, were the vanguard of the Colorado labor movement. The trustification and mechanization of the mining industry together with the betrayal of the organized miners by labor fakers of the calibre of Charlie Moyer, who still has the headquarters of his paper organization in Denver, were responsible for the decadence of the once militant workers and almost revolutionary Western Federation of Miners. Their strike in Cripple Creek, Colorado, in 1899, was a memorable one in the history of organized labor.

Sam Gompers Was Defeated.

It was in Denver at a convention of the American Federation of Labor in 1894 that Samuel Gompers met his only defeat for president. The principle contributory cause to that defeat was the issue of the labor party. In those days Colorado's workers were filled with militant spirit. The miners and the poor farmers had elected Governor Waite, a Populist governor who addressed a letter to the same American Federation of Labor convention urging it to form a great party of labor.

Fake progressive politicians have fooled the workers of Colorado for years past. Edward Keating, the man who now edits "Labor" and is largely responsible for sponsoring the candidacy of Robert M. LaFollette, was a democratic congressman in Colorado when the Ludlow slaughter occurred. The democratic governor of the state, who, previous to the Ludlow slaughter, had professed to oppose the Colorado Coal & Iron Company, was afterward

GARY SCHOOL PLAN TRAINS MENTAL ROBOTS

Platoon System Good for Plute Class

By KARL REEVE.
(Staff Writer, Daily Worker)

GARY, Ind., Sept. 30.—The Gary school plan, or the platoon school system, is the last word in the dictatorship of the capitalist class of large employers as to what the children of the workers shall study. Elbert H. Gary, head of the steel trust, has been busy for many years in all parts of the country endeavoring to establish his plan of employers' control of workers' education.

The platoon school system has three main features—the importation of industrial work into the school, the departmentalization of study even in the elementary grades and the machine-like standardization of each study which is controlled by a supervisor.

The dictation by supervisors of exactly what each teacher should give out to the pupils makes it easy for the employers, thru control of these supervisors, to dictate the entire educational training of the children wherever the platoon schools prevail.

The dictatorship of the capitalist class thru these supervisors is an attempt to drive liberal thot out of the schools and further establish the "goose-step" described in Upton Sinclair's book of that name.

Capitalist Dictation.

"The real thing in the Detroit system was the fact that somebody or some bodies were dictating and dominating to the last detail the teaching of every subject," one of the committee of nine Chicago teachers who investigated the platoon schools of Detroit for the Chicago Teachers' Federation, reported a few months ago.

"I met the same material everywhere, even the same sort of presentation of that material. The teachers, so far as they took any part in the presentation of that material at all, seemed to say pretty much the same thing. The children all talked alike and everything seemed to be uniform all over the city.

Supervisors In Plenty.

"The reason, I found, is that in Detroit they have a supervisor of social science, a supervisor of literature, a supervisor of music, a supervisor of art, a supervisor of physical education, a supervisor of safety education and a supervisor of health education. I think this uniformity is very dangerous. I hope I shall never live to see a world where all people act alike and talk alike and think alike, if they think at all.

"Efficiency, the efficiency of the business world, is the watchword of the Detroit schools.

This is indeed the goose-step in the public schols of America. And the system of supervisors is a part of the Gary plan, and was established in 1906 when Elbert Gary and the steel trust founded the town of Gary and made her school system a nucleus for the propagation of the Gary or platoon school system plan, which eliminates thinking, but produces industrial robots.

Judge Gary Busy.

The activity of Elbert Gary in attempting to establish this dictation thruout the country has been widespread and presistent. On last January, even the conservative Hearst puppet, Mayor Hylan of New York City, mixed up in a political squabble, revealed that Gary was active in permeating the educational system of New York City with his "industrial slave" idea.

"The people of this city know what an uphill fight it has been to make progress in the construction of public schools because of the malicious propaganda and obstruction of the Gary system," Mayor Hylan declared on January 12. "The Gary system, the Rockefeller educational group, and their man Howard Nudd of the self-styled Public Education Association, have always had the policy of retarding the construction of needed public schools, thus creating congestion, which in turn leads to a denial to the children of a fundamental education and the limiting of their training to workers for the mill and factory. These men continue to squak about the public schools of our city, simply because we have refused to allow our schools to become recruiting stations for the Gary-Rockefeller interests.

Factory Slaves.

"These same interests are attempting to retard the policy of fitting the children for the professions and the higher walks of life instead of condemning them to the daily life that begins and ends with the shrill whistle of the mill or factory."

In a meeting in the Methodist church at Evanston last February, students of Northwestern university further exposed Elbert Gary's attempted domination of the child minds of the country when they disclosed that "Not only are Elbert H. Gary, of the United States Steel corporation, and Robert W. Campbell, his son-in-law, on the board of trustees at Northwestern, but there are three or four other men also identified by retainer with the steel trust."

Filling Minds With Dope.

The Gary school system fostered and propagated by the United States Steel corporation, sometimes called the platoon school system, or camouflaged by the harmless sounding name "work, study, play schools," is leading the assault for the molding of the minds of America's children along capitalistic lines.

Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the United States Steel corporation and champion anti-unionist, presumes to assert his right to dictate the type of schools which shall prevail in America. He has formed a united front of capitalism with the capitalistic politicians and heads of our schools to whom he dictates policies which favor the employing class.

Charles W. Eliot, who was president of Harvard for 40 years before he died declared, "A scab is a good type of American hero," and that "every laborer should experience a sense of joy in his work." Under the Gary platoon school system the employers, headed by the steel trust, attempt to use America's educational system to inculcate into the children's minds the idea that to succeed they must be good slaves to their masters—the employers.

FOSTER RETURNS TO COLORADO

proved to have gone into the company's office the day before election, pleaded with tears in his eyes for the election support of the same Colorado Coal & Iron Co.

A Rockefeller Principality.

Today, in this Rockefeller principality, political confusion is widespread. The coal and metal miners and thousands of Colorado's dispossessed farmers are breaking away from the democratic and republican parties. History is repeating itself. In years gone by it was "Charlie" Moyer and his kind who sidetracked the militant miners in their opposition to capitalism. Today it is Robert M. LaFollette who is attempting to sidetrack the discontent in Colorado.

While the democratic convention was in session in New York, the Colorado State Federation of Labor met and endorsed McAdoo for president. Today the State Federation of Labor is split in two factions, both of them trying to "shake the plum tree" for LaFollette. The LaFollette emissary, recently in Colorado, did not settle the fight between the two factions, both anxious to monopolize the patronage that may perhaps go with supporting LaFollette. And there are three factions and sections of the Farmer-Labor Party. All of them combined are but a handful of petty, would-be business men. One of these factions claims to be the national headquarters of the Farmer-Labor Party. It is the paper organized and "reorganized" by Lefkovitz & Co. at the Cleveland-LaFollette convention. This national organization outfit is in bad with LaFollette because of its careless manner of handling finances. The socialist party went with the Communists and joined the Workers Party.

The Ku Klux Klan has many members in Colorado. It controls various offices of law enforcement, from the mayor down in the city of Denver. A recall election was recently held which voted to recall the K. K. K. mayor. He, however, won out and now feels more defiant than ever.

Party Speakers Arrested.

In contrast to this confusion, the Workers Party is conducting its election campaign. Recently in Denver, Comrade Ella Reeve Bloor and several other local comrades were arrested for holding political meetings on the street. But, in face of this persecution, the Workers Party is forging ahead to rally, in this political struggle, the most militant of Colorado's workers. Great preparations and the widest publicity have been provided for the coming meeting of William Z. Foster at the City Auditorium on October 7. Foster's name is closely linked with the last election held in Colorado. A great gathering is expected.

Foster will deal with the real issues that confront the workers of Colorado. He will expose not alone the outright champions of capitalism, like Coolidge and Davis, but the pseudo-progressives, like LaFollette and his Colorado sponsor, Edward Keating. Foster will put forth the Communist program that the workers of Colorado must, sooner or later, embrace—if they are to save themselves from extermination by their capitalist masters.

Help! Help!

A campaign for increasing the circulation of the DAILY WORKER has heaped loads of work on our force. We need Help—NOW—QUICKLY. Comrades wishing to assist report at the DAILY WORKER office any day this week during the day or evening. We have work to spare. We want volunteers quickly.—HELP! HELP!

FOSTER'S NAME MAKES LIBERAL EYEBROWS DANCE

Villard's Disposition Even; Always Nutty

Three score liberal noses went up in sympathetic distaste last night as Oswald Garrison Villard, editor of the Nation and LaFollette backer, raised astonished eyebrows at the mention of the candidacy of the steel-worker, William Z. Foster.

And three score modulated voices murmured sympathetic and polite approval when Villard expressed himself as feeling "absolutely no interest" in the campaign of the Workers Party.

It was at an elaborate club dinner.

Has Elastic Conscience.

To this dinner, together with twenty or so decaying genteelwomen and a handful of college professors, came Villard, personal friend of Ramsay MacDonald, the "labor" premier and biscuit financier; advocate of international brotherhood who would avoid "entangling alliances"; apostle of decency in the newspapers who accepts a position on the executive board of the Associated Press; pacifist who regards the adoption of the Dawes plan as an absolute necessary step; and friend of labor who operates an open shop mine at Fort Montgomery.

Villard richly deserves the name of "liberal"—a man with mental indigestion and sufficient vocabulary to talk about it.

In Same Boat With Stone.

The editor of the Nation admitted to the DAILY WORKER— after he had murmered a few polite phrases about having to catch a train—that he is the owner of an open shop iron mine at Fort Montgomery. He denied, however, that the men are overworked.

"They work only eight hours a day," said Villard.

Remember—that an eight-hour day in a mine is more exhausting than a ten-hour day in the average factory.

Communists Should Be Polite.

But Villard is the last person in the world to harbor animosity against anyone. Even after the drubbing he got in the DAILY WORKER, he still thinks the Communists are all right—"as long as they don't advocate the use of force." He would let them carry on the class war, but they must do it politely.

In Villard's own words, he would have us do even as "that small group in Europe that has built up the labor movement there—gather in groups, sit down, and think, and think, and think!"

Wrecked Passenger Train.

QUITMAN, Ga., Sept. 30.—Railroad officials of the Atlantic Coast line today were attempting to send rescue parties to a wrecked passenger train ten miles west of here which, according to unverified reports, turned completely over as a result of washouts following two weeks of the heaviest rainfalls south Georgia has experienced. Early reports stated all passengers are safe.

HAMMERSMARK, MAURER, JOHNSTON, PODKULSKI NEARLY OVER; PETITIONS MUST BE TURNED IN BY NOON TODAY

Today, Oct. 1st, every signature obtained to place the congressional candidates of the Workers Party in Chicago on the ballot, must be in.

There can be no delay. Signatures sent in after that will be of no use to us. Some comrades sent in hundreds of state petitions after they had been filed, and were of course of no use.

It happened we had good measure. Comrades must not repeat such errors in the congressional districts.

EVERY SIGNATURE IN AT THE LOCAL OFFICE, 166 W. WASHINGTON STREET, ROOM 303, TOMORROW NOON, OCTOBER 1ST.

Five Candidates to Go Over.

Gordon Owens was the first of the congressional candidates to go over. To make certain, a few hundred more signatures for Owens came in. District 7 has spurted the past few days, and altho having the largest number to obtain, 4,000, will get the required number, 3,850 are in and the 150 more will no doubt be in by noon tomorrow. J. W. Johnstone, Ninth district candidate, has 1,140 signatures with only 60 more needed—a dead cinch that Comrade Johnstone will be very much in the campaign. Joseph Podkulski, Fourth District candidate, needs 80 more, having 1,220. George Maurer, candidate in the Eight congressional district, with 750 signatures in, will surely get the 50 more needed. If hundreds of signatures come in the last day for Pellegrino, he will go on. In that district, the results for last Sunday's efforts are not yet known.

Remember, send in your signatures at once, by special delivery mail or in person, by noon tomorrow, October first, 166 West Washington Street, Room 303.

The figures to date are as follows:

District No.	Candidate	Signatures Obtained	Signatures Required
1.	Gordon Owens	1,400	1,200
4.	Jos. Podkulski	1,220	1,300
5.	H. Epstein	501	1,000
6.	Frank Pellegrino	2,300	3,500
7.	S. T. Hammersmark	3,850	4,000
8.	George Maurer	750	800
9.	J. W. Johnstone	1,140	1,200

HEAVY LOSSES MARK FIGHTING NEAR SHANGHAI

(Special to the Daily Worker.)

SHANGHAI, Sept. 30.—Four thousand combatants have been killed and wounded—the heaviest battle casualty list in the history of Chinese civil strife—but the battle lines outside Shanghai remained essentially unchanged today.

Machine guns played the heaviest part in the night and day hammering of the Chekiang and Kiang Su lines, with attack and counter attack sending scores of wounded streaming back to the field hospitals.

The next big engagement is expected at Sung Kiang.

Several bridges have been dynamited on the Hang Chow railroad by Gen. Lu Yung-Hsiang's troops to prevent the Kiang Su forces from moving up the big guns to strengthen their attempt to take Shanghai.

MUKDEN, Sept. 30.— Following a series of reconnaissances, Chang Tso Lin's Fengtien troops today opened an attack in force on Shanhai-Kuan, marking the opening of an engagement with Wu Pei Fu's Chihli soldiers along the Peking-Mukden railroad.

The "Great Wall" which separates Manchuria from Central China ends a few miles from Shanhai-Kuan, which is an important port and railroad town. Chang's aviators have been reported bombing the town, apparently in preparation for the attack launched today.

Crimes of Capitalism Will in Time Destroy It Instead of Its Victims

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the United States government is showing great solicitude for herds of deer, said to be starving along the Kaibab [illegible] of the Kaibab National Forest, in Northern Arizona. The big herd has multiplied so rapidly, under government protection, that there isn't enough vegetation to feed them all.

The warmongers at Washington can't get a war started between rival factions of the deer herds, and thus kill off a few thousands. The deer are wiser than humans, at least in this respect. They have no wars.

The deer can't be sent into modern industry, there to have their numbers decimated thru occupational diseases and industrial accidents. In this they are luckier than humans.

Back in 1906 the species was threatened with extinction because of illegal hunting. Hunters murdered the animals for the mere sport of it; just as the western plains were swept bare of buffalo. But the deer are now protected by law in a national forest reserve.

* * * *

In this, as in other ways, the government shows it is much more solicitous about the welfare of animals than it is about human beings. Diseases of hogs get much more attention than the diseases of children.

The tenement slums of every large industrial center are jammed with starving children, just as the Arizona Forest Reserve is over populated with deer. But the United States government takes no account of the children. It offers free deer to anyone who will pay crating and transportation charges. The deer will be taken care of. But the children may die where they are.

* * * *

The DAILY WORKER yesterday told the story of two young cotton mill workers sentenced to death for murder.

It is legal in this country, especially in the Southern States, for big manufacturers to take children out of their homes and slowly murder them in their cotton mills. The mill owners receive the blessing of the church on Sunday. But the seven days each week is hardly long enough for them to violate all of the ten commandments.

Child murder has been declared constitutional by the United States Supreme Court. It did this when the Anti-Child Labor Law was declared unconstitutional.

Mortimer N. King and Frank Harrell, the two young mill workers now facing the gallows, didn't die in their childhood under the mill owners' lash. They insisted on living, in spite of the tremendous handicaps put upon them in the struggle for existence. One of them even had the courage to marry, and there is a child. More human fodder for the cotton mills.

There came a time recently when the mills shut down, in South Carolina as in many other states. The two young workers, King and Harrell, lost their jobs. There was no other work in their home town—Chesterfield. They had to take to the road to find a job, just like millions of their fellows.

Hunger came. People don't like to take care of hungry workers on the road. They usually send dogs after them. They call them tramps.

King and Harrell, out on the road, so the charge goes, got a lift from a Major Samuel H. McLeary, in his automobile. The major was a hired killer, but he did it according to capitalist laws. It is against capitalist law to kill if you are hungry, in order that you may get money to buy food. The Christian commandment, "Thou shalt not kill," applies only to workers hungry for food; not to capitalists hungry for profits, so hungry, in fact, that sometimes they throw the whole nation into war, resulting in the killing of millions, in order that they may capture the markets of the capitalists of foreign countries.

But King and Harrell knew only the law of hunger—which is the law of self-preservation. They stuck a gun in the major's face, so it is charged, and began searching his clothes for money. The major thought he saw an opportunity to save his belongings. He made a lunge at the boys. The gun was too quick for him. It exploded. The major was killed. The boys were arrested, forced to accept the counsel the court provided them, the jury brought in a guilty verdict, and now they will be hanged on Nov. 21st., all according to law.

In the meantime the streams of millions of more children will keep on pouring into the mines, mills and factories of the nation, to be slowly tortured to death before their time. No employer of child labor will be sent to the gallows for this crime. That is capitalism.

Under the drive of hunger the masses underneath learn to have little respect for capitalist law. In Central Europe, in the days of misery after the war, that continue under the Dawes plan, the hungry millions have usually just gone out and taken food wherever they could find it.

In Russia it was with the cry for "Bread!" upon their lips that the workers in the cities seized the factories and power. The accumulated rage of centuries burst upon the regime of the czar, the bankers and the landlords, and destroyed it. A new social order was born.

The two boys, King and Harrell, reacted naturally in their struggle for bread, in their fight against starvation. Only the dog, in human rags, will crawl into a corner and die, without resistance.

But the individual is helpless. Only the masses, organized and disciplined, can fight successfully against the capitalist order, that breeds want, hunger and misery. The Workers Party is building that organization. It is building the power that makes war upon capitalism; that will finally destroy it.

* * * *

The rule of the cotton mill owners may hang King and Harrell on Nov. 21st. But they will be hanging these two boys for a crime that capitalism—the mill owners' social order—is guilty of. It is not difficult to visualize capitalism taking its place upon the gallows with its victims. The crimes of capitalism will in time destroy it instead of its victims.

GOLDFIELD, NEVADA, RICH MINING CAMP, NEARLY WIPED OUT BY FIRE

GOLDFIELD, Nev., Sept. 30.—Goldfield today is a mass of smouldering ruins. Only two buildings of any size are standing following the second disastrous fire in 25 months which wiped out what once was one of the biggest mining camps of the state. The loss is placed at more than $250,000.

RANK AND FILE TEACHERS WIN ANOTHER ROUND

Victory is Temporary in War with McAndrew

The rank and file teachers of Chicago yesterday scored a temporary victory in their war against the school officialdom when members of the committee on school administration, sympathetic to the teachers, prevented the board from passing a resolution concurring in the suggestion of Superintendent William McAndrew that principals be permitted to attend the sessions of the teachers' councils.

McAndrew's move in recommending this action is the first of his attempts to turn to his own advantage the rule which he forced thru the board, annihilating the councils of rank and file teachers which have been in existence ever since 1912, and permitting the superintendent of schools to reorganize councils on whatever basis he sees fit.

It has been generally understood that this would be McAndrew's first step, since he, along with the representatives of big business on the board, are attempting to curb the freedom of discussion which the teachers have enjoyed at council sessions in the absence of officials.

McAndrew squelched an attempt on the part of Mrs. David Gregg to have discussion of the matter put off until teachers could be present.

"I should not want to be accused of handing down a problem of the board to the teachers for decision," said the superintendent.

A tie vote on the motion of two to two, resulted, after the vote of Charles M. Moderwell, president of the board, in favor of the superintendent's recommendation, had been thrown out.

Decision to enforce the rule that the chairman of the board shall not vote will probably result in further victories for the teachers, since Moderwell has proved himself consistently hostile to attempts of the teachers to get a voice in school affairs.

The superintendent was upheld thruout the meeting by Edgar Greenebaum, of Greenebaum Sons Bank and Trust company.

By preventing the passage of this resolution, the committee has kept out of the rules a measure bitterly fought by Ella Flagg Young, one-time superintendent of Chicago's schools and universally acknowledged as one of the finest educators the country has known. Mrs. Young contended that it is unfair to ask teachers to speak freely when authorities are present.

Open Air Meetings Not All Peaceful Because of Police

Another free speech fight on the corner of Wilton street and Belmont avenue is expected Friday night when the Workers Party speakers again hold open air meetings on this corner, following police interference with the meeting held there last Friday night.

The police attempted unsuccessfully last Friday to interfere with the meeting addressed by D. E. Early and Karl Reeve, altho they arrested five members of the Proletarian Party the night before.

Street meetings tonight are as follows:

32nd and Halsted streets—Auspices Lithuanian branch. Speakers, William F. Kruse and others.

63rd and Marshfield—Auspices local committee. Speakers, George Maurer and others.

Bandits Raise the Devil in Dowell, the Ku Klux Klan Burg

DOWELL, Ill., Sept. 30.—Four bandits swept down on the bank of Dowell this noon, struck cashier W. A. LaFont over the head with a gun, shot a bank guard in the eye and the village marshal thru the neck and escaped in an automobile with $1,500 cash.

The bandits are believed to have fled toward Benton where the Franklin county fair is being held.

Today was pay day at the Dowell mine, owned by the Union Colliery company of St. Louis.

Shylock Has Patience.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—There has been no change in this government's attitude toward collecting the war-time debts owed by foreign governments, President Coolidge told callers at the White House today.

The statement of the government's position was called forth by renewed discussion in European capitals concerning possible cancellation of the debts.

FOSTER AND GITLOW HOLD BIG MEETINGS

LaFollette Exposed as Boss Politician

By JOSEPH MANLEY
Campaign Manager, Workers Party.

While William Z. Foster is making a triumphant tour of the Pacific Coast, securing new members to the Workers Party, and addressing thousands of workers, Benjamin Gitlow, candidate for vice-president and Foster's running mate on the Communist platform, is holding enthusiastic meetings in Pennsylvania, Ohio and Michigan.

Several hundred workers turned out to listen to Foster's able enunciation of the class struggle in the Tacoma, Washington, meeting. A collection of $67.20 was taken up and literature sales totaled $18.80. A Scandinavian branch of the party is expected as a result of the Foster meeting.

Big Spokane Meeting.

A splendid meeting was addressed by Foster in Spokane, Norman H. Tallentire, district organizer of the Seattle district reports. One new member was taken into the Workers Party on the spot, and others are expected to join at the next party branch meeting. A larger hall had to be secured because the crowd could not be accomodated in the hall which had been rented by the Workers Party.

Hundreds of workers listened to Foster's attacks on the capitalistic position of LaFollette. $14.00 worth of literature was sold, including the September "Liberators," "DAILY WORKERS", "Russia in 1924" by William Z. Foster, and "The World's Trade Union Movement," by Losovsky.

"Every one voted the meeting a huge success and every one was particularly pleased with Comrade Foster's statement of the Communist position", Tallentire writes the DAILY WORKER.

Attacks LaFollette

At Comrade Gitlow's Youngstown meeting a number of LaFollette followers attended, and declared afterwards that they will vote for Foster and Gitlow. Gitlow devoted the major part of his speech to an attack on the LaFollette movement, and showed how the development of American capitalism necessitates a movement for wage reductions in order that American capitalists can keep control of the foreign markets for the disposal of the products of American industry.

Gitlow declared that the Workers Party is the only party that is fighting the wage cutting policy of the capitalists. He declared that the attitude of the Workers Party on organization of unorganized and unemployed workers calls for the workers to engage in a revolutionary movement to abolish capitalism.

HEARST SHEET PAYS $2,000 FOR CANARD ABOUT "SOVIET" AGENT BUT RECOGNITION FRIENDS LIE LOW

By LAURENCE TODD.
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—If you had suddenly, while walking down the street of the national capital, become convinced that you were the medium thru which the Nazarene was speaking, and you presently discovered that a Hearst newspaper had announced that you were a secret agent of Moscow, wouldn't you sue for damages?

Mrs. Gladys Murray, Canadian citizen and former actress, became convinced, when she lost the power of speech and was taken to Emergency hospital here in August, 1922, that not only Christ, but Abraham Lincoln, and other historical characters were using her as a medium to address the world.

"The Liar" Gets Busy.

But the doctor in the hospital tipped off the Washington Times that the state department files "might" connect her with the Soviet government. The city editor wrote a lurid lead, and the headline said she was "Linked With Soviet," while the state department was refusing to admit that it had ever heard of her. It still says it knows nothing of her.

Mrs. Murray apparently knew nothing about the Soviet government except what she had read in the kept press. She sued for damages, and her lawyers convinced a jury in the federal court here that she was entitled to $2,000 to mend the injury to her reputation. As she phrased it in her complaint, the Hearst story had the effect of holding her up to "public hatred, contempt, ridicule and disgrace, and to cause the public to believe that she was an anarchist and spy, convincing against the government of the United States, and of improper and dangerous action."

After two years, the lady has just collected her $2,000 from Mr. Hearst, thanks to a decision by Justice Barber of the appellate court of the District of Columbia, who finds that "The nature of the Soviet government of Russia, its proclaimed purposes and declared activities, beliefs and teaching, as commonly understood in this country, are such that the article is clearly capable of being understood in a defamatory sense by the readers thereof."

Sees Nothing Defamatory.

In the argument before Justice Barber, the counsel for Hearst made the plea that there was nothing defamatory in the statement that one was a secret agent of a foreign government. The United States itself, they pointed out, has secret agents abroad and at home, "watching popular movements," and its consuls and dipomatic officers are continually engaged in the same line of activities, even tho they are publicly recognized. Besides, the Soviet government of Russia was simply a government of a radical socialist type, founded on "representation by communities thru councils or soviets." Surely, connection with a government of that special type could not in itself constitute anything of which to be ashamed.

In reply, the claimants read from the only precedent in this new field of damages—the decision of Secretary of Labor Wilson, in 1920, to send Ludwig C. A. K. Martens, Soviet commissioner, back to Russia. In that decision, Wilson held that the Soviet government is committed to a policy of destruction of the government of the United States by stirring up violent insurrection in this country. Since Martens was an official of that hostile government, he must be deported.

Now, they said, Mrs. Murray is an alien; she is defamed when she is accused of this new deportable offense! Justice Barber agreed, and Hearst paid.

"Recognition" Not Popular.

Altho they may not have read this decision of the learned court, friends of recognition of the Soviet Union are keeping mum these days, when Foreign Minister Chicherin, in Moscow, issues a statement suggesting that only the Wall Street affiliations of Mr. Hughes stand in the way of an understanding between the two biggest republics.

As sure as anybody who is running for office this year whispers a word of hope for a Russo-American trade treaty, or diplomatic recognition, that politician will be branded as a Soviet by the valiant Dawes and his campaign staff.

Judges Lenient With Dawes.

It's all very well to reflect that damages may be awarded, after election day, for the use of that awful epithet; the trouble is that Dawes wriggles out of his financial obligations too easily, as was illustrated in the Lorimer bank fraud case. Too many judges were too lenient with Dawes. Most of them are still on the bench, and Harry Daugherty has added a few more.

On the whole, it is safer for the capitalist politicians to avoid all danger of being branded as one who would in any way co-operate with any of the national activities of these 150,000,000 Russian outcasts.

AMALGAMATED IN CLEVELAND FOR COMRADE FOSTER

Joint Board Repudiates "Bob" Endorsement

CLEVELAND, OHIO, Sept. 30.—The Communist campaign here has reached the red hot stage, with street meetings, Foster and Gitlow mass meetings, and special campaign editions of the DAILY WORKER getting the Communist message to thusands of Cleveland's workers.

The Joint Board of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of Cleveland has repudiated the indorsement of LaFollette by the General Executive Board of the Amalgamated because of the tremendous sentiment expressed in the Amalgamated of the Cleveland district for William Z. Foster, candidate for president on the Workers Party platform. The largest local of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers in Cleveland has already indorsed the repudiation of LaFolletta by their Joint Board, many of the clothing workers declaring for Foster.

Special Edition

Three thousand special "CLEVELAND CAMPAIGN EDITIONS" of the DAILY WORKER have been ordered for distribution at the Foster Mass meeting to be held in the Engineers' Auditorium on October 16. Other campaign editions will be ordered later.

In conjunction with the Communist campaign here, three open air mass meetings will be held starting next Saturday. Thursday night the campaign committee will meet in the Labor Temple to take up preparation for the Foster meeting.

Another large mass meeting will be held Saturday night, at which the principal speaker will be Robert Minor, who is making a tour for the Workers Party presidential campaign. Minor will also address the general membership and T.U.E.L. meeting in the South Slavic Hall, 5607 St. Clair, Sunday morning at 10 A. M.

Street meetings will be held as follows:—

Saturday night—46 and Woodland. Speakers, Severino and Lerner.

Sunday night—79 and St. Clair. Speakers Benjamin and Severino.

Tuesday night—125 and St. Clair. Speakers Severino and Lerner.

THE "little fellows" who hope against hope that they will get rich someday at no matter who's expense again failed to take the advice of Arthur Brisbane and keep away from the Wall Street whirlpool. Dealers in German war bonds announced that several fortunes were made on the rise in these bonds on the speculative market after the Dawes plan was accepted in Berlin. The suckers waded in and the sharks cleaned up. The suckers are now sucking their thumbs and imbibing considerable knowledge that was bot rather dearly.

AN anxious public still waits for Warren S. Stone's rejoinder to the rather caustic statement made by John L. Lewis, in behalf of the republican campaign committee, on Stone's action in closing down his mining properties rather than sign an agreement with the Miners' Union. Stone is a big gun in the LaFollette crowd, in fact he was one of "Fightin' Bob's" original admirers. But he feels more at home with Spreckles, the sugar millionaire than with those who dig coal.

WARREN S. STONE'S coal company had a contract to supply the Boston and Maine railroad with coal. He lost that contract thru his refusal to sign up with the miners' union. Perhaps, also, because the railroads are very much in politics and very much in the camp of the republican party. It is rather amusing in one sense to see notorious labor fakers expose each other, but on the other hand it is regrettable that the working class should tolerate two such labor lieutenants of capitalism.

MAYOR HYLAN of New York patched up a temporary truce with the Tammany Hall machine and announced that he would support the democratic state ticket. It is true that he does not appear extremely enthusiastic, but his political fortunes are in the hands of the machine, and where Hylan's pocket book is there also is his heart. The New York Times, which once upon a time would not accept an advertisement from Tammany, is boosting Al for governor. Which speaks for Al to all who know what the New York Times stands for.

RAMSAY MACDONALD wrote a preface to the latest edition of his book on socialism which is getting him into hot water. He might pervert the teachings of Marx and repudiate Marxism to his heart's content and the labor leaders would not feel any more offended than they did over his acceptance of the bribe from Sir Alexander Grant, but when he hit strikes, he was striking pretty near home. Just now Ramsay is the storm center of a hot discussion. The trade union leaders are hopping on him rather boldly, but so far they have not suggested that he take a ride to the Orkney Islands in Sir Alexander's car.

UNEMPLOYMENT HITS CAR SHOPS IN JOLIET, ILL.

But Railroads Show Large Profits

By PATRICK SARSFREED.

JOLIET, Ill.—The Elgin, Joliet & Eastern Ry. was one of the few important roads in the country where the great shopmen's strike of 1922 resulted in a drawn battle.

The wage of the men remained at the same level as previous to the Labor Board decision that precipitated the great national struggle.

The economic crisis of 1924 has however not failed to affect these men severely. In the great shops at East Joliet, the main terminus of this railroad, 400 men have been laid off since Jan. 1, 1924 and those who were fortunate enough to retain their work have been working but four days per week since May, 1924.

The hourly rate for skilled car builders is 73 cents per hour and eight times 73, is $5.84 per day. $5.84 times four days is $23.36 to support a wife and a growing family.

This is the top wage and hundreds of men make only 40 cents, 53 cents and 63 cents per hour.

The E. J. & E. railroad, in the fiscal year ending June 1, 1924, listed excess earnings of $2,500,000.00.

The capital stock of this road is owned entirely by the Illinois Steel Co., a large subsidiary company of the U. S. Steel Corporation.

Local conditions in other industries are even worse. The following figures will give some small idea of the terrible unemployment now prevailing with no signs of improvement.

J. S. Heggli, boilermakers, two plants, 400 men employed in 1923; 100 men in 1924. Phoenix H. S. Co., one plant, full time in 1923; half time in 1924. Steel Company corporation, working at fifty per cent. Gen. Ref. Co., two plants, working only half time.

QUAKER CITY TO SEE 'BEAUTY AND THE BOLSHEVIK'

Dramatic Russian Film Very Entertaining

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Sept. 30.—The Beauty and the Bolshevik will be shown in Philadelphia, Saturday, Oct. 4.

This is the first feature film from Soviet Russia and was produced by Proletkino in Moscow with the co-operation of a Red Army brigade.

The film shows a Red Army commander—"Kombrig Ivanov"—leading his Red Army units into a little Russian town. Then follows the stationing of the troops in the houses of the rich. Krombrig Ivanov is stationed in the house of a rich czarist priest. There is a beautiful daughter and of course the inevitable occurs. This situation is handled with a fine touch of humor which delight the audience to the very end of the film.

It is worthy of note that Kombrig Ivanov is a bald headed hero, something unheard of in American filmdom but to Russia even film traditions are not holy.

The Beauty and the Bolshevik has had a spectacular eight day run in New York and the unanimous verdict of the audience was that the film is the most splendid yet to come from Russia and may be favorably compared with any American production as far as technique and acting are concerned.

With the Beauty and the Bolshevik will also be shown the three reel film "Russia in Overalls" which deals with the most recent industrial developments in the Soviet Union.

The films will be shown at the Lulu Temple, Broad and Spring Garden Sts. on Saturday evening, Oct. 4. There will be two shows, hours 6:30 and 8:30 p. m. Admission 50c.

CANDIDATE FOR GOVERNOR WILL OPEN CAMPAIGN

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 30. James P. Cannon, assistant executive secretary of the Workers Party and its candidate for governor in New York, will formally open the gubernatorial campaign on Oct. 2.

The meeting will be held at Hunt's Point Palace, Hunt's Point Road and Southern Boulevard, Bronx, the scene of many revolutionary meetings in the past. The date is Thursday, Oct. 2.

To Explain Communist Stand.

Cannon, who is a most capable speaker, will outline the platform of the Workers Party and point out the differences between the Communist and LaFollette position.

It is especially urgent for workers to attend this rally in view of the confusion created by the socialist party thru its adherence to the LaFollette "3rd movement, thus giving up the vestige any revolutionary spirit that it may have had. This betrayal will be dealt with in the proper manner by Cannon who has been in close touch with political developments in this country.

Workers are urged to come early since a large crowd is expected to overflow the hall.

CAPITALIST LAW WON'T LET MAN DIE HIS OWN WAY

DETROIT—A resident of Detroit is going to be brot to trial for trying to end his misery with death.

A court is going to decide whether it is a crime punishable with imprisonment, for a human being to attempt to take his own life. The defendant is a drug addict overcome with despair. But despondency overy poverty caused by unemployment or despondency over illness from natural causes would obviously have the same status under the law.

Church Agrees with Heavan.

The church holds that it is a crime in the eyes of heaven for a man to take his own life or attempt to take it. But if death and the church don't get you in the event of a successful suicide, the law and the police will if you fail, if Paul W. Voorhies, prosecuting attorney of Wayne county, wins his case against Duber Harris.

There is no law on the statute books. But the prosecutor is going to bring Harris to trial under the common law on a charge of "attempted self-destruction." Harris has taken the drug cure three times. After being released from a sanitarium as cured he went to work at the Ford Motor Co. plant in Highland Park. He had not worked there long before he slashed his wrists in a desperate attempt to die. But he recovered. He is now in custody.

WHY WE CAN'T WORK.

Unemployment: Why it occurs and how to fight it, by Karl B. Browder, published by the Literature Department of the Workers Party of America. Price, 5c.

COMING at a time when serious suffering because of the scourge of unemployment is growing in the ranks of the workers, this pamphlet which clearly analyzes the causes of unemployment under the capitalist system should have a wide circulation.

The opening statement of the pamphlet deals with the causes of unemployment, showing that there is always ways or usually an industrial reserve army under the capitalist system made up of workers whom capitalism cannot employ. This industrial reserve army becomes the great army of the unemployed during those periodical crisis which are the regular phenomena of capitalism. We need only look back to 1893, 1907, 1914, 1921 and 1924 to see how regularly there come periods when capitalism is unable to employ a large proportion of the workers. The cause of these crisis innate in the capitalist system are clearly outlined in the pamphlet.

Dealing with the present economic situation, the effect of the European war upon the capitalist system are reviewed and the destruction of the means of production during the war are presented.

The developments in Europe and the developments in relation to the capitalist system as a whole as a result of the war are correctly set forth. In dealing with the situation in the United States, the author declares "The American capitalist class (personified in the figure of J. P. Morgan) profited greatly from the war as did the capitalists of every other country—but with this essential difference that in America the means of production were injured only indirectly and to a much less degree than in Europe." And later states "but if the direct effect of the destruction of the means of production have not been a large factor in America. . . ." In these statements there is a misconception of the effect of the war on the United States. So far as the means of production in this country, considered as a unit, are concerned, there was no destruction of the means of production. Rather the reverse, the machinery of production in the United States was expanded greatly during the war so that at the end of the war we could produce greatly in excess of our power of production at the beginning of the war. It is true that building ——— of a certain type fell behind during the war and the railroad owners have claimed that the government did not make replacements in the railroad system, but even granting this to be true, there was not an impairment of our system of production considered as a whole and in making the argument that there was a destruction of the means of production in the United States the authorerrs.

Another error is made to the effect of the Dawes plan. The author states, "and in the now developing crisis with more than a million workers already unemployed the United States is feverishly planning the subjugation of the European market thru the Dawes' plan." The context here indicates that it is the view of the author that the Dawes' plan will create new European markets for American products and thus relieve unemployment in the United States. This of course, is not the case. Quite the contrary, the Dawes' plan has as its purpose the re-establishment of the European financial system and European industry—to repair the damage to the means of production which resulted in Europe from the war. It is only thru the re-establishment of the capitalist system of production in Europe on a sound basis, if that can ever be accomplished, that the general collapse of the capitalist system can be even temporarily averted.

This re-establishment of European industry means new competition for American industry rather than favorable markets. So far as the American capitalists are concerned, the Dawes' plan is not a proposal for the creation of markets for American industry but a plan to secure the control of European industry thru the investment of American capital and thus to exploit European workers and take the profits from European industry. This is the view expressed by the Fifth Congress of the Communist International in declaring on this subject "therefore, the European and in particular the German working class was to be exploited not in America itself as immigrants, but in Germany. Bank capital, above all, the Morgan interests, also took part in order to grant a large loan and at the same time secure control over the German iron industry".

Continuing the discussion of the situation in the United States the pamphlet points out a revolutionist's solution of the unemployment problem as against a reformist proposal. It outlines a constructive program for the organization of unemployment councils and a series of slogans which have as their purpose to make the capitalists pay the cost of unemployment.

In spite of the two incidental errors pointed out above the pamphlet should be of great value in the unemployment campaign which the Workers Party is now conducting.—C. E. RUTHENBERG.

A REPLY TO RUTHENBERG.

COMRADE RUTHENBERG has been too hasty in his criticism of what he calls "two incidental errors" in my pamphlet. For he makes more than two errors in his own happily short article, and at least one of them is of more than incidental importance. Let me deal very briefly with my supposed mistakes.

Comrade Ruthenberg seems to think that my pamphlet argues that the indirect destructive effects of the war upon the means of production in America caused a crisis. Quite the contrary, and it is rather astonishing that he should have received that impression. For the very sentences which he quotes in part, go on to say that the replacements of the war losses formed the basis for "a period of unexampled industrial activity that brot American industry to a new high point of productive capacity." And I go on to state, quite definitely, that it is the conjunction of the agrarian crisis and the dislocation of the world market that constitute the major factors in the present crisis. I am sure that very few, indeed, who read the pamphlet with any care could possibly receive the impression that Comrade Ruthenberg conveys.

But Comrade Ruthenberg made an error even more serious than that merely misunderstanding me. He denies that the war caused any deterioration in the means of production in the United States. He admits "it is true that building operations of a certain type fell behind during the war and the railroad owners have claimed" that replacements were not made. What he must explain is how Comrade Ruthenberg thinks that it was only dwelling houses that were not built during the war, and that the claims of the railroad owners were largely false. The slightest examination into the facts will disclose that all building operations fell behind during the war except that of war industries and for governmental purposes which are not an integral part of the machinery of production and which since have been almost entirely scrapped. And however much graft may have been included in the railroad claims, the fact remains that it is precisely these railroad replacements and building operations to make up the war shortage which have been the major factors in three years of industrial boom.

Comrade Ruthenberg tries to make me say that the purpose of the Dawes plan is to reduce unemployment. This is ridiculous and entirely out of harmony with what I said. It is hard to understand how any one could drag such an interpretation out of a paragraph which finishes with this statement: "The internal policy to accompany the Morgan plans for world-domination carries with it the corruption and pacification of the small section of organized and highly skilled workers, with the brutal suppression of the masses, and the destruction of all effective labor organization."

But again Comrade Ruthenberg has done more than misunderstand me. Again he has himself made a fundamental error. He denies that it is the purpose of the Dawes plan to "subjugate the European markets" to Morgan. He says "Quite the contrary, the Dawes plan has as its purpose the reestablishment of the European financial system and European industry"—which "means new competition for American industry rather than favorable markets."

Comrade Ruthenberg's naive faith in the preamble to the Dawes plan, with which he is in agreement, is hardly a Marxian attitude. It is not the attitude of the writers who carry great weight in the Comintern. For example, Comrade Eugene Varga writes in the Inprekorr for Sept. 4: "Germany is to become an American colony. . . . not Germany alone, strictly speaking, but France as well, and, in further perspective, the whole of the continent of Europe." If this is true, that all Europe is to become an American colony (and I doubt if Comrade Ruthenberg would take issue with Comrade Varga on such a fundamental point) what then becomes of the notion that the Dawes plan "means new competition for American industry rather than favorable markets?"—EARL R. BROWDER.

SHOE WORKERS CONTINUE FIGHT FOR UNION UNITY

(Special to the DAILY WORKER)

LYNN, Mass., Sept 30.—A group of militant shoe workers of the Amalgamated, Protective, and Leather Workers' unions responded to the call that was sent out by the International Amalgamation Committee of the shoe and leather industry for the purpose of formulating policies and tactics to be carried out in the shoe industry and try to reach an agreement upon some practical plan of action.

For Real Amalgamation.

In the absence of the secretary, John Ballam, organizer for the Workers Party, and candidate for governor of Massachusetts on the Workers Party ticket, called the meeting to order. Ballam stated the purpose of the meeting and Harry Witham, one of the courageous rebel shoe workers was elected by acclamation as secretary for the meeting. Harry Ross reported upon the last amalgamation convention held in this city last month. He told of the election of a committee of five which was to arrange for a conference of all independent unions. In conclusion, Ross advised the militants of the unions to get together and work for a real amalgamation movement.

Delegate Checkoway, an energetic shoe worker, declared the time is ripe for amalgamation for the betterment of the wretched condition of the shoe workers.

Elect Committee.

A committee of fifteen was elected in order to carry on the work necessary for the consolidation of all shoe unions into one industrial organization. The agenda for the meeting of the committee of fifteen was announced as follows:

Election of permanent secretary-treasurer.

Preparation for the calling of a nation-wide general shoe workers' convention.

Propaganda, leaflets and finance.

Organization of shoe workers rank and file committees in Haverhill, Chelsea, Salem, Beverley, the Brockton, Brooklyn and St. Louis districts.

General statement of aims to be drawn up and mailed to active and militant workers in all shoe centers.

Elections of sub-committees to carry out the plans.

And yet there were unemployment, a low standard of living and low wages for the workers. The cockroach capitalists will do no more for the workers than the large capitalists have done, if LaFollette is put in power.

"LaFollette is against the trusts that are in opposition to the small capitalists. But Theodore Roosevelt with his "Big Stick" could not smash the trusts. The combine of the Standard Oil Co., was dissolved by the United States government but the Standard Oil Co. is richer today than ever before."

The capitalist class itself, he said, will be replaced by a Communist social order.

Industrial Center.

A part of the significance of the Gitlow meeting lay in the fact that it opened in the industrial heart of Michigan the first Communist campaign in the history of the United States. And it was held on the sixtieth anniversary of the formation of the First International.

Among the immediate concrete results of the meeting were a collection of $325 for the Workers' Party campaign, 58 new subscriptions to the DAILY WORKER, a profit for the campaign fund of about $105 from the sale of fifteen and Workers' Party buttons and the effect on the Detroit industrial workers of the distribution at that time of thousands of leaflets.

Well Advertised.

The day dawned with rain. Clouds hung over the city all day, with rain falling intermittently until the early afternoon. But the party workers and the Young Workers' League had planned well, heralding Gitlow's coming with automobile banners, posters, leaflets and a special Detroit edition of the DAILY WORKER. Rain could not dampen or clouds obscure the significance and spirit of the day.

Cyril Lambkin, chairman of the Workers' Party state central committee and the party candidate for attorney general in Michigan, outlined the history of the First, Second and Third Internationals, aplause following his statement that the Third International is "the real heir of the First."

Barney Mass, Young Workers' League organizer, made the appeal for the DAILY WORKER that brot in the 58 new subscriptions and stimulated the sale of the special edition in the hall.

Owens Defiant.

And Edgar Owens, district organizer of the party and chairman of the meeting, took time enough to say, in part, "Two years ago we were in jail. And now we can say, 'To hell with the jails!'"

The meeting was held eight days after a state convention, at the House of the Masses here, qualified William Z. Foster, Gitlow and party candidates for four state offices for a place on the ballots in Michigan, Nov. 4.

"He is not a laboring man. He belongs to no labor union. He has never been identified with any activity by a labor organization in the interest of labor," Gitlow said in turn of Calvin Coolidge and Charles G. Dawes, of the republican party, John W. Davis, of the democratic party, and LaFollette.

Heard Master's Voice.

"Sen. Burton K. Wheeler, vice-presidential candidate of LaFollette's Conference for Progressive Political Action," Gitlow said, "did not accept the nomination until he received a telegram from a gentleman in New York City. And the man who sent the telegram was Frank A. Vanderlip, retired millionaire banker, former president of the National City Bank, of Wall Street, New York City."

Gitlow also reviewed the events leading to the formation of the LaFollette campaign organization by representatives of dissatisfied groups. There, he said, were groups of farmers who were disillusioned by the withdrawal of republican party support from the grain market; capitalist class elements disgruntled by the overshadowing power of the trusts; industrial workers who were groping blindly for independent political power after learning of democratic and republican scandals in the United States shipping board, in the national treasury department, in the veterans' bureau, in the department of justice and in the Teapot Dome affair.

The Third International.

Forecasting the preparation at the present time in the United States and Europe for another and more terrible world war, Gitlow said, "The Third International is a militant political organization, representing the working class to its very core. And if the capitalists of the world threaten to draft the workers into another imperialist war the Third International will be there to say: 'If you do, the working class of the world will turn your imperialist war into an international revolutionary war.'"

SLEUTHS GET DON CHAFIN ON BOOZE WARRANT

Scabherder Butted in on Bootleggers' Game

Buries Organizers.

Sheriff Chafin has taken operators' money for years and is interested in coal mining himself. He has had free access to the company treasuries to pay sluggers and gunmen engaged as deputies to beat up and shoot union organizers who come into Logan county to better wages and working conditions.

In the mine war of 1921 Chafin's armory and munition stores would have supplied a healthy Balkan revolution. In less troubled times his deputies board all trains entering the county and push pistol barrels against the ribs of men suspected of being union organizers. The suspects have to get out at the next station with a return ticket or else see the undertaker.

Chafin Undertakers' Friend.

The Chafin-operator gang controls the Logan sheriff's office and the courts. Any trace of unionism is smoked out and sent over the border with clubs and shots or put underground for good in a pinebord box.

Unionists think it a grim joke that Don Chafin can literally get away with murder in West Virginia and then get picked up by a federal grand jury for a few drops of Dago Red.

A number of his deputies, his partners in the liquor business, are also indicted.

Business Man Gets Bad Religious Fit; Picks Up His Gat

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Sept. 30.—Invading Ahawoh Zion synagogue during Jewish New Years' services here today, Solomon Ostrow, said to be a retired business man, ran amuck with a gun, killing one of the worshippers and wounding two others.

The killer, believed mentally unbalanced, was mobbed by members of the congregation and severely beaten before officers rescued him.

By JACK STACHEL

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—There still exist the remnants of the social-democratic party in our ranks. Not only as to the form of organization (functions of social-democracy required territorial branches only while the Communist party must have its roots in the workshop hence the necessity of making the shop nucleus the unit of our organization), but also on methods and means of waging our struggles. While it is true that this inheritance is party outrooted ideologically, one still finds many comrades who have not yet completely freed themselves from the social-democratic ideology particularly is this true of the parliamentary campaign.

In the present campaign waged by the Workers Party we still find members of the Workers Party who believe that the sole function of the Young Workers' League is to assist the party, and members of the Y. W. L. who believe their whole role in the campaign is to assist in whatever the party is doing. The Young Workers' League does not assist in the election campaign as some organization that might come to the assistance of the party in this struggle. The Young Workers' League energetically participates in the campaign, because the party puts forth the immediate demands of the young workers and both the Y. W. L. and the party are working towards the same end—the dictatorship of the proletariat. The Young Workers' League is a political organization.

We reject the slogan—that the youth must not participate in politics. The young workers are such a mighty force in social production are also a mighty force in the working class political struggle. This struggle is the basis for the Communist education of the Young Workers. In this campaign we must fight shoulder to side with the party; we accept the political leadership of the party and must mobilize the young workers for the Communist campaign.

The Young Workers' League of the New York District, as well as the junior section are active participants in the campaign. In securing signatures to place the candidates on the ballot they played an important part. In every branch there is a comrade in charge of the campaign and a committee to assist him. These committees work in conjunctdn with the committees of the party in their section. They participate in the conduct of street meetings, in the sale of literature, in the selling of campaign stamps, collecting money on subscription lists, etc. Thru the District Office speakers are sent to the various parts of the city to some cases holding the campaign meetings under the auspices of the Young Workers' League and in other cases speaking from the platform of the party. Today the Young Workers' League holds a dozen meetings weekly.

During the remainder of the campaign our work will be greatly intensified. Workers' quarters and factories will be invaded with literature, subscriptions to the Young Worker and DAILY WORKER will be sold, voters will be canvassed. Subscription lists for the raising of funds for Foster and Gitlow campaign are now circulated among all of our comrades, and money is being collected. Our campaign now depends upon the money we have at our disposal. We must now intensify our drive for funds. Every member of the Y. W. L. and of the junior section will be enlisted in this campaign for funds. More street meetings, and indoor meetings will be held in the last few weeks of the campaign.

The New York District will also organize from its more older comrades a body of watchers for election day, to guard the vote cast by the exploited workers against capitalism and for Communism.

Let every young worker rally to the Communist campaign headed by the standard bearers, William Z. Foster and Ben Gitlow, tried leaders of the oppressed.

Under the banner of the Workers Party and the Young Workers' League let us march forward towards an independent party of workers and exploited farmers, towards the establishment of a workers' and farmers' government, the dictatorship of the proletariat and the Communist society.

Let us utilize this election campaign to strengthen the organized power of the exploited masses, and with new experiences, new strength, march forward to new struggles, new battles, and victory!

Open Air Meetings in New York State Are Well Attended

By HARRY WINITSKY

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 30.—Rose Pastor Stokes, Workers Party candidate in the 13th Congressional District, New York City, held meetings in the cities of Albany, Schenectady, Troy, Gloversville, Utica, Syracuse, Auburn, Geneva, Buffalo, Rochester, Niagara Falls and Jamestown. These meetings were a tremendous success. The committees report that at each meeting there was a crowd of at least three or four hundred people. Comrade Stokes sold a great deal of literature, DAILY WORKERS, and party platforms at each meeting, as well as taking up a collection. The campaign committee has already received from Comrade Stokes $110.00, profits from her collections at these meetings.

Comrade Stokes will spend another week campaigning for the state ticket as well as the local candidates in Buffalo, and will then proceed to Pittsburgh to help the comrades there put over their local ticket.

The campaign committee is planning to send other speakers thru the state of New York and New Jersey. Comrade Rudolf Volgrat, candidate for U. S. senator in the state of New Jersey is also being sent on a tour thruout the state of New Jersey. In addition the campaign committee will send New York speakers.

HEARST'S CHIEF PEN PERVERT WILL VOTE FOR CALVIN COOLIDGE

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—Arthur Brisbane, one of William Randolph Hearst's most prized newspaper performers often proclaiming, on paper, that the workers should have their dus, announces to the Rotary Club that he will vote for Coolidge, tho "whoever is elected we shall have an honest man in the White House." Brisbane blatted praise about the candidates of both major parties and said that he would not advocate LaFollette's election any more than that of William Jennings Bryan, with whom he says he disagrees "from monkeys to beer. Charles Bryan, he calls "level-headed" and a "second McKinley." Brisbane is incidentally one of the biggest owners of real estate in choice New York sections.

FOUND CHECK FOR $62.20 IN HAT; OWNER LOCATED—DID NOT WANT IT

There are certain things that happen only once in a blue moon. Elbert Hubbard, former bard of Aurora, now dead, was one of them. Mother Hubbard and her bare cupboard made a deep impression upon him in his safety-pin days. Elbert Hubbard's cupboard was never bare, as a consequence.

The other day, in Toledo, Ohio, a check for $60.20 was found in a hat. The hat had been passed up and down the aisle of a meeting. The meeting was a Communist rally.

We'll let A. W. Harvitt, one of the best DAILY WORKER agents in the party, tell the story:

"When we counted the collection we found a check for $60.20 in the hat. We thought the worker who gave it meant to make a small donation out of this large amount. We made inquiries, found the owner of the check and were told by him that he wanted the whole sum to go towards the Communist campaign. He had earned this money working overtime at his trade, he said. As his trade was not organized he could not rebel at overtime on the basis of work for the unemployed, and this made him feel that the entire sum should be given to the party that had an unemployed policy and a revolutionary program."

Things like this, too, only happen once in a blue moon. If they would happen oftener, the Workers Party cupboard would never be bare, no matter what the campaign or the need. A thousand workers giving $60.20 each—figure out for yourself what this would amount to and what we could accomplish with it.

THE ELECTION CAMPAIGN IS NOW AT ITS PEAK. DURING THE NEXT FOUR WEEKS MANY, MANY DOLLARS WILL BE NEEDED. EVERY DOLLAR WILL PAVE THE WAY TO REVOLUTIONARY ACHIEVEMENT. As we have said before—IN WITH THE DOLLARS!

LABOR BOARD ASKS AID OF BOSSES' TOOL

Judge Wilkerson Called in on Railroad Fight

Federal Judge Wilkerson, who issued the Daugherty injunction against the striking shopmen in 1922, has been called to the aid of the instrument of the railroad owners, the Railroad Labor Board, and asked to force the railroad union brotherhoods to recognize the jurisdiction of the board and appear before it to give testimony.

Wilkerson has been asked by district attorney Olsen and attorneys Kirklan and Robert N. Golding, "special assistants to the attorney-general of the United States," to order John McGuire, of Chicago, and D. B. Robertson, of Cleveland, to testify before the railroad labor board.

These officials of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen have twice refused to appear before the board charging that it strongly favors the railroad carriers. Attorney Donald Richberg, their lawyer, charges the petition filed before Judge Wilkerson does not correspond with the facts and he will file an answer.

Strike-breaker Cal, Whiskered Charlie, at Fink's Funeral

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—President Coolidge, secretary of state Hughes and representatives of the Persian government, this afternoon attended the funeral services for Major Robert W. Imbrie, American vice consul and intelligence officer who was killed at Teheran, Persia.

Burial was in Arlington cemetery.

Editor's Note—According to an article that appeared recently in the New York Times, Major Imbrie was a United States stool-pigeon in Soviet Russia after the Bolshevik revolution and was a vicious hater of the Workers' Republic. The Times suggested that the "notorious Cheka" got even with him for his espionage in Petrograd, after Kerensky fell. While in Persia he was acting in his accustomed role of spy and agent of the Standard Oil Company.

BELGIAN COAL OPERATORS FORCE WAGE REDUCTIONS ON MINERS AS DAWES PLAN GETS INTO ACTION

The Strike of the Belgian Miners.

Comrade Miners! The Belgian capitalists are now engaged in a ferocious attack upon the miners. For three weeks have the miners of Borinage, Belgium, been forced to strike owing to the employers' arbitrary attempts to enforce a 10 per cent cut in wages contrary to the existing collective agreement.

Why did the Belgian capitalists take up the offensive? Because owing to the reparation payments of German coal, they have accumulated large stocks of coal.

Now, with the aid of these stocks and under the pretext of German competition, the Belgian mine owners try to dictate their will to the Borinage miners. The struggle now waged by the Belgian miners will soon have to be taken up by the miners of other countries also.

For the Dawes' plan which was accepted by the London conference will force Germany to increase its production and export of goods to foreign markets. This will lead to the accumulation of new coal stocks in France and Belgium, and the capitalists of these countries, as well as those of England, Czecho-Slovakia, etc., will cut wages and lengthen the working hours of the miners in order to be in a better position to compete with German coal.

Dawes Plan in Action.

The Dawes' plan is only beginning to be materialized; yet it has already led to the German mine owners imposing an eight, eight and one-half and nine hour day upon the German underground miners and a ten hour day upon the miners working above ground. Now, the German capitalists want to cut the miners' wages by 20 per cent. In Belgium the coal barons are forcing a 5-10 per cent wage cut upon the miners. The French mine owners declare that if the longer work day remains in force in Germany, they too, will have to lengthen the hours of the French miners.

Supported by Socialists.

Thus, the Dawes' plan which is supported by all the social patriots and reformists and which is being put into effect, thanks to their shameless betrayal of the workers' interests, threatens us, the miners of all countries, with such a very serious lowering of our conditions as could not have been anticipated before. It represents a true conspiracy of the capitalists of the world against our interests, a conspiracy which is being put into effect with the active assistance of the social patriots of all countries.

The First Victims.

Our Belgian comrades are the first victims of this murderous conspiracy.

The threat faces each one of us, no matter whether we work in Germany, France, England, Czecho-Slovagia, Poland, or any other country.

Therefore, comrades, miners of all countries, on to the aid of the Borinage miners. Support their struggle against the effects of the London agreement!

Demand the destruction of the conspiracy of the capitalists against the workers of all countries! Fight against the execution of Dawes plan.

Demand a stop to the reparations payments!

Long live the Borinage miners!

Down with Dawes' plan!

Long live the International struggle of the proletariat against capital.

International Propaganda Committee of the Revolutionary Miners.

WEAVERS URGED TO STAY AWAY FROM NEMASKET MILLS

MIDDLEBORO, Mass., Sept. 30. The weavers of the Nemasket Mills of Middleboro, Mass., are out on strike. They call on all textile workers to keep away from the town till the strike is settled.

All wage workers in the Namasket Mills are urged to attend a mass meeting of the strikers at the Owl Hall, Middleboro, on Friday night at 7 o'clock. A representative of the Amalgamated Textile Councils (National Office in Providence, R. I.) will address the meeting.

GROWING APPLES GOOD BUSINESS FOR MERCHANTS

Fruit Raisers Taking to the Trestles

By SYDNEY WARREN

(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

SUMMERLAND, B. C.—"An apple a day may keep the doctor away," but unless the fruit growers of the Okanagan valley get a better price for their fruit this year they stand a big chance of bringing in the bailiff.

Thieves in Abundance.

Travelling up and down this picturesque and most fertile valley of western Canada, I heard the same old story—high irrigation rates and taxes—thieving commission men and high-binding freight rates. Men are giving up their ranches after spending years in developing and improving them, unable to make a meager existence.

One man told me that this year he was giving up a 16 acre ranch that he had bought five years ago for $11,000 and had paid all but $2,000 of this amount. In Prairie valley near Summerland all but nine fruit growers in the valley were unable to pay their irrigation rates and the government took a first mortgage on this year's fruit returns to protect the water charges.

Apple Growers Soaked.

It costs about 60c a box to grow and pack apples and if the grower can get from 90c to $1 a box he considers himself lucky. Yet apples are sold to the consumer for from $1.75 to $2.75 a box and the middle man pockets from 100 per cent to 200 per cent velvet on each box of first grade apples. On second grade or fancy and C grade fruit the grower seldom gets more than the bare cost of picking and packing. This year despite the fact that the apple crop will be a third less than last year, I saw wagonload after wagonload of edible apples of lower grades hauled away to the dumps or fed to the pigs.

Economic pressure is gradually forcing the fruit growers of the Okanagan to adopt co-operative marketing that will eliminiate the big steal of the commission men and the railway companies on every box of apples.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—The offices of J. P. Morgan and company were closed today with the exception of those necessary to transaction of routine business, because of the death of a partner i nthe firm, Elliott C. Bacon.

LOCKED OUT CLEANERS GO BACK TO WORK

New Contract for Year Also Signed

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—The Guarantee Window Cleaning Company, thru which the Amalgamated Window Cleaning Employers' Association of this city inaugurated a test case for the purpose of breaking the Window Cleaners' Union, gave up the fight and took back its 23 locked-out employes. Not until the union's demands were granted and full recognition of of the union was won, however, did the men resume their work.

It will be remembered that on Aug. 21 this company issued an ultimatum to its 23 employes to take their choice between the union and their jobs. The men immediately left their work and since the ball was started rolling by the bosses they decided to gather some moss.

They put in a demand for higher wages, better working conditions and of course full recognition of their union.

Lockout a Test Case.

The men knew the fight was started in an effort on the part of the Employers' Association to make this a test case in the strength of the union. For five years the employers have been wanting to break the backbone of the union.

The regular yearly contract with all the employers comes to a close tomorrow and if the strike had continued it would have involved all the window cleaners in New York City. The settlement comes just in time to avert a complete tying up of the entire window cleaning trade.

There are still two shops holding out for the open shop: the American Window Cleaning Company, 61 Great Jones St., and the Gotham Window Cleaning Company, 32 East 2nd St. It is expected that these two remaining shops will soon fall in line with the rest of the employers and accept the union.

The demand for an increase in wages has been left to an arbitration committee which will function in conjunction with the Labor Board of New York.

Against Children on Stage.

SAN FRANCISCO.—The Northern California branch, child labor commission has two amendments to the state child labor law which would keep children under 14 from appearing on the stage except at benefits or in the legitimate drama. The legislation is directed at performances by pupils of dancing teachers, in which it is claimed the children receive no compensation and are compelled to take part in vulgar and degrading entertainments.

Strikers Brave Police.

WALTHAM, Mass., Sept. 30.—Police were again called to the gates of the Waltham Watch company, whose employes have been on strike for four months, in an ineffectual attempt to intimidate the strikers. The strikers have ben conducting mass picketing in spite of the police and have staged demonstrations in front of the gates in order to let workers looking for a job know there is a strike in progress.

Goslings Get Hurt.

SACRAMENTO, Cal. — "Torture rites" practised in initiating members into the Sacramento high school fraternities, resulting in serious injury to several students, have led the principal to substitute scholarship tests for all other initiation ordeals. The fraternities will not be abolished but transformed into "vocational guidance clubs," and no other associations will be allowed.

MILLIONS JOBLESS IN AMERICA ALL THE TIME SAYS NEW REPORT OF RUSSELL SAGE FOUNDATION

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 30.—This time it is not the Communists who are making the astounding declaration that millions of workers are idle all the time in the United States.

The findings of the Russell Sage Foundation in its recent investigation of this problem is worthy of considerable study.

"Averaging good and bad years, 10 to 12 per cent of all the workers in the United States (several millions of men and women) are out of work all the time."

The investigation, which extended into more than 70 cities in 31 states and Canada, has just been completed. The full report, covering more than 600 printed pages, will be issued shortly. The survey was conducted by a staff of trained field investigators, all of whom had previously been engaged in employment work, under the direction of Shelby M. Harrison, director of the foundation's department of surveys and exhibits.

A Thoro Investigation.

Practically every known means for bringing work and the worker together was studied. The "want ad" pages of newspapers, the fee-charging labor agencies, the free public employment office, the labor union's method of securing work for its members, the fraternal order's activities in this field, the practice of applying for work at the factory gate or the office door, all were investigated.

A special study was made of the situation in Ohio, Wisconsin, Massachusetts, and New York, where there has been the greatest development of organized public employment work. Separate studies were made also of the special problems of farm labor, migratory and casual workers, junior workers, handicapped workers, immigrants, Negro workers, and professional workers.

After citing the fact that each year from 1,000,000 to 6,000,000 persons are out of work for weeks and sometimes for months at a time, the introduction to the Foundation's forthcoming report says:

Revolt of Workers Inevitable.

"There is something which we are just beginning to recognize—a resentment on the part of the workers against an industrial situation in which such insecurity and uncertainty of employment are possible. It is not only unemployment but the fear of unemployment—the knowledge that any job is uncertain and insecure, subject to the fluctuations of economic change—which is responsible for much of our present industrial unrest."

This situation, the report will show, has been aggravated by the fact that the unskilled worker who has sought employment thru certain types of labor agencies in many cases has been subjected to such abuses as: paying a fee and then failing to get a job; being sent to distant points where no work or where unsatisfactory work exists but whence he could not return because of the expense involved; being employed thru collusions between the agent and employer and after a few days work being discharged to make way for a new workman while the agent and employer divided the fee.

(By Federated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—Most of the European powers having recognized the government of the military junta which has overthrown the constitutional republic in Chile, secretary Hughes maintains cordial relations with this new regime, without giving formal recognition. He does not state, as he did in the case of a possible future violation of the constitution of Nicaragua, that he will not recognize a government that does not stand precisely on the constitution. He watches and waits and makes no promises.

HALF NECESSARY FUND FOR REED COLONY RAISED

Grand Duke's Estate is Now Children's Home

SEATTLE—Half of the $5,000 needed by the John Reed children's colony at Kvalinsk in Russia to take over the 1,000-acre grand duke's estate with excellent farm buildings is now on its way to the workers' republic.

Rev. Sydney Strong of Seattle announces that he hopes to collect the rest from readers of this story and other sympathizers before another month is gone. The first $2,500 came thru the publication in the Communist press and elsewhere of Anna Louise Strong (Anise's) story of her visit to the amazingly plucky and resourceful colony for orphan children established in John Reed's name on the Volga. She is Strong's daughter.

A Model Farm.

"They are still hoping," Anise has written in her first story, "that from somewhere will come money to take the fine estate down river and to let in the scores of children who come drifting to them down the Volga, drawn by the news of the John Reed colony. And to make a really efficient farm, a model to the peasants, I am hoping too that they will get this. But meantime they have gone ahead, without waiting. There are hundreds of thousands of pioneer children like these in Russia."

Strong announces that he will forward to his daughter any checks that may be sent for the colony. His address is 508 Garfield St., Seattle. Money sent direct should go to Anna Louise Strong, Hotel Continental, Moscow, Russia.

Mother of Communes.

In her most recent letter to her father, Anise pictures the future for the John Reed colony: "So that our colony should become in the end, not a single commune, but a Mother of Communes, drawing in the homeless children and in decades to come also the peasant children, and training them thru several years in co-operative labor thru all the basic forms of work based on village life, and sending them out, those who choose, to their individual jobs in city or home farm and others in organized groups to take up land elsewhere in Russia."

Stir the Shops!

The very best place to carry on a working class campaign is in the shops and factories where the workers gather to earn their living. It is there that minds are open to the measures, parties and candidates that stand for concrete solutions of the problems of bread and butter facing the working class. It is in the shops that the workers will see most clearly, for example, the difference between Foster, the union organizer and fighter for the workers, and LaFollette, the lawyer and fighter for the middle class. Provoking Japan

"Japan Admits Dream of War on United States," says the Chicago Tribune in a six-column headline over the story of Adachi's outburst at Geneva.

War with the United States is not merely a dream of the Japanese ruling class, it is a nightmare. The clashing interests of American and Japanese imperialism make war between the two nations just about as certain as anything can be in this unstable world altho it is probable that neither the rulers of Japan or the United States want war right now.

Internal unrest affecting all sections of the population other than the aristocracy and the big capitalists has not yet reached such intensity that a war for the defense of the national honor appears to be the only way out for the Japanese rulers. That it will before long afford them only this alternative to surrender is known to every student of Japanese internal affairs.

Our rulers have given the Japanese governing classes the finest kind of an excuse for a war—an excuse that for millions of Japanese workers and peasants might easily disguise the real causes of an armed struggle with the United States. The Japanese exclusion act is being used to weld together the Japanese masses, not with the success that might be expected among a people whose reputation for national pride is of the highest, but with some success nevertheless.

If a desperate Japanese ruling class can be provoked into an attack upon the United States it will certainly be a rich dish for our warmongers.

We have held from the first moment that the agitation against Japan began that the handful of Japanese in the Pacific states and their skill in acquiring property was not the real basis of the campaign, but that the real reason for the hostility that culminated in the exclusion act was the rivalry of the imperialists of the two countries aroused by the desires of each for the unrestricted opportunity of robbing and oppressing the masses of the Orient, China particularly.

We are of the opinion that the present Japanese government will be swept out of existence by the outraged masses, that the Coreans will revolt and a government with strong leanings toward Soviet Russia will take its place in the event of war with the United States.

The workers of the United States then will be faced with the task of preventing their rulers making war upon the revolting Japanese workers and peasants and subjugating them as they did the Filipinos.

We must not be fooled by lies of the imperialist press. Not a single American worker has anything in the Orient that needs defense from Japan. If we take care of our own war-mongers the Japanese masses can be trusted to take care of theirs. The probability is that they will have their job almost completed before we start on ours, if we can judge by the rapidly increasing power of working class organization and the growing discontent in Japan.

The Agricultural Year

The latest agricultural year book just issued by the department of agriculture ought to find its way into the hands of every workingman and poor farmer. It is an official volume of evidence giving the lie to all the roseate contentions now made by the reactionary politicians about the conditions of the farming masses.

We draw the attention of our readers to such outstanding findings as these in the survey of what the farming masses are up against:

Within the last five years the value of farm property has declined more than twenty billion dollars. Within a single year more than a million farmers were driven from their homes by the severe economic depression and their inability to make ends meet. Since the close of 1922, 23% of the farmers of the wheat and corn states have been bankrupt. The proportion of tenant farmers who have been robbed of their property has been even greater.

Worse than that. The social degradation visited upon these farming masses who were dispossessed is a curse that no figures and no statistical reports can plumb adequately. Let us take the picture of this damnation of the farming population out of their months, out of the records prepared and supervised by secretary of agriculture Wallace, himself. He says:

"The losses have not been due to an inefficiency on the part of the farmers. Practically all of them were incurred by men who had been doing fairly well until they entered the period of drastic deflation. The nation has suffered in another way. The drastic economics which have become necessary on the farms have greatly reduced the standards of living. They have compelled overwork by the farmers, unaccustomed farm work by farm mothers, increased work by children kept out of schools—in too many cases the older children taken out for good."

This is the plight of the farmers. We wonder how many of the million who have been driven off the land are sharing in the wheat spurt. It is gruesome five years that the farmers have gone thru. That is where they are today. Dreary facts speak louder than dishonest election talk even from our Puritanic president.

Secretary of the Navy Wilbur, who has in a brief period of office distinguished himself rather auspiciously as an agent of the government that does too much talking at the wrong time, is again coming to the fore. This time the unrestrained secretary is not attacking the Japanese or the Negroes. Mr. Wilbur is now a censor of the fitness of a certain play before New York audiences.

"What Price Glory" is a play that has aroused considerable approval among many New York workers because it tells the truth about the life and sufferings of the marines. The play sheds a light on the realities of war which all too many workers in the metropolis know from their own costly experience to be true.

This has brought a storm of protest from the arch-demagogic Tammany liskspittle, who is now the mayor of the greatest city in the land, John F. Hylan. The shadow of the once notoriously corrupt boss, Charles F. Murphy, has appointed a committee of citizens, leading ones of course, like admirals, police commissioners, and major-generals, to decide on the fitness of the play for public consumption. Then, not to be outdone in the concern for the welfare of the morality of the masses, the secretary fo the navy breaks into print along the same Puritanic lines.

Mr. Wilbur has had plenty of experience in preventing the working masses from going "wrong," that is from doing anything against the interests of the employing class. Mr. Wilbur is to a no small extent responsible for the fact that Tom Mooney is in jail today. The same "safety-seeking" secretary of the navy is even threatening to invoke the federal statutes against the players. Mr. Wilbur's modesty is overcome by the fact that the play is "full of gutter language" which, he would have us believe, is no longer to be found in the navy. Then, how can one associate the uniform of the United States navy with vulgarity! The heavens protest! And what will the Haitians, the Nicaraguans, the Mexicans, and the Dominicans say about such misrepresentation of the gentle marines who have treated them so kindly in their civilizing expeditions?

Here is where the real difficulty lies. Here is why the navy officials who are sworn to defend the so-called sacred rights of freedom of opinion, speech, press, and assembly guaranteed by the constitution are the first ones to serve the employers in denying these much-vaunted rights to the masses. The moral outburst on the part of Mr. Wilbur and the insignificant Hylan is only a screen. It is not the vulgarity but the truthful picture of war that the play in question presents which is causing the concern of our employing class hooligans in and out of uniform.

A censorship in which more than one government must be co-operating has prevented any news of the progress of the revolt of the Bulgarian masses reaching America for the last ten days. Had the revolt been suppressed, it is reasonable to suppose that the welcome story would have been cabled to every reactionary sheet in the world. No news is therefore good news for the workers of other nations who sympathize with the Bulgarian workers and peasants in their struggle against the bloody Zankov government.

That the Communist party of Bulgaria is playing a leading role in the uprising is certain because more than six weeks ago it issued a manifesto to the workers of the world telling of the crimes of the Bulgarian rulers, the numberless and indescribable outrages inflicted upon the workers and peasants since the fall of the Stamboulisky government and the failure of the revolt that followed it. The manifesto stated that all elements of the working and farming masses were combining against the Zankov regime and that its overthrow was expected.

Alexandrov, the leader of the Macedonian faction that backed the Zankov government, has been assassinated and a portion of his forces have joined the revolutionists since the manifesto of the Bulgarian Communist party was issued. The Macedonians have usually held the balance of power in Bulgaria and their defection probably means the downfall of the Zankov government.

In the absence of news from Bulgaria we can only hope that our analysis is correct and that the Bulgarian masses have won their struggle for freedom and under the leadership of the Communist party are at last on the way to a Soviet republic. In this event the eulogies that the capitalist press will print of the departed Zankov government will be the best proof that the social revolution is advancing in the Balkans.

Rail labor chiefs have warned MacAdoo that if he supports Davis, his popularity among the rail workers will go up in smoke like his candidacy for the presidency. They might promise him, in return for his neutrality, the secretaryship of the Interior in the LaFollette cabinet. Mac would locate any stray oil wells that Fall missed.

The Political Muddle in Colorado

By MAX SHACHTMAN.

OF the political messes into which the workers have been dragged this year, the one now existing in Colorado threatens to be a serious contender for first place. The situation there is a good wafax of the confusion existing in the politics of the organized workers of America following on the endorsement everywhere of the sleight-of-hand artist from Wisconsin, LaFollette.

The Colorado State Federation of Labor has not only given its endorsement to LaFollette and Wheeler, but also to Alva B. Adams, junior senator, for re-election to the Millionaire's Club. Adams, it will be recalled, was appointed by Governor William Sweet to fill the term left vacant by the death of Nicholson. Sweet, who cashes in on a nice bit of lucre annually as a bond broker, is supporting John W. Davis, democratic candidate for the presidency. And Sweet has the endorsement of the American Federation of Labor in Colorado.

Now! The gentleman who has been put in charge of the Colorado campaign of LaFollette is John R. Lawson. Lawson was once a fighter. He headed District 15 of the United Mine Workers of America, and was the leader of one of the most glorious strikes in the history of the American working class, the Ludlow strike. As a result of that walk-out, with its attendant, now infamous massacre, Lawson was framed up by the Colorado Fuel and Iron Co., run by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., the teacher of Sunday schools, and the feudal lord of the state, and was sentenced to a life term of imprisonment for his activity. The case was, however, appealed to a higher court, the decision reversed and the entire affair was dropped. As soon as Lawson was freed from jail, he initiated and led a secessionist movement out of the United Mine Workers because, he maintained—and perhaps correctly—that the international officials of the union has refused to give the strike the support it needed and deserved. For this, he was expelled by the international from the U. M. W. of A.

For some time, the name of John R. Lawson was not heard until he finally turned up as an employe of none other than the Colorado Fuel and Iron Co., of the same Rockefeller, that is, whom he had previously fought and who had been instrumental in framing him! In view of his new job, suspicion was aroused at his previous actions, but today they are all silenced. He is state director of the LaFollette campaign and, like Brutus, he is an honorable man.

But the same gang that is backing LaFollette is also backing Sweet and his appointee who is now running for senator, Alva B. Adams. To analyze Adams a bit will give an insight into the type of a labor supporter that Sweet is.

Adams—Anti-Labor Lawyer.

Sweet appointed Adams to fill the term left vacant by Nicholson at the time that the shopmen employed on the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe railroad were still locked out. Sweet had only a short time before been elected to the governorship with the support of the American Federation of Labor's Non-Partisan Political Committee. His first act of generosity and appreciation to labor was the appointment of the lawyer of the Santa Fe, one of the worst labor hating corporations in the country, to the United States senate. As you suspected, dear reader, this lawyer was none other but Alva B. Adams!

On the board of directors of the Santa Fe can be found, among others, a gentleman by the name of John W. Davis, who happens to have been nominated by the democratic party to run for president. Davis only withdrew from his directorate after his nomination, holding on to this Morgan job with all energy up to the very last minute. Other directors on this road are such men as Edward J. Berwind, of the notorious anti-labor union mines in Pennsylvania; Ogden L. Mills, one of the biggest stockholders in the N. Y. Central Railroad; W. B. Storey and W. E. Brown, of the famous Brown Brothers in Philadelphia, who engineered that little imperialist manouver in the Caribbean a few years ago.

It is for this railroad that Alva B. Adams, now supported by organized labor in Colorado, was the attorney.

In case there should be any doubt as to the policy of the Santa Fe, it is sufficient to recall the railway strike of 1922, when this road spread the lie about the abandonment of passengers on the "desert" at Needles, California. This canard was later exploded by the district passenger agent, E. H. Dallas, and by Albert E. Coyle, editor of the Locomotive Engineers' Journal. Coyle is now also supporting LaFollette!

A Silent Adam.

Adams was the attorney for the Santa Fe at the time the road was carrying on its bitter struggle against the workers, and he uttered not a single word in support of the strikers. Today he gets the support of the labor movement there.

Aside from the Adams buncombe that is being spread by the labor fakers in the state, there is another element of confusion. The political field is cluttered up by a would-be "progressive party," which put up a slate of presidential electors for LaFollette and Wheeler in the hope of attracting votes, but was later repudiated by Frank A. Harrison, LaFollette's regional director. It is composed of disgruntled elements who failed to receive an opportunity to feed at the Davis pork barrel.

And on top of it all comes the farcical Farmer-Labor party, which is neither farmer nor labor, and which will probably have a state ticket in the field this fall. For the last few years a few individuals have been paid by the republican party to navigate this decoy in order to draw some votes away from the democrats.

A Political Chinese Puzzle.

What a muddle! Labor endorses LaFollette, whose campaign committee is headed by a traitor to labor; also Adams; Adams gets the O. K. of Sweet, who in turn supports Davis; Adams was attorney for the reactionary corporation on which Davis was director. Then again: Labor endorses Wheeler, who is running with LaFollette; Wheeler supports Walsh for senator from Montana, altho Walsh has been condemned by the Montana State Federation of Labor as an enemy of the workers; Walsh supports Davis; Davis gets the aid of Adams who is endorsed by labor organizations that are backing the opponent of Davis, LaFollette.

No, this is not a Chinese puzzle. It is only an example of the maze into which labor has been drawn by its failure to follow a policy of independent political action.

The only party in Colorado that takes a clear stand on questions affecting the workers on all fields of life, is the Workers Party.

When the workers of Colorado decide as to where they shall throw their support in the coming election it is well to remember the terrible result of the futile policy of "rewarding friends and punishing enemies." It is well to recall that the horrible Ludlow massacre, when the tools at John D. Rockefeller, Jr., murdered workers, their wives and children, occured under the administration composed of such "friends of labor" as the following, elected in 1912, when the Colorado workers achieved their great "political victory." Here is the list:

Governor—Elias Ammons, Democrat, Farmers' Union.

Lieutenant Governor — Benjamin Montgomery, Democrat, Farmers' Union.

Secretary of State — James B. Pearce, Democrat, R. R. Telegraphers.

Superintendent Public Instruction—Mary C. Bradford, Democrat, Women's Trade Union League.

Congressman—Edward B. Keating Democrat, Typographical Union.

State Senators—Joseph Berry, Democrat, Locomotive Engineers; J. E. Gorman, Democrat, Typographical Union; S. S. Bellesfield, Democrat, Typographical Union; Ralph Tucker, Republican, Trainmen's Union; William Matz, Democrat, Conductors' Union; John Cross, Democrat, Farmers' Union; John I. Tierney, Democrat, Typographical Union; Matt Lynes, Republican, Locomotive Engineers; John Hurd, Democrat, United Mine Workers.

House of Representatives—John Williams, Democrat, Bookbinders; Phil McCarthy, Democrat, Stationary Engineers; William R. Elmore, Democrat, Machinists; Charles J. Leftwich, Democrat, Carpenters; Peter Turnbull, Democrat, Metal Workers; Jack Slattery, Democrat, Hotel and Restaurant Workers' Union; John T. Kavanaugh, Democrat, Street Car men's Union; William Daley, Democrat, Typographical Union; A. C. Newton, Republican, Typographical Union; J. McDonald, Machinists' Helpers.

They served in office from January 1913 to January 1915. The Ludlow massacre occured on April 20, 1914. It should be an unforgettable lesson.

TWO TIMELY BOOKS :: By Jay Lovestone

American Agriculture and The European Market, by Edwin G. Nourse.
Russian Debts and Russian Reconstruction, by Leo Pasvolsky and Harold G. Moulton.
Published by McGraw Hill Book Co., 370 Seventh Avenue, N. Y. C. Price, $2.50.

HERE we have two timely volumes issued by the Institute of Economics. The first volume was written by the generally recognized foremost agricultural economist in the country. Not many worth while books on the development of American agriculture have been prepared in recent years, despite the fact that there has, for some time, been an abundance of material at hand. "American Agriculture and the European Market," is a pleasant exception to the general, conventional literature on the state and development of rural economy in the United States.

Dr. Nourse deals with the development of American agriculture from the pre-Civil War days to the present moment. The early periods are treated briefly and the more modern are recorded the more thoro treatment. The analysis of the effect of the world war on American agriculture is the most complete we have seen. Nor must one accept all the interpretations and the specific forms of the reasons given by the author to recognize the value of his analysis of the course and effects of the boom and depression of 1919-1923.

Especially timely and worth while are the concluding chapters dealing with "The Problem of 1924 and After." A critical examination of the valuable data massed in these chapters will do a good deal towards helping one see thru the fraud of the present farm prosperity that being sold so widely. Also, in the light of the fictitious and exaggerated claims made for the "benefits" of Soviet Republics, it is interesting to note that the author concludes, upon the basis of unimpeachable evidence that "agriculturl exports may be expected to drop still further in 1924 and thereafter. For American agriculture to plan her future building on the foundation of an expected revival and growth of the European market would, therefore, mean building on quicksand."

On the whole, "Agriculture and the European Market" is a very readable volume containing invaluable material on the biggest industry of the country and dealing in a scientific manner with one of the most important problems facing the working and farming masses.

Perhaps in no country in the world is there such an abundance of ignorance about the economic potentalities and conditions of Soviet Russia as there is in the United States. This little book, by Pasvolsky and Moulton, should prove of help in dispelling some of this dangerous ignorance. Because the volume is primarily a study of fiscal and foreign trade questions it deals with the most vital points involved in the development of Soviet Russia's international relations. This is true despite the fact that the authors set out to deal only with the problems of public finance and not at all with the present economic conditions and diplomatic status of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

This book does not deal with the prevailing economic condition of Soviet Russia. It limits itself to the official pre-war facts of Russia's foreign debt, the effects of the imperialist war on Russia's international status in the capitalist realm of commerce and industry, Russia's pre-war export and import capacities, her budgetary trend, and her financial standing.

The author's discussion of the role of the United States in Soviet Russian reconstruction is interesting. The crux of their attitude is most instructive, as can be seen from the following: "American exports of wheat to the continent of Europe were on the wane before the war. Profound economic dislocations produced by the war and its aftermath temporarily gave a great stimulus to American wheat and other agricultural exports, but the tide is already ebbing. Looking forward, exports of American wheat to the continent of Europe will be of dwindling importance, even if Russian wheat production does not regain its former position. . ."

Then discussing the possible effects of Soviet Russian competition on certain branches of American agriculture, the writers show that one can more than easily "set off certain general advantages that would be derived from a recovery of Russia. The revival of production and commerce in Central and Western Europe which would attend the restoration of sound conditions within Russia and the re-opening of her trade relations with the rest of Europe would be reflected in expanding trade in manufactured products between the United States and Europe generally, and it would also doubtless improve our European markets for such agricultural commodities as tobacco and cotton."

This point knocks into a cocked hat the argument so often used by the enemies of Soviet recognition in their attempting to mislead the workers and farmers as to the true effects the restoration of normal relations with the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics would have on their economic conditions.

The book also has a valuable appendix containing authentic information about private investments in prewar Russia, the text of the Soviet decree on the annulment of the czarist debts, the Soviet's reply to the Genoa Conference Memorandum, the official position of the United States government towards Soviet Russia and other important official documents.

Dawes' plan sentences Germany—its working and farming masses—to pay the international capitalist imperialists an unnamed staggering sum for an unnamed period of years.

In the plainest words spoken in the diction of Wall Street, a first-mortgage will be placed on Germany's railways, transportation system, sugar tobacco; her customs will be regulated and determined as has been done in San Domingo and Nicaragua; her taxation system will be arbitrarily fixed to yield the greatest loot in the name of reparations; her budget and currency will be manhandled with thments, such a gigantic tribute, from one country to others, over and above the normal industrial and commercial operations, been demanded. The same end in view; and the hours of labor and cost of living will be driven upward and the conditions of employment, standards of living, and wages downward so as to assure the allied impesialists, led by the American group, the maximum tribute—ranging annually from a billion to two-and-a-half billion gold marks.

The first lien laid on the industries and resources of Germany, under the guise of stabilizing her currency and safeguarding the initial loan of two hundred million dollars, is only a prelude to the complete program of the Yankee imperialists. The hundred million dollars flotation allotted to the United States is only a drop in the bucket of what the American capitalists are planning to put into private industrial investments. In this light it is easy to understand why the German Finance Minister Luther said on Sept. 1, 1924 of the first, the reparations loan: "This loan is the safest investment in the world, because it has priority on all reparations payments and is backed by the whole German national wealth controlled by an American."

But this turning of Germany into an American sweatshop, into a vassal colony of Yankee imperialism, is only the first step in the Balkanization of Europe, in the turning of Europe into a pawn in the hands of America's financial and industrial overlords. The role of General Dawes follows closely upon the role of General Pershing in the evolution of Wall Street's receivership of Europe. It was American military prowess, under the leadership of General John J. Pershing, that firmly set the first foot of the conqueror of Europe on the continent, that made possible the allies' crushing of Germany and the dictation of the Versailles pact. Today, it is American economic prowess, under the leadership of the House of Morgan, whose tool Dawes is, that is firmly setting the second foot of the American capitalist conqueror on the continent of Europe. In 1918 the German Junker-capitalist clique surrendered to the overwhelming forces of American militarism camouflaged by the fourteen points of peace. In 1924 the whole European employing class has yielded to the supremacy of American capitalist imperialism openly represented in the capitals of Europe by the fourteen leading Wall Street bankers.

Doomed to Failure.

And just as Persing and the Versailles Treaty could not restore Europe and world capitalism to its prewar health, so will Dawes and his London pact fail. The latest plan to save capitalism thru the establishment of the world hegemony of American imperialism, reeks with too many contradictions. For one thing the Dawes plan does not answer the paramount question: In what form of goods is Germany to pay the reparations? What class of goods can the allied capitalists accept as reparations without bringing about serious derangement in their own and the rest of the capitalist world's industries?

This contradiction is insoluble because it is inherent in the very system of capitalism. Interesting comment on this point is to be found in the statement of Mr. Hartley Withers, the London correspondent of Barron's Weekly in its issue of Aug. 11, 1924. We read this frank confession: "So that the real problem that we all wanted the Dawes committee to solve was evaded. It told us not what Germany could pay her creditors, but how many marks a year could be collected, for them to convert, if they could, into their own currencies. And this evasion of the core of the problem, seems to have been largely unnoticed by the general public in the creditor countries, which assumes that it is going to receive what the Dawes report tells it can be collected."

More than that. The maximum reparations that the French can get will be less than what they will have to pay to the capitalists of Great Britain and the United States in meeting their debts.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

J. H. THOMAS, minister for the Colonies, in His Majesty's British socialist government, recently visited South Africa. At a gathering of the Basuto nation, which was attended by the Earl of Athlone, Princess Alice, Lady May Cambridge and General Hertzog, the prime minister of South Africa, J. H. Thomas, informed the natives how anxious the king was for their welfare. "The King's son," declared the British "labor" minister, "will pay you a visit next year." He did not say that at that particular moment he was keeping United States bootleggers busy as they had never been before.

If the prince is not too drunk, no doubt he will pay a visit to South Africa next year, provided a Volstead law is not passed there in the meantime. J. H. Thomas told the Basutos that he would convey their expressions of loyalty to His Majesty, and assured them that he himself would never forget their interests and welfare. The Basutos were advised by Thomas to take the advice of the High Commissioner and they would not go wrong. Faithful servant of royalty! And the "republican" Hertzog took it all in.

How many of our readers ever heard of King Feisul of Iraq? Yet he has a history. It was during the days that self-determination stalked abroad in the land and the prophet Woodrow stirred the multitudes exceedingly with strange words about the rights of small nations and the perfidy of divers autocrats, chief among them being Kaiser Wilhelm—it was in those days that the star of Feisul began to dawn. It happened that the Iraq is short on vowel sounds it is long on oil; so the British government which exudes humanitarianism wherever the oil gushes, sent a gentleman by the name of Sir Percy Cox.

BIG COMMUNIST UNDERCURRENT IN WISCONSIN

Strength Shown in Big Industrial Centers

By MANUEL GOMEZ.

WISCONSIN is living up to the Wisconsin tradition. A six-weeks' survey of the progress of the present campaign indicates conclusively that the voters of the much-badgered "badger state" will have nothing to do with the "100 per cent American reactionism" peddled so vociferously by the Coolidge-Dawes and Davis-Bryan combinations, representing the two old parties.

The canvas shows William Z. Foster, Communist candidate, to be very strong in the industrial centers, such as Milwaukee and Superior, while thruout the state one finds an unexpected undercurrent of Foster sentiment. LaFollette will, of course, carry Wisconsin by a substantial majority.

Davis Vote Is Insignificant.

Interestingly enough, the LaFollette vote is coming largely from non-radical sources, notably from those elements who who supported Blaine for governor in the primaries, and who forced his nomination. The Davis vote will be too insignificant to be worth counting.

In the gubernatorial contest, it looks like a walkaway for Blaine, running on the LaFollette ticket. The socialists have their own candidate, Quick,

VETERAN OF THE CLASS STRUGGLE

SEVERI ALANNE, candidate for governor of Wisconsin on the Workers Party ticket, has been aligned with the struggles of the working class for liberation from the yoke of capitalism both in America and abroad, for many years. Alanne joined the social-democratic party of Finland in 1905, and after the suppression of a premature revolt by the czar of Russia in 1906, Alanne took over the printing of a secret printing plant in Helsingfors to disseminate working class propaganda. The police arrested Alanne in 1907 for this activity, but he escaped to America.

SEVERI ALANNE
Communist Candidate for Governor of Wisconsin.

Alanne then became the editor of the first Finnish Socialist newspaper in Canada, published at Port Arthur, which later became a daily newspaper. In February, 1908, Alanne was elected associate editor of Tyomies, then published at Hancock, Mich. After studying at the University of Michigan, Alanne became research chemist for the Viscol Company of Cambridge, Mass., but soon resigned, in 1913, to take over the literature department of Tyomies.

Comrade Alanne was again imprisoned in 1913 because the Tyomies exposed the brutal murder of 80 children in the Calumet fire. He then worked on a Finnish-English dictionary of almost 1,000 pages, which was published by Tyomies to aid the Finnish workers to learn English.

Alanne has spent much time studying the co-operative movement among the workers, having spent last winter in Finland, connected with the Central Organization of the Progressive Co-operative Societies.

An Open Letter to the Socialist Party Members

Open Letter to the Socialist Party Membership.

TO you, the members and supporters of the socialist party of the state of Wisconsin, who have always in the past opposed any combination with the so-called LaFollette progressives and adhered to the socialist position, we are addressing this letter. We feel convinced that you are not willing to become part of the tail end of the old capitalist parties.

What Are the Forces in This Election Campaign?

Wall Street is in undisputed control of the republican and democratic parties and their presidential candidates, the strike-breaker Coolidge and the Morgan-Rockefeller lawyer Davis. Both parties express the American capitalist dictatorship. Another presidential candidate, Robert M. LaFollette, represents no party but he has made himself the bold champion of the small bankers and independent manufacturers who are seeking greater power and profits for themselves and are trying to use the workers and farmers to attain that end. All appeal to the working class vote, while none represents the workers.

The working class, however, is militantly represented in this campaign thru the Workers (Communist) Party of America and its presidential candidate, William Z. Foster. The Workers Party aims to organize the American proletariat for independent political class action. It aims to mobilize and prepare the workers thru a militant struggle for their immediate class needs for the overthrow of the capitalist system. It proposes in place of the capitalist dictatorship a working class government.

What is the Stand of the Corrupt Leaders of the Socialist Party of Wisconsin?

The most outrageous betrayal ever perpetrated against the interests of the American working class is now being completed by the socialist party politicians. In exchange for the maintenance of their personal political jobs they are attempting to sell the votes and the support of the rank and file workers to the so-called LaFollette progressives, the champions of small capitalism for whom Mr. Victor L. Berger said speaking in congress May 27 this year:

" . . . This also makes it very plain that the common people—the farmers, the workers, the small business man—can expect no relief whatsoever as long as the progressive movement is the tail end of either of the capitalist parties and receives its final inspiration and dictation from 'big business.'

" . . . I must admit that their position is certainly inconsistent—and even politically dishonest—so long as they remain in the capitalist parties."

What has changed since then? LaFollette and his "progressives," masquerading as independents, still remain in the old capitalist parties. Furthermore, thruout the country they have endorsed standpat republican and democratic candidates in this election.

Instead of militant fight against the Wall Street parties and their filthy oil politics; instead of militant struggle against exploitation by capitalism and its corrupt system of government the Wisconsin workers and farmers are now offered the alternative of trailing along with a group masquerading under another name but still receiving its final inspiration and dictation from big business.

What Is the Socialist Position?

Socialism—the socialism of Marx and Engels—unequivocally declares for the overthrow of capitalism and the establishment of the socialist commonwealth. This, however, the socialist party leaders have forgtten long ago, if it ever meant anything to them. They are now on a par with the Scheideman, Ebert and Noske traitors who sold out the German workers to the fascist dictatorship and are trying to put over on them the infamous Dawes plan. The German workers are, therefore, leaving the socialist party in disgust.

The socialism of Marx, Engels and Lenin pledges relentless struggle against the growing capitalist exploitation, and for the betterment of the conditions of the workers. This the Wisconsin socialist party leaders have abandoned in favor of their own personal gains. They have definitely become the tail end of the old capitalist parties and are endeavoring to put this treachery over on their membership.

LaFollette Administration Brings Profits to Capitalists and "Open Shop" Conditions to Workers.

Already in 1912 LaFollette could point with pride to his achievement for the capitalist class. His campaign bible, entitled "Progressive Wisconsin," described the results of the regulation affected by his administration on the business of public utilities in the following manner:

"There has not been a railroad company, important or minor, in the state that has not had an increase of profits, both gross and net, and this increase has been greater than that which the mere natural growth of the state would account for."

The profits of the railroads have continued to increase. Their exploitation and oppression of the workers has gone on apace until reaching the following condition described in a special resolution adopted by the State Federation of Labor Convention in 1923:

"The railroad owners have set out to wreck the shop crafts unions by organizing scab unions of so-called company associations of employes, and are endeavoring to compel all shop craft workers to join these scab unions, by threatening discharge and visiting other punishment upon the workers for failing to join these scab unions."

Low Wages, Long Hours, Lot of Wisconsin Toilers.

The average weekly wages of the workers, according to the June report of the Wisconsin State Industrial Commission, is only $23.93. Thus the state ranks twenty-ninth in the United States in average weekly wages paid to working men. Only 21.2 per cent of all workers engaged in the manufacturing industries have a

LABOR CARRIES COMMUNIST FIGHT TO MILWAUKEE, WIS., NOTORIOUS 'OPEN SHOP' CITY

By JOSEPH MANLEY.
(Campaign Manager, Workers Party.)

William Z. Foster, Workers Party candidate for president, tore the mask off Wisconsin "socialism" and "progressivism," at the opening meeting of the Communist election campaign held in Milwaukee on August 24th. Now his running mate, Benjamin Gitlow, will address the second great meeting of the campaign in Wisconsin at Milwaukee, Sunday afternoon, October 5th.

Those in the labor movement are familiar with the fact that Weyerhauser and Gary have both largely dictated the industrial and political policies of Wisconsin.

Many trade union organizers can testify that in this "model commonwealth" the rule of the lumber trusts, and the steel trusts, are supreme. In trade union circles Milwaukee itself is synonymous with the open shop.

Big Factories Non-Union.

The leather trust and the shoe factories of Milwaukee are completely non-union. The machinery trusts, represented especially by Allis-Chalmers and Case, are completely non-union. The soap trust, represented especially by the Palmolive Company is completely non-union, and the conditions under which it works its girl employees are unbearable. The steel trusts, represented especially by the Illinois Steel company is completely non-union. The rubber trusts represented by the Racine Rubber company is completely non-union. The automobile trust, represented by the Nash Motor company is completely non-union. These trusts, with others, have the workers of Wisconsin in a stranglehold, all of them ruthlessly suppress and destroy by any manner of means every single attempt made by their employees to organize. Many of them make extensive use of the industrial spy system. To the employees of these trusts, political liberty is a joke.

Only Building Trades Organized.

The only industry in Wisconsin which has a considerable number of its workers organized is that of the building trades. And in this respect Milwaukee has the lowest percentage of organized building trades workers of any city of its size in America. Some of the largest building operations in Wisconsin have been erected by scabs, protected by gunmen.

Milwaukee is one of the few cities in the country which houses an office of Walter Drew, the notorious open shop advocate, financed by the steel trust.

Walter Drew, for 25 years, has fought the building trades union, especially the structural iron workers. He maintains a large force of scab iron workers in Wisconsin. The big bridge companies in the environs of Milwaukee follow Drew's open shop policy. The result being that a much smaller percentage of structural steel is erected in Wisconsin by union men than in Pennsylvania, the home of the steel trust itself. The rule of this industrial oligarchy in Wisconsin is thinly disguised by the "progressive" veneer of Robert M. LaFollette's movement.

At the coming meeting in Milwaukee, Gitlow will say, "LaFollette's call for honesty and decency in government is an old slogan. Every time republicans are in office, democrats shout 'crooks.' Every time democrats are in office, republicans shout 'crooks.' LaFollette has simply repeated these old tactics and shouts 'crooks' in both directions.

No Honest Capitalist Rule.

"With social conditions in the United States remaining as they are, there cannot be an honest government. And were the election of a liberal LaFollette government possible," it would have its own Teapot Dome and other scandals."

The solution of the many problems confronting the people of the United States lies in the election of the candidates of the Workers Party, the official American branch of the Third Communist International on a platform of abolition of the capitalistic system and reorganization of the United States into a Soviet Republic, modeled after that of Soviet Russia.

COMMUNIST CANDIDATE IN WISCONSIN ACTIVE IN ALL LABOR'S STRUGGLES

Charles Kuzdas, Workers' Party candidate for lieutenant governor, and running mate of Severi Alanne, Workers' Party standard bearer for governor, has long been identified with the organized trade union movement. Kuzdas is a painter by trade, and is a delegate to the Milwaukee Federated Trades Council from the painters' union of which he is a member.

The Workers' Party candidates, wherever they are employed at organized trades, are members in good standing of the organized labor movement. Not only is Kuzdas a member of the painters' union, but on all occasions he has raised his voice for rank and file measures of organization of the unorganized workers and amalgamation of the craft unions into industrial unions.

Cheap Labor Kills Workman.

ST. PAUL.—Refusal of the Fegles Construction Co. to employ competent union labor on the Robert street bridge job in St. Paul has cost the life of a workman and other fatalities are feared. An inexperienced construction worker let a heavy plank fall on the head of one of his mates, knocking him in the river and killing him. Other workers have been endangered by an incompetent but cheap engineer put in charge of the hoisting engine of a pile driver. Protests caused the hiring of an experienced man.

GITLOW SPEAKS TO BIG MEET IN MUSKEGON, MICH.

Flays Silent Cal; Crowd Roars Approval

By JOSEPH MANLEY
Campaign Manager, Workers Party.

Benjamin Gitlow, vice-presidential candidate of the Workers Party, addressed a large and enthusiastic campaign meeting at Muskegon, Michigan. A big audience at a Communist campaign meeting in a city of the size and type of Muskegon is truly remarkable, and indicates the drift of the workers in the large industries towards revolutionary and Communist ideas.

Outlying centers like Muskegon were formerly bulwarks of reaction. Muskegon is one of those typical Main Street towns, which the trusts have converted into a modern capitalist hell. Large factories were built in Muskegon in order to escape the militant and discontented labor of the big cities.

Today the workers of Muskegon are thoroly proletarianized, and reduced to a condition of unspeakable misery. One third of them are unemployed; a majority of those employed are working part time. Forty cents per hour is considered high wages. Ten hours constitutes a minimum days work.

Well Organized Meeting.

In this Michigan outpost of manufacturing capital Comrade Gitlow made a memorable communist address. His meeting was well organized and arranged, for which the comrades in Muskegon deserve credit. The chairman of the meeting was Comrade C. Thorsen. Foster and Gitlow campaign posters were posted up all over town, alongside of posters advertising the Ku Klux Klan. Hundreds of tickets, charging twenty-five cents admission to the Gitlow meeting, were sold.

The large audience which assembled to hear Gitlow listened in rapt attention to his onslaughton the capitalist candidates. Gitlow said: "A severe unemployment crisis faces the working class of America already, even before the approach of winter. Thousands are unemployed, in the large cities and the textile and mining industries of the country. These unemployment crises are but the normal manifestation of capitalist society. Their only remedy is the abolition of capitalism.

"The Workers Party advocates immediate unemployment relief. Unemployed wages to be paid by industry and the government." Gitlow aroused great enthusiasm by his denunciation of Coolidge and Davis. His exposure of the LaFollette movement, and its menace to the working class was applauded eagerly. "LaFollette is a republican lawyer for forty-five years and now he stands for the capitalist system—and its product, Wall street.

For Cheap Labor.

"The same capitalists and their system that came to Muskegon looking for cheap labor are now going to Germany to further enslave the German working class, with the Dawes plan. This plan and its consequent operation with American capitalist gold will in conjunction with the slavish conditions to which the German working class has been reduced will produce commodities at a much cheaper rate than they can be produced in America. This will lead to still greater American unemployment. Eventually, as a result, the operation of the Dawes plan and the struggle of American capitalists for supremacy in world markets, will lead to war.

Fight For Workers.

"The Communist parties of Germany and of Europe are the only parties that fight for the working class against unemployment, against capitalist wars, and against the misery and exploitation of the workers.

"The solution of the many problems confronting the workers of the United States lies in the election of the candidates of the Workers Party, the official American branch of the Third Communist International, on a platform of abolition of the capitalist system and reorganization of the United States government into a Soviet Republic, modeled after that of Russia."

Count With Fancy Name Takes Count In Francisco Court

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 2.—"Count" Alexander Dudley de Beaufort, asserted Belgian nobleman, today began serving a sentence of four months in the county jail imposed in federal court for impersonating an American army officer.

De Beaufort, who is said to be a former husband of Irma Kilgallen, Chicago actress, pleaded guilty to the charge following, it is said, receipt of information that the department of justice was prepared to produce a record of his activities for the past seven years.

NEGRO WOMEN IN INFAMOUS PRISON GET EMANCIPATION DAY PRIVILEGES

AUBURN, N. Y., Oct. 2.—Two hundred Negro women incarcerated in the Auburn State Prison here, where many Communists have been incarcerated, were permitted as a special dispensation to celebrate Emancipation Day, which occurs on Nov. 1. Permission has also been granted to get a regular meal on that day, and discard the prison fare for one day, if the Negro women buy the food themselves.

These women are destitute, however, and they have communicated with the DAILY WORKER, asking aid in the raising of funds. All funds must be sent to Warden El. S. Jennings, 135 State Street, Auburn, for the "Emancipation Committee."

CANNON EXPOSES TAMMANY SMITH AS LABOR FOE

Helped to Put Over Morgan's Man Davis

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y., Oct. 2.—James P. Cannon, Workers Party candidate for governor, in an interview today characterizes Al Smith, the democratic candidate for governor, as "enemy of the workers of New York State." Cannon is to be the principal speaker at mass meetings to be held on Friday, Oct. 3 at Queens County Labor Lyceum, 785 Forest Ave., Brooklyn and on Saturday, Oct. 4, at Oddfellows' Hall, 72 North Broadway, Yonkers.

The Workers' Enemy.

"Alfred E. Smith, my democratic opponent for governor is not now and never has been a real friend of labor. By his acts and utterances, he has proven himself to be an enemy of the workers of New York state. It was Al Smith who withdrew his name as a candidate for the presidency in favor of John W. Davis, the attorney of J. P. Morgan and the Standard Oil Co.

"It is only thru Smith's powerful support that Davis was finally nominated by the democratic convention. Smith is therefore responsible to the workers of this state for the selection of a man for the presidential nomination who has been engaged repeatedly by the powerful interests to fight the workers in the courts as he did in the Coronado case against the United Mine Workers of America.

Smith a Militarist.

"Smith is the man who indorsed and carried out Coolidge's order for a militarist demonstration on Mobilization Day. Smith is the governor of one of the states which still retains on its statute books—a criminal syndicalist law. He must shoulder the responsibility for the scrapping of the welfare program which he pledged himself to carry.

"What does this 'friend of labor' say about unemployment, which is becoming more and more of a pressing problem? What does he say about cutting down the state constabulary which is used against the workers in strikes? Nothing. By juggling a few progressive phrases, Smith has obtained for himself a reputation of being a friend of labor, but actually he is for business, as are all the democratic candidates and he is for the same reason opposed to the workers."

The young folks of New York City are preparing to hear Oliver Carlson on Monday evening, Oct. 6 at Stuyvesant Casino, Second Ave. and 9th St. Carlson who has been traveling thru Europe and Soviet Russia for the last 20 months will tell of conditions in the countries he visited.

Labor Candidate Who Licked His Boss Barred from Office

VANCOUVER, B. C.—In order to deny Labor representation in the British Columbia lower house at the coming session, the Burnaby municipal council refuses to grant Frank Browne, Labor member-elect from Burnaby riding, a suburb of Vancouver, leave of absence from his work as municipal accountant. Browne, running as the candidate of the Canadian Labor party, delegate Alexander K. McLean, reeve of the municipality, runing on the old line ticket. As reeve of the municipality, McLean is Browne's boss and he is now attempting to prevent Browne from attending the autumn session of the provincial house.

The Vancouver Trades Council intends to take legal action to compel leave of absence. Meetings are being held and the people told the reasons for the council's action.

"Every phase of labor is affected by the action of the Burnaby council, and unless labor makes a determined stand at the present time, we might just as well quit as a political organization," said Harry R. Neelands, Labor member for South Vancouver.

White Collars Affiliate.

BRISBANE, Queensland.— At the annual conference of the Queensland civil servants' union, a motion was carried by a large majority indorsing the executive's action in affiliating with the Trades and Labor council. This is the first time that government employes in Australia have affiliated with a labor council. Hitherto, civil servants have considered themselves too classy to mix with workers.

CAL WAVES FLAG THAT STANDS FOR THE TEAPOT DOME

Good Judges Put Oil in Burglars' Lamps

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—Connection between the scandal of government by oil companies and the defense of the federal court oligarchy in the Coolidge campaign has become so nakedly evident that the bosses are sending out an alarm to all the states. From now until election day the flag must be grabbed and waved an exclusive possession of the Coolidge administration. The Constitution must be associated in the moron mind with the Coolidge campaign textbook. Nothing short of hysterical noise, and persecution of those who want to know why the laws are violated will save the day.

History a Nuisance!

Somebody has dug up a set of clippings from the New York papers of January 3, 1923, devoted to President Harding's statement to the press that Secretary Fall had decided to retire to his ranch. This was nearly nine months after the senate had adopted a resolution for the investigation of Fall's illegal giving away of the naval oil lands. It was at the time that Fall was reported to be retiring from the cabinet in order to become counsel for the Sinclair Oil Co.

Fall "Got" His Man.

Fall did not dare go on the supreme court; he knew with somebody was bound to discover his crookedness, and that this would be a blow to the prestige of the whole judicial crowd, from Bill Taft down to the last district federal judge. Besides, he knew that someone might discover that he had once been a democratic federal judge in New Mexico, and had been kicked out by President Cleveland after he shot a lawyer dead at his courtroom door.

How much Sinclair and Doheny and Standard Oil had to do with Harding's offer of a place on the supreme court bench is not the notorious Fall may never be disclosed. The significant thing is that, but for the oil investigation resolution, he probably would have taken a life job as a "bulwark of the Constitution" against the demands of the people and the acts of the elected congress.

When he failed to take the place, a hardshelled railroad attorney from St. Paul, denounced by organized labor as one of its bitterest foes, was selected. And today the country is waiting to learn which one of the oil lobbyists and lame duck reactionaries at Coolidge headquarters is next to be given the black robe as an associate of Bill Taft in the nullifying of national laws.

Mondell Had Taking Ways.

Will it be Phil Campbell of Kansas, now lobbying for Standard Oil, or Secretary Wilbur, who repudiated the navy's fuel conservation policy in his recent speech to the Petroleum Club at Taft, California? Or will it be Frank Mondell of Wyoming, the man T. R. said he would not trust "with a branded steer in daylight?"

Mitchell Palmer, when bullying his way toward a hoped-for nomination for the presidency from the office of attorney general, secured the appointment of a long list of corporation lawyers—each a fanatical enemy of the workers—to federal judgeships. Harry Daugherty made that his most important personal task. When he wanted a railroad strike injunction, he made a judge, and then called on that judge for the violent injunction he used against the shopmen. Palmer and Daugherty were the creators of a large section of the sacred federal court dictatorship that Colidge is now clamoring to save. Palmer worked for Standard Oil; Daugherty served the oil crowd without discrimination, so long as his boss Smiths and Howard Manningtons and Bill Burnses were satisfied.

Sinclair and Doheny and Standard Oil have not given up hope of holding on to the naval oil reserves. Their hand-picked federal judges are on the job, and they have Coolidge and perhaps the next attorney-general, if Coolidge wins. Harry Daugherty may again be attorney-general, or he may go to the supreme court, giving Campbell or Mondell the department of justice.

Many Want Air Races.

DAYTON, Ohio, Oct. 2.—Two cities want to entertain the international air races in 1925. They are: St. Paul, Minneapolis, Detroit, Atlantic City and Denver. The National Aeronautic Association which opened informally today at the Miami Hotel, is considering all five. Decision will be made Friday or Saturday.

TREACHERY OF LEADERS FEARED IN I. L. G. U. STRIKE

Reactionary Officials Play with Al Smith

(By Federated Press)

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—A strike which is termed by officials of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union as the beginning of an intensive organization drive in the ladies' tailors' shops is to be declared within a few days. The workers in this section of the needle trades are highly skilled and work on the most expensive fine-tailored custom costumes which retail at $150 to $1,000 or more. Theatrical costume makers and alteration hands are also in the puridiction of the union, local 38 in New York City.

Demand 40-Hour Week.

The union demands are for the 40-hour week and for 44 weeks' yearly work guaranteed and a 10 per cent increase in wages. The greatest problem of the industry is the overwhelming number of unorganized workers. In a tailor shop employing 25 skilled ladies' tailors, there will be 200 girls working on custom dresses, private dressmakers who are not organized. Local 90 of the International has jurisdiction over these non-union workers but reports only 120 shops with 1,000 workers organized out of 249 shops and about 10,000 workers in all.

43,000 Unorganized.

Samuel Lefkovita, vice-president of the International, is in charge of the miscellaneous trades section in which the ladies' tailors' and dressmakers' locals are listed. According to Lefkovita' statement there are about 43,000 unorganized workers in the 13 trades of this section and only 8,000 organized. The greatest percentage of non-union workers are in the waistmaking, white goods, and children's dressmaking trades. Local 25, waistmakers, has 28 union shops with 400 workers; and there are 250 open shops with 7,000 workers. Local 62, white goods workers, has 79 union shops with 2,500 workers; and there are 350 non-union shops with 5,000 workers. Local 91, children's dressmakers, has 78 union shops with 2,000 workers; and there are 550 non-union shops with 15,000 workers. Embroidery, raincoat, button workers, and tuckers, pleaters and hemstitchers are proportionately better organized.

Trade Union Educational League members are predicting that the strike in the ladies' tailors' shops will be the same sort of stoppage as the white goods workers enforced last spring. The left-wing unionists say that the international officials have already settled with teh bosses and that the workers will get the wage increase (with a deduction of 2 weeks' work to nullify it) and will not get the shorter week nor the guaranteed minimum of work. The T. U. E. L. members of the union declare that the special mediation commission appointed by Gov. Al Smith with the consent of the International will be called into this strike and that the workers will be the losers again. They expect considerable rebellion to develop among the rank and file of the workers when the actions of the International officials are announced.

Wool Trust Boosts Price.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—American Woolen Co., which recently ommitted its dividend, has ordered wage cuts for its workers, has now declared an increase of from one to 32 cents a yard on wholesale woolen fabrics for spring materials. Republican campaign backers are interested in this concern, particularly William Morgan Butler, and are using strategy to convince the people that the present exorbitant tariff must be retained to protect them. President William M. Wood of the company said that there is a shortage of wool in the world which justified higher prices. Clothing manufacturers predict increased costs to retailers and a consequent boosting of prices to the consumers. With diminishing returns from their work and increasing prices of living necessities, workers do not see themselves buying new spring suits.

"Gallant" Hell an' Maria Dawes Dodges Brookhart Challenge

MUSCATINE, Iowa, Oct. 2.—"I am not going to descend to personalities, I have retired into a flock of politics 'Pee-Wits' and some of the wounded birds are fluttering. Perhaps you can identify them. I don't know."

This was the answer of Gen. Charles G. Dawes, republican vice-presidential candidate today to a request for an answer to the demand of senator Smith W. Brookhart that he resign as "Cal" Coolidge's running mate. The answer was given to a crowd which gathered about his special train here enroute to Kansas City where he made the first of a series of 10-minute rear-platform addresses which are to be a part of his invasion of Iowa, Missouri and Indiana today and tomorrow.

Never once in his formal address did the general refer to Brookhart or his attack.

Wisconsin's Campaign Issue Shows the Daily Worker's Possibilities

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the DAILY WORKER issues its special "Wisconsin Presidential Campaign Edition." It is only one of the many "Special Editions" being put out during the campaign. But it has many characteristics all its own.

According to original plans these "Campaign Specials" were to make over the first page only. But not so for Wisconsin. The comrades of this state spread themselves over three special pages. And they are making it pay.

* * * *

Wisconsin had a first page. On it the comrades carried their message to the tens of thousands of workers they will reach with this special issue. There was an "Open Letter" to the membership of the Wisconsin Socialist Party, since it is in this state where the socialist misleaders maintain their last stronghold. This is also the state of LaFollette. His position is analyzed from the Communist viewpoint.

* * * *

Superior, Wisc., up at the head of the Great Lakes, insisted on having a page for itself. It made good by getting enough advertisements to pay for it. This is a tribute to the way that our Finnish comrades do things. It is an explanation of how they manage to maintain three dailies in the United States, in addition to other weekly and monthly publications.

One of these dailies, Tyomies, is published at Superior. It is a veteran of the class struggle. It was published formerly at Hancock, Mich., but following the great copper strike, of 1913, which was lost after a long and heroic struggle, it was moved to Superior, where the Finnish comrades also have a large publishing plant.

Our advertising manager, Comrade Sam Hammersmark, went to Milwaukee, and got the advertisements that appear on page five. They help pay for more Communist propaganda.

What Comrade Hammersmark achieved in Milwaukee shows what can be accomplished in a large number of big industrial centers thruout the country. The big department stores in Chicago will not advertise in the DAILY WORKER. Neither will other big advertisers come in. They give their advertising to support the big capitalist dailies.

But in every city there are advertisers, in working class districts, who depend exclusively upon workers' trade. They need the workers. The workers do not need them. They can be forced to give their advertising to the DAILY WORKER. A score of cities, with the advertising solicitation for the DAILY WORKER well organized, would relieve Our Daily of its financial burden. It could be made to pay for issuing Our Daily.

Not only that, but the basis would be laid for regular Special Editions of the DAILY WORKER, for every day in the year.

If the Wisconsin comrades could duplicate, every day, what they have done in this Special Edition, they would have a Special Wisconsin Edition delivered in their state every morning. It could carry more news, more articles dealing exclusively with the struggle in that state. It could carry the fight every day, into Wisconsin, more effectively against the sinister forces of socialism, under Berger, and "progressive" republicanism, under LaFollette. We could wage a real campaign for the organization of the unorganized in this notoriously "open shop" state. We could raise, and carry to victory, the slogan of the "Class Party" against the collaboration of labor politicians with professional old party office holders.

Then, when the foundation has been well laid; when the Communist movement is firmly rooted in the working class masses of Wisconsin, it would be possible to establish another DAILY WORKER, in some Wisconsin city, like Milwaukee.

These are the future possibilities that all comrades should have in mind as they plan their Special Campaign Editions of the DAILY WORKER. We do not build alone for this campaign. We plan and prepare for the seizure of power, and the building of the Communist Society. The best time to start building, and building effectively, is TODAY. The distribution of a Special Campaign Edition of the DAILY WORKER is a first task in this year's presidential struggle.

Good Intentions Will Not Stop War Under Capitalism

HALYCON, B. C.—Gen. F. E. Burnham, president, Canadian White Cross society, names E.-D. Morel, British pacifist member of parliament, as the nominee of the organization for the Nobel peace prize. Morel was jailed by the British government during the war, following his exposure of prewar diplomacy.

Gen. Burnham was for over eight years in charge of medical work in the Balkan states and saw first hand the suffering left in the wake of the world war. What he say convinced him that another war would mean the collapse of civilization.

"After the severest ordeal in human ken, the central idea of soldier and humanitarian is the resumption of peace with justice and liberty," says Burnham. "The cancellation of all indemnities and the restitution of all territory wrenched away from enemy states by the late world war would be the greatest move of all time toward universal peace."

State Extends Insurance Field.

MELBOURNE, Australia.—The Victoria Labor government will extend the state insurance office to include general fire insurance. It will issue personal accident policies to employes and others, undertake fidelity guarantees for workers, and accept fire risks on government buildings and property, and other public semi-government, or municipal buildings, including town halls and offices.

NEGRO WORKERS SEE ONLY HOPE IN COMMUNISM

Capitalist Chicanery No Longer Misleads Them

By GORDON W. OWENS.
(Communist Candidate for Congress in the First Congressional District.)

The current issue of the Negro Bolshevik-baiting newspaper, the Chicago Defender, reproduces an editorial from the Paris edition of the New York Herald-Tribune.

The editorial states that Negroes cannot be made converts to Bolshevik anarchy. This editorial was written as a result of the Negro problem coming up before the Fifth Congress of the Communist International.

"Defender" Capitalist Lackey.

This capitalist newspaper, in stating thi Negro, exploited and oppressed workers, will not join hands with the Communists, the only people who fight the battles of both Negro and white workers, makes itself more than ridiculous. It is like a frightened boy passing a graveyard, whistling to keep up courage.

The world capitalists and their editorial hirelings already see the handwriting on the wall. They know that the Communists are already digging the grave for dying capitalism. "If we can only keep the Negro workers from becoming imbued with Communist ideology we can live a little longer," frantically say the world, exploiters. And the exploiters in their efforts to prolong their lives, bribe the Negro editors to misrepresent Communism to the Negro masses.

Dark Races Are Awakening.

But today, awakened Negroes, the world over, see in Communism their only hope of delivery from the yoke of capitalist oppression and exploitation. They see in the workers' government of Soviet Russia their true and only friend.

The Communist International, the general staff of world revolution is training Negro, Chinese, Hindu, Japanese and other workers from the darker races, to stir their fellow workers to revolt against all capitalists, native and foreign, black and white.

Communism Their Hope.

Gradually and surely the barrier walls of race, color, nationality and religion, erected by the capitalists, to keep the workers separate and divided, are being battered down and are crumbling before the sledge hammer blows of the Communist International. The awakened Negro workers, the world over, are lining up behind the scythe and hammer, and will follow the workers' emblem to emancipation.

The Negro workers of America were the shock troops who crushed chattel slavery in America, and dealt a death blow to the slave owning aristocracy. The Negro workers of the world will be the shock troops to crush capitalist wage slavery, and deal a death blow to the capitalist class.

Plans to Hop Pacific.

SHANGHAI, Oct. 2.—Undaunted by the prospect of the severest weather of his round the world flight, Major Zanni, who arrived here today at 11:53 a. m., from Chefoo today, announced his determination to cross the Northern Pacific in spite of warnings that the Pacific hop at this time of the year would be well nigh impossible.

Complete Membership Mobilization

Upon this day every one of the 1,297 party branches will meet.

Upon this day every member will go to the meeting of his branch. He will there deposit fifty cents for his 137-piece literature unit.

UPON THIS DAY WE PREPARE!

RED WEEK, October 26th to November 2nd, has been decided upon as distribution week.

Twenty-two thousand members will go forth to shops, mines and mills, to homes and street corners during this week and distribute three million leaflets, stickers, pamphlets and DAILY WORKERS.

DURING THIS WEEK WE ACT!

NOVA SCOTIA MINERS BUSY ON CONVENTION

O. B. U. Busy Trying to Split Union

GLACE BAY, Nova Scotia, Oct. 2.—The miners' locals here are busy electing delegates to attend the special convention called by the Lewis henchmen after the return of Houston from Indianapolis. In calling the special convention for the purpose of electing a temporary district committee which will take charge of the district until regular elections are held Lewis is running away from the fight which is bound to come next January when the present contract with the British Empire Steel Corporation expires.

Prior to his visit to Indianapolis, Houston had an interview with McLurg, superintendent of the corporation, who informed him that the corporation was going to put a wage cut into effect at the expiration of the contract and demanded that the Lewis gang see to it that there was no opposition from the miners. Immediately Houston rushed to Indianapolis to consult Lewis. The result is that Lewis has decided to restore the charter of the district rather than have his administration responsible for the fight that is coming.

Lewis Unwilling to Fight.

In this action Lewis has run true to form. He withdrew the district charter to crush the fight of the miners against the troops sent against them by the Canadian government in July last year. Today he restores the charter rather than show that he is unwilling to fight the corporation to defend the wages of the miners. Once he has got rid of the responsibility for the conduct of the district he can simply stand by and see the miners beaten by the corporation and not raise a finger to help them.

O. B. U. Defeated in Cape Breton.

The One Big Union apostles have abandoned Cape Breton and have concentrated their efforts on Pictou County. The obstinacy of the militants among the miners against splitting the union finally convinced them that it was useless to continue working in Cape Breton. Therefore they transferred their activities to Pictou where the miners are much less militant and where patriotism is rampant resulting in the miners listening more eagerly to the plea for a purely "made in Canada" union.

Legare had got himself in bad with the miners owing to his vicious attacks on the Communists. He slavered at the mouth when he spoke of them and denounced them as "Besco stoolpigeons." This feeble-minded conduct finished him with the miners here since they know the Communists and have the greatest confidence in their integrity as fighters against capitalism.

Boasts of "Victory."

The O. B. U. Bulletin is making a great noise about the great victory the O. B. U. has won in Pictou county. Stellerton local union endorsed the O. B. U. and this is claimed as a great victory. But the fact of the matter is that Stellerton, local consists of a large number of foreign workers who never attend the local meetings. The ones who attend are notorious for their overwhelming desire to crawl into an office no matter by what means. Since they have always been defeated in the U. M. W. district elections because the miners of Cape Breton, who compose the majority of the membership, would have nothing to do with their reactionary, patriotic ideas, they think that by going with the O. B. U. crowd they will be able to gratify their ambitions and become officers a last.

It is possible for the O. B. U. to swing the miners of Pictou county for a split simply because in Pictou the miners have lagged greatly behind the miners of Cape Breton in class consciousness. It is a well known fact that when the militants held the district offices before Lewis deposed them the miners of Pictou were used by Lewis against the "reds." Now the so-called revolutionary O. B. U. is making progress only among the most backward of the miners. This only proves that the O. B. U. is seen in its true light by the miners of Pictou—as a "made in Canada" product.

Communists Will Lead Fight.

But it is unlikely that the miners of Pictou will go along with the O. B. U. now that the district charter has been restored. Much as these miners dislike the "reds" they know that the only ones who are able or willing to lead them in the struggle against Besco are the Communists. For this reason it is expected that the Pictou county miners will abandon the O. B. U. and get themselves in good standing with the U. M. W. and join with the rest of the miners in the district in fighting against the wage slashing program of the corporation.

GREAT CRIME WAVE SWEEPS SO. CAROLINA; MUCH POLITICAL UNREST

By JACK METTE.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

CHARLESTON, S. C., Oct. 2.—Suth Carolina is being run over with a crime wave that grows larger as the year nears its end. Already noted for its killings and general lawlessness the state is expected to reach the highest peak in years for killings. Some of the most brutal crimes in the history of the United States have taken place in the Palmetto state within the last year.

Crime continues but the governor spends his time in praying for the welfare of the people. There is no action by the authorities. The state's police force is the gang of strike-breaking boys who comprise the National Guard.

The majority of all crimes committed within the state are by boys or young men of the cotton mills who have never had the chance of an education and have been forced to work in the cotton mills from the time they were able to work.

The governor, Thomas G. McLeod, is the one that made South Carolina the laughing stock of the world when he set aside a day for the people to pray for the extermination of the boll-weavil.

Some of the people of the state are doing their best to improve the conditons that now exist. The political unrest can be noted by the failure of Senator Dial, child labor advocate, for re-election.

EMME REVIEWS VICTORIES WON AT CONVENTION

Machinists Are Against Heresy-Hunting

J. F. Emme, member of the Workers Party, candidate for congress in the fourth congressional district of St. Paul, Minn., on the Farmer-Labor Party ticket, who was a delegate to the convention of the International Association of Machinists just ended in Detroit, declared to the DAILY WORKER that the "B. & O." plan put over on the convention by President William H. Johnston is an aid to the employers.

"The 'B. & O.' plan, which must now be submitted to a referendum vote of the machinists, overlooks the fact that the interests of the employers and the workers are directly opposed," Emme told the DAILY WORKER as he passed thru Chicago

Proposed Expulsion Hit.

"Altho the left wing moves for amalgamation were defeated and La Follette was indorsed," Emme declared, "The machinists' convention overwhelmingly voted to table a motion aiming to expel Workers' Party and Trade Union Educational League members. I vigorously opposed this resolution pointing out that Johnston wished to autocratically expel men for political beliefs without even inquiring into the individual merits of their cases."

Emme declared the "B and O" plan to be nothing short of a sell-out of the membership of the union by the reactionary leadership to the employers of the machinists.

Emme in Congresional Race.

Emme, who is running against Oscar Kellar, Coolidge republican, and Dan W. Lawlor, corporation lawyer running on the democratic ticket, declared that the Thompson-O'Connor machine, which controls both republican and democratic candidates, has sent out the word to unite on Kellar against the Farmer-Labor party.

President Johnston and secretary-treasurer Davison, have returned to Washington, where they have issued a statement declaring themselves "pleased that the plan of co-operation with the management of the railroad companies" passed the convention.

Many Australians Unemployed.

SYDNEY, New South Wales.—The Australian federal bureau of statistics reports 90,000 workers unemployed. This does not include persons of work thru strikes and lockouts.

Unemployment was greatest in the anti-labor state of New South Wales, with 12 per cent. In the five labor-governed states of Australia, the unemployment figures ranged from 4.4 per cent to 6.3 per cent.

Sheetmetal Workers Knit Up.

HUNTINGTON, W. Va.—A tristate council of organized sheetmetal workers in Ohio, Kentucky, and West Virginia is meeting regularly in Huntington and other towns to knit up the common problems of the Sheet Metal Workers' International Association in those three states. C. R. Pyles, Local 323, Portsmouth, O., is secretary of the council.

LA GUARDIA IS TRYING ON NEW PACIFIST COAT

Puts Aside Uniform for Campaign Purposes

By BEATRICE CARLIN
(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 2.—Captain Fiorello H. LaGuardia, spruce young officer in the American Flying Corps, 100% booster of the war aims and programs of our late-lamented democracy-faker, will have a hard time living down his record of war patrioteering and convincing his constituency of the sincerity of his right-about-face pacifism.

It is permissible, of course, according to capitalist political ethics, for an aspirant to public office to have a complete or partial change of heart in accordance with the direction in which the political wind happens to be blowing.

Has Ear to the Ground.

LaGuardia has evidently been keeping his ear to the ground, and has not been slow to capitalize popular rumblings of anti-war and anti-Defense day sentiment.

The workers of America who were trained so nicely to eat "democratic" pap out of the hands of the war-makers, seem to be developing a little revolutionary pep, and so they must be soft-soaped for a while until they get over it.

But they may not get over it. They may have learned a few things since those early war days in 1917, when the representative from New York marched in full war regalia in the monster parade of drafted men in the District of Columbia. That parade of fourteen thousand drafted workers was led by the pious peace president himself, who sent them off to the European shambles to make the world safe for the profiteering imperialists at home.

He Didn't Fight Much.

Not that LaGuardia did much actual fighting according to all accounts. He seems to have spent a good deal of time flying his gallant Capront from one Italian city to another boosting the Italian war loan, dining with King Victor Emmanuel and his bedizened generals and assuring the Italian imperialists that President Wilson's bunk about democracy and self-determination need not be taken too seriously. It was good stuff for keeping up the fighting morale of the workers, but the Italian brethren who had a covetous eye on Trent, Trieste and Istria, need not worry, the great democracy-faker had their "aims and aspirations" well in mind.

At a demonstration staged in Rome in January, 1918, LaGuardia eulogized "our unselfish motives" for entering the war and grandiloquently proclaimed that "our determination to bring about justice to all concerned while asking nothing for ourselves was established forever." If the mayor of Rome, the prince of the blood, the jingo senators, and the goose-step embassies listened to this patriotic dribble with tongue in cheek, still they knew it was good stuff with which to feed the workers they were deluding with hopes of peace and democracy.

For Trent! Trieste! Istria!

At any rate this glib compatriot from America knew how to speed up the "nationalismus," of the Italian dupes in the factories and the trenches. At a mass meeting in Milan under the auspices of the Italian Parliamentary Union, speaking of the lagging war loan, he said, "The slogan of your minister of the treasury will be Give! Give! Give! Then your General Diaz can cry 'Forward! Forward! Forward!' And foreign minister Sonnio's cry will be: 'Trent! Trieste! Istria!'"

The pacifist LaGuardia must look back somewhat ruefully on those days of vociferous patrioteering, but he need not despair—the day may not be far distant when his record will stand him in good stead, and if he does not commit himself too rashly in his present bid for workers' support, he may yet be called to serve his real masters, the capitalists and imperialists of America, and once more be gathered to the bosom of the National Security League, who endorsed him in July, 1918 when he ran on a fusion ticket against Scott Nearing, at that time socialist candidate in his (14th) district.

Wanted Nearing to Join.

"I have never seen Scott Nearing," he said, when he landed in America covered with glory and an Italian war cross, "but if he is a young man, I shall ask him what regiment he comes from."

And in this campaign LaGuardia is a pacifist. Does he think the workers do not know that soft words butter no parsnips?

PHILADELPHIA TURNS OUT SATURDAY FOR THE "BEAUTY AND BOLSHEVIK"

The new Russian film, "The Beauty and the Bolshevik," which has created such a furore in Moscow and New York City, is coming to Philadelphia at LULU TEMPLE, Broad and Spring Streets, this Saturday, Oct. 4, beginning at 6:30 p. m., and continuing until 11:00 p. m.

This story is based on the events in Soviet Russia toward the end of the civil war. A Red Army Brigade settles down after four years of fighting, in a little village—there it became the center of the village life. It brings joy to the poor and rouses the resentment of the rich landowners. The Red Army soldiers are sequestered in the homes of the villagers. Kumbrig Ivanor, the Red Army commander finds himself housed in the home of a rich priest, Kulak. There is a young daughter—the Beauty. . . .

As inevitably happens they find much in common and are seen making love together. She wants a high church ceremony with full ritual. He has thrown off the superstitions of the past and insists on a civil marriage. The eventual outcome of this story must be seen to be fully appreciated. It is replete with action, humor, with the intimate touches of their daily life. The people of Philadelphia are very fortunate to see the first story of Russia after the revolution.

Tickets are already on sale at 521 York Avenue. Admission is 50 cents. This picture is given under the auspices of the Committee for International Workers' Aid.

STATE AND ARMY FIGHT FOR RIGHT TO HANG BUGLER

Fear County Officials May Drop Charges

TACOMA, Wash., Oct. 2.—With the selection of a jury completed early today, counsel for the defense of Roland R. Pothier, accused of murdering Major Alexander P. Cronkhite at Camp Lewis, October 25, 1918, was expected to raise the question of jurisdiction today in district judge Edward E. Cushman's court where Pothier is on trial for his life.

If defense attorneys are successful in their contention that Major Cronkhite died on state land and therefore the case belongs in the state superior court, Pothier may never come to trial.

Held for Two Years.

Pierce County officials once before have refused to file a charge against Pothier and should udge Cushman remand the case it is thot probable that the charge may be dropped. District attorney Thomas P. Revelle, however, contends that since the army was using the ground at the time, it was therefore under federal jurisdiction, tho the formal transfer from the state to the federal government was not recorded until a year later.

Pothier, former sergeant-bugler of the 315th engineers, has been in custody for two years. Albert Rosenbluth, former army captain, jointly charged with Pothier, will go on trial October 22. He is now at liberty on $22,000 bail.

Indicationts that the government would demand the death penalty were not wanting yesterday when the trial opened. James H. Osborne, special assistant attorney general, excused several veniremen from jury duty when they admitted they had conscientious scruples against capital punishment.

Call Many Witnesses.

More than 80 witnesses from all parts of the United States are here today, including major general Adelbert Cronkhite, U. S. A., retired, father of the slain army officer, and now a resident of Baltimore, Md.

It was General Cronkhite who forced the inquiry into his son's death after an army board declared the fatal wound accidental and self inflicted.

CO-OP MOVEMENT MAKES PROGRESS IN NORTH WEST

Big Increase During the Present Year

By ESKEL RONN.

The consumers' co-operative movement in the north central states shows rapid gains during the past few years under the guidance of their central organization known as the Co-operative Central Exchange, located at Superior, Wis.

This organization was formed on Sept. 5, 1917 by about twenty co-operative retail stores. Its membership has grown so that it now has sixty members.

Its purpose is to act as a wholesale and jobbing house. From the beginning it has been a success, growing every year, so that today it is perhaps, the most successful co-operative wholesale in the United States. It is fast becoming an important factor in the distribution of merchandise to co-operative stores. About 125 retail co-operative stores are now being served by it.

During this year the wholesale has increased its sales over 25 per cent and shows a net profit of over six thousand dollars. This is remarkable when the fact, that this country is in the throes of an economic depression, is taken into consideration.

In Bad Condition.

The work of this wholesale has been manifold, for they found the affairs of the local stores in frightful condition. There was no system of accounting. The managers were mostly bankrupt petty business men, the members knew nothing about the principles of co-operation.

First of all an efficient uniform system of accounting that was suitable for co-operative stores was installed.

Second task was to find competent managers, clerks, and bookkeepers. The wholesale solved this problem by starting a school, where they train young men and women. This school has put out over 150 students, many of whom have become very capable managers, bookkeepers, etc. The fact that their executives are men and women trained from the ranks is one of the chief causes for the success of the co-operative stores.

Educational Campaign.

The lack of co-operative knowledge at once became evident, so the wholesale formed an educational department whose duty is to train members of the board of directors, and members of the societies to intelligently conduct the affairs of their society.

This department carries on an extensive propaganda in the principles of co-operation, thru pamphlets, newspapers and lectures.

Another feature of this co-operative wholesale is its auditing department employing from three to four people. Thru this department accurate control is kept over the affairs of the local societies, and its work has been of inestimable value. Thru the work of this department most of the incompetents have been weeded out.

Two Main Factors.

There are two main factors that account for the success and the strength of the co-operative movement in the central states.

First the constant cooperative propaganda.

Second and the most important factor, that this movement is composed of principally class conscious workers, who understand that the co-operative movement is a part of the labor movement, and as such it should be developed. It is from the class conscious workers that it gets its strength, and so long as it stands unreservedly on the side of the workers in the class struggle, so long will the co-operative movement continue to grow.

Along the Path of Least Resistance

IN the sub-district comprising northern Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan, there are at the present time between thirty and forty branches of the Young Workers' League. It is doubtful if more than ten of them are yet in shape for more active work.

Some observations on the Workers Party membership and their attitude towards the Y. W. L. movement in this district will very likely prove beneficial not only to the Workers Party members, but to any workers, who feel the necessity of reaching a larger group of toilers with the messages of class struggle—be it propaganda for independent political action, industrial unionism, mere social reform or Communism. The standing excuse for the last thirty years among some of the radical foreign born workers in America has been this, that incapable of using the English language and of adapting themselves to the customs of the American worker, they have necessarily no opportunity for working among the American workers. It is no secret, that not infrequently there has appeared in the language federation signs of downright timidity whenever action has been proposed, that would in any way gravitate the memberships to closer contact with English speaking workers.

Outlet for Federation Energies.

But the river's law of least resistance is applicable to the energies of these foreign born revolutionaries. The argument of ignorance of the language may prove sufficient to excuse our foreign language speaking comrades from their duty on the firing line, but it also carries with it an obligation that these comrades make up for this defection by some other means. And the means for doing so is the fulfilling of another duty—and that is, building up a powerful Young Workers' League movement. The children of our foreign born comrades are capable and surely not less willing to carry on the revolutionary struggle. But they need the chance of schooling in working class activities in line with their American environment and education. The saddest sight of all, it might be said, is, to see hundreds of young, militant workers being transformed from thoroly Americanized school children into members of foreign speaking branches.

Since the comrades in our language federations stand on the sidelines and limit their activities to their own halls, be it admitted perforce thru the inability to speak the language of the land, then it surely falls upon them to see that their revolutionary experiences and ripeness of Communist theories find an outlet thru their children in such a manner, that they can enrich the Communist movement not only in their own narrow circle, but the larger labor movement about them.

Wherever there is a language branch of the Workers Party, not only in Wisconsin, but elsewhere, there is no excuse for not having a well-supported Young Workers' League branch. Failure in this respect can in most instances be proven due to a mighty shallow sense of duty as regards effort to influence the workers of the locality who do not happen to speak Finnish, or German, or Jewish, as the case may be, but who understand—only English.

It seems preposterous, but in quite a few localities our language federation comrades insist that an English-speaking Young Workers' League in their locality is simply out of the question. As far as the writer is concerned, that in effect means the contention that they don't see any need for a Young Workers' League and that the youngsters will eventually be graduated from an American public school and an American circle of friends and companions into a humdrum existence as only additional members of some Jewish, German, Finnish, or Lithuanian group—to carry on the excuse, that we are so unaccustomed to the ways of the American worker, etc.

If even the children of the branch members are unable to make any showing in the English language in their party activities, then it would be appropriate to have the older comrades join in the league work and make an English school affair out of it for the time being, if nothing else.

The "Young Idea" is potentially more energetic, more daring and loyal to a cause it has accepted than many of us admit. We older ones are apt to stress overmuch our own experiences in a number of things. Some experiences have already made us wary of "unnecessarily doing it again." If one may speak of such a thing as the "dangerous age" in the life of a worker who has inclined towards opposing the exploitation that he suffers at the hands of his boss, then the middle age surely has its dangers. It is while the worker is still in his youth and hopes to earn a decent living for himself that he is naturally militant against things that he feels are unjust. But when experience has taught him many a bitter lesson, the blacklist silenced him in the workshop lest he be kicked out and his family starve, then he may yet hold his earlier opinions of the capitalist system, but he no longer is "unnecessarily" forward about telling his neighbor about it.

Whoever has worked with children and young workers, cannot have failed to realize the unbounded energy and ability that a group of youngsters contain. Children at home are not apt to display capacity for sober thinking of general affairs nor to undertake of their own intiative anything serious that requires concentration of effort for a sustained length of time. But get them together, and in group co-operation their abilities seek outlets that range from rollicking jazz-parties to teaching theories of Communism for hours at a stretch. Members of our Young Workers' League in Superior, for instance, teach the Junior group, some write articles, some are fairly capable speakers.

They have nerve enough to interview the mayor and the chief of police in a town where vice appears to be an open concession. They have distributed party literature in weather that discouraged older comrades. And last of all, these children—whose parents are foreign born—are in the movement with a spirit that cannot be criticised, the same spirit that you can find in all young workers, once you get them together.

but they are quietly ignoring him. They entered the republican primaries in suport of lieutenant-governor Cummings, who was overwhelmingly defeated by the machine candidate, Blaine, since which time, the socialists, like well-behaved "bobits," have been giving their tacit support to Blaine.

It appears that LaFollette will not get the big socialist vote, on which he had counted on as a result of his deal with Berger and Hillquit Unwillingness to swallow LaFollette, whom they have known for years as a time serving middle class politician opposed to socialism, has led them to desert the socialist party in large numbers. This is a great blow to the Berger crowd, whose whole stock in trade is votes. In order to keep former socialist voters from going over to Wm. Z. Foster, the misleaders of the S. P. are spreading a wild yarn to the effect that while the socialist party may be rotten, the Workers Party is rotten too. Berger and his henchmen insinuate that the Workers Party indorsed LaFollette for president even before the socialists did, and only began to attack the notorious senatorial "bobcat" after he refused to take them into his menagerie. This is not the first time that this malicious slander has been bruited about. The LaFollette managers have been making liberal use of it from the beginning, with characteristic disregard of the actual facts.

Communists Fight LaFollette.

No one familiar with the militant stand which the Workers Party has taken against opportunists and labor fakers, from its very formation, will believe for a moment that the Workers Party ever kowtowed to a LaFollette. The truth is that the Workers Party denounced LaFollette as a petty bourgeois faker from the opening day of the campaign. In every Communist publication, it was pointed out systematically that LaFollette is an enemy of the working class, whose function at this particular time is to betray the movement for a genuine labor party.

But the LaFollette politicians saw the importance of the spontaneous farmer-labor movement that was springing up in all sections of the country, and attached themselves to it, with the purpose of distorting it from its original purpose, for their own ends. Large numbers of workers and farmers were (and still are) fooled by LaFollette. The Workers Party pointed out this dangerous mistake, but, of course, would not separate itself from a genuine mass movement because of it. The Workers Party stayed in the farmer-labor movement to work for a real farmer-labor party and to work with might and main against the nomination of a LaFollette by such a party. It declared that if, in spite of its efforts, LaFollette should be nominated, it would not desert the farmer-labor party but would support the candidate, providing he severed all connections with capitalist parties and bound himself to abide by the program of the farmer-labor party. This was long before the St. Paul convention.

However, as the Workers Party predicted, LaFollette has done nothing of the kind. He is still a member of the republican party, the party of Dawes and Rockefeller and Gary and Daugherty. He deliberately sabotaged the organization of a farmer-labor prty. He is running s an "independent," not on a farmer-labor program, but on his own program, the same outworn, demagogic, middle-class program as he has toted in Wisconsin for years, in his campaigns against the socialists.

LaFollette Proves His Respectability.

But LaFollette went further. In his statement announcing his candidacy, he devoted himself almost exclusively to proving his bourgeois "respectability" beyond the shadow of a doubt. He launched into a bitter attack on the Communists "because they believe in dictatorship by the workers and not in democracy for all." This was on May 28, 1924. A great farmer-labor convention had been called for St. Paul, to convene June 17. The chairman of the arrangements committee was William Mahoney, of the Minnesota Farmer-Labor Party, and the purpose of the convention was to lay the foundation for a nation-wide farmer-labor party. The Communists took an active part in the preparation for the convention, but they were by no means the only important element represented. Nevertheless, LaFollette seized upon the opportunity to strike a body blow at the embryonic farmer-labor movement. He bitterly denounced the convention, declaring that he could not countenance any organization that included the Communists, for the obvious reason that the Communists are a revolutionary working-class party.

Mr. Mahoney, in the name of the arrangements committee, answered LaFollette's attack with the following significant remark:

"There is no more reason why sincere supporters of a national Farmer-Labor party should doubt the Communists, than they should question the sincerity of Senator LaFollette. For many years he has maintained formal affiliations with the Republican Party, the most infmous political machine ever in control of the American government."

LaFollette has helped to prevent the formation of a permanent party of workers and farmers because he is the chosen representative of the small business men and petty exploiters of the country.

Foster is Workers' Candidate.

On top of all this—after his vicious attack on the proletarian revolutionary movement, after his betrayal of the farmer-labor movement, first at St. Paul and later at Cleveland, after his open and repeated declarations in favor of the present capitalist system—the socialist party has aligned itself with Bob LaFollette. That is why class-conscious socialists in Wisconsin and elsewhere are casting aside the soiled remnant of the socialist party and enlisting under the banner of the Workers Party. Foster, the Communist and militant strike leader, and not LaFollette, the calculating bourgeois politician, is their candidate for president.

forty-eight hour week or the average eight-hour day.

In child labor abuse Wisconsin ranks the fifth state, there being 6,966 children under the age of sixteen employed in her industries.

While the proportion of mortgaged farms in the country as a whole has risen to 37.2 per cent in 1920, in Wisconsin the proportion rose to 59.9 per cent. The total amount of mortgage debts for Wisconsin farmers amounts to over $350,000,000.

Militarism in Wisconsin.

Under the tender protection of the LaFollette administration militarism has been established in the state to the point where even the Milwaukee Leader was compelled to admit, May 13, 1924: "The efforts to increase its personnel and give greater power to the National Guard are viewed in labor circles with mistrust and open declarations that it is not done with an eye to an outside foe, but to prepare to put down labor."

This is the record of the state administration dominated by LaFollette. That capitalism has reaped the benefits no one would dare deny. It is portent of the disaster which will be the sure fate of the Wisconsin toilers with that administration kept in power when the full force of the oncoming industrial depression and unemployment is felt.

Farmer-Labor Party Movement Destroyed by LaFollette.

Unity of the farmer-labor forces for mutual defense of their class interests will not be tolerated by LaFollette and those who pose with him as progressives. In 1920 he was unwilling to have the Farmer-Labor party platform contain a protest in behalf of the Negro. The convention called June 17 this year to meet in St. Paul, Minn., to form a great national Farmer-Labor Party was opposed and viciously denounced by LaFollette.

Now, Senator Wheeler, LaFollette's running mate, has declared for the formation of a liberal party to include the disgruntled capitalists after his election. A third capitalist party.

The labor movement produces its fakers. But the renegade leaders of the socialist party of Wisconsin have outdone them all. Descending to the very depths of political depravity they have even knifed their own candidates and bankrupted the party which was once built thru the efforts and struggles of the rank and file workers. They are trying to lead their members who still adhere to socialism into another movement that will help capitalism retain its power.

Workers Party Only Political Force Struggling Militantly for the Emancipation of the Toilers.

Surely the true socialists of the state of Wisconsin are not willing to follow their depraved leaders into unity with small bankers and independent manufacturers for a program of free competition among capitalists. The socialist goal is freedom from wage-slavery and all the bondage of capitalism, even if it means battle to get there.

For the cause of the working class the old parties have nothing but condemnation. For the miserable working conditions with long hours and low wages for some, while protracted unemployment with prospects of starvation for others, LaFollette and his progressives have nothing to offer. For the plight of the poor farmers, he has no program of real relief. Only the Workers Party engages actively in the struggle to remedy these conditions.

The natural place for all sincere socialists is in a real united front with the Communists in the Workers Party of America forming a solid battle line for the following immediate program:

The creation of a farmer-labor party; nationalization of industry and workers' control; compelling industry and government to pay wages to the unemployed; stopping the use of injunctions, police and soldiers against workers; release of all political and class war prisoners; land for the users and nationalization of the farmers' marketing industries; opposition to militarism and imperialist wars; recognition of Soviet Russia.

These are measures of immediate struggle. The end of the glaring evils of capitalist society can only come with the victory of the workers and the establishment of the workers' and farmers' government thru which capitalism will be abolished and the Communist society created. For that goal the Workers Party is rallying all militant workers, beneath the banner and under the leadership of the Communist International, inspired by the magnificent example of the first Workers' Republic —Soviet Russia.

LAFOLLETTE IS CHAMPION OF SMALL BUSINESS; FOSTER IS CANDIDATE OF THE WORKERS

Some two or three weeks ago there was issued from the campaign headquarters of LaFollette, in Washington, information pertaining to the elements which are supporting LaFollette in his campaign. We would like to make a note or two about that information.

In the news item sent out from LaFollette headquarters thru the Associated Press it was said that he, LaFollette, is gaining considerable support from the two old parties. It was also said that of his supporters who had given their occupation 30 per cent came from laboring masses, 22 per cent were farmers, business men and bankers, 18 per cent clerks and professional men, 11 per cent commercial travelers and salesmen.

LaFollette for Business.

Now, the farmers and workers who are going to support LaFollette in his campaign believe him to be a man who is going to fight for them. If that were not the case, they would not support him.

LaFollette for Business.

But many of the farmers and workers who are going with him know also that their interests are not the interests of business men and bankers nor the interests of salesmen and commercial travelers and not even the interests of professional men.

Many a farmer has learned thru sad exeprience how his interests fit with those of business men and bankers. The exodus from the farms during the last years proves that very effectively.

Not Very Big Ones.

But the information above goes to show that the business man and the banker also is supporting LaFollette because they believe that he will fight for them also. Of course they are not the big men of industry nor money sharks of Wall Street. They are the lesser lights in the profiteering kingdom but their calling and lifework nevertheless is just to get profits by which to live instead of doing productive work. And their profits likewise come from the work of workers and farmers.

If these business men and bankers are going with LaFollette they certainly do not do that for the farmers and workers. They support him because they know him to be their man and not champion of the workers and farmers. They know who is going to shield their interests and that is why they support LaFollette.

Workers' Candidate.

There are men in this election campaign who do not pretend to fight for the workers and farmers and business men and bankers at the same time. Every worker and farmer having some common sense knows this to be impossible. And it cannot be done. One has to fight for the one thing or the other. And the men who are fighting just for the one are the candidates of the Workers' Party of America.

Foster and Gitlow, the candidates of the Worker's Party, do not pretend to fight for anyone else but just workers and farmers. And they are in the fight for the working class and for working class alone. Who is going to support them, supports the cause of the workers and farmers and of no one else.

To Federate Working Women.

LONDON, Ont.—To form a federation of Women's Labor leagues thruout Canada a number of women from the dominion have met here. The object is to form an organization of all working women not now belonging to labor unions. Branches existing in various cities include in their membership housewives, domestic workers, charwomen, and all other unorganized women workers. An application for a charter for this body was refused by the Trades and Labor congress last year, but another application is being made this year to the same body.

CARRY THE FIGHT ON ALL FRONTS

By ESKEL RONN.

Glibly do we recite that we have three fronts on which we carry our propaganda, namely the political, industrial and the co-operative. The latter, however, has received the least attention.

In America this condition is readily understandable, for the co-operative movement has not become such an important factor in the economic life of this country as it has in the European countries. But the co-operative movement is growing, especially in the agrarian districts. It behooves us to be on the alert and to exert all influence possible to propagate the spirit of the class struggle in the different co-operative organizations, especially in this true of the consumer's co-operative organizations. Make the co-operatives militant sections of the class struggle.

Value of Co-operation.

The co-operative moment can be of value in many ways to the workers in their struggles against their exploiters. First of all thru co-operation, workers begin to depend upon themselves to solve their problems. It brings them together. This makes their minds a fertile field for communist propaganda.

Through the co-operative movement they are able to alleviate some of their sufferings, by being able to secure the necessities of life at a lesser cost, than if they had to buy from the petty bourgeoisie. Very true this seeming benefit is but a temporary one, for if all workers organized into co-operative retail societies and effected material savings, the capitalists would reduce their wages, for as a rule capital pays labor only enough to feed it, and to enable it to raise a new army of workers. Still the fact remains that all workers are not yet organized co-operatively, and so those that are organized secure by the aid of co-operation economic benefits.

Divide Savings

Where the spirit of individualism prevails amongst the members of co-operative societies, the savings are divided to the members for their individual use. There is where the class conscious workers can do effective work, by showing the members how much better use can be made of the earnings of the societies by using them to educate workers, by supporting workers on strike, the workers' press, etc.

In this connection it might be in place to mention that it was a gigantic task for the party to raise $100,000.00 needed to start the Daily Worker, while the few Finnish co-operative stores in Minnesota, Michigan and Wisconsin that are members of the Co-operative Central Exchange of Superior, Wis. made a profit of over $100,000.00 in 1923.

If the party workers were on the job, it would have been possible to divert a large portion of this money for communist propaganda. By supporting the co-operative movement it would be possible for us to finance all our propaganda, without having to resort at all times to appeals for collections.

Secure Valuable Training

Another benefit that we can get from the co-operative movement, and one which we cannot belittle, is the training that we can get in conducting the economic life of our present day society. Where the co-operative movement is strong, there it has expanded to various fields of production and distribution.

This preliminary training is of inestimable value, for when the final conflict comes, we must not be found unprepared, to take over the control of industry and then conduct it in an efficient manner. The co-operative movement offers us the best of schools to train workers for just such emergencies.

Propagate Communism

Every class conscious worker should join his local co-operative society. He should take active part in its affairs. He should propagate the principles of communism in his co-operative society, for there he will come in contact with workers who already feel the oppression of the exploiters and who are looking for a means of escape, and who think that co-operation alone will solve their problems. It is up to him to expose this fallacy and show that only in communism rests the salvation of the human race.

LaFollette and the Workingmen

The pride of the LaFollette movement is the so-called "Model Commonwealth" of Wisconsin. Invariably the LaFollette champion will point to Wisconsin as the why and the wherefore of the working masses supporting the Badger state senator in the present campaign.

Fortunately there is an abundance of facts—incontrovertible facts—that smash to smitherines all claims laid to labor's support by the LaFollette organization. Given all the accepted standards of measuring one's service to the working masses, we cannot but conclude that LaFollette's greatest achievement—the "Wisconsin Experiment"—is an unassailable argument against his getting the support of the workers.

In LaFollette's Wisconsin the average wage of the workers falls well below that prevalent in more than half of the states of the country. Wisconsin is twenty-ninth in the monthly wages paid workers. The LaFollette machine which has been in power for more than a score of years has done nothing to attempt to improve these conditions.

Nor has LaFollette made the slightest effort to raise the low standard of long working hours prevalent in the manufacturing industries of his state. At most only one out of every three workers in these industries have the 8-hour day.

And when the workers of Wisconsin attempted to fight against the powerful open shoppers dominating the biggest industries of the state by seeking the enactment of a law against private detective agencies, it was the LaFollette legislative solons who undermined the effort.

In no small measure, therefore, are LaFollette and his allies responsible for the weakness of organised labor in Wisconsin, for the failure to carry out even the limited sanitation laws, and the state government's lending aid and comfort to the anti-union groups. One need but turn to the annual proceedings of the Wisconsin State Federation of Labor convention to find long list upon longer lists of labor bills defeated by the so-called progressives who are now seeking the votes of the workingmen.

With the socialist party having committed suicide thru assuming the unenviable role of a fig-leaf for the ugliest side of LaFolletteism, there is only one political party in Wisconsin that can put forward any claims to being worthy of the support of the workers of the state. This is the Workers Party—the Communist political organization speaking and fighting for the working class against the bosses.

To attempt to marshall all the reasons of the employing class for supporting Coolidge would be impossible. To attempt to add reasons to the already well-known ones would be carrying coal to Newcastle.

But the reason for employing class support of Coolidge, just given the other day by one of the leading exploiters of the country, is of timely importance and deserves special attention. Mr. W. W. Nichols, president of the American Export Manufacturers' Association, is the author of the declaration of support. He has returned from Mexico after making an extensive survey of the investment and trade possibilities for American capitalists. Mr. Nichols is a plain talker. He says that the reason for his and his kind supporting Coolidge is this:

"I intend to vote for President Coolidge, because he has been notably in favor of the expansion of American business. Primarily the American people are concerned in the expansion of their trade. . . . Fortunately, they have as president a man who is keenly alive to the value of business expansion in foreign lands. It serves as an advertisement of American enterprise, it fathers confidence."

At this time when the employing class of the United States is bringing up all its reserves for establishing American commercial and industrial supremacy, such an attitude of a presidential candidate is an especially worthwhile reason for his support by the bosses. But what of the working masses? What of the farming masses whose support Coolidge is pleading for? What does this trade expansion mean to those who work for a living?

Coolidge is a war maker. He is the candidate of the imperialist clique that is preparing another war for the United States by aiding and abetting every effect, every maneuver of the employing class to extend its spheres of influence and investment. The trade expansion Mr. Nichols speaks of is only another name for the subjugation of weaker peoples. It is only the prelude to the civilization of the dollar and bayonet—a civilization whose advanced guards are the marines who broke up the Haitian republic and the missionaries who crucify the native population on the cross of gold.

September building permits, according to Fred Armstrong, head of the committee to enforce the Landis award—the euphonious title of the Chicago open shoppers—show a drop of more than 25 per cent below the figures of September, 1923. A year ago September permits reached a total of $27,847,000. This year they total $22,000,000, a decrease of approximately $6,000,000.

The Armstrong explanation of this rapid decrease in productive activity of a great basic industry is typical. It is that the high wages of building tradesmen are responsible. The truth of the matter is the housing needs left unfilled by the mobilization of production for war necessities during the great crusade for Dawes plan democracy, have almost been supplied and that the building industry is facing a slump that affects unfavorably other industries from which it draws materials.

Mr. Armstrong lets go of another morsel of information that throws much light on the manner in which the lower middle class and the upper strata of skilled workers are fattened for the periodical slaughter which takes place during the depression that follow boom periods like the one that is now closing. Says this seer of the realtors' association:

"The building activity of today is confined principality to home building and the erection of two-flat buildings by small investors. High rents of the last several years started the ball rolling and home building will continue for some time."

This means that, irritated by the exactions of landlords and inspired by the slogans of "own your own home" weeks and "build now" campaigns, a great number of workers with small savings and middle-class elements with a little plunder to invest buy property and erect buildings when prices are at their peak. The boom "bursts," as our English comrades say, and the process of shaking down the small investor begins amid shouts of glee from the banking fraternity who assure the workers with sanctimonious earnestness that the home owner is the bulwark of the nation.

This method of disillusioning the elements that have faith in the high purposes and complete stability of American capitalism is a painful one but extremely effective. It operates almost automatically and with increasing vigor. Following war prosperity, during the depression 1920-21, the basis was laid, thru the ruin of millions, for the present wave of discontent expressed by the third party movement. In the coming period of depression the number of casualties will be multiplied tenfold. So widespread will be the disillusionment and the misery of the masses that a mass Communist Party will be possible.

The California supreme court decision, ruling the LaFollette electors off the ballot, has produced some very interesting developments in that state of sunshine, real estate sharks, anti-Japanese hysteria and prison sentences for workers.

The rumor persists that Hiram Johnson is to come out for LaFollette in protest against the court ruling which is obviously one of those tactical errors so easily made in a state notorious for its judicial corruption. We hope he does. It would be the final touch needed to align all the hypocritical middle-class elements behind candidates whose slogan of "back to 1776" gives a correct idea of their economic vision and conception of realities in an imperialistic epoch.

It has taken a good deal to arouse Hiram Johnson's sense of justice—probably something in the nature of a promise of a cabinet position. It is a matter of record that Johnson has been one of the bitterest enemies of Tom Mooney who lies in San Quentin prison for a crime the world knows he did not commit, and that he has tacitly agreed to the wholesale imprisonment of members of the Industrial Workers of the World by the official tools of the lumber and shipping interests.

Support by such individuals as Johnson can be purchased only by their sharing any power that may be acquired, altho by reason of their class interests they belong with the LaFollette group. It becomes plainer every day that when this process of dividing power is concluded the share of the deluded workers and farmers in this movement will be negligible.

This is the historical process by which the middle-class elements secure power. They enter into a struggle with the big capitalists. They convince masses of discontented workers that their interests are identical with the middle class, but they allow the masses no organizational guarantees. The destruction of farmer-labor parties by the LaFollette henchmen is an example of what is meant. To retain power, middle-class groups enter into coalition with the representatives of big capital and industrial and rural masses find themselves worse off than before.

The support of Hiram Johnson, which will be secret if not open, means that the group of capitalist cliques, slightly inferior in strength and influence to finance and trustified industrial capitalists, have thrown their support to the LaFollette movement. In other words, the LaFolletteites have begun the process of compromise with powerful enemies of the masses even before they have secured power.

Upon the Communists devolves the task of exposing this systematic policy of hoodwinking and selling the working class and the remedy for it—organization of the workers in industry for resistance, led by the mass Communist Party, to slave conditions disguised with the blue and buff of 1776.

The Campaign in Milwaukee

By ELLA REEVE BLOOR

IN Milwaukee they do things with a bang. The Workers Party believes in advertising. My two really enormous street meetings at Allis and Chalmers shop, and the two held at the International Harvester company's plant were advertised by early morning visits by young comrades with leaflets, which announced, "Mother Bloor at your factory today."

At the last noon meeting, over one thousand men rushed out of the shops at exactly twelve, having hurriedly eaten their lunch in the shop and literally swarmed the Workers Party stand. The platform was plastered with the large Foster-Gitlow posters. The hall meeting Sunday was announced and many DAILY WORKERS were sold and literature distributed.

The Sunday meeting in Miller Hall was attended by a number of the men from the Harvester shop, who came with their wives. The evening meetings held on the street were equally successful in fact, entirely too large to suit the "socialist" administration. Two evening meetings were harshly broken up by the police. The first time the policeman shouted, "I've told you three times to stop. You can't talk without a permit. If you don't stop, I'll call the wagon." Then he promptly chased the crowd down the street, men bitterly protesting.

I announced that we would conduct a meeting on the came corner the next evening. The next day I called up the socialist mayor, Hoan, and asked him if it was necessary to have a permit. He answered, "No. I have never issued a permit in the city of Milwaukee. We believe in free speech."

I then asked him why his police had broken up a perfectly peaceful meeting at 4th and Wells streets, when the republican party were holding meetings the same day on Grand street, which is a congested district. Mayor Hoan muttered something about "Restricted zones," and said his secretary would take it up with the chief of police and that he would telephone me. Of course he was simply passing the buck, as no message came.

An immense crowd was awaiting me that night. The salvation army held forth on the opposite side of the street beating thir drums and singing hymns for 40 minutes. The crowd increased until about 500 people were there, and then the police came again. Seven of them chased the crowd away and finally took me to the station house where again the night chief prated about "Restricted zones." But it was obvious to all that the "zones" were only restricted where the Workers Party was concerned.

One humorous incident occurred during this meeting. A drunkard with flowing moustaches and an appearance of assumed dignity, shouted, "Don't listen to that woman. She's in favor of Russia. I can't stand it. I'm one hundred per cent American." Finally the crowd complained of his antics and had him arrested. When I arrived at the station he was being "investigated" as follows, by the police sergeant:

"How old are you?"
"49."
"Any wife?"
"No."
"Any home?"
"No."
"Any job?"
"No."
"Any money?"
"No."
"Where were you born?"
"Germany."

Some one hundred per cent American! No home, no job, no money, no wife, and a German.

One Sunday in Milwaukee I spoke on "The Issues of the Campaign" to a crowded hall. The audience voted spontaneously and unanimously that I come back in the evening and deliver another talk on "Russia of Today." The hall was again filled in the evening. At seven o'clock I addressed a crowd at an entertainment held by the West Allis South Slav branch.

At Racine and Kenosha I spoke at hall meetings I found the comrades of Racine doing especially good work in selling campaign literature. At Kenosha the Young Workers' League is growing and helping the party in many ways.

In Milwaukee on Sunday after the hall meeting the Junior League gave a play which stirred the audience more than any other kind of propaganda could.

The Hungarian branch then gave some revolutionary tableaux, and a young comrade of five years of age also made an address.

Thruout Wisconsin I find the rank and file of the socialist party disgusted with the LaFollette leaders, are leaning toward the Workers Party, while the reactionary Hoans and Bergers are calling in their police to try and check the growing prestige of the Workers Party in Wisconsin.

Bankers Take Anarchist Position

By KARL REEVE

THE organized forces of American capitalism, the American Bankers' Association, meeting in Chicago this week to strengthen their grip on the working masses of the country and devise ways and means to increase their hold on the government, while they indiscriminately praise their two privately-owned political parties, echo the decay of their class by championing the "principles of democracy" and declaring for the anarchistic position of "less meddling legislation."

The discontent of the workers with Wall Street "Teapot Dome government" is fully recognized in the convention at the same time the groundwork is laid for the capture by the bankers of the "social democratic" movement which spouts "democracy."

Calvin Coolidge and Charles G. Dawes, the republican figureheads, were proudly claimed as the bankers' private property by Walter W. Head, in his last address as retiring president of the bankers' association. The Dawes plan, which effects the throttling of the governments of Belgium, France, and Germany, with the cooperation of the aristocratic cracker king, Ramsey MacDonald, was praised and applauded.

"The large measure of individual credit goes to Charles G. Dawes and his two associates for the stabilization of Europe" said Head on the opening day of the convention. "It will be observed that two of these three men are bankers. The appointment of such a commission was formally advocated and persistently urged by this association at a time when such action was by no means popular in many other quarters."

John Davis, the personal lackey of J. P. Morgan, who has for many years fattened off the fees thrown his way by the bankers, also comes in for his share of praise, for denouncing moves to curb the power of the supreme court. "Mr. Davis is right," said Head, "Exactly right, and president Coolidge is right when he says the people want a government of common sense."

It is interesting to note that the bankers' association uses the same arguments as are put forward by the anarchists. "Once we kicked against taxation without representation", said T. R. Preston to the delegates on Wednesday. "Now we have too much of both. Decentralization of the central government is most important. What the voters ought to do is to lift the yoke from the neck of the American people. The government could help the farmer by quitting its policing of American business."

"The necessity that economic problems be solved by economic remedies —rather than by political tampering —applies to the entire field of commerce, industry and finance," said Walter Head in opening the convention. "We are oppressed by a multiplicity of restrictive laws and administrative regulations. We find ourselves constantly waging a defensive war against plans and progrms which will hamper individual initiative still further which will crush individual ambition and destroy individual opportunity."

The American bankers wage war against government when it restricts their industrial oppression of the workers and threatens to take their profits away from them. But when it is proposed to abolish their tool of government, the autocratic power of the supreme court, they take a right about face.

While the spokesmen for American capitalism are thus pretending to be on the defensive at this convention, by complaining against government interference with their control of industry, and anticipating the time when the discontent of which they speak will grow so strong as to make the government a hindrance when the heralded discontent finds political expression, in reality they are planning further onslaughts on the fight of the workers for emancipation from their rule.

The American bankers are already laying their lines to fight against inroachments of working class parties on their privately-owned politicians and are preparing the fight against government, when big business control is threatened by political parties representing workers and farmers.

TO THE YAKUTSK INDIANS

By ANISE.
Federated Press Staff Writer.

I read in a Moscow paper:
"We have published
The FIRST political pamphlet
In the Yakutsk language.
It tells all about
LENIN
And is intended
For distribution
Among the nomad tribes

And I pictured
That vast untamed region
In the northeast corner of
Siberia,
Just across Behring straits from Alaska,
With its tossing miles of snow-peaks,
And its wilderness of tundra,
And its few thousand
Wandering NATIVES
Living on fish and reindeer.
Just like Alaska Indians,—
And its scattered settlements of Russians
Many weeks away from railroads
Like our own early
Hudson Bay posts.

And I thought of the Romance
Of that PAMPHLET
Scattering to the far north a message:
WORKERS OF THE WORLD, UNITE,
And the news
That far to the southward was a world
That hailed them brothers!

And I remembered how WE also
Sent PAMPHLETS northword
The life and works of Jesus,
Or something else from the Bible,
To tell the Alaska Indians
That all mankind were brothers,
And we followed it up with
WHISKY,
And a few schools, and a lot of gold-seekers,
Who took away their lands,
And their fish and their furs,
And gave them in exchange
OUR DISEASES.

So I think those Yakutsk folks
Won't care so much
About the PAMPHLET
As about the FOLLOW-UP!
And that all the words of Lenin
Won't impress them
Half so much as just the fact,
That the Russians coming north
Are helping them to organize
COOPERATIVES
For selling their FURS
And are making them in all things
EQUAL SHARERS,
Rulers of their own lands, organizers
Of their own Republic.

THE POWER COLUMN

Twice every week—this column uncovers to your view the motive power behind the DAILY WORKER. Here are the interest and inspiration of every reader—and especially the DAILY WORKER agents and committees—are tried and proven suggestions and accomplishments to drive the DAILY WORKER to further conquests.

Here is POWER—the power of brain and effort of men and women of the working class who not only believe—but ACT!

ANNOUNCING A CAMPAIGN FOR MORE POWER TO THE DAILY WORKER

Beginning Today and Until November 7

THE DAILY WORKER is gathering up steam. More drive to its power is coming with slowly increasing subscriptions and more bundle orders to meet the campaign needs. This is not enough for "The National Labor Daily." Beginning today the DAILY WORKER is going to "give 'em both barrels."

In This Way

1. Every reader of the DAILY WORKER will receive two bricks (REAL bricks to "Build the DAILY WORKER"). YOU will receive them. And we expect everyone—meaning YOU—to "heave 'em back" at us properly filled and with remittance. Thousands of bricks will be carried in this way to raise a mighty daily working-class newspaper.

2. Every branch of the Workers Party will be asked to take off their collars and get into overalls—until November 7. A load of bricks is being mailed to each secretary and this will be another section of energetic building Bolsheviks.

3. Every live member of the Labor movement will get bricks from the DAILY WORKER brickyard to aid in the building of a still greater newspaper to lead and express the will and ideas of the American worker.

All These Builders

will be united in this effort in the livest campaign of the

The D. W. B. U.

(The Daily Worker Bricklayers' Union.)

Every city sending bricks will be a local. Every worker sending in a brick will be a member. Competition will be keen and each member and local will be mentioned in the pages of the DAILY WORKER. We want the Labor movement to know who are the live wires working hard to build up a great newspaper to better fight the workers' battles—to add punch to the power of the DAILY WORKER.

On a page of this issue is the first brick. HEAVE IT BACK. And carry the others you will receive to "Build the DAILY WORKER." Beginning today and until November 7—there is no unemployment in the trade of helping the working class.

GET ON THE JOB—UNTIL NOVEMBER 7—YOU'RE HIRED!

to Iraq to "establish a local government in accordance with the sentiments of the majority of the inhabitants."

THIS happened th the year 1920, while Lloyd George was premier of Britain and while the Black and Tans were forcing British conceptions of "self-determination" on Ireland with gun and torch. But Iraq was different. After Sir Percy discovered how the people of Iraq took to the proposition, he set a fellow by the title of The Naqib of Bagdad up in business as president of the concern. It was a sort of holding company—holding the Iraq oil for the British capitalists. The British ruling class are nothing if not condescending, so an electoral law was to be framed which would give the Iraqians power to make their own laws and everything.

BUT there was an Ethiopian in the lumber, in the form of Mr. Feisul of no man's land. That gentleman mysteriously appeared in Iraq when the "people" were about to have the boon of self-determination bestowed on them. It is true that Mr. Feisul arrived on an English ship and it is also true that he never saw Iraq until the very day he placed his big feet on the soil of that country. Another ambitious gentleman who it must be said to his credit, had lived in Iraq, but had designs on the kingship or leadership of that country, was ceremoniously deported by the British from the country, fearing himself and Mr. Feisul might begin to scratch each other's eyes out.

FEISUL declared himself king without saying "as you please" to the people of Iraq. The Naqib of Bagdad made himself scarce. Feisul crowned himself king at breakfast and before he reached the toothpicks the British "recognized" him. It took the Iraqians a little time to get acquainted with him and as they are naturally suspicious of strangers, several of them could be seen testing the sharpness of their blades preparatory to testing the protective hide around Feisul's windpipe. But there is oil in Iraq and the democratic British government provided Feisul with plenty of guns to protect himself against the knives of the people he was sent to rule over. He is still there. But he may not be there very long.

THIS bit of history may enable our readers to understand the little items that trickle thru the foreign dispatches these days telling of the fighting between the Turkish and British troops for the possession of Iraq. The British "labor" ministry will fight for Iraq and its oil to the last proletarian British soldier. It will defend the right of self-determination of the Iraqians and by Saint George, it will never stand for the enforcement of Mohammedanism on the half dozen oil engineers who are bringing civilization to that territory.

PARTY ON MINNESOTA BALLOT

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

NEWSPAPER reports carry the information that the Peking government has protested to France against the supplying of armored cars and flying machines to Chang-Tso-Lin, the Manchurian leader who is on his way to square up old accounts with Wu Pei Fu the military dictator of Chihli and commander of the Peking forces. Britain and the United States are backing Wu while Japan and France are getting behind Chang. In the meantime the League of Nations continues to babble.

THERE may be people who take the league seriously and no doubt it has some uses. But certainly not as a peace instrument. A British delegate, perhaps under the influence of his enthusiasm, ventured to offer the British fleet as a world police force, but the statement raised so much consternation in London, that the offer had to be disavowed. The British fleet will be used to protect the loot of the British capitalists and nothing else. World peace is on the other side of the social revolution.

STORIES of Spanish victories in Morocco appear to be rather premature. The Moors are still winning, despite reports from one of the Chicago Tribune liars. The gentleman saw the situation from the vantage point of a Spanish airplane, and no doubt did not feel like biting the hand that clutched the steering gear. It looks bad for Spain in Morocco and it looks still worse for the present rulers of Spain, when the big crash comes.

A LIVELY discussion is taking place in the British labor press over the criticism made of the Trade Union Congress by a special writer on the New Leader, official organ of the Independent Labor Party. While criticism of the congress was thoroly justified, the New Leader critic had no constructive program to offer and ridiculed the Minority Movement led by the Communists which backed up several motions and resolutions having for their object the solidifying of the trade union movement as well as making of it a revolutionary fighting force.

IT is true that the amalgamation resolution passed was only a makeshift but the comforting feature of the situation is that whatever progress

300,000 Idle in New York City

METROPOLIS IS FACING SERIOUS ECONOMIC CRISIS

Industrial Aid Head in Startling Report

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—There are at least 300,000 men and women out of work in New York City today. According to the director of the New York City Bureau of Industrial Aid, John Sullivan, New York is facing a serious economic situation.

"Not since the fall of 1921, which preceded an unusually hard winter, have there been so many unemployed," declared Mr. Sullivan.

He went on to say that, "In normal times our bureau places about 125 men daily. At present we are placing only about 60 or 65 men a day. These applicants, it must be remembered, are mostly non-union men. The agencies maintained by the various unions also are being besieged by hundreds of seekers for work."

The situation is much worse than these figures would tend to indicate. Only about 60 per cent of the unemployed are union members. It has long been accepted as an axiom among industrial investigators that unemployment is more widespread amongst the unorganized who in the main are unskilled or semi-skilled. It is also significant that this group accounts, as a rule, for the smallest portion of the employment surveys made.

Figures Are Corroborated.

This view of the conditions in the metropolis is substantiated by the latest bulletin on the course of employment in representative factories for August just issued by the New York State department of labor. Within the last year, there has been a decrease in the state of nearly 45 per cent in the number of workers employed in the pig iron and rolling mill industries; about 19 per cent in the metal, machinery and conveyance; 25 per cent in automobiles; 20 per cent amongst fur workers; more than 25 per cent in the textiles; and more than 10 per cent in the clothing industries. The total weekly wages and earnings per hour tell the same story.

Colored People in South at Mercy of White Exploiters

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—The Interracial Commission in Atlanta has been appealed to by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People to assist a Georgia Negro widow with eight children who was attacked by a white man. The woman wrote to the N. A. A. C. P. office in New York that "he came to my home and asked me to let my son go to a log camp. I refused to let him go with him. Then he cursed me, then came in the house and struck me with his fist. Then he threw a brick and struck my daughter . . . in the side. Me and my daughter are now in bed under doctor. He also went home and got his shot gun and revolver and shot my daughters, two of them and one of my sons . . . Down here we colored people can't ever get a warrant for a white man, don't care how bad he do. Please help me to bring him to justice."

TONIGHT

A Russian performance, "The Happy Day," will be given tonight, Saturday, Oct. 4, at the Soviet School, 1902 W. Division St., under the direction of the well-known Russian actor, Anatoly Pokatiloff, beginning at 8 p. m. sharp.

STOP THE MURDER OF SACCO AND VANZETTI! APPEAL BY GITLOW

By BEN GITLOW,
Vice-Presidential Candidate, Workers Party.

CAPITALISM in the United States is determined to get its bucket of blood. Judge Thayer, the judicial servant of the textile manufacturers and labor exploiters of New England, has handed down a decision that Sacco and Vanzetti must die in the electric chair.

Judge Thayer disregards all the proof that was presented in the hearing before him that established definitely that the two workers were the victims of the despicable frame-up.

These two innocent workers must die because the slave-driving manufacturers of the state of Massachusetts want to get their revenge against Sacco and Vanzetti on account of their activities in behalf of the underpaid and savagely exploited workers of the state.

The whole capitalist class in the United States have combined in their bloodthirsty demand that the two innocent workers be executed. It is significant that Judge Thayer for almost two years has kept Sacco and Vanzetti rotting in prison before he rendered his verdict.

It is very significant that Judge Thayer chose the present time to render his verdict. Judge Thayer knows why. Because just now the bloodthirsty manufacturers of the state of Massachusetts in the face of great unemployment are engaged in a campaign of big wage reductions.

Wage reductions of from 10 to 20 per cent are being enforced against workers, particularly in the textile mills and shoe industries. The reductions are enforced in spite of the fact that these workers at the present time receive starvation wages. As the result of the wage reductions a big labor strugle in the New England is imminent.

The workers there will soon rebel against the attempt to degrade and impoverish them. Sacco and Vanzetti are being murdered by the New England capitalists as a warning to all workers who will dare to lead the workers in their rebellion against the wage cuts, that the same fate awaits them.

The workers of the country will not accept the verdict of the judicial executioner, Thayer. The workers of the country will rally as never before to the assistance of the two workers whose doom has been sealed. The workers of the country will not allow the wage-cutting capitalist exploiters of New England to reck their vengeance upon two innocent victims of a capitalist frameup.

The workers of the country must immediately organize mighty working class demonstrations that will hurl back into the teeth of Judge Thayer the decision that he has made to murder Sacco and Vanzetti.

They must in their loyalty to the targets of the capitalists wrath conduct such a campaign for Sacco and Vanzetti that they will throw consternation into the capitalist ranks.

They must, thru their organized might, not only change Judge Thayer's decision, but they must open up the jail doors for Sacco and Vanzetti so that they can once more enjoy the fresh air and the bright sunshine. Workers of America, rise in the might of your numbers, foil the attempt to murder Sacco and Vanzetti in order that the capitalists might not have a free opportunity to slash wages and further impoverish and enslave the workers.

BIG SACCO AND VANZETTI MEET IS ARRANGED

Dunne, Bittelman and Presi Will Speak

The refusal of Judge Webster Thayer to grant Sacco and Vanzetti a new trial has aroused the class conscious workers of the United States to renew their efforts to save those two Italian workers from the electric chair.

The West Side Auditorium, will be the scene of a mass meeting on October 8th, at which William F. Dunne, candidate for governor of Illinois on the Workers Party ticket, will be the principal speaker in the English language.

Presi Speaks in Italian.

Comrade Dunne has recently returned from Russia where he attended the Fifth Congress of the Communist International as a delegate from the Workers Party. He was also a delegate to the Third Congress of the Red International of Labor Unions.

Alexander Bittelman, member of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party, editor of the magazine section of the DAILY WORKER, will speak in Jewish, while Comrade Antonio Presi, editor of the Italian Communist daily, Il Lavoratore, will speak in Italian.

West Side Auditorium is at Racine and Taylor Streets.

Aroused World Attention.

The Sacco and Vanzetti case has aroused world-wide attention. It stands in the annals of American working class persecution at the hands of the capitalist government in the same class with the Moyer-Haywood-Pettibone frameup and the conspiracy to send Tom Mooney to the gallows.

As in the former cases, manufactured testimony was the basis for the prosecution of Sacco and Vanzetti. Pimps, prostitutes and professional perjurers were used by the state to accomplish the judicial murder of the two Italian workers.

International Protest.

A parade in front of the American embassy in Petrograd protesting against the execution of Tom Mooney first brought that case to the attention of the workers of he world, so also in the case of Sacco and Vanzetti did the strike of workers in Argentine and all thru South America and in Europe make of this plot against the lives of two labor organizers a matter of concern for the workers of all lands. This international demonstration of working class solidarity had its effect on the ruling class of this country and the pace of Sacco and Vanzetti to the chair was slowed up.

Thirst for Blood.

It is evident that the would-be murderers of Sacco and Vanzetti have not given up the idea of satisfying their thirst for the blood of those two loyal champions of the working class. The need for quick action is imperative. The workers thruout the land must raise their voices and make themselves heard in no uncertain terms. Under the slogan "Sacco and Vanzetti Must be Freed" great public demonstrations should be held in every city in the United States and the ruling class must be made aware that the workers will not see their revolutionary leaders crucified.

The meeting here in Chicago on next Wednesday evening should be packed to the doors.

Every Party Member's Job

WE have a little job for every member of the Workers Party.

The doing of it does not require much time, nor energy, nor anything that might constitute a hindrance.

We want every party member to go to his branch secretary and simply say: ARE WE GOING TO HAVE A MEETING OCTOBER 12 AND TAKE PART IN THE BIG CAMPAIGN TO DISTRIBUTE THREE MILLION PIECES OF LITERATURE DURING RED WEEK, OCTOBER 26 TO NOVEMBER 2?

If your branch secretary says YES, then he is one of the GOOD branch secretaries of the party.

If he hesitates, encourage him, give him a lift.

This is the little job we have for you.

T. U. E. L. FIGHTS DEPORTING OF BEN LEGERE

Urges Protest Against Canadian Action

A favorite weapon used by the capitalists of the countries of North America against men active in the labor movement, is deportation. It is a familiar weapon in the United States, used particularly against those of the left wing of the labor movement.

In Canada it is also used, and the immigration laws of that country are so framed that the government can deport men active in the labor movement with the greatest ease.

Claim Previous Arrest.

The latest attempt of the Canadian government to use deportation against a labor man is in the proceedings for the deportation of Ben Legere from Nova Scotia, to the United States.

He has been investigated by officials of the federal immigration department on the grounds that since he was arrested once in Lawrence, Mass., he is guilty of "an offense of moral turpitude" and is therefore, liable for deportation, according to the immigration laws.

Besco Behind Move.

The move against Ben Legere was undoubtedly instigated by the British Empire Steel corporation in Nova Scotia. This great corporation has undisputed sway with the provincial government of Nova Scotia, and also has great influence in the federal government at Ottawa since leading figures in the Liberal party are high up in the directorate of the corporation. It was this corporation that succeeded in getting Alexander Howat deported from Canada in April, 1923, when he was on his way to speak at the May Day demonstration of the Nova Scotia miners.

Ben Legere as an organizer of the One Big Union of Winnipeg has been active since last May among the miners of Nova Scotia trying to get them to split away from the United Mine Workers of America and form "units" of the O. B. U. The members of the Communist Party of Canada, and the adherents of the Trade Union Educational League among the miners of Nova Scotia, bitterly opposed this

STEEL SLAVES HEAR GITLOW, AT GARY, IND.

Big Gathering Greets Communist Candidate

By KARL REEVE
(Staff Writer, Daily Worker)

GARY, Ind., Oct. 3.—Benjamin Gitlow, vice-presidential candidate of the Workers Party, denounced the system whereby the workers of Gary sweat away their lives in the steel mills, while Gary lives in luxury up on the hill, spending most of his time traveling in Europe.

Gitlow spoke at a mass meeting in Turner Hall here Thursday night. Seven hundred workers jammed the hall, filling all the seats and standing many deep at the back of the hall.

Several officials of the United States Steel corporation were observed in the hall, as well as numerous plainclothes men, a motorcycle policeman, and three uniformed police, including a sergeant.

Many subscriptions to the DAILY WORKER were taken in and the supply of DAILY WORKERS was completely sold out. A collection of nearly $100.00 was taken up.

Recalls Big Strike.

QUAKER SAYS NON-PAYMENT OF WAR DEBTS WILL BRING U. S. CRASH

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—John Fletcher, world field worker for peace on behalf of the English Quakers, has visited Washington on the eve of his return home from a year of study of the anti-war sentiment in the United States.

He finds the jingo spirit stronger in America than in any nation which suffered long in the world war, and sees in the racial prejudice exemplified by the anti-Japanese legislation the greatest single force likely to be employed by our imperialists in creating a new and more devastating war.

In Fletcher's view, one thing likely to interfere with the war-like trend of American imperialism and race bigotry will be the extension to the United States, within the next few years, of the financial strain caused by the consumption of goods in the world conflict of 1914-1918.

He anticipates non-payment of war reparations and debts, followed by a financial crash which will involve wholesale disemployment. For this emergency he does not believe American business finance is prepared. He believes that the labor movement will gain great strength thru the after-effects of such a depression.

COMMUNISTS IN BIG DRIVE IN GOPHER STATE

Workers and Farmers Rally to Ticket

By JOSEPH MANLEY
Campaign Manager, Workers Party.

Minnesota workers and poor farmers will have an opportunity to vote for William Z. Foster and Benjamin Gitlow, the Communist presidential and vice-presidential candidates of the Workers Party in the coming election. Petitions, far in excess of the required number, were filled with the secretary of state.

Minnesota is a key state in the present election struggle. Discontent with the old parties is widespread. Previous to the present election this discontent found its strongest expression in the Minnesota farmer-labor party. The "reds" were the life of this party.

Now in the election struggle itself, LaFollette and his movement are superceding the farmer-labor party. LaFollette first proceeded, as part of his election strategy, to denounce the reds in the farmer-labor party. During his denunciation the "progressives" stood idly by with their fingers crossed with the result that LaFollette and his Minnesota bankers and lawyer politicians headed off the the independence of the farmer-labor party. Today, the erstwhile progressives in the trade union movement and out of it are knocking one another down to accept LaFollette's dictatorship, and climb on his bandwagon.

The Workers Party of Minnesota refused to be stampeded by the republican lawyer, LaFollette. The Workers Party and its candidates, Foster and Gitlow, stand like a rock against the betrayal by LaFollette and his Minnesota banker, lawyer politician friends, and the specious political expediency of the weak-kneed "progressives." The Workers Party and its candidates, Foster and Gitlow, now on the ballot, raises the standard of Communism. The isue in Minnesota is Communism versus capitalism.

WORKERS PARTY CAMPAIGN PEPS UP IN SUPERIOR

SUPERIOR, Wis.—The election campaign of the Workers Party here in Superior is progressing favorably despite the fact that the workers, even if organized, are conservative and as such very much prejudiced against everything flavoring of the revolutionary.

They are not satisfied with things and social conditions as they are and with the corruption of politics and the governmental machinery as it function in the national capital, but instead of grabbing the bull by the horns and trusting to the working class as a whole to solve the problem they go to politicians like LaFollette for help. They still believe in good promises by which the working class has been fooled so often.

Yet, this is not at all. In spite of the backwardness of the workers in general the Workers Party is trying to make the best of these condition in promoting our first national election campaign. Through its Finnish and English Branches and Y. C. C. of Superior our Party is pushing ahead and ably assisted in putting our candidates on the ballot in the state of Wisconsin.

In a few days Comrade Gitlow will be here on his campaign trip. He will speak at Tower Hall, corner 13th St. and Tower Ave., Tuesday, Oct. 7th, and we are expecting every class conscious worker who has any fighting spirit in him to be at this meeting.

TEN STATES NOW HAVE COMMUNIST ELECTORS ON NOVEMBER BALLOT

The states that have already put the Communist presidential electors on the ballot are the following: North Dakota, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Iowa, New Jersey, Michigan, Colorado, Illinois, Wisconsin and Minnesota.

It is expected that states that will report they have filed during the next few dys are: New York, Washington, Missouri, Montana, Maryland and Indiana among others.

You must register today or Tuesday, Oct. 14, if you want to vote Nov. 4, for Foster and Gitlow the Communist candidates. Polls open 6 to 9 p.m.

'BOB'S' CIRCUS PUTS ON MORE WILD ANIMALS

But Best Specimens Are Out of Town

It's too bad Tim Murphy is not in town! There are many things he could do besides explaining why he was detained in Leavenworth over a trifling matter of being misunderstood when a couple of hundred thousand dollars were found in his trunk. For instance he could introduce a resolution, somewhere, endorsing Robert Marion LaFollette for president.

What is Fred Mader doing these days? The ubiquitous Fred was very much in evidence not so very long ago, and being a "bona fide labor leader" and a good hustler for the undertakers, he pulled quite a string in political circles.

We cannot imagine anybody better fitted to introduce a motion in the Building Trades Council than Fred unless it be Michael Artery, business agent of Local 136, of the Metal and Machinery Workers' Union, affiliated with the Structural Iron Workers.

In the absence of more qualified mouthpieces for Robert M. LaFollette, Michael Artery did the necessary. Indeed in the words of the learned editor of the Federation News, he introduced "a well conceived resolution" before the Chicago Building Trades Council, endorsing LaFollette and Wheeler, which was unanimously adopted.

The Politician's Beverage.

Being a public character, brother Artery, it is safe to assume, will not take umbrage at the shedding of a little light on his past career. In fact publicity is the favorite drink of public men and if they don't find the concoction to their taste on occasion the bartender who mixes the beverage may not be entirely to blame. Rather they who furnish the ingredients.

There was a time here in Chicago when the Landis award caused considerable commotion in labor circles. There is no necessity to explain its provisions except that it was a move to establish the "open shop" in the building trades. It was fought vigorously by that section of organized labor which holds that the unions are labor's first line of defense against the bosses and that the unions must be preserved as fighting organizations under the control of the workers and accepting neither advice nor dictation from the employers.

Carpenters' Leaders Surrender.

This position was held by the advanced section of organized labor. In the Building Trades Council the carpenters and painters and other unions fought it, but today the painters are leading the fight. Even the carpenters thru faker Jensen threw in the sponge.

What did Michael Artery have to do with the Landis award? This much: At a meeting of the Building Trades Council which considered the Landis award, Artery made a long and clever speech, denouncing Landis with all his works and pomps and winding up by making a motion to accept the Landis award.

We are not concerned here with the motives animating Artery's later move in organizing a dual Building Trades Council in opposition to Edward Ryan and his group who headed the regular council. It is obvious that a man with Artery's experience and intelligence knew as much about the Landis award when he made the motion to accept it as he knew afterwards when he made his fake fight against it.

As it stands now the only union in the Chicago Building Trades Council to fight the scab Landis award plan is the Painters' Union. The carpenters, thru the machinations of Jensen, have signed an agreement which is plainly a surrender to the "open shop" Landis award.

Some Pertinent Remarks.

The Artery resolution endorsing La-Follette and Wheeler calls for a few observations on the political bedlam which is synonymous with the LaFollette movement. To picture it nationally would no doubt be interesting and amusing except to those who see the tragedy of it—to the working class movement.

It is safe to say that no political fisher ever gathered into his net a queerer assortment of fish from shark to gudgeon, that what the dryland sailor of Wisconsin has managed to get together.

The Illinois Crazy House.

In Illinois alone there are enough freaks to make a Mack Sennet comedy look like a pictorial lecture on biology. The united front is there from Dawes to—John Fitzpatrick. Open shop, closed shop, empty shop and empty heads are all tossed in the same blanket.

The republican candidate for governor, Len Small, is supported by state's attorney Robert E. Crowe, the pet "bad man" of the labor fakers of Cook County.

Crowe is for Coolidge and Dawes. He is for Small and the state ticket. Small is for LaFollette, thus linking the two with Crowe and thus Crowe making the connection with Dawes and Coolidge.

The Hodge-Podge.

Crowe is for the Landis award. Crowe supports Small. Fitzpatrick, Michael Artery, Quesse and the rest of the labor fakers are for Small. Here we have the spectacle of these crooked labor fakers pretending to fight the "open shop" and relieving themselves of excess wind by making faces at Hell an' Maria Dawes, yet lining up with Dawes, Crowe and Small and the other supporters of the open shop.

The only conclusion that can be drawn from the present situation is that the majority of the labor leaders have surrendered to the Landis award. The carpenters agreement is proof sufficient.

We are not surprised that the labor leaders have surrendered to the Landis award. But less hypocrisy might be expected even from labor fakers. They know they are on the defensive and like the cuttle fish who muddies the water in order to catch his prey unawares, the labor officials hide their surrender to the employers by making attacks on the radicals and getting their mentally bankrupt journalistic backs to make stupid attacks on William Z. Foster and picture him as being in league with Hell an' Maria Dawes.

Circus Manager.

If the labor jackals, whose business it is to sell the workers, had a sense of the ridiculous they would burst their blood vessels laughing at themselves. But worse luck, they are not even endowed with a sense of humor. LaFollette must sometimes imagine that he is general manager for the Barnum and Bailey circus instead of a candidate for president of the United States.

BIG MASS MEETING OF TEACHERS CARRIES FIGHT TO McANDREW

The public school teachers of Chicago assembled yesterday at a mass meeting to protest against the order of Superintendent William McAndrew abolishing the long standing teachers' councils and to refute statements of six members of the board of education who voted to abolish the councils.

The meeting was held too late to give the results in this issue of the DAILY WORKER. A full report will appear in the next issue.

Superintendent McAndrew was brot here from New York by the plutocratic board of education for the express purpose of doing the dirty work of the capitalists of the city who have long been out to wreck the teachers' organizations.

GITLOW SPEAKS TO STEEL WORKERS

to be the only party which truly represents the interests of the working class. He described how Woodrow Wilson and the democratic party had betrayed the peace of the country by dragging us into a world war which brot, not democracy, but degradation to the workers of the country.

"In 1919, over 450,000 steel workers struck for the eight-hour day instead of the twelve-hour day, for the abolition of the seven-day week and for the right to belong to their own labor organization," Gitlow stated.

"The democratic party was then in control, and altho they declared themselves sympathetic to labor, Woodrow Wilson declared the strike was interfering with the war, and this one-and-a-half years after the signing of the armistice.

Hits Reign of Terror.

"Wilson instituted the most brutal reign of terror against the strikers. Every elementary right was taken away from you steel workers by the government. The government, thru its brutal suppression, called in the troops and crushed your strike, breaking up your meetings, driving you off the strets and charging into your pickets. Why did the democratic government do this? Because it was serving Gary and J. P. Morgan and the other millionaires who own the steel trust the millions of dollars they had extracted from your toil.

Gary Is Dictator.

"The democratic party told you the war would bring democracy. But you have no democracy in the steel business. The dictator is Judge Gary. He dictates what you shall say and read and what you shall think and how you shall live. The only democracy the American workers got out of the world war was 3,000 political prisoners, and raids against the workers by attorney-general Palmer.

"How much better is Gary since the war profiteers told you they were making the world a better place to live in? How much did the steel workers get out of the war with their 44 cents an hour wage and their hospital always full of injured? How much did the millions of unemployed workers in England, the Italian workers being stabbed in the back by the Fascisti, the workers in Hungary, killed by the thousands by the white reign of terror, get out of the 'war for democracy?' How much did the Negroes in Haiti and Santo Domingo get out of the war? They have been suppressed and shot down by the hundreds to protect the American sugar trust interests there. The world war made the world a worse place to live in and instead of bringing peace it increased and aggravated militarism.

Hits at LaFollette.

Gitlow declared that Elbert Gary said four weeks ago in the New York Times that he has nothing against LaFollette because Gary knows the steel trust has nothing to fear from LaFollette. Gitlow said that LaFollette is backed by Vanderlip, millionaire Wall Street banker, and by Rudolph Spreckles, the anti-labor union sugar king of California. Gitlow stated the platform of the Workers Party and declared the workers of America must form a workers' and farmers' government in this country along the lines of the Soviet government of Russia.

Steel Trust Owns Gary.

Kari Reeve, reporter for the DAILY WORKER, spoke, denouncing the Gary chamber of commerce and declaring the city administration and the Gary Post Tribune were in league with the steel trust against the steel workers. Reeve described the activities of the DAILY WORKER, and appealed for subscriptions.

Paul Glaser, who acted as chairman, briefly described the three capitalistic candidates, and told why Foster and Gitlow are the only candidates worthy of working class support.

CHINA MAY QUIT LEAGUE IN ROW OVER ELECTION

Japan Delays Signing Peace Pact

GENEVA, Oct. 3.— The Chinese delegation to the League of Nations, which withdrew from the assembly yesterday, because China was not elected a non-permanent member of the council, received orders from the Peking government today to leave Geneva forthwith.

Members of the delegation said that while they considered the non election of China a grave injustice, they did not know whether China would formally withdraw from the league.

Appoint Commission.

The council has appointed a commission of ten to organize committees to meet in Geneva in November to prepare for an international disarmament conference.

The council will meet again at Rome, December 9.

Japan is undecided about signing the league "peace pact." Altho pleased with the league's acquiescence to its protest on the immigration, Tokyo is no hurry to affix its signature to a protocol which means nothing else but a war move in a pacifist camouflage.

Johnstone Opens Drive for Congress in Ninth District

Jack Johnstone, Communist candidate for congress in the ninth congressional district, on the North Side, spoke at a mass meeting held in Imperial Hall, 2409 N. Halsted street, on the issues facing the workers in the present election campaign.

"I will not waste much time talking about the strikebreaker, Cal Coolidge," Johnstone told the enthusiastic audience. "You workers know by this time that the Teapot Domers do not represent the working class."

Hits Davis' Anti-Labor Record.

Johnstone exposed the anti-labor record of John W. Davis, who used his influence as a lawyer to take out injunctions against striking West Virginia miners in the interests of the non-union coal barons, is as much an upholder of the capitalist system as are the two old party candidates. "For forty-five years LaFollette has upheld the republican party. Now he charges it with corruption, but he was a long time in withdrawing. If LaFollette is really interested in the working class why doesn't he come out in favor of a strongly organized labor party?"

Explains the Class Struggle.

Johnstone explained the class struggle and described the sufferings of the workers in the present industrial and unemployment crisis and gave the program of the Workers Party for solving the problems of the workers. Max Shachtman made the collection appeal and the audience responded with a large donation to the Workers Party campaign fund.

BROOKHART SORE BECAUSE G. O. P. SNUBBED HIM

"My Whole Soul" in Party, Says Senator

EMMETSBURG, Ia., Oct. 3.—The charge of the republican organization that his recent degnand for the resignation of Gen. Charles G. Dawes, vice-presidential candidate, was "traitorous to the party," was answered here today by senator Smith W. Brookhart, Iowa.

He charged Coolidge with desertion of the basic principles of republicanism as laid down by Lincoln, and declared he would "reform the lines for a finish fight to out Wall Street from the republican party."

He declared the "Coolidge machine" had snubbed the party in Iowa and had insulted him, ignoring the requests of the 200,000 voters who nominated him.

When Crooks Fall Out.

"Issue has now arisen in Iowa," he declared, "as to whether the principles of the republican party shall be determined by the voter or by a small group of crooked and irresponsible dictators set up by the non-partisan league of Wall Street.

"I have never thought of leaving the party. My whole soul is wrapped up in the principles of Lincoln, Roosevelt and Kenyon. On the other hand, I will fight with all my strength against that false and corrupt conception that crept into the party under the leadership of Hanna, Penrose and Newberry.

Cal Failed Him.

"I have said I would do as much for Coolidge as he would do for me and the voters are entitled to know what we have done for each other and to each other."

It appears that Brookhart was willing to support strikebreaker Coolidge, but the latter did not come across.

Speaker for Bankers Sees American Youth Leads in Radicalism

Denial was made at the closing session fo the convention of the American Bankers' Association that the foreign-born citizens are the most radical by Justice James C. Cropsey, of New York, who declared that, "The bulk of the radical vote comes from the young men born in this country, not from foreign-born citizens."

Cropsey asserted that "Eighty per cent of crime is committed by young men under 25 years of age and 95 per cent of these are mere boys. The need is for the men who will give personal service to lead the boys to grow up right."

Cropsey deplored the wave of radical sentiment that is manifested in New York City by Americans, and pleaded for the boy scout movement as a cure for radicalism.

Admission that the League of Nations, which exploits the small nations, is dead as an issue in the election campaign was made by Col. Thomas B. McAdams, of Richmond, Va., who said: "Fortunately the league is not an issue in the present election campaign."

Bootleggers Arm Their Ships to Fight for Spiritual Cheer

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—A police boat capture in New York harbor today revealed that rum runners have accepted the government's challenge to fight it out by smuggling their contraband into New York in miniature battleship.

The boat overhauled was painted battleship gray and encrusted with steel from eyes to entail. On the forecastle was a steel turret for machine gun, as yet not armed. The forehold where the liquor was stored, was coated with double plates of armor.

The wheel house was armored, too, and fitted with bullet proof glass. The craft had Diesel engines of the finest type.

Anatole France Said to be Near Death

Anatole France, famous French essayist and novelist, who has been ill a long time, suffered a relapse today. His physicians are at his bedside.

Big Tank Fire.

SPARTANBURG, N. C., Oct. 3.—Flames today swept Spartanburg's tank district, three blocks from the heart of the business district, where more than two million gallons of gasoline and oil are stored. The fire, of undetermined origin, broke out about 7:30 a. m., among the gasoline tanks of the Blackburn Oil Co. Other companies possessing tanks in the vicinity of the fire are the Standard, National, Texas and Gulf companies.

Russian Performance at Soviet School, 1902 W. Division St.

Let Us Make America "A Land of Horrors" for Mr. "Willy" Hearst

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the crooked mind, that dictates the editorial policies of the numerous Hearst publications, has gone on another intellectual jag, this time turning its twisted reasoning against Soviet Russia.

The editorial, "The Land of Horrors," in the Chicago Herald-Examiner, and no doubt repeated in all of the other Hearst sheets, is merely testimony to the many vile diseases that scourge the body of capitalism's kept press.

* * * *

Perhaps the fact that Japan has decided to recognize Soviet Rule in Russia has affected Hearst's brain. Hearst hates the Japanese, altho he is glad to use their labor in his vast estates in California and Mexico.

But the Japanese government is going ahead and actually doing, what Hearts and his pen scribblers, even including U. S. Senator LaFollette himself, have in the past been urging,—recognition by the United States of the rule of the Russian workers and peasants.

Perhaps Hearst expected the Russian to pay him for his editorial support. The Diaz regime in Mexico bought Hearst with a million-acre ranch, many years ago, and ever since Mr. Hearst has been very much interested in Mexican affairs; just as intensely concerned as the oil corporations. But the Russians do not buy the support of capitalist newspapers. So the very much chagrined Hearst changes his editorial policies. Russia suddenly becomes "the land of horrors," compared to which, says Hearst, "We who walk along Chicago's streets, no matter what our troubles may be, can find plenty to be thankful for."

It is doubtful if "Willy" Hearst ever took a walk along Chicago's streets. He probably rides in the scab yellow taxis when in town. He would find Chicago's streets pretty unsafe, if he used them. At this writing, 501 persons have been killed by automobiles this year, men, women and children. Guns have claimed the lives of 262 Chicagoans since New Year's Day. Moonshine has sent 164 more to early graves in the past nine months. Hardly a day passes without its murder. No hour flits by without its burglary. Payroll bandits and bank robbers do a thriving business, night and day. If this is what "Willy" Hearst calls a civilized community, then let him stick around a little more and get better acquainted with it.

Strikes are broken regularly in this Chicago. It was here that Judge Wilkerson outlawed the railroad strike. The big business interests, thru their board of education, are in open war on the public school teachers, seeking to protect the interests of the school children. The tramp of a hundred thousand jobless is heard upon the city's pavements. But that is what Hearst thrives on—human misery and misfortune. His sheets would have to go out of business without their daily scandals.

It just happens that Bishop Blake, of the Methodist-Episcopal Church, has just returned from his second visit to Soviet Russia. He writes in the Pacific Christian Advocate, giving the lie to every malicious thought in the Hearst editorial.

The surest indication of prosperity in a nation is the value of its money. If Russia were a "land of horrors," as Hearst claims, then its money wouldn't be worth the trouble of carrying it around. But what has Bishop Blake got to say:

"The financial situation in Russia is quite different from what it was when we were there a year ago. The government has abolished the paper currency that was then in vogue and now issues only the gold rouble notes, a few of which were in circulation when we were there in 1923. These notes, as you will remember, are backed by a gold reserve in the State Bank. THEY ARE NOW ABOVE PAR WITH THE AMERICAN DOLLAR; THE DOLLAR IS WORTH ONE ROUBLE AND 92 KOPEKS.

"It is rather interesting and significant that the Bolsheviks are the only government in Europe to get on a sound money basis and to bring their money back to par, as they have done already without any outside aid. It speaks well for their financial ability and sagacity, especially when we see the allied countries pledged to go to the assistance of Germany, Austria and Hungary, to save them from bankruptcy."

And here is another extract:

"The Field of Mars, the big military parade-ground in Petrograd, which was formerly surrounded with great barracks for the soldiers and officers of the czar's guards, has been converted by the Bolsheviks into a playground for children. The Field has been covered with lawns for flowerbeds, and instead of the click of armor and the display of force, there is the innocent play and laughter of little children. It is a pretty fair indication that if war were left to the working people it would be very quickly outlawed."

* * * *

There are a large number of other equally impressive extracts from Bishop Blake's article. But these will suffice to show that the Russians are successfully and energetically on the job building their new Communist social order. The Russian workers and peasants are driving out the horrors of the czarist regime.

One thing that prevents the Russians from going ahead faster is the backwardness of the American workers, fed on Hearst's poison these many years. Only thru the co-operation of labor in all nations can the world social revolution succeed. Before American labor can emancipate itself from capitalism, it must free itself from all contact with the reptile Hearst press, and all its capitalist allies. If America's workers would fall more quickly into step with their Russian brothers, then for Mr. Hearst, America also, would become "A Land of Horrors."

CONSPIRACY TO BURN SHANGHAI NOW REPORTED

SHANGHAI, Oct. 3. — Chekiang forces retreated two miles today, following heavy fighting at Sunz Kiang, the Kiangsu forces halting their advance at nightfall.

All other fronts were comparatively quiet. It is now believed that the Kiangsu general attack will be renewed Saturday.

Chekiang headquarters claim the discovery of a wide-spread plot of incendiaries to fire Shanghai and have warned representatives of foreign governments.

POLES ARRANGE BIG COMMUNIST CAMPAIGN MEETING FOR SUNDAY

Sunday, Oct. 5, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon a big election mass meeting will be held in Schoenhofen hall, Ashland and Milwaukee avenues.

Max Shachtman, well-known speaker in the Communist youth movement of America, will speak at this meeting, together with other English and Polish speakers.

The speakers will deal from a working class viewpoint with all the issues coming up during the elections. There will be questions and general discussion. Admission is free.

BUNK IN NAME OF SCIENCE IS COOLIDGE AID

Wall Streets Secretary of Agriculture Reports

By LAURENCE TODD
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—When you have no other material from which to produce a political thrill in the breast of the common man for whose vote you are playing, get hold of the machinery of something scientific, like the U. S. department of agriculture, and edit a crop report so that it reads like the prospectus for a new bathing beach.

That's the idea which seems to actuate Secretary Wallace, in a press handout which he captions—"Agriculture Shows Continued Prosperity."

The Campaign Year Swing.

Notice that word "continued," and read the first sentence of this official scientific declaration: "Not in five years has the United States presented so nearly a picture of balanced prosperity as it does now" declares A. B. Genung, agricultural economist of the U. S. department of agriculture, who has just completed a tour of the leading agricultural sections of the country.

"It may be that for a considerable period agriculture will stand at some disparity with the urban industry, but for the moment agriculture is swinging toward par, and the readjustment is a healthy one for the country," Mr. Genung says.

In short, there is no continued prosperity because there is no prosperity; all he claims is that things are less bad then they have been for five black years.

Summing up conditions in the East, he says it is "going into the winter on about the same basis as the last two years. The prevailing frame of mind among farmers is rather static. Men find little to be enthusiastic about."

Corn Outlook Is Bad.

In the corn belt he finds the farmers "in better spirits than for four years—not so much from any great increase in income as from a feeling that the stage is being set for better times. . . . The corn outlook is bad enough. Frosts have hit the North. A heavy percentage of corn will certainly be soft and one of the corn belt's real farm management problems this Fall is how best to dispose of the soft corn."

The wheat belt, he says, is "infinitely better shape than for four years. . . . In the Western spring wheat territory, where no one has had a pair of new shoes since the winter of 1919-20, there is particular rejoicing. . . . All thru the wheat country growers have hustled grain to market and new money is circulating rapidly in the process of paying debts."

Cattle Raisers Suffer.

Sheep men and growers of grain and irrigated crops in the range country are in "very bad shape," says this optimist, but "cattle men are just the reverse. It has been a four-year story of liquidation, which still continues."

This cattle situation seems to be the only kind of prosperity that "continued" as announced by Wallace in the headline.

Pacific Coast conditions for feed are "certainly no more favorable than last year. . . . It may not be wide of the mark to say that the coast country is in just fair condition this Fall, but on the whole it does not seem in quite as good shape as one year ago.

An Unfair Report.

European governments send agricultural scientists to this country at frequent intervals to study our methods of production, marketing, fact-finding and general advancement of the interests of agriculture. Probably none of them would credit, unless he saw it, the statement that our government could issue a report so unfairly edited.

Chicago Bandits Hold Open Season While Cops Nab Speakers

Three bandits yesterday held up the Pals loan bank within a block of the Chicago Avenue police station, held the three proprietors at bay in a rear room while they looted safes and showcases of jewelry valued at $10,000 and an undetermined amount of cash and escaped.

A short time before, three holdup men in an automobile, robbed W. A. Bongo, of a $1,000 payroll after forcing the machine in which he was carrying it, to the curb.

Milk Wagon Drivers Sign.

ST. LOUIS.—Slight increases of wages, 10 days annual vacation with pay, one day off in every week for two-year men, are features of a 2-year agreement signed between 900 union milk wagon drivers and their St Louis employers.

Argentine Pug May Not be Deported; Only Overthrows Other Pugs

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—Acting secretary of labor Robert Carl White today took under consideration the recommendation of immigration commissioner Curran at New York that no further efforts be made to deport Luis Angel Firpo, Argentine prize fighter. White's decision, which will be final, is not expected before tomorrow.

4,000 LISTS GATHER FUNDS IN NEW YORK

Real Support Is Coming from Rank and File

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—There are four thousand subscription lists in circulation thruout New York and New Jersey. Lists have been sent out thru party branches and Trade Union Educational League groups, handed to individuals at meetings, and mailed to unions, fraternal organizations, and sympathetic individuals.

They were distributed with a view toward raising money for the Workers Party campaign fund. It is not hard to raise a couple of dollars on a list. Many do much better. The results of the distribution are beginning to arrive in the campaign headquarters, at 210 E. 12th St.

From Rank and File.

The first returns were some blank lists sent in by secretaries hostile to our cause.

These are followed by a number of lists with single donations of one to five dollars, and later still come lists with individual donations of $5.00 to $50.00. There are not many of these, but they mount up.

The real support, however, comes from a comparatively few rank and filers. The donations are small, but the lists come in covered with names.

Collection at Laisve.

List No. 20875 arrives with the proceeds of a colection of $11.50 made by Comrade Anton Bimba among the workers of Laisve, the party's Lithuanian daily in New York.

Of course a collection in such a shop is to be expected, yet our Lithuanian comrades should be commended for setting a worthy example to be followed by the shops in the other party newspapers.

Lists Covered With Names.

Edoardo Ravera and Lotario Barbone, of the Italian West Side Branch, have made shop collections. Their lists came in covered with names. Comrade Bardone sends in his list, No. 20928 with every line filled in, and a total of $17.05. Comrade Ravera has been more fortunate. His list, No. 20929, arrives with all blanks also filled in. His list carries two five dollar donations at the head, and totals $34.00 in all. The last line reads, Edoardo Ravera, $2.00, which means that this comrade has given not only his services, but his money, to the cause.

These lists are pasted on the Campaign Headquarters Bulletin. Come in and see LISTS COVERED WITH NAMES. Then go out to have a try, and see how easy it is to match these lists with your own.

Send all contributions to Workers Party Campaign Committee, Charles Krumbein, Treasurer, 210 East 12th Street, New York City.

NEW YORK ATTENTION!

DON'T FORGET THE WORKERS PARTY CAMPAIGN FUND

CARRY A SUBSCRIPTION LIST

Collections should be made in shops, at all socials and meetings, among friends, and wherever else workers congregate.

T. U. E. L. MEETING TO HEAR REPORTS ON CARPENTERS', MACHINISTS' MEETS; ALSO LEFT WING PROGRAM FOR A. F. L.

The next general meeting of the Trade Union Educational League in Chicago will be held on Wednesday, October 29, at Northwest Hall, corner of North and Western avenues, at 8 p. m. All militant trade unionists are invited to attend this meeting and get acquainted with the policies of the progressives in the labor movement of the city.

The following items will be dealt with at the next meeting:

1. The result of the convention of the International Association of Machinists.

2. The Canpenters' and Joiners' convention and the antics of Czar Hutcheson.

3. The left wing program for the coming convention of the American Federation of Labor.

Well-knowm rank and file leaders of the local trade union movement will speak on the above subjects. These items on the agenda for the next monthly meeting are of sufficient importance to warrant the attendance of every militant.

Keep this date open and attend this important meeting.

foolish and criminal activity of Legere since it would have brought disaster upon the miners of Nova Scotia. The National Committee of the Trade Union Educational League made clear its opposition to the splitting tactics of Legere in the statements issued by it against him and the O. B. U. The policy of the league is definitely opposed to all secessionist and dual union movements which only lead to the disruption of the labor movement and play into the hands of the reactionaries who are fighting any progressive movement of the rank and file of the organized workers of this continent.

Advocating Split.

We stated, and we repeat, that Legere in attempting to split the ranks of the miners of Nova Scotia was stupidly advocating that the miners sacrifice the organization which they had so painfully built up. And also that he was attempting to get the miners to run away from the struggle against the reactionary Lewis administration of the U. M. W. A. As such, we fought Legere, and rejoice in the fact that the miners of Cape Breton decisively rejected Legere and his splitting tactics.

In his speeches and articles regarding the Nova Scotia situation, Legere has been guilty of the vilest Communist baiting. In his slurs and slanders against the militants and Communists he sunk to the lowest depths of degradation that we expected only to find in the yellow capitalist press and among the hired socialist pen-perverts of the Gompers' machine. Legere demonstrated that in his hatred of the Communists and their organizations he stood along with the capitalists and their labor lieutenants; the reactionary trade union bureaucrats.

For these reasons, we are opposed to the viewpoint and tactics of Legere.

Capitalist Weapon.

But at the same time we urge all militant and Communist workers to fight against the deportation of Legere by the Canadian government. In the deportation of Legere the working class, and particularly the radical section of our class, is being attacked. Deportation is a weapon used by the capitalist governments against the labor movement. In the deportation of active workers in the labor movement the capitalist governments are directly attacking the labor movement and must be opposed.

Function of State.

The attempt to deport Legere brings out more clearly the class struggle, and convinces skeptical workers that the function of the state is to serve the master class. This extra legal machinery is used indiscriminately against the working class. No matter what differences of opinion the workers may have, they all feel the mailed fist of the state.

This is the basic reason for the forming of a united front of all workers, and the attempt to deport Legere again proves the need of the united front advocated by the Communists and the T. U. E. L. We must oppose all persecution of workers by capitalist governments no matter who is the object of their attack.

Take this matter up in your local union, among your fellow workers in the shop and mine. Pass resolutions against this anti-labor move of the Canadian government and send them to the Department of Immigration, Ottawa, Ontario, Canada, and to Premier W. L. MacKenzie King, the Liberal head of the government who received his training in attacking labor under the auspices of the Rockefeller Foundation during the Colorado massacre.

National Committee of the Trade Union Educational League,
William Z. Foster, Secretary.

NEW YORK LOCAL OF CARPENTERS HEAR COMMUNIST

Take Up Collection for Party Campaign

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—When the chairman of a large local of carpenters refused to allow a Workers' Party representative to address the union on the issues of the campaign the members forced an early adjournment of the meeting and remained in a body to hear the speaker in spite of the determined efforts of the chairman to prevent a dicussion at the meeting.

The members listened attentively to the presentation of the Communist viewpoint. The immediate demonstration showed that friends had been made for the movement.

Expressions of regret were heard that the meeting had been officially adjourned, which prevented a donation being made from the funds of the treasury. However, a collection which netted $14.28 was made, $1.00 of which was donated by the very chairman who had so obstinately fought to keep the speaker from the meeting, but who now showed signs of sympathy.

Turned Down LaFollette Appeal.

At a previous meeting, this local had unanimously rejected an appeal for support of the LaFollette candidacy. This incident demonstrates that the workers not only have turned their backs on the old capitalist parties, but that they refuse to be deceived by the false pretenses of LaFollette and the socialists, and were ready to support the Communist program.

These appeals to local unions at their meetings are part of the shop collection drive of the Workers' Party campaign committee, which is meeting with great success among the rank and file of those groups of workers reached.

Industrial Organizers Meet Monday.

All industrial organizers of Local New York must be present at their next regular meeting on Monday, October 6, at 108 East 12th St., Room 2.

Very important matters must be taken up requiring immediate attention. In addition, a report of the Paterson strike will be given.

Organizers are urged to come early so that there may be full opportunity for discussion of the various matters

HERD IS FINED $5 ON TOPPLING U. S. CHARGE

Keep Young Worker Busy in Several Courts

Peter Herd, with four charges placed against him, was fined $5 and costs yesterday in the Racine Avenue police court on charges of "conspiracy to overthrow the United States government, inciting to riot, obstructing traffic and disorderly conduct."

The fine was presumably placed on the obstructing traffic charge as there is no known city ordinance allowing a fine of five dollars for "conspiracy to overthrow the government."

Charges of Stool Pigeon.

The charge was placed by Agent Comerford, a stool pigeon for the Military Intelligence Bureau, and by a city detective.

The detective showed George Maurer, who represented Comrade Herd in court, a letter which he said was signed by the chief of police, ordering that all future street meetings conducted by the Workers Party on the corner of Sawyer and Lawrence streets, where Herd was arrested three weeks ago, must be broken up by the police force.

The Workers Party will assert its right to speak on the street corners of Chicago along with the other political parties, and an open air mass meeting was arranged, for that corner for last night, at which Peter Herd, "Bill" Kruse, Paul Cline, Karl Reeve and others were scheduled to speak.

Judge Overrules Maurer.

George Maurer made a motion of error against the judge's decision in the Racine court yesterday, but the judge over-ruled Maurer. Attorney I. E. Ferguson, has been placed in charge of the case and will probably take the matter to a higher court.

Sure Keep This Comrade Busy.

Charged with "talking against the government" Peter Herd was also hailed to the 75th street police court last night, after being arrested at a Workers Party open air meeting at the corner of 62nd and Halsted street.

Comrade Herd was scheuled to appear yesterday morning in the 75th street court, but could not appear, on account of the Racine court charge. The "talking against the government" charge was consequently postponed until this morning. Manuel Gomez represented Comrade Herd in the 75th street court yesterday.

Herd was talking against United States entrance into Chinese or Japanese affairs, and was showing the large crowd that had assembled that the American capitalists are trying to work up a war in Japan in order to dominate the Pacific Ocean and wrest Pacific and Asiatic markets from the Japanese.

The police, evidently believing that the capitalists and profiteers are identical to the government, took the speech against brutal capitalistic intervention in China as a personal insult and handled Comrade Herd accordingly, placing two charges against him. The second charge was obstructing traffic. The police, unable to prove anything against Herd from his speech, snatched copies of the DAILY WORKER.

Declare DAILY WORKER Treasonable.

They read the paper, and declared it treasonable. After Herd was taken to the station house, a German comrade went on selling the DAILY WORKER to the increasing crowd, and completely sold out within a few minutes.

Herd was kept waiting in the Racine avenue court for several hours yesterday. The judge had not put in an appearance and no witnesses appeared against him until a late hour. Herd was arrested on the corner of Sawyer and Lawrence streets, three weeks ago and his case was postponed until yesterday to allow the police time to cook up a few witnesses. Comrade Herd is out on bail after the latest arrest Thursday night.

Sacco and Vanzetti

Sacco and Vanzetti have lost their appeal to the superior court. Judge Thayer, before whom the appeal was argued, refused to set aside the verdict of the trial jury despite the evidence gathered by defense counsel Fred Moore and his associates showing that perjury had been resorted to by the prosecution witnesses and showing further that the bullet which Sacco is accused of firing could not possibly have come from his gun.

The Sacco-Vanzetti case thus assumes the same status as the case of Tom Mooney. In both cases additional evidence secured since the verdict of guilty proves the innocence of the defendants. Mooney, nevertheless, is imprisoned for life while Sacco and Vanzetti face a death sentence.

It is impossible to imagine this state of affairs involving a rich criminal or even an ordinary criminal into whose case no question of the class struggle entered. All three of these victims of capitalism's power and viciousness were active in the struggles of their class. They were convicted, not for the alleged crimes charged against them, but of opposing the present robber system.

If we want the strongest proof of the weakness of the American labor movement and the reactionary character of its leadership, we find it in instances like the Mooney and Sacco-Vanzetti cases, not in the rates of wages and the length of hours prevailing in the United States. A labor movement that cannot and will not throw its whole force into resistance to such deliberate assaults upon even its most humble militants arouses neither respect nor fear in the breasts of its enemies.

The counsel for Sacco and Vanzetti believes that the case can be carried to the supreme court. Upon the revolutionists of the United States rests the responsibility of securing the necessary funds. More important and of immediate need is the revival of the agitation that alone saved Mooney from the noose and Sacco and Vanzetti from the electric chair.

Hooverizing or Russianizing?

Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover has come out with a blast against the LaFollette movement. The revolution-crushing secretary of our government tells the country that the program of the LaFollette movement demands the nationalization of the basic industries and public utilities. Mr. Hoover warns the voters that this means a Russianization of the United States.

Nothing could be further from the truth than the charge that LaFollette stands for the nationalization of the basic industries of the country. Genuine nationalization of the means of production and exchange can come only thru the establishment of a workers' and farmers' government. To such a working class government Messrs. Hoover and LaFollette are equally and bitterly opposed.

In fact Mr. LaFollette is at best only flirting with the capitalist government ownership of public utilities. The Wisconsin senator is not committed wholeheartedly even to the government ownership of railways. The extent to which Mr. LaFollette is engaged in talking about such fraudulent progressive measures is determined by his anxiety to win the votes of many workingmen and farmers who still have illusions as to blessings that capitalist government ownership of such utilities would bring them.

Let someone suggest the idea that the workers' organizations should share in the participation of the management and operation of these railways and other public utilities and Mr. LaFollette's ire would be aroused in the extreme. He would see in such steps the germs of the proletarian dictatorship, the menace of Communism, in the denunciation of which he vies with the Hoovers and Coolidges. Indeed, Mr. LaFollette is ready to join hands with the blackest of the black in the capitalist fold in any movement of opposition to extending workers' control of production and industry. The Wisconsin senator and the secretary of commerce are at one in their insistence on the sanctity of the private ownership of capital, of the agencies of production and exchange, as means of exploiting the great masses of workers and farmers.

The workers of America are living in a country that is totally Hooverized. Injunctions, low wages, unbearable working conditions, mounting cost of living, and gradual but certain social degradation are the fruits of a Hooverized United States. Labeling the socialization of industry as Russian is no argument in behalf of these wretched conditions and does not at all disprove the fact that the establishment of a workers' and workers' republic with the collective ownership of the means of production and exchange offers the only way out for the workers.

A Mass Party for Britain

An event of supreme importance to the working class of the whole world is taking place in Great Britain. This event is also of interest to the capitalist class but one will look in vain for any mention of it in the British capitalist press. This event is the membership campaign which the Communist Party of Great Britain is carrying on and which is meeting with a response that has surprised even the most hopeful members of the party.

The British party, operating in the stronghold of European imperialism, has many achievements in the revolutionary struggle to its credit. It mobilized the British workers for the "Hands off Russia" campaign, it forced the treaty with the Soviet government thru the Labor party cabinet, it furnishes the driving power for the minority movement and it established a brilliant leadership of the recent strikes. But the party has remained weak numerically. Its influence extended until its membership was physically unable to carry out the tasks placed upon them.

Making the British Communist Party a mass party, numerically as well as in influence, was one of the problems dealt with by the Fifth Congress of the Communist International. "A revolution without England would be a storm in a tea-cup," said Marx and the congress fully realized and emphasized the tremendous role that the British Communist Party is destined to play in the world revolution.

It is gratifying to know that the party itself has taken the initiative and is capitalizing in organizational form the tremendous influence it wields in the labor movement. A mass Communist party in Great Britain means a long step toward the Soviet Republics of western Europe.

Colonial Slaves Awaken

Outbreaks of partisans of Egyptian rule for the Sudan with complete severance from British domination, are taking place and causing the British imperialists considerable worry.

Egyptian students and troops have taken part in the demonstrations and it is stated in London dispatches that the agitation may be followed by a revolt.

The Sudan is potentially one of the world's greatest sources of cotton supply and an important link between Egypt and British South Africa. The officers in its administration are British, but the army is composed almost exclusively of natives. The Sudan tribesmen are valiant fighters and their territory includes about 1,000,000 square miles. A revolt of this people would be exceedingly difficult to crush, but the MacDonald government has intimated that no concessions will be made.

Inasmuch as MacDonald has remained in power because of his support of the imperialist plans of his predecessors, it is probable that a pretty mess is brewing for the empire.

The demonstrations in the Sudan have more than a local significance. They are the result of the resentment evident among all eastern and African people against the rule of western capitalism. China, India and Africa are awakening and in thousands of villages, among millions of people, there is talk of the new force that has appeared in world affairs—the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics—that welcomes as equals the oppressed of all lands.

The colonial peoples support the great capitalist nations of Europe and this fact these people have discovered. They are wondering why they should continue to do so and receive payment in the form of bayonets, machine guns and airplane bombs. Slowly this feeling crystallizes in organizational form and empires rock.

The freedom of the working class of the world depends upon the freedom of the colonial masses. The super-profits derived from the plundering of these peoples keep the imperialistic machines running and nothing but sympathy and support for every effort towards freedom in all colonies should come from the working class of the imperialist nations.

The question as to what has become of the thousands of former socialists of the "postoffice is socialism" type, of which the membership of the socialist party was largely composed, is answered accidentally by Chandler Owen, writing in "The Messenger" for September on "How the Negro Should Vote." In the course of the article he says: "Ross D. Brown, one of the best known and oldest Negro socialist lecturers, told me that he went to Indiana to deliver an address last year in a one time socialist stronghold only to find that nearly every socialist there had gone into the Ku Klux Klan." We have always felt that anyone who could develop a taste for the puerilities of the Oneals, Hillquits, Bergers, et al, would be intrigued by a pillowslip with a couple of eye-holes cut in it.

The financial expert (or pervert) of the Hearst papers, George W. Hinman, finds that this country is not in danger because it contains only about 30,000 Communists and about 2,000,000 pinks. If the figures were reversed Hinman would be as scared as the rest.

William English Walling and Morris Hillquit have entered the lists against John Spargo for the latter's support of Coolidge. John is again a few spaces ahead of his competitors. Hence the gnashing of teeth.

Considerable light is thrown on the present status of capitalist morality by the fact that the main slogan of all three major contestants for the presidency is "honesty in government."

was shown at the congress indicated a deep seated discontent on the part of the rank and file. The present leadership of the British trade unions are being forced to the left reluctantly and while opposing the Communists, they are obliged to go half way in meeting their demands in order to placate the rank and file. There is only one kind of progressive leadership and that is a Communist leadership. Experience in the American labor movement has amply proven this.

NEVERTHELESS things are moving in Britain. There are well over one million workers unemployed. The Dawes plan is causing much uneasiness among the coal miners. It seems that the miners are girding their loins for another trial of strength with the bosses and are looking around for allies. The Scottish miners have instructed the miners' executive to approach the railwaymen and transport workers with a view to forming an alliance for defensive and offensive purposes. We all remember the debacle of the former Triple Alliance. But it was wrecked by the reactionary leaders and not by the rank and file.

DURING the discussion several speakers pointed out that the failure of the former effort should not discourage further moves in the direction of strengthening the fighting forces of labor. The former alliance was only at the top; the next one must be built from below. Sounds almost like Zinoviev on the United Front. The county sections of tthe miners were recommended to form local alliances. It must not be left in the hands of the hich officials. Robert Smillie said the alliance should not be confined to the miners, railwaymen and transport workers, but should bring in all workers. Another speaker regretted that the rank and file movements were not encouraged by leaders.

THE men who took part in this discussion are important trade union leaders and while they are not all Communists or perhaps, not even a strong minority of them are Communists, such recommendations from a powerful trade union body would sound very strange to the ears of a visitor to a similar convention here in the United States. The class struggle in Britain is growing in intensity as the capitalist system degenerates.

THE London Daily Herald is giving considerable space to the confession of Boris Savinkov, counter-revolutionary conspirator, who was tried recently in Soviet Russia. Savinkov's testimony reveals the notorious demagogue Lloyd George as a scoundrel of the first water. While that mountebank was posing before the world as a great democrat he was aiding and abetting the Russian czarists in fomenting civil war inside of Russia, thus spreading death and destruction of property thruout the Workers' Republic.

IN 1918 the gold reserve held by the Russian banks under the czarist regime, was at Kazan in the possession of Kolchak's forces. When at the end of that year Trotsky's victorious army drove Kolchak into Siberia, the gold went along with him. Kolchak thu the Second Internationalist Savinkov apealed to Britian for aid. The aid was given, but on terms. Even in waging war against "the Bolshevik cutthroats" Lloyd George could not forget business.

KOLCHAK shipped the gold on a British torpedo boat to Shanghai. The Americans and British promised to loan Koltchak money for carrying on his war with the gold reserve as a guarantee. Savinkov testified that Britain made good to the tune of 130,000,000 francs or 5,200,000 pounds sterling. But Britain insisted on an interest rate of 7½ per cent for this loan. Koltchak, however lost his head and Britain lost the interest. "Incidentally" says the London Daily Herald "that gold is presumably still under the safeguard of the British government."

WHEN American socialists as well as capitalists, labor fakers and others, rant about a Comunist dictatorship in Russia, and send appeals all over the world for leniency toward the agents of the czar who under the red flag of socialism have been waging war on the Russian workers and peasants, it would be well to remember the testimony of Savinkov, the most formidable single enemy of the Soviet Republic who's final surrender reveals the utter bankruptcy and impotency of the counter-revolutionary movement.

"HAPPY HOME" IS NOT VERY GOOD NAME FOR THESE HOME DRESSES

"Happy Home" is the wrong name fr house dresses, now thinks Mr. Loren Miller, president of Loren Miller & Co., dry goods, at 4722 Broadway. Mr. Miller fell for the alluring offer of the Sterling company, the prison contractors, who's house dresses are made in the Anamosa, Iowa, penitentiary, and announced a special sale of these curiously named convict-made dresses for this week. Mrs. David J. Fitzgerald, of the Women's Trade Union League dropped in to see Mr. Miller, told him that it was very offensive to his customers to have prison-made goods sold to them That none of the comfortably situated people in the North End craved to be garbed in dresses made in prison sweat shops, and suggested that he send the goods back to Sterling with his compliments. Mr. Miller could not see it that way and told Mrs. Fitzgerald that he would continue the sale, that he was running his business, and that as he had promised the sale of "Happy Home" dresses to his customers, he was going to continue it all week. Mrs. Fitzgerald then left after mentioning that there were some 250,000 members of organized labor in Chicago, and that a considerable number lived in the neighborhood.

It is understood that Mrs. Fitzgerald is starting the machinery in motion to demonstrate to Mr. Miller that folks living in the happy homes around the Miller store resent having convict-made goods foisted upon them. In the meantime, so we are informed, large numbers of patrons of the Miller store have called Mr. Miller on the phone (Edgewater 3030) to tell him that they resent his stuffing their mail boxes with curculars advertising prison-made goods.

ANOTHER TRIAL OVER U.S. MAJOR'S DEATH, STARTED

Cronkhite Died Over Six Years Ago

(Special to The Daily Worker)

TACOMA, Wash., Oct. 3.—Roland R. Rothier's numerous alleged confessions of the slaying of Major Alexander P. Cronkhite at Camp Lewis six years ago at the behest of Captain Robert Rosenbluth, will be the subject of spirited debate in the trial of Pothier for murder, when the government attempts to introduce the confessions as circumstantial evidence, it was indicated today.

Maurice A. Langhorne, chief defense counsel said he will bitterly oppose introduction of the confessions.

The main points of the government's circumstantial evidence case outlined by James W. Osborne, in charge of the government's case, are:

That Major Cronkhite had no motive for suicide.

That the bullet which caused his death could not have been fired by Major Cronkhite.

That Pothier and Rosenbluth were the only persons present when Cronkhite was shot.

A promise of $1,000.00, every bit of which, down to the last red cent, will be made good, is the latest campaign fund news received at the national office.

This large contribution will come from the Left Wing Conference of Chicago, composed of members of the Needle, Trades', Butchers', Bakers' and other unions and Workmen's Circle branches.

Much of this amount has been collected already. On Oct. 12, the date of the big Foster-Gitlow rally in Chicago, this Left Wing Conference will be present one hundred per cent strong, all carrying a welgthy check for $500.00, the first half of the promised thousand, which they will present to the Workers Party at the meeting.

The Left Wing Conference is campaigning might and main for Workers Party principles and candidates. It will carry on agitation among thousands of Chicago trade unionists during this last month of the election campaign.

Stir the Shops!

The very best place to carry on a working class campaign is in the shops and factories where the workers gather to earn their living. It is there that minds are open to the measures, parties and candidates that stand for concrete solutions of the problems of bread and butter facing the working class. It is in the shops that the workers will see most clearly, for example, the difference between Foster, the union organizer and fighter for the workers, and LaFollette, the lawyer and fighter for the middle class. RUSSIAN NOTES - -

By William F. Dunne

After a day or two in Leningrad and Moscow two impressions remain that cannot be wiped out. As time passes these impressions become stronger until they evolve into permanent amazement.

In the two and one-half months that I spent in Russia I never walked down a business street, thru a residence or factory section or a boulevard without finding myself saying: "How happy and free from worry these people are!" And, "Is there any other country in the world where bookstores outnumber other business establishments three to one?"

It takes some little time for one to discover what makes the atmosphere of a Russian city so different from that of an American city. It is not the architecture nor the soft sound of the Russian language spoken by a crowd; it is not the absence of glaring billboards and electric signs; neither is it the total lack of regimentation in style of costumes (one sees on the streets of Moscow everything in the form of clothing from the Young Pioneer clad in nothing but bronzed skin and a pair of red trunks to the exotically brilliant habiliments of Bokhara and Turkestan) it is not the beautiful pastel shades of the buildings nor the constant clamor of the bells of the hundreds of churches.

It is something far more fundamental than any of these, something that begins far down in the lives of the masses themselves and that is a result of a deep feeling of safety compounded of two factors—the knowledge that the wealth of Russia belongs to the masses and there is no Boss in Russia; it is the feeling of security manifest in every act and utterance of the workers.

Do not get excited about anarchy, dear comrades. Of course there is a boss in Russia, a very stern and relentless boss as more than one disturber of revolutionary order will testify—if he is still in this vale of tears. This boss is a many-headed and many handed ruler—he has indeed more heads and hands than any other ruler the world has yet seen—he is a composite of the working masses of Russia and he is therefore a ruler whose only subjects—the remnants of the capitalists and petty bourgeoisie, become fewer every day. As he loses subjects his power increases—a strange ruler but then there has been a revolution in Russia.

It takes, as has been said, some little time even for a Communist, to get this matter straight but once the key is at hand there is unlocked a marvelous storehouse of information and little incidents of the boulevards, cafes and street cars reveal the wonders that Russia, 1924, has for the observer.

If you can think in terms of a country without a boss in the shape of capitalist state power you will immediately see that many things must be done differently. For instance: a crowd that gathers to listen to a heated political argument (and all arguments in Russia are political—generally about international politics these days) between two factory workers and in which everyone in the crowd takes part, cannot be dispersed by a policeman who comes up and says, "Move on or I'll run you in!" However, crowds that block traffic on busy streets cannot be tolerated in Moscow any more than they can in Chicago so sooner or later a policeman (a very young and spick and span policeman) saunters up. He remonstrates with the debaters but no one pays much attention to him. Then he also becomes interested in the argument and nine times out of ten becomes an active participant. Suddenly he remembers his responsibility as an officer of the United Socialist Soviet Republic, holds up his hand for silence and (I had dozens of these verbal exhibitions of the state power translated to me) says something like this:

"Comrades, these questions are very important and we workers must keep ourselves informed on them. But the rebuilding of industry is also important and we cannot stop traffic for discussion. I am sure the comrades will see the reasonableness of this."

With perhaps a little lingering to hear the most peristent debater clinch a final point, the crowd disperses and another "crisis" brot on by the clash of the interests of the masses with the state power has been averted. The policeman goes back to his station and, if the street is not one of the busier arteries, draws out a pamphlet; with one eye on the printed page and one open for thoughtless evaders of the traffic rules, this ruthless dictator settles down to the perusal of some revolutionary classic.

About halfway between where Tverskaya runs into Mockevia and its intersection with the inner ring of boulevards, is a rather steep grade. At the foot of this grade I saw a policeman, one morning, arrest three men who were hauling a little cart heavily loaded with something in sacks. What the reason for the arest was I do not know nor is it important in the light of what happened.

The arrestees submitted very gracefully until the policeman suggested that they haul their cart to the station-house. A long argument ensued during the course of which the malefactors evidently stood on the rights of arrested persons. They argued so successfully, with so much passionate gesticulation, that the policeman, with a defeated look, adjusted the straps of the vehicle and began to pull it up the grade with the three evil-doers, maintaining as dignified silence, following along behind.

A droschky, with its ancient driver half asleep, passed the procession and the sweating guardian of the peace and honor of the dictatorship of the proletariat had an inspiration. He deftly wound the loose end of a strap around the rear spring of the droschky and, much pleased with himself, allowed the unsuspecting horse to relieve him of the [illegible]. The horse began to slip and stumble and its driver, awakened from his after-breakfast doze, cursed in a fashion that belied his patriarchial appearance. It took him a few seconds to discover what had happened but when he did he acted decisively. He seized the stump of a whip that stuck in its socket, leaped down from the droschky and with a new outburst of profanity that my translator afterwards admitted had added greatly to his education, made for the policeman who fled in disorder while his captives seated themselves on the cart and shouted bits of sarcastic advice to their captor.

Age told and the indignant ancient one abandoned the chase because of lack of breath. It returned sufficiently to enable him to puff a few curses in the direction of the policeman as he untied the strap, picked up the reins and urged his horse up the hill.

The policeman, looking somewhat crestfallen, again adjusted the straps of the wagon over his shoulders, sighed, beckoned to his three grinning captives to follow and resumed the long, long trail to the police station where the cheery criminals undoubtedly felt the full strength of the iron arm of the Soviet dictatorship.

A crowded street car (Moscow street cars are always crowded) was taking me and an English-speaking Russian comrade to Sokolnikov (an amusement park in the suburbs) one Sunday morning.

When you pay your fare on a Moscow street car the conductor tears off a receipt and gives it to you. This particular conductor (an employe of the Moscow Soviet which operates the street cars) was short of change and asked the passengers to be patient until he could get more kopecks. The crowd was good-natured, as all Russian crowds are but one individual, however, a nepman, to judge by his diamond stick-pin and ring, became impatient and demanded his change immediately; the conductor pacified him momentarily and then he claimed that the conductor had given him no receipt.

Everyone took part in the discussion that followed; it was largely of a personal nature but the conductor soon gave it a political character. He worked his way to a commanding position at the rear of the car and delivered a speech of which the following is the gist:

"Comrades, this person has challenged my integrity; in challenging my integrity he challenges the integrity of the Moscow branch of the Municipal Workers' Union and the Moscow Soviet; in challenging the integrity of these working class organizations he challenges the integrity of the whole working class." At this point the accuser interrupted to say that he would make a complaint to the Soviet and the conductor stopped speaking long enough to hand him a sheet of paper on which to write it. He resumed: "Comrades, this matter will be settled by the proper authorities but it also calls for a public rebuke. We cannot permit such insults always to go unchallenged. I ask everybody who supports me and resents such insults to the free workers of Russia to hold up their hands." Everyone but the nepman raised their hands, he subsided and the incident was closed.

The car had been running and making the usual stops all this time; it was jammed to the doors and the conductor soon had enough change to pay his debts. He stood at one end of the car and called out: "Who do I owe money to?" A hand would be held up and without any disorder the change would be passed from hand to hand to the claimant. All claims had been liquidated when Sokolnikov was reached and with the vindicated honor of the Russian workers safely in his keeping the conductor signaled for the car to start on its return trip.

No one sleeps much in Moscow in summer. The reason I never inquired but I believe it is because Moscow nights are too beautiful to waste in sleep. At any hour of the night one can stroll around either the outer or inner circle of the magnificent boulevards that encircle the city and meet groups of people, generally young people, walking and singing to the accompaniment of from one to half-a-dozen balaikas.

Sometimes the balaikas are missing and some one takes the lead and sings a verse with the rest joining in the chorus. The boulevards are dimly lighted and are ideal places for lovers. Moscow itself seems to have been built for lovers. At the darkest hour of the summer night the vivid blue of the sky can be seen thru the tree tops if one is on a boulevard or in a park; if out in the city, the gilded domes of the mosques with their delicate tracery stand out against the sky with a reminiscent effect that is puzzling until one remembers that in one's youth one saw pictures of just this kind in illustrations depicting the city in which the fairy princess dwelt.

In the deep twilight and shadows of the boulevards one cannot see the singers until they meet one almost face to face; the music from the darkness creates an air of pleasant mystery and one walks, miles without sense of fatigue until a sudden weariness sends one home to bed.

Without any set rules or regulations certain sections of the boulevards have come to have definite uses. In one section the Young Pioneers hold sway; in another trade unionists can always be found discussing the policies of their organizations; nurse-maids and their charges occupy a long stretch of the most picturesque district; Red soldiers and their sweethearts have pre-empted the section that runs along the Kremlin wall.

Three nepmen were eating one day in the little cafe we called the Hole-in-the-Wall but who's right name is the Moulin Rouge.

It is a cafe frequented by workers and one gets "Anglisky" beefsteak—a thick steak with a fried egg on top, potatoes and garnishments of lettuce,

The Man With the Air-Cooled Pipe

By HARRY GANNES

It was in a fashionable Paris Hotel during the hectic days following the close of the war. Grand Duke Alexander of Russia stalked into the room of Hell an' Maria Dawes, seeking counsel. From far-off Russia, the grand duke had received disquieting news. The Bolsheviks were exhibiting unexpected vigor, and clung to political power. The European powers were struggling with their own working class, and, Alexander, grown frantic, sought advice of the strong man from America who had the reputation of doing a job in a thoroughgoing and ruthless manner. The duke had been informed by his reactionary coterie that Brigadier-general Charles Gates Dawes would be the right man to appeal to for help in the fight against the chain-free Russian working class

For hours the grand duke opened his heart to Hell an' Maria. Dawes tells about this himself. Nor did the blustering former ward politician, shady banker and tinsel-braided soldier listen with unresponsive ear to the czarist tale of woe. What Dawes promised the duke no record exists to testify. We have but Dawes' own impression of the white-guard: "Alexander is in a position to know what he is talking about, and tonight being in distress of mind about the Crimea where the Bolsevists are advancing, and where a number of his children are living still, he opened his heart fully to me . . . He is. . . extremely likeable. . . I would trust him as a man."

Thruout his life Dawes had attracted to himself the pettiest of reactionaries as surely as a putrid, dead body attracts maggots. It was through no accident that the shyster lawyer, small bank and gas-corporation organizer of Lincoln, Nebraska, rose to the position of republican vice-presidential nominee. His entire life was a training for the qualifications of that position.

The McKinley presidential campaign of 1896 promised to be a stiff fight. All the political generalship that Mark Hanna could muster was necessary; and Illinois looked like a weak state for McKinley. William Lorimer, who was then at the head of the republican political machine in Illinois, was not entrusted with the job, even though he had the qualification, so dear to the heart of Mark Hanna, of being the crookedest politician in the state. Even the Chicago Tribune, which today is one of the firmest supporters of Dawes, could not swallow the open, wholesale graft of the Lorimer machine; and Dawes was put at the head of the McKinley campaign in Illinois to work hand and glove with Lorimer.

Thanks to Marx Hanna's genius and the unceasing flow of gold from Wall Street, McKinley got the presidency, and for his pains in the affair, Dawes became comptroller of the currency, which job he held from 1897 to 1902.

Previously, Dawes' only claim to destinction were that his father had fought with the Wisconsin volunteers in the Civil War; that a distant ancestor had accompanied Paul Revere in his famous midnight ride; that he was born in Marietta, Ohio in 1865; studied law and engineering, and incessantly smoked a pipe — while in France he changed to cigars.

When Dawes quit his government job in 1902, he founded the Central Trust Company of Illinois, whose board chairman he is today. In those days it was fashionable for politicians to organize banks or become interested in the directing of banking institutions. William Lorimer, Dawes old-time political bed-mate, became heavily interested in the LaSalle State Bank, organized by C. B. Munday. The LaSalle State Bank became involved in a huge swindling scheme, which later wrecked the bank losing millions of dollars. Lorimer and Munday were indicted for defrauding the state bank examiners; Munday was convicted and later scandalously pardoned.

The Baltimore Sun tells of a conversation between Lorimer and Dawes before the wrecking of the LaSalle State Bank. The state auditor was becoming apprehensive, and to mislead him, the Central Trust Company permitted Lorimer's bank to issue a $1,250,000 check on it, though the money never left the vaults of the Central Trust Company, and it was never intended that any money should be transferred to the crumbling LaSalle State Bank. When the crash came, Dawes' bank refused to be responsible for the $1,250,000, and the matter lodged in the state courts for nine years, being, finally decided against Dawes' Central Trust Company, by the Illinois Supreme Court. (Vol. 312, p. 396.) In the lower court, the Central Trust Company was ordered to pay $978,029.11 as its share in the bankruptcy, but the higher court set the amount at $165,000 and levied the costs against Hell an' Maria's institution "on the ground that the litigation was made necessary by the wrongful acts of the Central Trust Company."

Hell an' Maria even while an obscure banker began to think about the labor question. In his book "The Banking System of the United States," he declares that labor is a commodity and must be treated as such. Charlie has not only studied the theoretical enslavement of labor in his position as banker, but has had considerable experience in the actual exploitation of workers on a large scale. During the war he was in charge of 40,000 militarized French miners, and he tells with great pride in his "Journal of the Great War" how well and skillfully he was able to handle his labor supply and get results. Besides, Dawes had direct control over hundreds of thousands of British and American munition workers.

So it is a mistake to think that Hell an' Maria was revealing a new twist in his character when in St. Augustine Florida, April 1st, 1923 at a meeting of bankers, railroad directors, and steel magnates, he declared that he had urged President Harding to make the open shop one of the major planks in his re-election campaign.

Shortly after the Augustine declaration, Dawes, at a luncheon in Chicago attending by Chicago's leading bankers, manufacturers and business men, organized his "Minute Men of the Constitution," an organization whose rabid anti-labor policy has evoked even the wrath of some of the yellowest leaders of the American Federation of Labor. The "Minute Men" comes closer to a clear-cut Fascist formation than any other existing anti-labor group in the United States, for unlike the Ku Klux Klan, the "Minute Men" make purely national and capitalist principle their prime object, without proking religious antagonism.

Twenty-five years before the world war, Dawes and Black Jack Pershing were intimate friends. S. M. Felton, who was also a close friend and fellow bank director, became director-general of railways during the war. And again Dawes' connections bring him into the prominence which this time had back of it enough momentum to thrust him into the vice-presidential nomineeship.

Dawes became general purchasing agent of the American and Allied forces. In his "Journal of the Great War" Dawes tells how he got the job. The very first picture in the book is that of S. M. Felton and Dawes devotes a paragraph in red ink to the fact that Felton placed $600,000,000 worth of war contracts the first year he held his job as director-general of railways. However, Hell an' Maria does not inform us whether it was the graft possible in the expenditure of the huge sums he would handle and the contracts he had authority to make that gave him the incentive to leave his prosperous bank.

While in France, Hell an' Maria became intimately acquainted with most of the allied bankers and industrialists. He formed an intimate friendship with Louis Loucheur, then French minister of armaments, and France's foremost industrial capitalist and imperialist manipulator.

At the close of the war, one of the problems that faced purchasing-agent Dawes was that of disposing of the vast aggregation of military supplies in the war zones. Dawes accomplished his job in his usual brusque manner, and, as far as we know, did not make many personal notations on what he did. When the smoke and din of war cleared a bit and there was much talk about graft in war contract letting, about the ridiculously low price received for war supply materials, about the collosal wastage in disposing of American army stores in france, congress began to ask questions, and Dawes was called as a witness. The square-faced Lincoln, Nebraska, barrister, lately brigadier-general was pressed hard for information. This was new to him. In France he controlled the very lives of his 40,000 militarized miners. He had answered to no one but himself and his boyhood friend, Black Jack Pershing. Under oath now and questioned closely Dawes spurted out—shrieking in a high-pitched voice—"Hell an' Maria, I was sent over to do a job and I did it! Hell an' Maria." And ever since "Hell an' Maria," is the name by which all the capitalist virtues, blunt business demeanor, wanton and reckless disregard for pussyfooting economy, fearless anti-labor policy and tenacity of purpose of Charles G. Dawes is epitomized.

Dawes is also interested in oil. His brother, Benman Gates Dawes is president of the Pure Oil Company and the Ohio Cities Gas Company. The Pure Oil Company is a $150,000,000 concern. Very recently Dawes' bank floated a $15,000,000 bond issue for the Pure Oil Company.

As a man, the capitalist newspaper and magazine scribblers find Dawes a favorite subject. Some go into ecstacies about his pipe and his eccentric collar; others write reams about his love for profanity, dear to the secret heart of all "go-getters" and babbits. One writer in Collier's Weekly spent about 2,000 words telling why a French writer was justified in calling Dawes "The man you cannot do." Dawes has been called alternately a banker, a statesman, a soldier, a lawyer, an engineer, but never has, he been designated a politician by the kept press.

Macauley tells of Frederick the Great, busy in affairs of war and state with a quire of bad verse in one pocket and vial of poison in the other: Dawes carries Alice-in-Wonderland stories and mediocre music compositions in one portfolio, and a trick pipe in his vest pocket. Like Frederick the Great, who acted in every capacity and department then known to government, Dawes wants to be considered as a self-sufficient, all-around man—soldier, when necessary; banker when profitable, engineer when a large gas company needs to be organized, and musician to round out so many sided a character. Frederick the Great hired Voltaire to appreciate his "pingly" poetry; Dawes negotiates with Fritz Kreisler to play his pieces.

There is a story told of how Dawes used his Alice-in-Wonderland stories during an unusually bitter and intensely acrimonious debate between allied war purchasing agents. Dawes stopped the proceedings and drew from his pocket some of his own fairy stories, read them, thereby relieving the tense situation.

By training, by nature, and because of class position, Hell an' Maria is the most likely Mussolini America has yet pushed into the limelight. Strike-breaker Coolidge could find no better aid than the experienced militarized-labor expert; than the organizer of the anti-labor Minute Men; than the formulater of the plan, which, if put into effect is destined to degrade, not alone the German and American proletariat, but the working class of the world as well.

Education and the Need of a System

By MANUEL GOMEZ.

WE are still paying for the sins of the past. They continue to be potent forces leading us astray, and their effect is felt not only in the persistence of certain elements of socialist ideology, but in the very revolt from that ideology. The socialist party was a party of propaganda. We pride ourselves on being a party of action, knowing that only in the full tide of the struggle can the workers learn the lessons of the struggle, and that only in struggle can they acquire the solidarity, and temper, and will to power, necessary for the overthrow of capitalism.

The members of the Workers Party participate actively in all phases of the class fight, striving to win the leadership of the workers, to deepen their consciousness, to increase their striking power. Thus the party is establishing contact with ever-wider proletarian masses. At the same time it cannot be denied that the spread of the fundamental principles of Communism is not keeping step with the rapid growth of influence of the party. Inside the party itself, the number of comrades who have anything like a real Communist background is surprisingly small. Moreover, our comrades do not feel the need of education. In the swing back from the old socialist concepts, we have been obliged to emphasize action, action action—with the unavoidable result that many of our members, especially the younger ones, are losing all sense of proportion. There is growing up in our ranks a positive scorn for education. This is a form of proletarian snobbery which is likely to cost us dear.

The Propaganda Theses adopted at the Fifth Congress of the Communist International point out that the international conflicts in the C. I. "are at the same time ideological crisis in the respective parties," that viewed fundamentally, "all right and left deviations are due to deviations from the class ideology of the proletariat, from Leninist-Marxism." Evidence to support this is all around us.

When the delegates to the historic Second Congress of the Comintern arrived in Moscow, they were given copies of a new pamphlet, which in the days preceding the congress was to become the topic of feverish and excited discussion. This was Lenin's work on "The Infantile Sickness of Leftism." Never was anything better timed. The delegates were, for the most part, ardent revolutionary fighters such as John Reed from the United States, "Willie" Gallacher from Great Britain and Bordiga from Italy They had engaged in bitter struggles against social-democratic opportunism and social patriotism, and had learned to despise everything that smacked of compromise. Many of them did not believe any true revolutionary could ever be "too far to the left."

Lenin's pamphlet showed the direction in which this cult of "leftism" was heading. Penetrating beyond slogans and programs of action, Lenin laid bare, for the first time, the real ideological content of the tendency, showing it to be a deviation in the direction of anarco-syndicalism.

That was the virus of the malady, "left sickness," which was finding expression in the "Dutch Marxism" of the meteoric Western European Bureau of the International; in the strange phenomenon of an "anti-party" party, in the person of the Communist Labor Party of Germany; in the anti-parliamentarism of the American, English, Spanish and other parties, and in the failure on the part of nearly all the parties to comprehend the need of centralization and discipline, until it was explained again and again.

Just as the controversies of the Second Congress revealed an anarco-syndicalist ideology, so the recent conflicts in the German and other parties, following the October defeat were traceable to remnants of the old social-democratic ideology, which resulted in deviations to the right.

In our own party, the effects of insufficiently firm Communist ideology have been apparent. First we had a severe dose of leftism, which we were a long time overcoming, and which even today has by no means been entirely eliminated from our system. Some of the more serious consequences were anti-parliamentarism, a distorted trade union policy and a peculiar prejudice against the idea of a "legal" Communist party.

Today, many of the same comrades show evidence of "right sickness." They wish to "go to the masses," with a carefree disregard of the tasks implied in that slogan. Opportunistic mistakes on the part of these comrades do not mean that they are opportunists. Opportunism in our party springs from exactly opposite sources from those responsible for the inherent opportunism of the professionally opportunist socialist party. However precisely because we are a party of action, the danger of opportunism for us is especially great. Our mistakes result from entering into struggles, and participating in them without guiding principles, or without a firm grasp of principles, which in the long run amounts to the same thing.

If our party is to become a real "bolshevist" party, in the spirit of the Fifth Congress of the Communist International, it must be solidly rooted in revolutionary theory. This applies particularly to the individual members of the party. The propaganda theses already referred to, lay great stress on the importance of "more deeply hammering Marxism and Leninism into the consciousness of the Communist parties and the party members."

"Only by a real and organized assimilation of Leninist Marxism," continue the theses, "can the parties reduce the possibilities of political, tactical and organizational errors to a minimum and bring about the emancipation of the working class."

Hand in hand with our political and industrial activity among the masses must go the systematic education of our membership. Education must not be divorced from action. At the same time, it must not be exclusively "practical," limiting itself to special phases of trade union work, to interpretation of current problems, to tactical and strategic considerations, etc. To be truly practical, to equip our comrades for Communist work in all situations, there must be education in the fundamentals of Marxism and Leninism At the present time, there is an alarming number of party members who are insufficiently grounded in Communist theory to talk about it convincingly to their shopmates, let alone answer objections which may be interposed.

Nowadays we are taking applicants into the party with little or no preliminary examination. This policy is a decided step forward from the rigid sectarianism of a few years back; it is the only way in which we can hope to become a mass party; moreover, we should be no Communist party at all if we were not confident of our ability to make real Communists of the newcomers once they are inside the organization. But the policy, like everything else of value in our struggle, has its dangers Unless we are careful not to neglect the fundamental education of our new members, they will become familiar with the idea of maneuvering and flexibility in action, without ever comprehending the principles upon which the maneuvers are based. The character of our party will undergo a subtle but inevitable change, and we shall soon find that we are not a Communist party at all. Participation in Communist activity will do more than any amount of conscious study to make Communists out of the new members, but study is nevertheless indispensible.

All education is, to a very great extent, self-education. Without the enlightened co-operation of the membership, the most satisfactory educational program will fail. And large numbers of our members are still so completely dominated by the swing back from socialist party ideology, so carried away by the idea of "action," that they are wont to consider any meeting at all that has to do with immediate, "practical," work, more important than any study class. A vague sentiment prevails, that such education as is needed will be acquired haphazard, absorbed in some way or other in the natural course of things. Where this state of mind leads to disregard of systematic study it must be vigorously combatted.

Comrade Browder recently raised the slogan in our ranks: "Make it a party of Leninism!" Leninism is applied Marxism, or rather Marxism applied to the period of monopoly and imperialism. It is a doctrine of class struggle, with its own tactics and its own fundamental strategy. A Leninist party must be a revolutionary party, which means that it must be a party of action. But action without theory becomes sporadic, confused, contradictory, and leads inevitably into "left sickness" and the swamp of opportunism.

Let us remember the significant words of Lenin: "Without a revolutionary theory, a revolutionary movement is impossible!"

Protagonists of Slavery - - -

By M. Wilgus

IN an introduction to A. Smith's Wealth of Nations, the writer, E. B. Bax has this to say: "Another passage, also from the 'Politics' (Aristotle's) shows that the ancients looked upon slavery as no less a natural and permanent institution, than the modern middle class economists regard the system of wage labor at the present time." The comparison is absolute—without flaw. Go into any bourgeois college, university, graduate school, high school or elementary kindergarten and you can't escape the ever present fact that this whole crew of pedagogues are hammering into the heads of their students directly and indirectly that the present system of wage labor is the crowning glory of man's achievement. There may have been evolution and revolution in the past but since capitalism and sham democracy have been established there is no sense in having any more evolution or revolution. In other words those who say that the world and its institutions have not stopped evolving are dreamers, visionaries in fact are crazy radicals. This smug conception of life so pleasing to the money bags of all countries assures the cowardly pedagogues the conveniences of life at the price of sacrificing their manhood.

One cannot plead ignorance as an excuse here. For these men and women of the schools are well versed in the teachings of Darwin. They have heard enough of the fatal criticism levelled by Marxians against the conception of capitalist society as the be all and end all of evolution. And yet they never cease to look upon the present system of wage labor as the most natural and most permanent institution—an institution incapable of being scrapped.

Now what are the historical data in this connection? When slavery reigned supreme over the whole world, we find well fed Aristotle, the chosen god of modern pedagogues—and the courtier-flunkey of Alexander of Macedonia—putting it down in all "seriousness" that a society without the existence of chattel slavery is impossible and even inconceivable, exactly as the professional flunkeys of the trustee-managed universities put it down in all "seriousness" that a state of society where wage labor is eliminated is impossible and even inconceivable.

The inference to be drawn from this is that there undoubtedly existed in embryo form in those ancient days of chattel slavery a nucleus of thinking slaves who saw the practical possibility of a society where slavery was superseded by some sort of co-operation. The rebellions of Spartacus and Eunus, indeed, dissolve all doubt on this point. Why, you will ask, then the complete absence of all historical records dealing with the aspirations of the slaves? The answer is that no full-stomached writers like Aristotle & Co. thot it respectable to mention them just as the middle-class economists of today purposely ignore in their writings the criticisms advanced by the Marxians. Furthermore reading and writing being a great luxury the slaves were on the whole illiterate and even if revolutionary slaves did succeed in publishing a work against slavery they would have no readers except the nobility which means that none were published.

We do not mean to allege that there existed in ancient civilizations founded on chattel slavery well organized revolutionary parties whose object was to overthrow the ruling nobility of those days and establish a socialist commonwealth. But we do insist on the fact that the slaves did not take slavery as a natural and permanent institution but on the contrary did whatever was in their power in those days to fight against it. We claim that the Spartacus and Eunus affairs are proof enough—even if there was no other. Hence the well-chiselled phrases of Aristotle & Co. about superior and inferior men created by God is nothing but pedantic bunk calculated to please the slave owners of his day.

But the sophists and Aristotle notwithstanding, slavery—that is the direct ownership by one human being of another—did pass away and was succeeded by serfdom. Under this state of society where a man was neither a chattel slave or "free" we find the sophists and philosophers handing out the same well-starched hokum that our friend Aristotle was used to doing only modified to meet the new form of production. Thus Locke toward the end of his Essay on the Human Understanding tells us that he sees no way out for the degrading mass of serfs to better their condition physically, economically and intellectually. Or in other words this philosopher who did some good work in his time by contending against the stultifying influence of the church against all new ideas, saw serfdom as a natural and permanent institution.

But serfdom too has gone in spite of Locke & Co. And now we have capitalism or wage slavery and the professors and vulgar economists never cease telling us in five-inch words that a system of society where wage labor is not in existence is utopian, visionary and impossible of fulfilment. The poor, say these oracles of bourgeois wisdom, shall always be with us. The world however did not stop revolving because the Vicar of Christ on Earth rebuked Galielo for his "foolishness" and wage slavery too is being dragooned out out of existence by the merciless march of Revolutionary Labor. The Seligmans and Tausigs do not deserve pity. Men, well studied in the science of evolution, who say that evolution existed in the past but has stopped existing with the era of capitalism and hokum democracy, do not deserve our pity. Contempt should be their reward.

American Imperialism and European Social-Democracy

By L. Trotsky.

Before we go any further into this very important question, let us see what rules has American capital assigned to the radicals and mensheviks, to the social-democracy of that same Europe which is to be put on rations. Social-democracy has been given the task—and I am making this statement not in the spirit of a debating trick—to prepare the ground, i. e., to help politically to deliver Europe to the mercies of an American ration. What are, after all, the social-democrats of Germany, France and the socialists of all of Europe doing now? Let us look and see. They are educating themselves and are trying to educate the laboring masses of Europe in the religion of Americanism. This does not mean that they have all turned presbyterian or quaker, but it means that they have made a new political religion out of Americanism, out of the role of American capital in Europe. They are teaching or trying to teach the laboring masses that without the "pacifying" role of American capital and without its loans, Europe will not be able to hold her own.

They are opposing their own bourgeoisie, as the social-patriots of Germany are doing, not from the point of view of the proletarian revolution, not even from the point of view of social reforms, but from the point of view of exposing the intolerance, greediness, chauvinism and unwillingness of the German bourgeoisie to master of their masters. This is the only clue to a proper understanding of the present position and policy of the Second International. He who does not make this fact clear to himself will fail to grasps the meaning of current events, will be merely skimming over the surface of things subsisting on vague, meaningless phraseology.

Moreover, favor courts favor. Social-democracy is paving the way for American capital; is running in front of its chariot announcing its saving mission and glorifying in the coming of the American master. This work is not of little import. In former days imperialism would send missionaries as its advance guards. The priest would, as a rule, be shot by the savages in the colonies and sometimes even devoured. The warrior would come next to avenge the death of the holy man, and following in the footsteps of the warrior would come the merchant and the administrator.

American capital, in order to colonize Europe and to turn her into an American dominion of the new type, has no need for missionaries. Right there, in the midst of Europe, American capital has found a political party whose sole function it is to proclaim to the people of the world the gospel of Wilson, the gospel of Coolidge, the bible of stock exchanges of New York and Chicago. Such is the present mission of European menshevism.

But I repeat again: This zeal of social-democracy does not remain unrewarded. The mensheviks are deriving quite some advantages from the mire of poverty, how dare you resist the wishes of the American bourgeoisie? We shall mercilessly expose you before the masses of the German people!" Thus speaks the German social-democracy rising almost to the pathos of a revolutionary tribune . . . in defense of the American bourgeoisie.

The same thing can be observed in France. But because of the political traditions of France and because of the more decent reputation of the French franc, the tactics of the French socialists are more subtle, things are done there under cover. In substance, however, it is the game of the German social-democracy. The party of Leon Blum, Renaudel and Jean Longuet, bears the full responsibility for the peace at Versailles and for the Ruhr occupation. There is not a shadow of a doubt now that the government of Herriot, supported by the socialists, does not want to evacuate the Ruhr.

But now the French socialists can say to their ally Herriot: "The Americans demand that you evacuate the Ruhr on certain conditions. This you have got to do, because now we, too, demand that." The French socialists are putting out this demand not in the name of the French proletariat, but only because they want to subordinate the French bourgeoisie to the will of the American bourgeoisie. In this connection we must not forget the French bourgeoisie owes the American bourgeoisie 3,700 million dollars. This means something! America can at any moment shatter the French franc. Of course, the partial revival of this half-dead invalid, the Second International. For it is true that the Second, as well as the Amsterdam Internationals are again coming to life. Of course, they will not recover their pre-war vigor. Their former prestige is gone forever. The Communist International cannot be stricken out of existence; nor can this be done with the imperialist war which has seriously injured the spine of the Second International in many places at once. This is irreparable. And yet, with their spines broken, the Second and Amsterdam Internationals are making new efforts to rise up and straighten out their broken backs with the aid of American crutches.

The significance of this fact must be fully realized. During the imperialist war the German social-democracy was the most intimate ally of its bourgeoisie, was openly co-operating with the junkers. The same is true of the French socialists. How could an international function when its component parts were madly killing each other, accusing and abusing each other? Not even a mask or shadow of internationalism was left. All was broken to pieces. During the period of peace negotiations the same conditions prevailed. The peace of Versailles was only a ratification of the results of the imperialist war by the signatures of diplomats. Not a bit of international solidarity was in evidence! Essentially the same situation prevailed during the Ruhr occupation.

But now the great "crush 'em all"—American capital—is coming to Europe and says: "Here is your reparation plan and here is your program, gentlemen of the menshevist parties!" And social-democracy accepts this program as the basis for its activity. This new program has united the social-democracy of France, Germany, England, Holland and Switzerland. For every Swiss trader now hopes that Switzerland will increase her trade in watches after peace and order has been restored in Europe by the enterprising Americans. And the petty bourgeoisie, which most nearly finds its expression in the social-democracy, is now united spiritually upon the program of Americanism. In other words, the Second International has now a unifying program, the program which General Dawes has brought over from Washington.

The situation is, indeed, paradoxical. At a time when American capital is starting out on its most thievish exploit, it has the opportunity of masquerading as a savior and peace restorer, as the personification of historic justice, incidentally mapping out "international" policies for social-democracy which the latter accepts and recognizes as even more expedient than its former nationalistic policies. The expediency lies in this, that while your own bourgeoisie is right here at home and all its misdeeds can be immediately seen, American come to terms with the humane, democratic pacifist capital of America. This is at present the main issue in the political life of Europe and especially of Germany! In other words we are witnessing the transformation of the European social-democracy into a political agency of American capital.

THE FELLOWS THAT PLEDGE PEACE AND MAKE WAR

The League of Nations

This transformation is not at all surprising. If we keep in mind the fact that social-democracy has become the agency of the bourgeoisie, it will be clear that social-democracy, by the very logic of its political degeneracy had to become the tool of the most powerful, mightiest bourgeoisie in the world, the arch-bourgeoisie, i. e., the bourgeoisie of the United States. Inasmuch as American capital is taking upon itself the task of unifying Europe, of teaching Europe how to settle her disputes about reparations, war indemnities, etc., and inasmuch as the money-bag is in the hands of the American bourgeoisie, it becomes necessary for the social-democracies of Germany and France, in order to continue their policy of serving the bourgeoisie, to gradually transfer their allegiance to the chief boss instead of obeying their own bourgeoisie. Yes, the big boss has come to Europe: American capital. Therefore, it is quite natural for the social-democracies of Europe to become politically dependent upon the their mode of behavior. It was only recently, during the period of bitter civil strife that the social-democracy had to take upon itself the actual armed defense of the bourgeoisie against the working class, the same bourgeoisie which in fact was in alliance with the Fascisti. Noske is the living embodiment of this post-war policy of the German social-democracy. And how do things stand today? Today the social-democracy is playing a different role. The German social-democracy can afford now the luxury of maintaining an opposition to the bourgeoisie. The social-democrats can now criticise their own bourgeoisie thus differentiating themselves from the capitalist parties. But what is the nature of this opposition?

The German social-democracy thus speaks to its bourgeoisie: "You, the German bourgeoisie, are selfish, greedy, stupid and crafty, but there is on the other side of the Atlantic another bourgeoisie, one that is rich and powerful, but at the same time, noble, liberal and pacifist. This bourgeoisie has now come to us again and wishes to give us 800 million marks in hard cash to restore the value of our much-dilapidated mark (and promises of a stabilized gold mark sound good in Germany). What then are you kicking about? What is it that makes you feel so blue? You that had thrown the beloved fatherland headlong into the mire of poverty, how dare you resist the wishes of the American bourgeoisie? We shall mercilessly expose you before the masses of the German people!" Thus speaks the German social-democracy rising almost to the pathos of a revolutionary tribune . . . in defense of the American bourgeoisie.

The same thing can be observed in France. But because of the political traditions of France and because of the more decent reputation of the French franc, the tactics of the French socialists are more subtle, things are done there under cover. In substance, however, it is the game of the German social-democracy. The party of Leon Blum, Renaudel and Jean Longuet, bears the full responsibility for the peace at Versailles and for the Ruhr occupation. There is not a shadow of a doubt now that the government of Herriot, supported by the socialists, does not want to evacuate the Ruhr.

But now the French socialists can say to their ally Herriot: "The Americans demand that you evacuate the Ruhr on certain conditions. This you have got to do, because now we, too, demand that." The French socialists are putting out this demand not in the name of the French proletariat, but only because they want to subordinate the French bourgeoisie to the will of the American bourgeoisie. In this connection we must not forget the French bourgeoisie owes the American bourgeoisie 3,700 million dollars. This means something! America can at any moment shatter the French franc. Of course, the American bourgeoisie will not attempt to do that. No. She has come to Europe to introduce order and not to cause bankruptcies. Yes, she will not attempt to, but she could, if she wanted to. It is all in her power. In view of this collossal debt of almost four billions the argumenta of Renaudel and Blum sound quite convincing to the French bourgeoisie. At the same time the social-democrats in Germany France and other countries are able to pursue the policy of an opposition to their own bourgeoisie on specific issues, thus stealing their way back into the confidence of certain sections of the working class.

Moreover, this present situation opens up for the menshevist parties of various parts of Europe certain possibilities for united "action." Even now the social-democracy of Europe appears to be quite a harmonious body.

This fact is in a way new. For the past ten years, since the beginning of the imperialist war, there was not a single case of co-ordinated action on the part of the European social-democracy. Now, such an opportunity has presented itself, and the mensheviks are now all, in one co-ordinated chorus singing a hymn to American imperialism supporting its program, its international function and its great mission.

And here we find the causes for the

Drifting Into War With Japan

By Alexander Rittelman

If you are interested in the real reasons for the latest anti-Japanese campaign in the capitalist press of the United States, don't look to Geneva, Switzerland, where the League of Nations (so-called) is at present holding its sessions, but look toward China where actual war is taking place for a readjustment of the balance of power in China among the imperialist nations of the world.

The Real Bone of Contention

The story that I am going to relate in just a few words, is an old one. It is the story of the relations between the imperialists of America and Japan, each of the two groups cherishing ambitions and dreaming dreams of conquest, plunder and robbery of the so-called backward countries of the Pacific Ocean.

China for instance. What better and richer prize is there now in the imperialist game to fight for? Particularly for the capitalists of Japan and the United States. None to compare to China. It is rich in man-power and in natural resources. It has a population of nearly 500 million people. It is backward in the sense that it has not yet developed a capitalist economy and a capitalist class of its own to take care effectively of its own affairs. Because of this latter fact China has no stable centralized government to resist the encroachments of foreign imperialists.

Another reason why China looks so desirable to the capitalists of Japan and America lies in the fact that as yet not one single capitalist power has succeeded in conquering China for itself to the exclusion of other powers. China is still to be had, it continues to serve as the battling ground for about half a dozen imperialist groups, and it is in this battle that American and Japanese capitalism have definitely locked horns.

The Conquest of the Pacific

Very early in its history, the rising American capitalist class had realized the importance of the countries of the Pacific Ocean for its imperialistic expansion. The Caribbean islands, China and the Far East generally have for quite some time been luring the imagination of our enterprising imperialists. They see the finger of fate beckoning to them from those far-away countries with promises of glory, power and profits. And they have answered the call. They have issued on the great conquest of the Pacific, and on the road to their final goal have already secured such monumental acquisitions, to mention only a few, as the Philippines, the Caribbean islands, and the Panama Canal.

The capitalists of the United States shall rule the Pacific!—this has been and still is the militant slogan of the growing and fattening American imperialism. The policy of the so-called Open Door in China is merely camouflage for the plundering expeditions of American imperialism into the countries of the Far East.

Japanese Capitalism in China

Japan is a neighbor of China, everybody knows that. At the time when Japan was still in alliance with England, the future looked very bright to the capitalists of Japan, the latter has been securing practical control over a number of Chinese provinces, and jointly with the British was gradually establishing a virtual protectorate over the whole of China.

This did not at all please the capitalists of America. But what could they do? Very little to change conditions materially. England was still all-powerful (remember, we are now speaking of the pre-war period), German was pushing ahead with all her might, and so were France and Russia and Japan. The days of America's financial world power were yet to come.

But, nevertheless, the conflict between America and Japan was on. It has been more than two decades since Japan has become, to use a term of the traditional diplomacy, the "natural enemy" of the United States. Which means in human language that the imperialist ambitions of the Japanese capitalists presents a stumbling block to the same ambitions of the capitalists of America, this stumbling block to be overcome and destroyed.

Here is in a nutshell the old story of the basis of the mutual relations between the capitalists of America and the capitalists of Japan.

Post-War American Diplomacy in China

The real business of clipping the wings of Japanese imperialism in China by the capitalists of America began soon after the conclusion of the late war. We needn't go now into much detail. Suffice it to say that since the days of the "Peace" Conference at Versailles the capitalists of America have succeeded in the following:

Japan has been compelled to return to China some of the annexed provinces.

Japan has been compelled to relinquish a great portion of her virtual protectorate over the rest of China.

Japan has lost her alliance with England because of the demand of the United States.

Japan has been compelled to accept the naval ratio of 5:5:3.

All of which has been brought about by the insistence and pressure of the capitalists and the government of the United States.

Now, how do you suppose did the Japanese capitalists feel about it? Rotten, indeed. And then, on top of all this, came the earthquake of last year which still further decreased the fighting abilities of the Japanese imperialists.

So, there you are. The capitalists of America in the bloom of their power, dictating and imposing terms upon Europe, hurrying headlong and triumphantly into the further conquest of the Pacific, and securing for themselves an ever larger share of the imperialist spoils in China. On the other hand, the capitalists of Japan: weakened, hamstrung and blocked in their expansion. The result? Very simple. A grim determination on the part of the capitalists of Japan to prepare in all possible ways for a life and death struggle against the imperialists of America.

The Wars of Chinese Generals.

To repeat: It is the conquest of China that is at stake in the American-Japanese relations and not the exclusion laws against the Japanese passed by the last session of the United States congress. These laws have merely added fuel to a fire already burning.

At present this struggle for control over China between the imperialists of the so-called Great Powers is manifesting itself partly in the war of the Chinese Generals.

What is this war about? We shall leave out of present consideration one angle of this war (reseving the matter for treatment in a future article) which is the conspiracy of all of the foreign imperialists, in alliance with the Chinese reactionaries, to overthrow the nationalist-revolutionary government of San-Yat-Sen at Canton, Southern China. Then, there remains what? A war between two generals. Their names are: Wu-Pei-Fu and Tchan-Tzo-Lin. The field of battle at present is Shanghai and the surroundings. The stakes are the possession and control of the provinces of Central and Northern China.

There are the bare facts. But what is the real meaning and significance of this war of generals? Well, it has two angles. One is internal, that is, various sections of the Chinese bourgeoisie are struggling for power among themselves and are rallying for this purpose to one or another, of the warring generals.

The other angle is external. It is the fact that one of these generals is supported by one set of foreign imperialists and the other general is supported by another set of foreign imperialists. More concretely: The imperialists of the United States and England are supporting general Wu Pei-Fu, while Tchan-Tzo-Sin is supported by the imperialists of Japan.

In other words one of the phases of this war of Chinese generals is the fact that it is really a war between American and Japanese capitalism for power and influence in China. And the Japanese incident in Geneva is merely a reflection of a struggle that is already on.

We are drifting into a big war with Japan. What is the labor movement of the United States going to do about it?

capital is remote and its transactions cannot be so easily observed. That is why American capital can come to Europe and play there the role of a pacifier. And then its power! This colossal, fabulous, unheard of wealth which so appeals to the vanity of the petty bourgeoisie, to the vanity of the social-democrat.

And here I might tell you, by the way, something of my own experiences with representatives of American capital. During the last year, due to my official position, I had the occasion to talk to some American senators, republican and democratic. Their appearance and manner betrays appalling provincialism. I am not even certain whether or not they are well acquainted with the geography of Europe. Out of politeness let us assume that they are. But when they discuss politics, they talk like this: "I told Poincare," "I remarked to Curzon," "I explained to Mussolini." They feel themselves in Europe as leaders and bosses. Thus we can find some newly-hatched millionaire, some manufacturer of condensed milk or of other canned products speaking with an air of condescension to the most responsible bourgeois political leaders of Europe. And it is because of this fact that some maneuvers of the British bourgeoisie calculated to preserve her leadership in Europe, may prove to be faulty. But on this subject of Great Britain I shall speak in my next article.

MILITARISTS GAG WITH RAGE; PLAY GOES OVER BIG

"What Price Glory?" Gets Crowded Houses

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—In spite of attacks by army and navy officers which declare that the play "interferes with recruiting for the marine corps," "What Price Glory?" continues to play to packed houses who do not seem to mind the omission of a few of the worst oaths attributed by the producer to some of the "best citizens." Sydney G. Gumpertz, managing editor of Empire State Legionaire and state historian American Legion, department of New York, addressed a letter to one of the authors of the play, Lawrence Stallings, in which Gumpertz, after giving his war record in full, denounces the dramatist and declares that he has "insulted every living soldier and profaned our honored dead." Gumpertz concluded by saying "if some marines were like this, then I thank God that I was in the army."

United States attorney Hayward, a colonel himself, saw the play before any complaint was raised and did not take action against it. It now rests in his hands whether he will order it stopped on the charge that it violates federal statute forbidding wearing of the uniform of the army, navy, or marines on the stage in any way to bring discredit on those branches of the service.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3. — Girls who work in the closed dance halls have to dance at least 40 dances an evening to earn $2.40, says Maria W. Lambkin, who has just reported on conditions in the dance halls for certain social agencies. In "closed" halls the girls are employed by the manager and must dance with whomever he chooses no matter how offensive the partner may be. Miss Lambkin suggests a minimum wage for the girls.

Letters From Moscow

By Anna Porter

ON this week's program were some visits to Forest Schools, which supplement in a measure the regular schools in Russia. In a suburb of Moscow, reached by tram, is the "First Sanitarium School of the Moscow Division," for children not up to the normal physical standard, which generally means some stage of tuberculosis. The large old house, simple, two-storied, built of logs, stands in ample grounds in the midst of a great stretch of young forest of pine and birch. The old forest which this replaces was once alive with deer, and was the favorite hunting-ground of the father of Peter the Great. Scattered thru the young growth are many of the great pines of the older forest. The children cared for here are from nine to fourteen years of age. They are sent out from the city schools to build up their health, for a year or for a summer, and return to town when improved.

The sleeping rooms are large and airy and quite rare. Each room has half-a-dozen or more single iron beds, well spaced, and a large stationary porcelain washbasin, with running water. The windows are wide and high, and open on large sleeping verandas, on which the beds are moved in the summer. The study hours are short,—from 10 to 12 in the morning, and from 5 to 7 in the afternoon, and there is an hour for sleep after noon—dinner, and a sun bath following it—when there is sun. At 9 is breakfast, at 1 dinner, "tea" at four and supper at 7:30. The free hours are spent in supervised or free play, gardening and other outdoor activities. Each child has two eggs and two glasses of milk a day, meat twice a week, and porridge and potatoes, but few green vegetables. The teacher who showed us about felt that more meat was needed, but I told her that in our country the tendency was more and more away from meat and toward green vegetables. I notice this neglect of vegetables everywhere in Russia, tho the shops and booths have bounteous displays. Outside of soup you get practically no vegetables at any restaurant unless as a special order. Probably the raising of vegetables at these schools will be made a point of later when organization is more complete.

As everywhere under the Soviets these children have their own organization and committees, and these are illustrated by colored charts on the wall, drawn according to the individual ideas of the children making the charts, the most important division being sanitation and hygiene. They visit other schools, "homes," and factories, and compare the housing and conditions with those of their own school, which they try to make a model. Recently they visited and inspected a leather factory noting especially the sanitary and working conditions, and investigating the effects of these on the workers.

The classes are held in airy, light rooms, and open and half-enclosed verandahs. In one room they make and exhibit, among other things, models of homes and farms in various countries of the world, for comparison with their own mode of living. This is a subject that is made much of. As in our own schools, the walls are covered with the children's drawings, decorative work and handicraft. It is now vacation time, when they have only "free" work and study. During our morning visit, most of the children were occupied without supervision. As we passed thru a porch a youthful draftsman appealed to our teacher-guide for help on a chart he was making to show the total and proportionate number of men killed in the various countries in recent imperialistic wars, Russia leading in high death rate, Germany, Austria-Hungary and France following. This large wall chart was adapted from a small official statistical record and chart, and the child was using a homemade yard-stick,—metre-stick, I should say.

In an inner class room, four children had come for help in multiplication. On a verandah, a reading group was learning about birds. Four idle children followed us about with intelligent interest. Questioned,—two had left mud-houses to dry, while the other two had finished some work which had occupied their morning. When the school is in regular session the study hours from 10 to 12 are given to theory, while during the two afternoon hours this theory is in some practical way applied. The home models follow the comparative study of peoples and field study of birds and flowers follow the reading. The war chart was probably related to mathematics, mechanical drawing, history, sociology, and economics! And the drawing, painting and modeling illustrated concretely many of the things they had learned in the morning classes. Such activities must be ingeniously directed by the teacher to relate them to theory. We saw a half-finished portrait of Lenin, inlaid with barks and mosses. The thin white birch was used for the face, and the likeness, copied of course from a portrait, was remarkable. Over one doorway hung a placard, largely lettered, "Vladimir Ilyich Lenin is dead. Children, follow his teachings." Nowhere are the people allowed for one moment to forget the ideals of the great leader. Only a little music is as yet taught in this school, and that not systematically, but the children are taught rote singing, and have given one act of a simple Tchaikowsky opera. This is only one of many such schools under the supervision of the Moscow division of the educational department.

A school of a different kind I visited at the village of Rastorgouyevo, an hour by train from town. This is the so-called Children's Village, a scattered group of houses among the forest trees, where the children from city homes come in the summer for change and study. Here the tiniest tots are taken. We arrived just as the teachers were assembling on a broad verandah for a conference,—a dozen or more women, and one man—the head of the music department for kindergartens. He wore white sport trunks, and open-necked white linen blouse, and with his closely shaven head and darkly tanned skin, looked like a polished bronze statue. Most of these people are sunworshippers. The children, too, ran about in scanty slips but the women were all more or less conventionally, tho simply and sensibly dressed, most of them with long hair. Only one or two resorted to cigarettes to help them thru the ordeal of the conference, perhaps because the vital questions discussed absorbed their restlessness. For us tea and jam were brought.

The principal subject of discussion was the epidemic of whooping-cough. Some of the teachers contended that isolation was absolutely necessary, others that it was absolutely impossible, and it seemed to be a pretty serious thing that the impossible should be absolutely necessary. This is a situation, I fear, that often arises in Russia, and I suppose it was finally met as usual, with some resourceful compromise. Every good Communist, who is making his regular contribution toward the support of an orphan, would feel a satisfaction in visiting these schools, that he is helping to make them possible.

There are still many children, even in Moscow, running about the streets or selling things more or less illegally, —even begging and stealing. As fast as possible, they are being brot into homes, and into the organization of the Young Pioneers, now beginning to call themselves Young Leninists. Many of these children, unused to restraint, run away, or create much trouble in the homes. There is the story of an organization of gutter children, who lived in a passage under a railway station. Unspeakably dirty it was, but more or less warm and protected. They had kept this retreat hidden from the police, and crept out to beg and steal, about the train and the station rooms, and in the adjoining streets. When their well-concealed lair was at last discovered, a committee of teachers went to bring them into the homes. It was only after long persuasion that the organization consented to send out a delegation to treat with a delegation of teachers, and finally after discussion of terms and conditions, they capitulated. How many of these went back to the old life, I do not know but most of them are hardened little professionals at a tender age.

The hopeful point of the whole story is that while in other countries as fast as one set is redeemed others take their places and the same tragic round goes on,—in Russia they are slowly redeeming the conditions that make for criminal vagabondage. While we continue cheerfully pouring water into the sieve, refusing to notice the holes, "realist" Russia is putting a solid bottom in the sieve. But Russia lacks funds and housing to deal with them all, even in such an organized center as Moscow,—in addition to the complications that primitive training and influence bring into the problem. As yet not more than half the children of Russia have ben brot into organized schools.

Still, in no country is such a fundamental effort being made to deal with the child question. In no other country can it be made so fundamentally, because at the base of it lies the economic question, and Russia is the only country dealing fundamentally with economic causes.

The nepman had consumed much beer and one of them called the waiter, using the Russian word for servant instead of "citizen" or "comrade." The waiter very politely informed him that there had been a revolution in Russia and that there were no more servants. "If tavarisch sticks in your throat," he said, "the least you could do would be to call me citizen." The nepman flew into a towering rage and following the Russian custom everyone in the little garden where we were eating took part in the argument. He assailed the Soviet government in vitriolic terms and when someone said "Here is one they forgot to send away," referring to the Commission for the Suppression of Counter-Revolution, now abolished—the nepman said, "Those days are gone!" "They were not such bad days," said the waiter, "and maybe they went too soon."

A man wearing a golden beard that reached half-way to his waist advised the nepman, "You had better get out of here before you say something you will be sorry for," only to have the nepman, who seemed on the verge of apoplexy, turn on him with, "A beard is supposed to be a mark of wisdom but you are the same as these other fools!" Everybody laughed at the bearded one and the nepman, apparently feeling that he had scored a point, threw a coin on the table and said to the waiter, "Here is your tip." He turned to leave but the waiter pocked up the money and announced: "You have attempted to bribe a public servant before these witnesses and I should call a military policeman and have you arrested but it is better that you go. Take your bribe with you."

The nepman turned, hurled a curse at the bearded man, and left the restaurant while everyone leaned back in their chairs and laughed till the nepman's companions paid their bill and hurried away after carefully calling the waiter "tavarisch."

There are few drunks in Moscow but about two o'clock one morning I met one who was singing loudly a Red Army song as he zigzagged down the street. He was met by a policeman who asked what he had been drinking. Interspersed with bursts of song, the happy lad replied that he had had some vodka. Vodka is forbidden so the policeman told him to come along. The drunk sat down in a convenient doorway and after telling the policeman that he intended to stay there till morning, policeman or no policeman, resumed his singing.

The policeman looked worried; he too sat down. Another policeman came along, and after some consultation each took an arm and lifted the singing drunk to his feet. He let his feet drag, changed suddenly to the "Song of the Volga Boatmen," the policemen joined in and off went the three to the jail.

If one has heard the "Song of the Volga Boatmen" it is easily understood that it can come in very handy for the kind of heavy labor that the policemen were engaged in.

The All-Russian Municipal Workers' Union held its national convention while I was in Moscow and I was privileged to attend as a guest of the organization. For something like four hours there were presentations of banners from other organizations of workers and peasants and then came a pageant representing the history of labor from earliest time down to the present.

The various spectacles of which the pageant was composed were staged to the accompaniment of a 60-piece orchestra and a sort of poem or chant that was recited by all the members of the cast. The spectacles were beautiful and deeply impressive as well as perfectly acted. There was not a slip in the whole three hours. There was plastic dancing as perfect in execution as anything I have ever seen. Every person in the orchestra and all the actors and dancers were members in good standing of the All-Russian Municipal Workers' Union.

These facts are important but it was not until after the curtain had hidden the last act of the pageant that I was able to explain to myself a puzzling something about the whole affair.

It was the amazing fact that there were more or just as many people in the pageant as there were in the audience. Were such a spectacle to be staged in the United States, it would require months of preparation and would have to be presented to a crowd of 5,000 people if the bare expenses were met. The All-Russian Municipal Workers' Union has staged this spectacle simply for the entertainment of its delegates and with the exception of a few privileged persons like myself that is all that were present.

Bookstores. People reading. Workers reading as they eat their lunch on the job. Workers reading in the street cars and the cafes. Workers reading in the parks. Clerks reading in the co-operative stores when customers are scarce.

Bookstores on every corner. Three or four in each block in the business district. Open-air bookstands everywhere. Pedlers with racks of books and pamphlets swung from their shoulders on the street and in the restaurants.

"The Whistle"—the official daily paper of the All-Russian Union of Railway Workers has a circulation of over 300,000. "Isvestia" has a circulation of 500,000 with over a million applicants for subscriptions on file that cannot be filled for lack of sufficient technical equipment. Every union with its daily paper and numberless magazines. Special publications for and by every kind of workers' organization—educational, technical, cultural. The Soviet government is the biggest publisher in the whole world, says the report of the United States department of commerce.

More than 300 volumes on Lenin and various phases of his life and activity have been published since his death.

"The Life of Henry Ford" exceeds in sales any book published in Russia Lest any good comrade be scandalized by this seeming heresy let me hasten to say that this has nothing to do with politics. It simply means that all major political questions having been solved in Russia, the Russian workers seek in the life of Henry Ford the secret of his industrial methods.

The Russian masses are a humorous and jovial lot.

This may run counter to all that Gorki, Dostoevsky, Andreyev, Tolstoi and Chekov have written and therefore be literary blasphemy but I speak only of my own impressions. Then again there has been a revolution in Russia and I may be right.

The party cleaning during which thousands of lukewarm Communist elements were expelled from the organization was almost the sole topic of conversation in Russia for months. Of the thousands of humorous anecdotes that were retailed in party meetings, union halls, in the cafes and all other centers of discussion during this period, I submit the following to prove my contention:

A comrade was called before the Control Commission for examination. He was asked: "What is your social origin?" He replied: "The same as Lenin's." "What is your view of the Red Army as an instrument for the conquest of power?" "The same as Trotsky's." "What is your style of living?" "The same as Kamenev's." "What are your views on drinking " "The same as Ryckov's." "What are your views of the marriage relation " "The same as Kollontai's." "What are your views on the role of the peasants in the revolution?" "The same as Kalinin's."

The Control Commission consulted for a moment and then said: "Expelled from the party."

"What?" said the aggrieved comrade, "with so many illustrious examples to my credit?"

"Yes," said the chairman of the Control Commission," the cumulative effect is too much."

There is certainly a large and human quality about this story.

This same quality is carried into the humorous publications of Soviet Russia.

"Red Pepper" and "Hot Water" are two typical examples of this kind of journal. They are, in a way, like "Life" and "Judge" with the difference that the quips are very pointed, the names of the participants are generally given and most of the squibs are furnished by workers and peasants.

A few samples:

"The military policeman in blank village (the name of the village is given and also the name of the policeman) has an assistant."

"Is that so? What does he need an assistant for in such a small and peaceful village?"

"To carry letters to his sweetheart." (the name of the sweetheart is also given).

"I have been here two weeks trying to see the manager of the blank factory" (the name of the factory is given.)

"Well, if you really want to see him you had better move your family here; it may take you all summer because he hates nothing so much as being disturbed."

"What is all that noise in the blank hospital?" (The name of the hospital is given).

"Oh, that's the matron. The patients have just asked her for fresh bedlinen."

"The miners in blank village (the name of the village is given) have houses that are well-ventilated. The manager is a fresh-air fiend."

"Does he insist that they keep their windows open?"

"No, he let's the roofs stay open."

Now this is real humor, dealing with the sweeping everday facts of the life of the workers and peasants. Incidentally can you picture the effect of these pointed jests in keeping careless comrades to the straight and narrow path of Communist rectitude?

A million workers marched in Moscow in the demonstrations held on the day set aside by the Third International for agitation against imperialist war. They marched in solid streams from all parts of the city to the Red Square carrying the tattered banners of the revolution and new ones inscribed with revolutionary slogans. I saw perhaps a third of these marchers as they surged past the Comintern building, the Lux Hotel and the Lenin mausoleum. McManus and I shouted greetings until we were hoarse. It was a sight that one can never forget but again it is not the most important thing that happened that day.

The Russians express supreme approval by seizing the person whom they desire to honor and tossing him up in the air until he begs for mercy. Ryckov, who had been shouting greetings to the marchers from the top of the Lenin mausoleum for about two hours, tried to slip into the Kremlin thru the crowd as it spread out over the Red Square. Someone recognized him and about the same time Kalinin, president of the Soviet Republics, and Zinoviev, were also recognized. Grinning faces and hands outstretched to seize us met McManus and I as we stepped down from the mausoleum but we threw dignity to the winds and fled. I looked back over my shoulder and saw the three men whose names are symbolic of world revolution and the dictatorship of the proletariat, the personification of the power of the workers and peasants of Russia, tossed in the air again and again while the happy roar of the assembled thousands made the ground tremble beneath my feet.

Can anyone conceive of Calvin Coolidge in a similar situation?

Can a Shop Nucleus Replace a Branch?

(Letter to the Editor)
By L. COOPER.

Comrade M. Abern's article in the magazine section of the DAILY WORKER, what can shop nuclei do? can be divided into two parts: criticism and construction. As much as he is correct in the first part, in the criticism of the branch activities by just as much he is rather wrong in his plans of reconstruction of the party into shop nuclei.

It is true the branches as they are now constructed do not do much actual work. Members do not attend their shop fraction meetings and are inactive in the unions. We have to press upon them to pay more attention to this work.

But the reconstruction of the party into shop nuclei will do more harm to the party than do good.

We have to bear in mind that we live in the most reactionary capitalist country. As soon as our shop nuclei will meet in the factory either at lunch hour or after work, all of them will be fired the very first day. Besides after five or even four and one-half hours of hard work you feel like having your lunch and you go to a lunch room. There you cannot have your meeting; this is clear to everyone of course. After the day of work is over you cannot have any meetings again, as you are tired and rushing home. The tailors and the office workers might get time to meet but the machinists, blacksmiths, laborers, etc., will not find any time to meet, while every member can attend his party branch meeting after supper.

It seems to me that Comrade Abern did not work in a shop lately and he forgot what the conditions are there. He says "they can meet almost any time, since they are always together." But how about the dogs that are watching your step, that your machine should not stop for a second? In the Baldwin Locomotive Works, in the Midvale Steel Co. watchmen are placed in the lavatories so that no one sits too long and does not attend too often. In the smaller places it is still worse.

"They pay their dues at noon lunch to the secretary of the shop nuclei," does not the secretary have to eat, or will the foreman give him an extra one-half hour for lunch?

I just imagine the activity of such nuclei. I cannot see how they can discuss an important party question at the lunch hour, if they have to go to the lunch room first, and having the "dogs" watching them.

"There is the question of wall news papers or bulletins written in ink or pencil, if need be, and posted in the factory somewhere for the workers in the shop." Comrade Abern must think he is in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, where all this is done openly. Try to paste the most innocent announcement on the wall and you will be fired, not only the one who did it but the whole nucleus.

We did not reach the state where we can work too much in the open in the factories. Do not forget that union officials are against us, as Communists, as members of T. U. E. L., the capitalist agents watch us closely and consequently we cannot work as free as we have to.

I agree and insist upon it that the shop nuclei must exist and work hard, but do not agree that it should function as a party branch. Our party activity is very small now but it will be less yet, if we reorganize the party on the shop nuclei basis.

What the party should do is to compell every member to be active in his nucleus otherwise to expell from the party, the same way when the member does not pay his dues.

I would like to ask Comrade Abern how is he going to construct the nuclei of the painters and paper hangers, who might not meet in one place for years. There are two painters in our branch, they are working for the same man and for the last two years did not meet even once either in the office, or on the job. How will they work in the party?

Now they see each other at the branch meetings once in two weeks and after very week. I fail to see the benefit of the reconstruction of the party in this manner, especially the way Comrade Abern puts it up. However, it does not mean that I will resist such a step of the Workers Party.

EDITOR'S NOTE—We welcome the expression of opinion by our comrades on the question of Shop Nuclei which is to become one of the most important means of building our party into a mass Communist party. We shall gladly publish articles on this question by members of the party provided the matter is treated in a concise and practical manner.

Comrade Cooper seems to be in favor of shop nuclei but he objects to these nuclei becoming the basis of the party organization. In this objection Comrade Cooper is wrong. It is the understanding and intruction of the Communist International that the shop nucleus must become the basic unit of the party. Why? For two reasons mainly. First, because it is only thru the shop that a real mass foundation can be created for our party. Second, because the only way to make shop nuclei (which Comrade Cooper is in favor of) real, living organs of the party is by giving these nuclei all the functions and all the authority of a basic party unit.

As to the extent to which shop nuclei will be able to function in the open, we don't think we have any illusions about that. Comrade Cooper is perfectly right when he points out the possible persecutions from bosses and foremen against our comrades of the shop nuclei. But what of it? The road to Communism is a road of sacrifice and suffering, but that's no reason for giving up the struggle for Communism. What we should have to do in this case, as in all other cases of persecution by our enemies, is to be careful, practical and persevering. We fight in the open as long and as much as we can, and, when driven to it, continue underground. This is true of shop nuclei in the same sense as it is true of our party as a whole.

The question of how to organize parties, when and how the nuclei should meet, and problems of a similar technical nature will no doubt crop up at every turn of the game as soon as we begin earnestly the building of shop nuclei. But all these minor problems will be taken care of in due time on the basis of the experience of the entire party organization.

SLATE PERSHING AS WAR CHIEF

Make Ex-Kaiserites Work, Urge Communists

AS WE SEE IT
By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

THIS column travels around the world in quest of something to fill it up, or rather fill it down. It starts at the top, you will notice. There are plenty of juicy news morsels in the papers this morning that would warrant comment, but why go far afield when something just as interesting is happening at our very doors, yea, right in the office.

A NEWSPAPER office always had as much mystery for me—when in my teens—as the recesses of a clergyman's conscience seems to have for the female portion of his flock. What happens in a newspaper office is gobled up mentally with great relish. So today instead of following the gyrations of Hing Hussein of Hedjaz or his son Feisal of Iraq, the tuchuns of China and their capitalist paymasters, the whirling dervishes who are raising much anti-British dust in the deserts of Arabia, or the latest political miscarriage brought forth from the intellectual womb of Calvin Coolidge, the veil curtain will be lifted so that our readers may take a peep into the the offices of The DAILY WORKER.

EVERY paper of any consequence has a circulation manager. His job is to think up new schemes for getting more people to read the paper he is employed by. Capitalist papers pay their circulation managers large salaries besides placing at their disposal big funds to pay prizes for cross word puzzles and other stunts. There is no mystery about that. The capitalist circulation managers don't care who buys their paper. When their circulation goes up, so does the price of advertising and the treasury grows fat. So does the owner.

EVEN a Communist Daily must have a circulation manager, besides a business manager. But the salary of a capitalist circulation manager is just about what it took to start the DAILY WORKER. And Communist managers do care who read the papers. They want workers to read the papers. To do them justice the editors see to it that The DAILY WORKER is not a palatable literary dish for the capitalist class.

WHILE The DAILY WORKER does not spurn advertising revenue, the object of a circulation drive with us is not to secure more and better paying advertising, but to get more workers reading the Communist Daily, to get them thinking about their class, their power and the ease with which they could free themselves from the bondage of capitalism if they only would organize.

THEREFORE the business manager and the circulation manager put their heads together and hatched a scheme for bringing in new subscriptions. It has the virtue of novelty. Sounds rather rough at first. It is a brick-laying and a brick-throwing contest. And when I think about brick-

WORKERS PARTY WINS RIGHT TO HOLD ITS OPEN AIR MEETINGS

The Workers Party came out victorious in a free speech fight conducted Saturday night at the corner of Lawrence and Sawyer Aves., where Peter Herd was arrested and ordered not to speak again, upon request of the military intelligence department.

Peter Herd was the principal speaker Saturday night, and he again explained to the crowd the Japanese situation, showing how American capitalists are trying to trump up another war in order to secure control of Chinese and other Pacific markets.

Other speakers were Sam Hammersmark, advertising manager of the DAILY WORKER, and Paul Cline, of the Young Workers League.

Those who signed petitions to place the Workers Party candidates on the ballot must register if their signatures are to count.

PRUSSIAN DIET ASKED TO TAKE ALL PROPERTY

Demand Castles Become Kindergartens

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, Oct. 5.—The scions of the dethroned Hohenzollern family, living in Prussia will receive the doles—the small sum which the government hands out to workers out of a job—instead of huge allowances running into many millions, which the social-democratic government has been presenting to the ex-princes and princesses every month, provided that the Prussian diet passes a bill introduced by the Communists.

Other provisions of the bill call for the confiscation of all Hohenzollern property and the conversion of castles and villas into kindergartens and homes for disabled soldiers.

OCTOBER 14 IS LAST DAY FOR REGISTRATION

Communists Are Urged to Go to Polls

Leaders of the Workers Party are urging party branches and individual members to do everything in their power to get the party members and sympathizers to the polls to register between now and October 14.

Vote the Ticket Straight.

Communists voters registering in Cook county will vote for all of the presidential electors pledged to William Z. Foster and Benjamin Gitlow, candidates for president and vice-president, for William F. Dunne, for governor, for J. Louis Engdahl for United States senator, and Moritz J. Loeb for secretary of state, and for the congressional candidates in each of five of the districts in Cook county, Gordon Owens, in the first congressional district, Joseph Podkulski in the fourth; Sam Hammersmark in the seventh; George Maurer in the eighth and Jack Johnstone in the ninth.

Workers Disfranchised.

Even a heavy registration of party members will not indicate the full strength of Communist sentiment in the country, because a large number of party members and sympathizers have been disfranchised for one reason or another.

Carpenters Picket State Fair.

DALLAS, Tex.—Local No. 198, carpenters will lay a fine of $10 against any member each time he attends the Texas state fair here. Pickets will be stationed to watch the crowds. Similar action has been taken by other unions in Dallas and elsewhere following the placing of the fair on the unfair list. The fair association refuses to employ union building mechanics.

Fire Fighters' Ranks Grow.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—Its most successful convention has been completed at Kansas City, Mo., by the International Association of Fire Fighters, Secretary Richardson reported on his return to headquarters here. More towns have been organized in the past year than in the preceding three years, and hours and conditions have steadily improved.

An Important Branch Meeting.

There will be an important meeting of the North Side Branch of the Workers Party at Imperial Hall, 2409 North Halsted street, at 8 p. m. tonight.

PARTY ON BALLOT IN MONTANA

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BUTTE, Mont., Oct. 5.—A Workers Party convention was held here on Oct. 2, to comply with the Montana election law. Four candidates for presidential electors pledged to Foster and Gitlow were nominated and the nomination certified to the secretary of the state. Under the election law holding of a state convention and filing of the candidates nominated entitled a political party to a place on the ballot and this action insures the voters of Montana the opportunity to vote for Communist candidates.

DEVER DUMB TO TEACHERS BUT NOT TO TRIBUNE

Refuses to Attend Big Auditorium Meeting

The Chicago Teachers' Federation is still awaiting word from Mayor Dever, following their request at a mass meeting Friday night, that he appoint to the board of education four members who will enforce the tax laws now being dodged by large corporations.

The mayor has so far completely ignored the teachers, no answers having been received to their letters, altho Dever has given copious interviews to the Chicago Tribune.

Teachers in Open Rebellion.

Three thousand teachers by their enthusiasm and applause, gathered at a mass meeting in the Auditorium Theatre, shouted open rebellion against the board of education, against the treachery of mayor Dever, and the control of the school system by the large employers of labor.

The teachers showed in fact, that they are ahead of their leaders in their grasp of the situation now confronting the Chicago teachers.

Victor Olander, secretary of the Illinois Federation of Labor, told the audience that the chamber of commerce has gone to such lengths to control the minds of the children, that it is even organizing junior commerce clubs in the schools and spreading a magazine of that name broadcast thruout the school system.

Why Not?

"Just suppose I organized junior federations of labor in the public schools," Olander asserted. He seemed horror striken at the thought. But the audience thought it seemed to think it a good idea, for they loudly applauded the suggestion.

Mayor Dever has at last placed himself in a position where he is throwing off the mask and coming out flatfootedly against labor, and against the teachers and children in the public school system. Margaret Haley read to the mass meeting letters which the Chicago Federation of Teachers, of high school teachers, and of men teachers had sent to the mayor asking him to be present at the meeting.

Big Issues are Involved.

Miss Haley declared she had pointed out to the mayor that he is wrong in thinking that the teachers were

HARD TIME CONVINCING PEOPLE WORLD HAS ANY RESPECT FOR COOLIDGE

(By The Federated Press.)

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 5.—When the round-the-world-flyers arrived in San Francisco, the republicans took advantage of the assembled crowds to do a little propaganda. Regular soldiers were ordered to put on civilian clothes and distribute handbills supposed to be greetings from President Coolidge to the flyers. As a matter of fact they were republican campaign leaflets, which declared among other things that "the world respects the American flag, the American people, the American president, Calvin Coolidge." The handbills were very coolly received, most people throwing them away or using them to sit on while they watched the flyers.

PURPOSE OF DAWES PLAN IS TO REMOVE ECONOMIC COMPLICATIONS AGGRAVATED BY THE WORLD WAR

By JAY LOVESTONE
(Fourth Article)

Tho the Dawes plan is most often spoken of as a reparations plan, its primary objective is much greater than the payment of war costs and damages by the vanquished to the victors.

The underlying purpose of the Dawes plan is to remove the economic contradictions and complications which were aggravated by the last World War.

Create Violent Struggles.

These contradictions in the system of capitalist production and exchange have been made so acute by the industrial and economic derangements resulting from the imperialist war that they have had their almost incessant repercussions in violent political struggles between the two principal classes in society.

The sharp revolutionary conflicts in the various European countries are reflections of the intensification of the inherent contradictions of capitalism which have multiplied and have taken on many violent forms as a consequence of the world carnage.

Seek World Capitalist Stability.

When the Allied and American capitalists seek to regulate the economic

"NAVY DAY" IS NEXT DRIVE OF IMPERIALISTS

Oct. 27th Is Date Set to Glorify War

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—The next step of the American employers in attempting to work the workers of the country up into a war hysteria will take place on "Navy Day," Oct. 27, when navy leagues thruout the country will try to glorify war by conducting parades, at which workers will be asked to march or else lose their jobs.

The American Legion, Chamber of Commerce, Kiwanis clubs, Navy Leagues, and other institutions of capitalism will assist in beating the drums of war.

Strikebreaker Coolidge has indorsed Navy Day. It is undestood the large capitalists backing Coolidge have eyes on the markets now owned by Japan in the Pacific.

Take Slam at Klan.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Oct. 5.—The California highway commission has ordered the Ku Klux Klan to remove all painted inscriptions from the highway between San Francisco and Los Angeles. Protests have been pouring in that the roads are painted with K. K. K. and K. I. G. Y. (klansman, I greet you). The law is that no signs except highway directions may be painted on stone on state roads

MANY MEMBERS IN AMALGAMATED FIGHT HOLD-UP

Refuse to Contribute to LaFollette Campaign

The officialdom of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers in Chicago, who labored so hard to force the endorsement of LaFollette and Wheeler by the Locals of the union in this city, are now engaged in the harder task of collecting funds from the membership for the support of the middle-class presidential and vice-presidential candidates.

During the past week many incidents have taken place in the clothing shops here to prove that the officialdom is using hold-up methods to force the workers to donate to the LaFollette campaign funds.

Putting Over The Hold-up.

Last Friday Sal Kramer, business agent, appeared at the Cohn and Rissman shop to collect from each of the workers, for the LaFollette campaign. Many of the workers refused to donate the required dollar. Kramer threatened one worker that it would cost him much more than a dollar if he refused to come across. Another worker was told that a better man than he could be found to fill his job unless he donated.

To intimidate the workers of this shop into giving him the money he demanded he took five workers off their jobs and sent them to the office of the joint board. These workers are: A. Fox, M. Zuzzman, J. Klechs, A. Schaefer, J. Osuesky.

These workers were forced to wait around the office for half a day waiting to see Sam Levin, manager of the joint board. When they did finally see him in the evening, they demanded to know if he had authorized their removal from work. Levin dodged the issue and gave no satisfactory answer to the question.

Get Poor Crowd.

At the shop meeting of the members of the union working on the ninth floor of the M. Born company, called by business agent Oscar Elet to listen to a plea for the LaFollette candidacy, 15 out of 200 workers attended the meeting.

Because of the small attendance the

CHICAGO LABOR FOR SACCO AND VANZETTI FIGHT

Left Wing Delegates for Mass Meeting

The Chicago Federation of Labor yesterday again went on record in demanding a new trial for Sacco and Vanzetti and attesting its belief in the innocence of the two Italian workers who were given what amounts to a death sentence by the refusal of Judge Webster Thayer to grant them a new trial.

The resolution was introduced by the left wing section of the Federation. It calls for a reaffirmation of the previous stand of that body, and provides that the Executive Board be authorized to call a mass protest meeting against the action of Judge Thayer. It urges that letters be sent to all the locals affiliated with the central body, requesting funds for the defense of Sacco and Vanzetti. Edward Nockels, secretary of the federation, will act as treasurer.

The resolutions committee brot in a report which endorsed the resolution, with the exception of that part calling for a mass protest meeting. Jack Johnstone spoke for the unamended resolution, but the recommendation of the committee was accepted.

Anton Johannsen suggested that telegrams telling of the action taken by the Chicago Federation of Labor be sent to several other organizations, especially those concerned with the Sacco and Vanzetti case.

The resolutions committee brought in a statement condemning the Chicago Tribune for publishing an interview with Peter Cunniff, one of the managers of the Labor News, a sheet which was once the unofficial organ of Samuel Gompers in Chicago. That was during the days when Fitzpatrick and Nockels were in a state of reduced hostility towards Gompers. Not so very long ago, Gompers' man, Emmet Flood, had a letter in the Labor News, suggesting that business men might will patronize a paper that spoke for bonfide organized labor and left Soviet Russia to shift for itself. This was a slam at the New Majority, then edited by Robert Buck, which suppported Soviet Russia, and pink radicalism in the United States.

But times have changed. There is no longer room for two red-baiting alleged labor sheets, and the Federated News wants the advertising that its companion in reaction also coyets. Hence the hostilities.

Cunniff is a notorious labor panhandler and confidence man who is willing to offer himself to the highest bidder any time. The neediest prostitutes among the labor fakers are turn-

FOSTER-GITLOW CONFERENCE TO GIVE $500 AT BIG MASS MEETING

The left wing Foster-Gitlow Conference, made up of Jewish Workmen's Circles and members of trade unions in the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, bakers, capmakers and butchers, are out to raise $1,000.

The left wing conference is now well organized and functioning efficiently. It has laid out a campaign of getting the literature distributed and other campaign activities.

By Oct. 12, the comrades say that at least $500.00 of that amount will be raised of which a good part has already been collected. The conference proposes to present the first $500.00 raised at the Foster-Gitlow meeting on Oct. 12, at Ashland Auditorium.

This shows a very good spirit manifesting itself among non-party elements who refuse to fall for the LaFollette bunk.

"BLACK JACK" TO LEAD WALL STREET'S ARMY

Now On European Trip "to See His Son"

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—General John Pershing is slated for the job of secretary of war in the next republican administration provided lots of funny things don't happen.

This information was secured by the DAILY WORKER correspondent from a quarter that never suspected it would leak out. But oil is not the only thing that leaks in Washington.

Today's papers carried a short news item, stating that Pershing, now a civilian, left for Europe on the Leviathan, to visit his son, who is attending school in Switzerland. A son is a very convenient excuse if good for nothing else. Even Harry Daugherty's son finds a place in the movies taking the part of a rich man in his D. T.'s.

But your reporter is reliably informed that "Black Jack" is not going to Europe merely to see his son. He will see other people besides.

It is an open secret in Washington that war between the United States and Japan is no longer a possibility, or a probability. It is a certainty. Heavy war preparations are on foot. Of course, the public will not be frightened before election time. Silent Cal must be returned to the White House. These Head Too Fleshy.

John W. Weeks, the "stout" headed secretary of war, is a royal supporter of the capitalist system, but as a military man he is a darned good banker. Moreover, he has blundered on Mobilization Day. Canny Calvin had to step in and allay the public anxiety by calling it "Defense Day." But it is not well to make explanations. Mistakes are easily made, but hard to mend.

"Black Jack" Pershing is another myth like Silent Cal. He is almost as silent and as stupid. A new idea would feel so ill at ease in his head that it would cause a revolution. And "Black Jack" hates revolutions. He is a favorite son of Wall street. His first bid for fame was the chase after the Mexican bandit Villa. He is another famous general, he led his army up one hill and down another and finally returned home while Villa had to take body massages to take the soreness out of his ribs. They were sore from laughing at the great military genius Pershing. But the capitalist papers made up in publicity for what Pershing lacked in military genius.

Another Myth.

Pershing is a republican in politics, but when the world war broke out, Morgan picked him to lead the expeditionary forces to France. Tho he stayed away from the front as all good respectable generals do, he won quite a reputation. It was the "Silent Cal" myth over again. He won the war in much the same fashion that Calvin Coolidge broke the Boston police strike—after the Germans were licked by the Russian revolution.

Will Be Silent Clam.

However, as secretary of war, his job will be to take Wall street's orders and keep his mouth shut. He knows how to do that. It is Calvin's ambition to have a cabinet that will make a deaf mute school sound like a boiler factory. He is on the road to success, unless the expected happens and the voters give Silent Cal a kick in the jeans next November.

No doubt, there will be denials that Pershing is slated for the war department job. But sophisticated people will pay no attention to those denials.

All For the "Jack."

When Pershing retired a few weeks ago, from the active list, every capitalist paper in the country sung his praises. Even the comedians were called on to drop their caps and bells for the moment and make patriotic cracks, to Black Jack's advantage. "Mobilization Day" was the work of his brain. The capitalists need him to turn the United States into a military robot factory. They have a big job in front of them. They need men like Pershing.

MEXCO CHARGED HEAVY INTEREST ON BIG U.S. LOAN

It's Only a Matter of Principle with Banker

AUSTIN, Tex., Oct. 5.—Mexico will have to pay over 9 per cent interest on the new $50,000,000 bond issue floated for it by J. L. Arlitt, an Austin banker.

"Just a matter of principle," Arlitt says. "The loan was not obtainable from eastern money interests because an additional stranglehold was desired upon the natural resources of our southern neighbor. My only security is the revenue from the Mexican oil properties and the guarantee of the Mexican government."

The loan bears a face interest of 6 per cent but the bonds are sold so low that the annual return on the money actually invested is about 9 per cent. Adding Arlitt's commission and that of his agents brings the annual charge to Mexico for this $50,000,000 around 10 per cent. The loan runs 10 years, $5,000,000 in addition to interest to be retired annually.

WORKERS PARTY OF DISTRICT FIVE SETS NEW RECORD

Tours for Four Speakers Now Arranged

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 5.—The Workers Party of District Five, is swinging into action for the October campaign with a spirit that promises to break even the excellent record set by the Communists for street meetings and distribution of literature in September.

Comrade Rose Pastor Stokes is now touring the district, and has already addressed huge crowds at McKees Rocks, New Kensington, Canonsburg, and McDonald. She will speak in Pittsburgh on Wednesday, October 8, at the Labor Lyceum, 35 Miller street, and on Thursday, October 9, in Wilmerding, at the Lithuanian Hall, 110 State street.

Comrade Stokes will be followed by Jay Lovestone, Charles E. Ruthenberg and William Z. Foster. Lovestone will be in the district from the 15th to the 19th. Charles E. Ruthenberg will speak in Pittsburgh at the Carnegie Music Hall, Federal and Ohio streets, on Thursday, October 23, and our presidential candidate, William Z. Foster, will speak on the same hall on Wednesday, October 29.

The wide-spread unemployment in this district has not prevented the comrades from raising a large campaign fund for the Workers Party.

STATEMENT OF THE OWNERSHIP, MANAGEMENT, CIRCULATION, ETC. REQUIRED BY THE ACT OF CONGRESS OF AUGUST 24, 1912.

Of THE DAILY WORKER, published Daily, except Sun., at Chicago, Ill., for October 1, 1924.

Dawes Plan Bolsters Capitalism

life of Germany they do so not only to get reparations, but to get these reparations in such a fashion as will avoid and remove the recurring revolutionary crises which are a mortal menace to the continuation of the rule of the international capitalist class.

It is the stabilization of world capitalism thru the stabilization of Germany that the imperialists of the victorious and vanquished countries alike are after, regardless of how these may differ amongst themselves as to methods.

The world supremacy of the private ownership of capital, of the means of production and exchange, the free play of capitalism—this is the goal of the Dawes' plan. Witness the turning over of the German railways to a group of capitalists.

But an analysis of the economic basis and proposals of the Dawes' plan reveals the impossibility of the removal of these contradictions which have proved the source of the revolutionary crisis. We will examine the five most glaring contradictions and the phases of conflict in the much-heralded scheme to stabilize world capitalism.

Problem of Payments.

It is one thing to get reparations from Germany and another to transfer these payments to the Allied governments, the spokesmen of the entente imperialists.

Until the German marks can be converted into foreign currencies, the creditor capitalists will not have received payment. Here the Dawes' plan is careful to point out that the number of marks that could be so converted is to be determined by experience. The Dawes' scheme does not tell of the total number of gold marks Germany can pay. It only tells how many gold marks can be collected in a year and then avoids telling how these marks are to be transferred as payments to the Allies. It is patent that the real problem before the Dawes' committee was evaded rather than solved.

The core of the whole reparations question is: In what form of commodities can Germany pay reparations? In what form can the creditors accept these payments without disrupting their own industries and the productive and exchange systems of the rest of the capitalist countries?

There are only three ways in which international payments can be made. These are in gold or currency the transfer of securities, and the export of commodities.

Today there is no gold in Germany worth mentioning as a medium of payment. Then the payment in currency—in marks, is not feasible. To resort to the purchase of sterling or francs with marks on a large scale as it would occur here cannot but depreciate seriously German currency. This means the undoing of the stability of German exchange and industry which is a vital aim of the whole Dawes' program.

On the heels of the collapse of the German currency would come a violent rise in French and British and other exchange. The effects of this would be detrimental in may ways. A further transfer of marks would be made and the act of purchasing marks would bring into the different countries an increased supply of francs or sterling. Soon there would follow a sharp fall of these currencies. Next in order is a serious derangement of production in these countries because of the sharp fluctuations in currency. Here again we have the negation of the very purpose of the Dawes' program—the stabilization of capitalist production and exchange in Germany and the victorious creditor countries.

The transfer of securities would bring about the same effects as the transfer of currency except it would be at a much slower pace. First, it is true, the price of German securities would be enhanced. But in time the piling up of interest and dividends on these securities being transferred to the English and French would tend to reduce other payments. This would bring a collapse of the currency markets. On the other hand, if these dividends were left to pile up in Germany, their interest would compound and precipitate a crash.

The investment of the Allies in German industries on a large scale in order to avoid this trap would lead them into another economic complication of the first magnitude. First of all German taxes would effect them. Should the Germans not tax these investments they would cut down on their capacity to pay. Then, of course, the danger of war and the currency lack of safety of such property must not be overlooked. Furthermore, to the extent that the reparations marks are expended in Germany or invested in German industries there is likely to be a slowing up of German exports and reduction of the export surplus, the only other source of reparations.

Export-Import Complications.

The experts admit that in order to make the Dawes' plan effective, Germany must have surplus balances abroad. Only these can make possible the transfer of the sums accumulated to the credit of the Allies in the bank of issue. The success of this process is dependent upon three factors: a general increase in the volume of world trade; Germany must have much more than its proportionate share of this increase and a considerably increased share of the total world trade; the operation of the German industrial machine in such a fashion as will require a minimum value of imports and a maximum value of high grade manufactured commodities.

The plain meaning of this is that the world must buy from Germany more commodities and "services" than Germany buys from it, than it sells to Germany. It is interesting to note that Germany's leading customers before the war were the principal countries of Europe. In 1913, Germany sent 16 per cent of her exports to western, central and eastern European countries. It is obvious then, that Germany's creditors must under the Dawes' plan buy more from her and sell less to her than they did before the world war.

Let us grant for the sake of argument that for the moment only that the German masses can be forced to produce the necessary surplus. The question arises then: will the capitalists of the creditor and other countries be willing to buy enough from Germany so as to enable her to pay for the commodities she herself must buy abroad and the billions of gold marks to be turned over by her in reparations?

The Great Contradiction.

And here we come to the giant contradiction inherent in the whole Dawes' scheme. Granted even that the German masses can be completely enslaved, the success of the operations of the plan is contingent upon international capital—primarily American—coming to Germany as investments in industry, loans, purchases of securities, and so on. Profits on this capital can be garnered by the international capitalists only thru the development of Germany's industry and its competitive capacity. This is against the interests of the Entente and American capitalists. It was to prevent the growing competitive capacity of Germany that the last imperialist war was fought by the Entente.

More than that, there is slight likelihood of the creditor capitalist countries being willing or able to take all these commodities from Germany. The capitalists of these countries must avoid a derangement of their own industries and consequently the exchanges as a result of German competition. Great Britain has already reimposed the 26 per cent burden on German imports, after having lowered it some time ago to five per cent. There is much uneasiness in England over the prospects of intensified German competition. Snowden and MacDonald are busy conferring with the industrial magnates whose establishments are paralleled in Germany. Of course, what England, the land of free trade is doing, will be done in many other countries. In the United States the irritating talk of German competition is becoming audible.

The only possibility for a delay in the crash—economic and political—following from this contradiction is afforded by a rapid and substantial enlargement of the world market to take up the products turned out in the extension of American, French, British and German industries. At this moment, only Soviet Russia and China are such possible new big markets. The Union of Socialist Soviet Republics is not ready to put herself on the auction block and become a colony whose markets and industries are the pawns of international capitalism. In China the conditions are too unstable. Even the attempt to utilize these two fields as markets can be made only in two ways. The Allied and American imperialists may seek to war on Soviet Russia, or they may extend long term credits to Soviet Russia and China. The international capitalists are not in a suitable position to resort to either at this time.

LABOR BACKS SACCO, VANZETTI

ing to the Coolidge camp while the $25,000 a year labor skates are making their way to political prominence on the LaFollette bandwagon. Gunif is out for the cash. Anybody else can have the honor. So when the LaFollette campaign committee sent Cunliff a matrix for publicity purposes the wily Peter got in touch with the Tribune and "made a statement." It was rotten, of course.

Jack Johnstone, delegate from the painters' union, and leader of the left wing in the federation, rose to say that he was in hearty accord with the resolution denouncing Cunlif. But why confine the denunciation to the dirty work of the Labor News when the Federation News, the official organ of this body, is equally mendacious in its attacks on the Communists in general and on William Z. Foster in particular?

Johnstone called attention to a very stupid cartoon in the current issue of the Federation News, attempting to show Foster lined up with Dawes. "The Workers Party is the only political party with a revolutionary ticket in the field," Johnstone declared. "We are open and above-board. Our platform calls for the dictatorship of the proletariat. Fitzpatrick knows Foster as well as any man in this hall. He knows that the attacks on him in the Federation News are dirty lies."

He worked with Foster in the steel strike and in the stock yards strike. Why not fight the Workers Party on the basis of what we stand on and not resort to such filthy methods, as are used by the Federation News?"

This brought forth a rather amusing reply from Edward Nockels, secretary of the federation. Nockels claimed as much responsibility for the News as anybody else. He had not seen the cartoon in question. He had not seen anything, but he agreed with what he had not seen or heard.

Fitzpatrick made a speech resembling an appeal to a prodigal son. Perhaps he learned his stuff from Sam Gompers in the days when Sam was acting the pied piper to the leaders of the Chicago Federation of Labor. "Foster is just one of our boys gone wrong," declared Fitzpatrick. He then gave testimony (the speech was like the effort of a revolutionist) to Foster's ability as a trade unionist and an organizer, but almost shed tears over the fact that his former coworker saw fit to become a Communist and prepare the workers for the overthrow of capitalism. To prove that Christ was in his heart, Fitzpatrick said that he would rather take Foster by the hand and lead him back into the fold that denounce him. The denouncing he no doubt does as part of his religious duty.

The final installment of comedy was given by the frivolous Harry Sheck of the Trade Union Label League, who announced that he had written a report on the convention of the Illinois Federation of Labor that would take half an hour and delivered. Immediately a motion was made to accept it unread and publish it in the next issue of the Federation News.

Despite a protest from Arne Swabeck, delegate from the painters' union, the motion was passed.

business agent threatened the chairman of the shop with removal from his position. Bell blames the shop chairman for the small attendance at the meeting because the chairman is opposed to the endorsement of LaFollette by the union officialdom on the grounds that in doing so they are violating the decision of the last convention of the union, which instructed the general executive board of the union to support the establishment of a labor party. A meeting has been called for today by the business agent at which he will attempt to put his threat into effect.

No Discussion Allowed.

At a shop meeting of the Cohn and Rissman company at which Leo Krzeycki, member of the general executive board of the amalgamated is to speak in favor of the LaFollette campaign, the question was asked at the beginning of the meeting if discussion would be permitted after his speech. Krzeycki answered that no discussion would be permitted. As a result a large number of those who opposed the endorsation of LaFollette left the meeting.

Another step taken by the officialdom to force the LaFollette endorsement down the throats of the members and crush those opposed to their action, was the excision of the Freiheit, Jewish Communist organ, and The DAILY WORKER from the library of the union.

This action was taken because these papers printed a report of the action of Local 54, New York City, and the Cleveland joint board, had turned down the endorsement of LaFollette and indorsed Foster and Gitlow, the candidates of the Workers Party for president and vice-president.

Try to Keep Labor in Dark.

The officialdom of the amalgamated besides violating the decision of the last convention by endorsing the republican and democratic candidates, LaFollette and Wheeler, do not wish the members of the Chicago locals of the union to find out that thousands of members in the east are bitterly opposed to this betrayal of working class interests.

Mussolini Recalls His Tool Salandra From League Confab

(Special to the DAILY WORKER)

ROME, Oct. 5.—Premier Mussolini today sent a message to former premier Salandra, head of the liberal party of Italy, who has been representing the Italian government at the League of Nations conference at Geneva, to return at once to Tuscany for the convention of the liberal party at Livorno.

Black Shirt Agent.

Salandra has been Mussolini's chief instrument in suppressing that faction of the liberal party which advocates open opposition to the Fascist government. It is understood that Salandra will address the convention in favor of co-operation and defense of the Mussolini regime.

The group which Mussolini fears is demanding a return to the forms of "constitutional" government — the rights of "free speech, press and assemblage." The Fascist movement openly denies the forms of "democratic" rule.

Wallace Wants Farmers to Rejoice Over First New Shoes in Four Years

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the big job of the capitalist politicians is to persuade the entire and poor farmers that they are surrounded with riches. They tell those who labor, in the city and on the land, that they haven't too little, but too much.

There are tens of millions of workers and poor farmers who will be interested in learning these things. They didn't know them before.

• • • • •

George W. Hinman, one of the troupe of financial experts that galavant daily thru the pages of the Hearst publications, charges the great unrest in discontented North and South Dakota, Minnesota and Iowa is due to the fact that the farmers have too many automobiles. They use too much gasoline.

"There is no moral lesson to be drawn from all this," says Hinman, "unless it be Mr. Reynolds' lesson that we all live too fast, east and west, and north and south, that we all are inclined to regard the luxuries of yesterday as the necessaries of today."

Mr. Hinman doesn't ask the banker, Arthur Reynolds, to cut down on his automobile bills and use the street cars. Nowhere can we find that he urges his employer, William Randolph Hearst, or his millionaire co-editor, Arthur Brisbane, to cut down on their automobile expenses. Hinman completely dodges the Rolls-Royce clientele in automobile "luxuries." He only hits at the poor farmer with his Ford flivver.

This only shows that Hinman has been well trained in the ways of capitalist press prostitution. In the long ago he was editor of the now defunct Chicago Inter-Ocean, one of the most rabid anti-labor sheets the nation has ever had. When its owners refused longer to pay its deficits, and closed up, Hinman became president of some Catholic college down in Indiana. But recently he has been back in Chicago working for Hearst.

Hinman knows better than to attack the luxuries of the great rich, of the bankers, industrialists, landlords and what not. These are on the "sacred cow" list of the Hearst publications, except when they cross Hearst's personal ambitions. Only then does he have a falling out with them. Hearst fights Tammany Hall, in New York City, for instance, but only because the democratic machine stands in his road to greater political power. When Hearst picks an enemy, he lets all of his editors know about it, and the war is on. And they are all personal enemies. Hearst never had a principle that would divide him from the rest of his class.

• • • • •

We can read in Hinman's mouthings only an effort on the part of the Hearst publications to stand in with the Coolidge administration. The Teapot Dome politicians have adopted the "prosperity" appeal as their own, and anyone, farmer or worker, who doesn't believe that his pockets are bulging with gold, is a rank traitor to all American institutions, including "Bill the Fat" Taft's supreme court.

• • • • •

Let us compare with Hinman's story of riches in automobiles, the statement recently issued by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace. Altho Wallace works for Wall Street, instead of for the farmers, he has to stick a little bit on the side of the truth or his usefulness would disappear. The farmers might not believe anything that he had to say.

"The wheat belt," says Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, "is in infinitely better shape than for four years . . . . IN THE WESTERN SPRING WHEAT TERRITORY, WHERE NO ONE HAS HAD A PAIR OF NEW SHOES SINCE THE WINTER OF 1919-20, THERE IS PARTICULAR REJOICING."

• • • • •

Perhaps even the adroit Hinman will explain this away. He will no doubt claim that the farmers in the grain belt haven't had a new pair of shoes in four years, for themselves, the wife or the kids, because they had to buy gasoline. But that would only put him in his true role—a Hearst clown, performing with printer's ink, rather than with a painted face.

• • • • •

The 3,000,000 bankrupt farmers, walking into the cities off the land, robbed of everything they possess by Mr. Hearst's friends, is testimony to the fact that millions of farmers have not only been without new shoes, for the four years of Harding-Coolidge republican rule, but that if they owned a flivver it also belonged to the pre-Teapot Dome era.

• • • • •

But why shouldn't every farmer have his automobile? He needs it, as part of the day's work. The automobile is a necessary part of the great agricultural machine, that plants, cares for and harvests the nation's crops. Hinman, like LaFollette, would no doubt have the farmers return, not only to 1776, but go back into the days of medieval agriculture, when the farmer could not even vision the use of a tractor, or machine power of any kind.

• • • • •

Hinman's article breathes the spirit of the manufacturer who told his employes to give up the movies and live on sauerkraut,—then they would be able to get along on the wages he paid them.

But America's workers and poor farmers are insisting on something more than a sauerkraut diet. The drift toward Communism is big enough indication of that. New multitudes are realizing that the fight against the whole capitalist social order is being made only under the Communist standards of the Workers Party. The Hinman propaganda in the Hearst publications was good for the days of Mark Hanna and William McKinley. But it will not fool the masses of discontented, in the cities and on the land, of today.

The workers and poor farmers hope some day to rejoice; not because they have a new pair of shoes, as Secretary of Agriculture Wallace point out, but because they have triumphed over capitalism and established their own Soviet Rule of the nation's workers and farmers. .

Prison-Made Goods.

SALT LAKE CITY, Oct. 5.—Instead of flooding the open market with prison-made goods in unfair competition with free labor, the penitentaries of Utah, Idaho and Oregon are making goods to be used in the public institutions of these states. Utah convicts make overalls for their state and for Idaho and Oregon. Idaho convicts are making shoes for their state and for Utah. Prisoners, asylum inmates and other state wards use the goods.

Don't Want Yellow Cab Buses.

DETROIT, Oct. 5.—City buses for Detroit, according to the local Federation of Labor which protests the plan of the general manager of the municipally-owned street railways to buy Chicago-made Yellow Cab buses. Home industry and home taxpayers should be patronized by the city, the federation declares, especially when, as in this case, the local concerns made lower bids than the Yellow Cab people.

COMMUNISTS IN GERMANY EXPOSE SOCIALIST CRIMES

Cover Cities with Posters Showing Betrayal

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, Oct. 5.—Huge posters printed in red, white and blue colors in ironic reference to the United States, and bearing printed matter denouncing the socialist party of Germany for the aid which it is giving to the advocates of the Dawes' plan, stare out from the walls of hundreds of buildings all over the city.

The poster displays a cartoon showing an artist drawing the cartoon which recently appeared in the "Vorwarts," official organ of the socialist party of Germany, of German working men and women rejoicing in the ray of the rising sun, labeled with the sign of the American dollar. The Communist artist shows Morgan standing behind the socialist paper, dropping money into the free hand of the Vorwarts cratoonist.

The printed matter on the poster reads:

"Down with the Dollar-party!

"The socialist party of Germany is the greatest aid of the American robbers. It is only thru their co-operation that the experts' report was accepted, and by that means the industries, banks and railroads of Germany turned over for the benefit of international capital.

"The twelve-hour day, starvation wages, and new hardships will be the results for the workers.

"The socialist party lied to you when in 1919 it told you: 'Socialisation is going on.'

"Today German industry is being 'socialized' by Morgan.

"Workers—the Communist party is fighting for real socialization, but the socialist party of Germany dared to say in the Reichstag: 'Socialisation means betrayal of the people.'

"Workers and farmers! If you wish to fight the fight for freedom against Morgan and his help-mates, you must enter the ranks of the Communist Party of Germany, in a united front with the international proletariat and with Soviet Russia."

Tech Aid Affair at Soviet School Proves to be Usual Success

A successful performance was given Saturday night by the Society for Technical Aid to Soviet Russia. As usual, the hall of the society, at 1902 W. Division street, was filled. The society announced many performances to be given during the winter. The next performance and a dance to follow will be given Sunday, October 19, at 6 p. m.

The classes at the Soviet School begin to function tonight, Monday. The first to start was the class in the English language. Classes for "foreigners" in the Russian language will start as soon as there are sufficient applicants. Comrades who wish to study the Russian language are urged to register at the Soviet School, 1902 W. Division street, every evening.

Machinists Plan Referendum.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—An early referendum is to be taken by the membership of the International Association of Machinists on the changes in their laws approved at the recent convention in Detroit, because one of these changes requires that officers be elected in time to take office next July. The terms of the incumbent officers are cut short by a year. If the change is ratified, nominations for president, secretary-treasurer and seven vice-presidents will be made early in 1925, these to be followed by referendum election.

Pay 16 Cents an Hour.

READING, Pa., Oct. 5.—Sixteen cents an hour is being paid by the Penn Hardware Co., of Reading, to boys hired as strikebreakers, according to union locksmiths who struck in protest against the firm's labor policy. The company had been laying off employes with long service to hire boys at starvation rates. The four-week strike is progressing well, with the Reading public informed of the company's tactics thru the strike committee.

Australia Has Red Scare

SYDNEY, N. S. W.—The Australian federal government is prohibiting the entry of literature by unions affiliated with the Red International of Labor Unions. It is also laying its hands on Communist literature coming to Australia from Europe. The government has seized literature in the parcel post addressed to the Labor Council of New South Wales. The Labor Council is going to give the government an opportunity to prove its authority in the law courts.

Printers Increase Membership.

DETROIT.—Five per cent increase in the membership of Typographical Union No. 18, Detroit, is reported since June. Work has been brisk recently for union men because September is a favorite vacation month for many of the regulars but normal conditions have returned with October.

WHEELER APES SILENT CALVIN ON QUESTIONS

Refused to Testify Against Himself

To the DAILY WORKER:—Two capitalist candidates for vice-president have paid a visit to the Twin Cities within the last week. One of them, Mr. Dawes, pleaded for votes in order that the constitution might be saved from destruction, the other, Mr. Wheeler, tried hard to leave the impression with his hearers, that if he and his running mate La Follette were elected, corruption in government would come to an end.

The excuses for the election as offered by the one were as flimsy and foolish as those offered by the other. Neither one had any remedies to offer the present producing class for the present economic ills. The big question uppermost in the minds of both is, the elevation to a high and important public office.

Both Fail to Answer.

While addressing their meetings in the Twin Cities, both Wheeler and Dawes were confronted with certain questions. Both of them failed to answer. The questions to Mr. Wheeler were submitted by the writer in typewritten form, but they might as well have been addressed to the "unknown soldier" as far as the reply was concerned. The questions submitted to Mr. Wheeler were as follows:

"1. What material difference will it make to the toilers in the industries and upon the land, whether Mr. LaFollette is elected president of the United States or Calvin Coolidge?

"2. Profits lie at the very basis of all, capitalist production. It cannot function without profit. Profits result in growing wealth concentration and poverty, misery, crime, and corrupts our public officials, our institutions of learning and the public press. The above evils are the effects which flow from our present system of wealth production for profit instead of use. What remedy have you for these economic ills?

"3. By what means do you propose to obtain government ownership of railroads? If by floating tax-free bonds to buy the roads, who are going to buy the bonds, and who are going to pay the interest on the bonds?

Represent Economic Groups.

"4. If political parties represent anything at all, they represent the interest of certain economic groups. If that is true, how can you, as a member of the democratic party representing the banking and landowning interests, and Mr. LaFollette, a member of the republican party, representing the manufacturing interests of this country, how can you both properly represent the economic interests of the farmers and workers who are both being exploited by the very elements you represent as members of the republican and democratic parties?

"5. How was it possible for Mr. LaFollette who is now seeking the votes of the farmers and workers, to make common cause with organized wealth and reaction, and its servile press, in attacking the June 17 convention, a convention to which every worker's and farmer's organization in this country has been invited.

"Please read each question before you attempt to answer it. There will be many workers present at your St. Paul meeting tonight who will be interested to hear your answers to the above questions. Please avoid generalities as much as possible as well as the calling of names and isms in your answers."

Wheeler Was Mum.

The above questions were signed and delivered to Mr. Wheeler at an open air meeting, which he addressed at seven corners in Minneapolis just before departing for the auditorium meeting scheduled at St. Paul that same evening. Mr. Wheeler, true to the form of the class he represents, did not answer the questions. He found it more easy and convenient to point to the corruption of those holding the office he and LaFollette is seeking, but Wheeler failed to inform his audience what benefit would be derived by the farmers and workers by merely changing office holders, and leave the source of the corruption undisturbed.

Neither LaFollette nor Wheeler has any intention to abolish corruption in public office. Neither of them is so ignorant as to really believe that such a thing is possible under the present system of wealth production. Under the present capitalist system it pays to bribe and corrupt public officials, and as long as it pays to bribe them they will be bribed. LaFollette prates about honesty in government. Where is he going to get these honest fellows?

Perhaps he intends to fill his cabinet with some of these $25,000 a year labor fakers, who fatten themselves at the expense and detriment of the labor movement, and who expel members of their unions because they happen to write an article on amalgamation or some other needed change which happens to be nauseous to their political nostrils.

It would be interesting to know how many labor leaders we have in this country who would not sell a "Tea pot Dome" for a hundred thousand dollar loan without security? We might also add, that a man who like LaFollette will stab to death an honest attempt on the part of poor workers and farmers to start a class political party of their own, cannot lay any stress on claims of being honest. All there is to the LaFollette movement is that LaFollette wants to be president of the United States.

IN WITH THE DOLLARS!

IT is denied, unanimously, that the Campaign Fund Stamp Books and the Contribution Lists sent to party members and sympathizers were broadcasted as samples of the excellent printing our own DAILY WORKER printing plant can prodduce.

The Campaign Fund Stamps are to be sold, in the shop, in your neighborhood, at meetings, EVERYWHERE. The bright, presentable, educational, appealing Contribution List is to be used to get contributions with, EVERYWHERE.

If either of those "money getters" is still resting serenely in one of your thirteen pockets (talking to the men) or in the northwest extremity of your vanity case (talking to the women), OUT WITH IT AND INTO ACTION WITH IT.

Working men and women are willing, anxious to give to the Workers Party campaign fund. This is verified every day by the exceptionally long lists of 25 cent, 50 cent, $1.00 and $5.00 contributions sent in on the official contribution lists.

COOLIDGE MANAGERS TRY TO BLEED WORKERS IN U. S. CIVIL SERVICE

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—Investigation of charges that campaign funds are being collected by the republican party organization from civil service employes has been started here by the National Civil Service Reform League, with a view to indictemnt and criminal prosecution of the offenders.

Willis B. Dye, chairman of the republican ways and means committee for Indiana, has been sending letters to federal civil servants in that state, reminding them that "voluntary contribution is very much needed," and he adds, "for your further consideration will state that the uniform amount from the revenue department is $50. Please forward your check to the party collector."

Civil Service Commissioner Wales has notified federal employes to disregard any such implied threats, and to notify the commission of all attempts to collect money from them for campaign purposes. He says the Dye letters violate the spirit of the law, which provides a fine up to $5,000 and imprisonment up to 3 years for solicitation of campaign funds, by mail or in person, of civil servants at public offices.

SOLDIERS FIRE ON TAMPICO WORKERS STRIKE IS CALLED

All Unions Aroused by Atrocious Act

(Special to the DAILY WORKER.)

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 5.—Dispatches from Tampico report that a serious situation has arisen from an encounter between a federal detachment guarding the Mexican Gulf Petroleum terminal and striking workers. As a result a general strike is threatened with a demonstration by workmen which, it is feared, may lead to another sanguinary clash.

According to the official report of the captain commanding the troops, a group of strikers approached the company's terminal. The troops fired on the strikers and the latter retaliated. Two soldiers were severely wounded and many were slightly injured, while numerous strikers were also wounded.

While the fight was going on three launches containing more strikers came down the river to aid their companions, but the troops formed along the bank and prevented them from landing.

The labor unions in Tampico have telegraphed to President Obregon, protesting against the action of the military, and the atmosphere is now so charged that the proposed demonstration is causing apprehension among the business element in Tampico.

Militarism in New Zealand.

WELLINGTON, New Zealand—The National Peace council of New Zealand protests against the action of the military authorities in sending recruiters thru the schools of the country.

"Such an invasion of our scholastic institutions, by any person or persons having for their object the influencing of scholars to enlist in either the army, navy or air forces, is subversive to the best interests of education, and an unjustifiable intrusion into the sanctity of the education system of New Zealand, and is deliberately devised for the purpose of militarizing our boys and girls, and should be immediately prohibited," the council declares.

TAFT'S COURT HEARS ATTACK ON THE MINERS

Davis Appeared Last Time for Mine Owners

(By Federated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—Once more the U. S. supreme court is to hear arguments on the famous Coronado Coal Co. suit for damages against the United Mine Workers of America.

Two years ago the court decided that the lower courts were wrong in holding the general organization of the United Mine Workers of America responsible for damage done during a strike, conducted by Local Union No. 21 in the Arkansas field, to properties of the company and to its business.

Kicked Back and Forth.

The supreme court held that the company had not shown that the strike was called in order to interfere with interstate commerce, and hence it was a case for the state courts.

Going to back to the lower court, the Coronado concern argued that it had gathered new evidence showing such conspiracy to interfere with interstate commerce by means of the strike of some years previous. The lower court decided against the company, which has now appealed. It claims that Local Union No. 21 itself violated federal antitrust laws by obstructing the mining of coal.

Million Dollars Tied Up.

Over $1,000,000 of the funds of the United Mine Workers of America were tied up for years by the damage claim involved in the first suit. John W. Davis appeared before the supreme court as counsel for the company, the last time the issue was argued.

DARK PROSPECTS FOR FARMERS IN "GOLDEN WEST"

Mass Meetings Protest Against Debt Plan

By H. M. BARTHOLOMEW.

(Special to The DAILY WORKER.)

SASKATOON, Sask., Oct. 5.—The reception of the debt adjustment plan of the Farmers' Union of Canada by the provincial government of Saskatchewan, has met with quick response from the rank and file of the farmers. Mass meetings have been held in many places to protest against this rotten tactic of the "farmer" government. The farmers are boiling with indignation.

Desperate Situation.

The situation among the farmers of "the golden west" is desperate. Debts are mounting and seizures will soon become the order of the day. And in this desperate plight the farmers are demanding immediate action to protect themselves from the invasion of predatory interests. In this fight the Sturgis Lodge of the Farmers' Union is taking the lead by circularizing all lodges of the union with the following resolution:

Whereas, we, the members of the Sturgis local of the Farmers' Union of Canada, are in no way satisfied with any plan of debt adjustment that to date has been published;

And whereas we are especially dissatisfied with the plan outlined in "The Western Producer," under date of September 18, 1924;

To Protect Agriculture.

And whereas the time has come when a definite plan of action must be in readiness in order to protect the agricultural industry during the present season;

Therefore, be it resolved, that we, the members of the Farmers' Union of Canada, go on record as favoring the use of organized resistance to have any or all who purpose making seizures, carrying on foreclosures etc., until a living wage of $800 per quarter-section of land shall have been secured; as has been laid down by the members of the Farmers' Union of Canada in their annual convention. And in the case of organized resistance we beg to make the following suggestions:

1. The broadcasting of the demands of the union by means of speeches, articles, leaflets and posters;

2. Appeals to all farmer and labor organizations asking for help;

3. Definite organizational work among the farmers with a view to mass resistance.

There is every reason to believe that this appeal will meet with a ready response from the organized farmers of the debt-ridden west of Canada.

OCTOBER LABOR HERALD IS NOW OUT; CONTENTS OF INTEREST TO MILITANTS

The October issue of The Labor Herald is now on sale. As usual it is filled with articles of the greatest importance to militant workers, and particularly those who are active in the struggle against the reactionary bureaucracy of Gompers and Co.

Wm. Z. Foster contributes his views on the present political situation in an article entitled: "LaFollette, Gompers and Debs." This article also deals with the policies advocated by LaFollette, the middle class leader; Gompers, labor faker; and Debs the sentimentalist. Tim Buck, delegate from the T. U. E. L. Canadian section, and the Canadian Communist Party to the congresses of the Communist International and the Red Labor Union International, contributes an article dealing with the decisions of the recent congress of the R. I. L. U. In "Infantile Leftism in the O. B. U." Jack Johnstone deals with the problem of the One Big Union of Winnipeg, and shows what havoc the "infantile leftism" of the leaders of this dual union has wrought in the labor movement of Western Canada.

Even this partial list of the contents of the October Labor Hearld should whet the appetite of every militant sufficient to force him to secure a copy of this revolutionary magazine.

Secretaries of all local T. U. E. L. groups are asked to call at the local office, Room 303, 166 W. Washington St. and get their bundles of the Labor Herald.

WAR DEPARTMENT SPIES ON ALL ARMY OFFICERS

Cost $50,000 to Watch Paxton Hibben

(By Federated Press.)

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—Espionage is the most extravagant and wasteful hobby a government can indulge in. Capt. Paxton Hibben told the League for Mutual Aid at the Civic Club in an address on the subject of his trial by a military court which has been temporarily suspended during the absence of Brig. Gen. Barclay Parsons, president of the court.

Costly Espionage.

"It has cost at the very least $50,000 since 1917 to have me watched, my mail opened and tested for secret writing, my apartment broken into and my effects searched, my movements checked in the United States and abroad, and hundreds of reports compiled on my life from the time I was born to date, and all for nothing. Not one single thing has been found that would connect me in any way with subversive activities of any kind. The very bomb squad detectives assigned to follow me and report on what I said at meetings to raise funds for the relief of starving children in Russia were forced to testify under oath that I had been guilty of no radical utterances."

Hour by Hour Report.

"Hundreds of others have been similarly watched at like expense. I have been informed that the military intelligence division of the war department has a detailed hour-by-hour report on every single general officer who served in France—where he dined, whom he dined with, what they talked about, and, in the case it was a woman, where—if at all—he left her after dinner was over. The most intimate personal details are officially collected and filed away in a file that could conceivably be of use only to a blackmailer. This is what the mania for espionage leads to.

Started with Burns.

"Even the rabidest 100 per centers don't get their money's worth out of such espionage. For in my case, the espionage began at the instigation of William J. Burns, who was working for a foreign—the British—government, and the question at issue in the beginning was not in the least whether I was a good American or not, but whether I was a good Britisher, who approved of everything England was doing in Ireland and elsewhere, back in 1916 and 1917. Burns was the cost-liest investment the United States ever made."

Independence Day Is Dreary

MEXICO CITY.—Sept. 16, Mexico's Day of Independence, was celebrated by long lines of cadets colorfully attired, a weary soldiery and a shabby cavalry. There was little enthusiasm in the people as the military bands kept the soldiery in step. Not a cheer was heard as the hundreds of uniformed men filed past. The Mexican is not interested in military parades. A political manifestation half the size—and the people would have cheered themselves hoarse on the capitol or the large cities. The Mexican of the rural provinces is different, neither political nor military parades exite him.

CLAIM WOOD'S WORDS AID TO FILIPINO STAND

Show Elections Held in Islands Were Orderly

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—Governor General Wood, in his last annual report to the Secretary of War which has been transmitted to congress thru the President of the United States, has strengthened the claim of the Filipino people that a stable government has already been established in the Philippine Islands, the condition precedent imposed by congress to the granting of Philippine independence.

Quote General's Own Words.

Governor Wood, despite his known opposition to Philippine independence and to their claim that a stable government has already been established in the Philippines, said in his 1922 annual report:

"During the year general elections were held. They were the most orderly elections ever held in the Islands. It can be stated that thruout the Archipelago, there were no serious disturbances. All parties admit that the elections were fairly and honestly conducted. The number of complaints have been strikingly small."

In his message to the Philippine legislature, Governor Wood had the following to say:

"I congratulate you and thru you the Filipino people, on the orderly and lawful conduct of the recent elections which, notwithstanding the keenness of the struggle and the appearance of a strong new party in the field, were conducted with due regard to the rights of the candidates and with the which would be a credit to any people." Of previous elections, similar commendations were made by previous governors-generals.

Filipino leaders declare that the Filipino government is entirely self-supporting and has been so since the establishment of civil government in the Islands in 1901 by William H. Taft, new chief justice of the supreme court of the United States. The treasury of the United States has not and is not now contributing a single cent as aid in the administration of the Island, the Philippine government being entirely supported from taxes paid by the Filipino people.

Perhaps This Was Sent Out by Press Agent of LaFollette

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—Why don't Coolidge hire a hall or a ball park for his political meetings, instead of using government property, rent free?

That question is being asked more and more disgustedly by his opponents as "Cautious Cal" stays inside the big iron fence of the White House grounds, and invites crowds of pilgrims to their plans to tramp the grass and wear out the floors of the official residence. Photographers and radio engineers keep him before the public as constantly identified with the White House. His campaign advisers have discovered that with a president, as with hereditary royalty, there is an authority drawn from the mere fact of being seen and heard against a palatial background.

The fact is that not even Theodore Roosevelt ever used the executive mansion as a political sounding-board, nor did Woodrow Wilson ever think of employing it as a rostrum, as Coolidge is doing. They went out among the voters, and their party committees hired the halls. The political race was made from scratch. Coolidge insists upon the handicap start. It impresses the crowd, he believes, and gives him a pretext for refusal to be heckled on his record.

Soviet Russia Very Busy in Developing the Use of the Radio

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LENINGRAD, Oct. 5.—Soviet Russia is energetically fostering the development of radio within her borders. There are now forty sending stations, each with a radius of 2,000 miles, and these commercial stations are being rapidly supplemented with a network of smaller broadcasting stations operating on lower wave lengths.

The manufacture of radio supplies is a government monopoly and prizes are offered for inventions adapting apparatus to special Russian conditions. The Russian workers hail the radio as another means of wiping out barriers between city worker and peasant, between literate and illiterate and between the diverse language groups. Broadcast programs are under supervision of the commissariat of education, under the direction of its head, A. V. Lunacharsky. All sending apparatus is under strict government control to prevent anti-working class use.

How About Eternity?

OUR OFF-HAND ANSWER WOULD BE—

After we are dead, there will be lots of time!

But after we are dead, time does not mean a thing to us!

Today, to a REAL COMMUNIST, there are not enough hours in the day nor days in the year to commit a satisfactory number of "crimes" against capitalism.

Today, to a Communist, time, every minute of it, is divided into definite hours and days for definite tasks.

HERE ARE

BIG PROTEST MEET AGAINST DEPORTATION

Pittsburg Workers to Aid Pietro Nigra

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSBURG, Oct. 5.—More than a thousand Italian workingmen and women crowded into the Union Temple of Labor here to protest against the deportation of Pietro Nigra, an Italian worker who was active among the I. W. W., and of three other workers known in labor circles.

Comrade Enea Sormenti, of the Workers Party, who a few weeks ago led the demonstration in New York against the Fascist flyer Locatelli, made a ringing speech in which he called upon all the workingmen of the country to prevent the deportation of Nigra.

Nigra was arrested in September, 1917, for his labor activities and sentenced to five years at Leavenworth penitentiary. After his term had expired he was sentenced for the same offense, in defiance of the constitution, to deportation from the country. The United States department of labor has played the leading part in attempting to deport Nigra.

Send Telegram.

The Italian workers of Pittsburgh have sent a telegram to secretary of labor Davis, demanding that he prevent the deportation of Nigra.

To deport a worker to Italy today on charges of radical activities is practically equivalent to imposing a sentence of death on him, the speakers brought out during the course of the meeting. Comrade Sormenti recalled the case of Iacopo Tori, whom the United States government deported last spring. Tori was seized by orders of Mussolini immediately upon his arrival in Italy and thrown into one jail after the other. He was finally forced to serve in the national militia. Italian workers in this country, with whom Tori used to correspondent frequently, say that they have received no news of him for four months.

The workers who attended Comrade Sormenti's meeting gave $124.35, part of which will be used to defend Nigra. The rest will go to build up "Il Lavoratore," Italian Communist daily.

Tori Is Conscript in Italian Army But Very Much Alive

On September 25, the DAILY WORKER printed an article sent out by the "Defense News Service" of the L. W. W. General Defense Committee, referring to deportation of political prisoners, stating in part that: "Jacob Tori, Italian ex-political who was deported a few months ago, has never been heard of since his exile."

We have received a letter dated Oct. 2, from James Morris, secretary of the L. W. W. General Defense Committee saying: "Permit me to correct the story printed in the DAILY WORKER a few days ago. It dealt with the deportation of Jacob Tori. This fellow worker is now a conscript in the Italian army, having been drafted by the Fascisti under penalty of death."

This clears up the ominous disappearance of Tori, but illustrates at the same time how ruthless and violent is the reactionary Fascisti in its control of political power.

The Socialist Party Minus Socialism

By G. S. SHKLAR

Is the "Socialist party" socialist in name only, as the title of this article indicates? Is the charge correct that the socialist party has stripped itself of the last vestige of socialism, as its sister parties have done in Europe? Let the reader turn his eye to Wisconsin, the present stronghold of the socialist party. Let him examine the developments which have recently taken place there, and he will be better able to judge whether the socialist party is entitled to be the spokesman of the working class.

The socialist party held its biannual convention in Wisconsin on June 21st, 22nd, 1924. Here the socialist party was confronted with the major question of the attitude which should be taken towards LaFollette, should he be supported by the socialist party or should be exposed as a politician and a faker? In spite of the bitter opposition led by Berger, the attitude of the convention seemed to be very clear. By a vote of 113 to 3 the convention passed the following resolution: "The socialist party of Wisconsin, in convention assembled adheres to the stand heretofore taken by the national organization, that we are unalterably opposed to the Cleveland conference indorsing any candidate running as an independent and therefore resolves that in the event no labor party is formed at Cleveland, we favor the placing on the ballot of a full national ticket."

Broke Convention Pledge

Mayor Hoan made a fiery speech in favor of his resolution. He stated that the socialist party would meet with a great fiasco if it threw its support to some disgruntled individual, "either LaFollette or MacAdoodledoo" Mayor Hoan was followed by Quick, the present candidate of the socialist party for the governor of Wisconsin. Quick urged the socialist party not to tie itself to the tail of some self-seeking politicians' kite. His speech was followed by Wm Coleman, state secretary who supported the majority position and criticized the party for not putting up a candidate against U. S. senator LaFollette.

Two years ago the same speaker discharged a volley in the same direction by referring to "Double crossing progressives as we have them in this state." Finally, the sentiments expressed by and lead by Hoan and Quick prevailed, and the convention went on record as overwhelmingly opposed to LaFollette. This might have been due to the ideological integrity of the leaders. It was no secret, however, that it was in the interests of the local political group to oppose the LaFollette movement, as a fussion with the LaFollette forces threatened in the long run to deprive the socialist [illegible] number of responsible political jobs. However that may be no one had dreamed that the situation would change so abruptly and so completely after the Cleveland convention.

Harmony in Crooks' Camp.

Peace and harmony reigns now in Wisconsin, among the misleaders of the socialist movement. The battle for "revolutionary socialism" is over: The right winger—Mr. Berger and the left winger Mr. Hoan are safely chained to the chariot of the anti-socialist La-Follette, and sing their eulogies to this new founded savior of the working class.

Politics make strange bedfellows.

Yet many a simple-hearted workingmen rubs his eyes and tries to figure out the puzzle of the fierce battles of yesterday and of the strange harmony of to-day.

This surrender of the socialist party to the bitterest enemy of socialism manifests itself daily. Here is an example:

Prior to the primary elections the socialist party as a concession to its "left wing" had nominated Bill Quick for governor. Blaine received an unqualified endorsement of LaFollette, the S. P. gave a tacit approval to Cummings. The S. P's. attitude towards governor Blaine now changes. The Milwaukee Leader which only recently denounced Blaine as an enemy of labor, suddenly becomes silent on this question. There is very little verbal denunciation of Blaine and practically no campaigning is carried on for Quick, while a great deal of energy is devoted toward boosting Berger.

It becomes very apparent that Berger's machine is putting over its well planned betrayal of the rank and file of the socialist party, and socialist workers of Wisconsin.

Quick Slow To Act.

Even if Quick is not withdrawn for fear of forcing a rebellion of the already bitterly dissatisfied group within the party, no effective fight will be made on behalf of his election.

Quick himself it seems is conscious of betrayal but is willing to be kidded along. It is a well known fact that prominent socialist party politicians are working together with Blaine in planning the LaFollette campaign and in many cases strive for his campaign fund. It is only natural that under the circumstances the S. P. would be forced not to put up an active resistance to his re-election for governor The betrayal and alliance with middle class politicians on a national scale are inevitably followed by the betrayal of socialism in state politics.

Only Election Machine

The continuous horse trading with the "progressives" has a demoralizing effect upon the S. P. organization in Wisconsin. With the exception of an election machine in Milwaukee, the S. P. of Wisconsin has practically no membership in any other part of the state.

In the report of the state executive committee to the last convention of the party Wilson Coleman complaints that "The LaFollette swoop in the Fall of 1922, had also a depressing effect upon the remaining membership of our party." One can clearly perceive that the "swoop of LaFollette" in 1924, will finally destroy the last vestige of the party. For after all the socialist party today is essentially a vote-catching machine. The class issue plays no part in its ideology beyond its possibilities for exploitation of workers' votes. It is to the voter, not to the worker that the socialist party is adapting it propaganda.

Class Issues Submerged

"The ancestry" plays an important part in the politics of the S. P. in Wisconsin. Berger's machine caters strongly to the German population. Class issues are submerged under the appeal to national sentiment. But in the meantime the S. P. betrays its nationalist adherents as well, deluding them into belief that the election of LaFollette group will change the course of American imperialism towards Germany. It is indeed one of the most outstanding crimes of the S. P. which the workers will never forgive—this betrayal of internationalism of the workers' socialist movement for the nationalism of the bourgeoisie.

The workers should well notice that a similar policy is adopted by the national LaFollette committee. The Steuben society and largest bourgeois publications are exploiting the German population while the socialist Democratic party of Germany is assisting the international bankers to fasten the yoke of Dawes' plan upon the toiling masses of Germany. In contrast to that there is a veiled opposition to the recognition of the first Workers' Republic, the Union of Federated Socialist Soviet Republics.

At the conference of progressive elements in Madison on May 17th where the socialist party has a majority of votes, a resolution for recognition of Soviet Russia, was overwhelmingly defeated. The socialist party delegates either abstaining from voting or actively opposing the resolution.

Not Constructive Program.

The same petty bourgeois ideology manifests itself in the socialist party trade union activities. In the report submitted by Frank J. Weber who is very influential in the trade union movement, there is not a single constructive idea. No plan for the organization of the unorganized, nothing for the improvement of the structural form of organization.

In actual experience the socialist party boasts of the fact that there are fewer strikes in Milwaukee than in any other city. As a result of this class collaboration policy the trade union movement is exceedingly weak. One can clearly see that the socialist party views its trade union activities in the light of utilizing it for its own political gain and for the activities of the exploiters.

A Business Platform.

In studying the platform of the socialist party and also its major issues in the Milwaukee campaign, one finds most of the space devoted to the question of honesty and efficiency in government, better harbors, cheaper administration, lower taxes, fewer strikes and all the slogans that appeal to the middle class and manufacturers, but nothing is said about the [illegible] workers, trade union movement, housing conditions and the problems of unemployment. Only occasionally a few socialistic phrases are used to delude the misguided workers and even these are put into ambiguous language. So, for instance, in concluding the report, the state executive committee urges to work for the socialist party to the extent that "ignorance, crime and injustice be wiped from the earth." Nothing is said of anti-labor injunctions.

The above facts clearly illustrate that the socialist party is socialist in name only. For many years past it has been drifting toward the LaFollette opposition and prior to its official surrender it has completely surrendered ideologically. For some time back Berger and LaFollette were in the same camp and it was only a question of the appropriate moment before the entire socialist movement would jump into the LaFollette wagon.

There is only one redeeming feature in the latest development. The final bankruptcy of the socialist party of Wisconsin has stripped it of the few remaining socialist phrases and today it stands before the workers of Milwaukee exposed its in treachery and corruption.

The socialist party—minus socialism.

It will not be very long before the few remaining proletarian elements within the socialist party and workers following its lead will rebel against the perversion of revolutionary socialism by Berger and Company and will join the only true party of revolutionary socialism—the Workers Party of America.

GARVEY DRAWS SMALL CROWD IN KANSAS CITY

Gives Qualified Praise to Ku Klux Klan

(Special to The Daily Worker)

KANSAS CITY, Kans., Oct. 5.—Marcus Garvey, organizer and czar of the back-to-Africa Universal Negro Improvement Association, spoke here recently.

There are 60,000 Negroes in the two Kansas cities and the U. N. I. A. claims 500 members here—but not 400 in all turned out.

Armed With Toy Guns.

The ushers were in brilliant uniform—and armed with toy wooden guns.

For two hours he pounded away at one idea—be race conscious, fix your thoughts and hopes on Africa and nourish the will to power to TAKE and HOLD Africa. He flayed the race for its inertia. His shallowness is shown by the fact that he warned against the unions as a grave peril that will force the Negro out of all employment (while giving qualified praise to the Klan!); he lauded Roosevelt, Bryan, Wilson—even the slave-owner Washington—as heroic and all-knowing statesmen! He refused to name his presidential choice, but endorsed enthusiastically the millionaire Senator Capper!

Make Big Claims.

The strength of the Garveyites has been greatly overrated. He opened his speech by the claim that in the past 12 months the U. N. I. A. has grown from 7,000,000 to 11,000,000. If so, why are they unable to keep a daily—or anything more than their 10c four-page weekly—The Negro World?

"Rest" Scattered Around.

If you ask where these 11,000,000 are, the list starts out, "10,000 in New York; 5,000 in Chicago; 3,000 in Philadelphia; 1,500 in Detroit; 500 in Kansas City—and the rest scattered around."

Upholsterers Strike In "Philly"

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Oct. 5.—Upholsterers of Local Union No. 77, of this city downed their tools in order to compel their bosses to renew the agreement of last year.

This action was taken after all attempts of the union to induce the bosses to renew the agreement failed. The strike is effective one hundred per cent.

The old agreement called for a 48-hour week and for the elimination of the most horrible sweat shop conditions under which the upholsterers are compelled to work.

Several bosses agreed to accept the terms of the union after they convinced themselves that the union means business and that it is ready to tie up the industry thruout the city.

District Five in Second Place

THE Pittsburgh district of the Workers' Party has taken second place in the total amount of campaign funds collected by the district office.

New York, the largest district in the party, has first place, and as yet there is no district close enough to it to be adjudged a competitor. The contributions for the campaign received by the New York district office total $3,884.08 on Sept. 26.

Pittsburgh has collected a total of $613.25 to Sept. 30. There are larger districts than the Pittsburgh district and reports from these any day may take the honor of second place from Pittsburgh. These larger districts are Minneapolis, Detroit, Cleveland, Boston, Chicago.

Labor Defense Day

MELBOURNE, Australia.—On the tenth anniversary of the outbreak of the world war, the Melbourne Trades Hall council passed the following motion:

"This Council is convinced that with another great war the horrors and terrors of the last one will be eclipsed, and, fearing that such another war may be imminent in Capitalism itself, affirms it to be the duty of the Labor government of Australia to declare that in no circumstances, compulsory or otherwise, will the workers take up arms in the interests of capitalistic rivalries, but, instead, will join with the organized workers of all countries in striving whole-heartedly for peace by international action directed to the socialization of industry."

DECISIONS OF WORKERS PARTY CENTRAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

THE Central Executive Committee of the Workers party at the meeting of September 29th made decisions on the following matters:—

Cleveland Situation: Comrade Max Lerner, District Organizer in Cleveland appeared before the committee on the question of the suspension of W. Karrath for one year for breach of Party discipline and conduct inimical to the Communist movement. The Central Executive Committee voted to sustain the action of the D. E. C. and appointed Comrade Ruthenberg to go to Cleveland to meet with the city central committee of Cleveland to straighten out the matter.

Young Workers League Controversy.—Central Executive Committee appointed a committee consisting of Comrades Bittelman, Bedacht and Browder to consider questions raised in regard to the activities of the Young Workers League in communication from Comrade Nat Kaplan, member of the N. E. C. of the Y. W. L. and also in relation to disciplinary action taken against certain comrades in connection with proposed anti-military activities.

Italian Convention:—The date of the convention of the Italian Section of the Party was postponed to October 11, 12 and 13 with the approval of the C. E. C.

Volkszeitung.—The Committee acted upon certain communications from German branches in relation to the Horthy ad. appearing in the Volkszeitung, by referring them to the statement already published and also took up the question of articles appearing in that paper and decided to put the whole question of the Volkszeitung and its policies on the agenda of the full C. E. C. meeting to be held at an early date.

Left Poale Zion:—The Central Executive Committee decided to accept the cooperation of the Left Poale Zion in the Workers Party campaign with the understanding that Workers Party speakers would appear on the platform of that organization together with its speakers and would have the right to appeal for membership in the W. P. and to explain the difference of the position of the W. P. and the Left Poale Zion.

Buchwald Resignation:— Comrade Buchwald was authorized to resign as one of the contributors of "Forschritt" the organ of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers in view of the fact that this contributions were censured and the paper is carrying on a definite pro LaFollette policy.

Daily Worker Campaign:—Comrade Alfred Wagenknecht was appointed to manage the Daily Worker Campaign for funds which is to be open November 7th. The purpose of the campaign will be to raise the funds necessary to meet the deficits of the Daily Worker for the year and place it on a safe basis for the coming year.

Freiheit Article:—The Central Executive Committee congratulated the Executive Committee of the Jewish Bureau for its prompt action in repudiating an article by Comrade Lilliput in which the latter expressed the view that the League of Nations was now making a sincere effort to end war and was on the road to achieving its aim.

Paterson Relief Committee:—The Committee authorized the organization of Paterson Strike Relief Committees in all large cities for the purpose of raising funds for the Paterson strikers.

District Eighteen Miners Relief:—The Committee also approved of the sending out of a call for relief for the strike miners of District eighteen, the publication of this call in the DAILY WORKER.

'DAILY WORKER' LIKED BY GARY STEEL TOILERS

But Bosses Don't Like It a Wee Bit

(Special to The DAILY WORKER.)

GARY, Ind., Oct. 5.—The DAILY WORKER has come to Gary to stay. Steel mill workers are enthusiastic about the paper, the remark of one worker to the DAILY WORKER reporter being typical of the attitude of the employes of the United States Steel corporation towards "the workers' daily."

"That's the kind of a paper we've needed in Gary for a long time. That's the boy, keep on selling them."

A worker in the blacksmith department of the mills told the DAILY WORKER reporter that the paper has been barred in the steel mills. "I was reading the DAILY WORKER," he declared, "and my foreman came up and told me, 'You came in here to work and not to read. That paper isn't allowed in the steel mills.'

Building Up Circulation.

The DAILY WORKER has been placed in on the news stands in Gary and is already working up a good trade. The steel mill workers are getting their money ready and buying it every night as they go home from work. One worker saw John Heinrichson, circulation manager of the DAILY WORKER, reading the paper in the New York Central railroad station. He walked over and asked Heinrichson, "Can I get that paper delivered to me every day by mail?" He took out a subscription on the spot.

Salvation Army Howled.

The police chief did his best to prove the assertion that the city officials are controlled by the steel trust when he refused the DILY WORKER permission to distribute sample copies of the DAILY WORKER to the steel mill workers. The chief also declared that no street meetings of any kind are permitted in Gary, altho the same night the Salvation Army was keeping the people awake late into the night on the corner of Eighth Ave. and Broadway.

Saturday a squad of workers in a few minutes at one gate sold 127 copies of the DAILY WORKER, and pletely sold out their supply before the day ended.

laying, a veteran rebel from Boston comes to my mind. He laid bricks for the capitalist class for a living but had always a spare brick for the revolutionary movement. He did not hurl it in Donnybrook Fair fashion, but every week he would bring in a subscription for a socialist paper. This was before the socialist party became the executioner of socialism.

BUT to get back to the business end of this story. The plan of campaign to increase the circulation of The DAILY WORKER calls for a spurt of activity from now until November 7. The DAILY WORKER is organizing a bricklayers' union—not a dual union. In joining this union you are laying bricks in a great working class institution, our Communist Daily. You don't pay dues. You simply get a new subscriber. Thousands of bricks are going out to all the Workers Party branches. Every member of the party is required to take a brick along—at least one—and get it signed. When you send it back with the money to pay for the sub, you become a member in good standing of the DAILY WORKER Bricklayers' Union, and your name will appear in the roll of honor in the columns of the DAILY WORKER.

THIS week starts the greatest brick-throwing contest in the history of the American working class movement. The capitalist candidates are engaged in "bull"-throwing contests. Foster and Gitlow are holding the fort for Communism in the election campaign. We are engaged in laying the foundation for a movement that will sweep capitalism [illegible] rubbish heap of history and build on its ruins the structure of a new socialist order. This is the attitude to take toward this circulation drive. When the next election campaign comes class brings down the iron heel with greater force on the necks of the exploited, The DAILY WORKER must be there to bring aid and comfort to the toilers.

OUR job is not finished when the ballots are counted in November. Our work goes on always and will go on until the banner of Communism flies over the headquarters of the Workers' and Farmers' government of the United States. The circulation drive is revolutionary work. Let us make it a success. Look for the advertisement in this issue. You will notice the rates on the "brick" at the bottom of the page. $6.00 for one year; $3.50 for six months; $2.00 for three months. In Chicago, because of postoffice regulations, the rates are: $8.00 for one year; $4.50 for six months; $2.50 for three months.

NOW come on with the subscriptions, let the bricks fall where they may!

merely "waring on McAndrew" but that real issues were involved affecting nearly half-million public school children. In spite of the fact that a box was reserved for the honor, the mayor did not appear, nor did he make any reply to the teachers. A committee sent directly from the theatre to the city hall reported back that they were unable to see the mayor, but his secretary had declared he would make sure the mayor received a statement unanimously adopted by the mass meeting.

The sentiment of the teachers was undoubtedly hostile to mayor Dever. They realize, beyond a doubt, that the mayor has ignored them and listened to the chamber of commerce only. They have seen statements in the press that Dever will appoint whom he pleases to the four vacancies in the board of education, and will ignore recommendations of the teachers' organizations. The teachers showed by their aplause that they deeply resented the mayor's attitude.

Olander Gets in Bad.

It was therefore no surprise when Victor Olander's glowing tribute to Dever fell on deaf ears. Olander's praise of the mayor as a friend of labor and an honest man provoked no applause. Every reference to the fact that the mayor has dodged his duty to the teachers and the school children, and deserves condemnation however aroused a storm of applause.

"We appeal to you at once, Mr. Mayor," the official statement presented by the mass meeting to the mayor stated, "as the official representative of the children and citizens of Chicago, to appoint at once on the board of education four citizens who are free and willing to co-operate with the teachers and city council in securing thoro enforcement of the tax laws, adequate school revenues instead of limiting the school opportunities of the children and crippling the schools because of insufficient revenues." The teachers insist that the responsibility which the mayor pointed out as resting with the city council, in this matter, rests equally with the board of education.

Corporations Dodge Taxes.

The statement indorsed by the mass meeting emphasized that large corporations are dodging the tax laws.

"The Chicago public schools are facing an alarming shortage of funds due to the failure to enforce the tax laws This shortage is at the bottom of most, if not all, the trouble in the schools," declared the statement. "A deficit is piling up at the rate of two and a half million dollars a year. It is now close to nineteen million dollars. The board has almost reached the limit of its borrowing powers.

"The teachers demand the issue be faced squarely. The board of education evades the issue; stifles the voice of the teachers, and thwarts their efforts. Platoon schools, double schools and double sessions, larger classes, larger schools, and all other shifts and makeshifts are shortsighted attempts to evade the real issue.

"Every child of school age is entitled to attend a middle of the day school, to occupy a seat in a quiet, uncrowded school room, and to have individual attention from adequately trained teachers who are free from petty tyranny and the indignities of bureaucratic domination."

Bosses Seek Good Robots.

Ald. Oscar Nelson declared to the teachers that while their statement that 36 billion dollars worth of taxable property is illegally escaping taxation is important, they must not forget that much of the trouble arises from the fact that the Illinois Manufacturers' Association, and the Chicago Chamber of Commerce is attempting to control the school system so as to supply the industrial system with "robots" who do not fight for their unions.

The emphasis, however, was placed upon the tax situation instead of up on the issue of teachers' control o the school system, Olander declaring "I do not want to go into the matter of teachers' councils."

'BIG BIZ' SHEET GIVES ALIBI FOR DAWES' CRIMES

Bankers' Journal Calls Them "Unintentional"

By CARL HAESSLER
(For The Federated Press)

Charlies Dawes is guilty of irregular banking all right, but a good friend of Charlie has a high character and he says Charlies didn't mean any real wrong so everything is as it should be. (It happens that this friend is Charlie's paid attorney, or was at the time of the conviction.)

This is the latest defense, put up by the Chicago Journal of Commerce, against the Illinois state supreme court's conviction of Dawes and his bank for shady work in the Lorimer bank scandal a decade ago.

Court Hits Dawes.

The bank of which Dawes is president recognized that the deal could not stand the light of day and tried to wriggle out of it by saying that Dawes had done the illegal thing on his own responsibility. The court said it was an offense not only of Dawes but of the bank for which he acted as agent. And the court ordered the payment to the receiver of the bankrupt Lorimer bank of over $100,000 by the Dawes bank.

What Dawes' attorney says now is unimportant except the he is chairman of that big business auxiliary, the American Red Cross. But the Chicago Journal of Commerce, which is always very severe on mountebanks and shady characters when they are on the other side of the fence, can find only this to say for Dawes:

Putting on the White-Wash.

"The high character of Mr. Payne (the Dawes' lawyer) emphasizes his assurance that Gen. Dawes' violation of the state banking laws was unintentional and of a purely technical character and that there was not the slightest intention to aid in a fraud when he made the temporary loan which enabled William Lorimer to organize the LaSalle Street Trust & Savings Bank."

The business journal passes the whitewash swiftly over to the attorney, admitting en route the guilt and that the "loan" was temporary. The bank examiners had thought it was not a loan at all and the state supreme court has decided that the supposed loan was the property of the Lorimer bank and that the Dawes bank "must account for the money so wrongfully taken by it."

Dawes Was Lorimer Man.

Dawes was a 160 per cent Lorimer man in the scandalous election to the U. S. senate from which Lorimer was ejected for campaign bribery. Hence his friendship for Lorimer in the banking deal. That Dawes was not an innocent in the banking laws is evident from his severe action against the Globe Bank of Boston taken while he was U. S. controller of the currency 25 years ago. Dawes' Globe bank transaction enabled Standard Oil, a Dawes backer, to get control of Montana copper. Standard Oil then deposited the money with which Dawes started his Central Trust Co of Chicago. And now he is the Coolidge partner.

Readmit Building Council.

ST. LOUIS.—The St. Louis Building Trades council has ironed out its differences with the building trades department, A. F. of L. and its charter has been restored following a visit by president Donlin of the department. The local council was suspended by the Portland convention when the council refused to unseat delegates of structural iron workers' Local 18, which had been suspended by its international union. The local trades have been somewhat demoralized since the revocation of the council charter. A campaign for reaffiliation is under way and most of the local unions will join the reorganized council, it is believed.

MARINE TRANSPORT WORKERS, I. W. W., URGED TO AFFILIATE WITH RED LABOR INTERNATIONAL

To the CONVENTION,
MARINE TRANSPORT WORKERS—
INDUSTRIAL UNION NO. 510, I. W. W., c/o John Aron, Secy.-Treas.,
New York City, N. Y.

Fellow Workers:—

In no industry more than in Marine Transport has the post-war dislocation of capitalist economy been so evident and so calamitous for the workers. The end of all war "prosperity" in the transport of the means of death and destruction throw great masses of marine workers into the ranks of the unemployed. The ship owners were quick to take advantage, and the disastrous conflicts of 1921 left the organizations weakened.

Nor is there hope of permanent betterment in industry. In spite of all technical advance and the normal increase of population, production thruout the world is only about eighty per cent of the pre-war total. The financial system of capitalist exchange is disturbed everywhere and in Europe is wholly collapsed. Attempts thru the Dawes Plan to give it life and to give Europe over to American imperialist control, promises only to lead to new and worse bankruptcy. In this situation the marine transport workers play an extremely important role. They are quickly and seriously affected by conditions, but at the same time their situation, which makes them easily affected, also enables them —with proper organization and revolutionary direction—to exert great power for their own interests and those of the whole world proletariat.

But the marine workers are in a chaotic state organizationally. True, they have unions, too many unions. The multitude of unions is a handicap, a tragedy, a crime. Not only are the workers kept discouraged by unions built upon craft distinctions, but they are kept blind and ignorant by a leadership which is so treacherous that it betrays the interests of its own membership to class collaboration and "patriotic" acceptance of any conditions under the American flag. We need only mention the tactics of Andy Furesuth and T. V. O'Connor to make class conscious, and in spite of the long with disgust. It is to the everlasting credit of the M. T. W. No. 510 that it has held up the banner of revolutionary industrial unionism above all this mess. But every worker is not class conscious, an in spite of the long and noble fight put up by the M. T. W., which has made it the leading organization among the seamen, the old rank of craft transport workers are practically unorganize.

With the industry at low ebb, general unemployment sweeping the country and, above all, the competition from underpaid European seamen, continued craft separation and disorganization plays into the hands of the American Steamship Owners' Association, which has announced an attack on wages. Already on the Pacific, the blacklist has had an effect. Unquestionably the government Shipping Board with Fingey O'Connor will collaborate to force down wages to coolie standard and Furesuth will try to force his members to accept in the name of patriotism. The craft union officials will not fight, and if they would they could not win with such antiquated instruments. But together with the unorganized rank and file an obstacle to the M. T. W. putting up a successful fight even to protect itself. Unity of action against attack of the bosses by all existing unions is a necessity whose urgency will more and more grow in the minds of the backward workers still clinging to the craft union. The time is advantageous and the M. T. W. is in a position where its own interests should cause it to invite all unions into a Council of Action to formulate common offensive and defensive operations against the bosses upon specific grievances. True, the reactionary officials may ignore your call, but the membership of their unions will not. The M. T. W. has everything to gain.

The trend toward industrial unionism in other industries is greatly stimulated by the establishment of shop committees, and the advantage of establishing shop committees to act as organs of job control seems obvious. Conditions exist in hours, wages, unsafe ships, overloading, rotten food, insanitary quarters, etc., upon which a whole crew may be rallied and a committee chosen—in which all workers, organized and unorganized, have a vote—to settle the grievance. Such committees should have permanency, distribute literature, collect union dues and nourish unionism by bringing the unorganized into activity. They become the job unit of the industrial union and are organs of combat—but are useful alike in normal times as in hours of revolution.

The M. T. W. is in a better situation to appreciate the need of international connection than are some other sections of the I. W. W. The very nature of the work compels the marine worker to be an internationalist. But in seeking international organization there is, however, a choice as to method. The logcal method is, of course, to affiliate with existing unions in other lands. The "Open Letter" sent by eleven members of the M. T. W. protesting the authority and support given Otto Rieger and his mythical Stettin Branch, is an illustration of the results of what is politely called "absorbtion,"—the destruction of European unions to build up the I. W. W. with the wreckage. This should teach the lesson that affiliation is the way to international solidarity.

Affiliation for the M. T. W. No. 510, must, of course, come about through the affiliation of the I. W. W. as a whole. It should be the purpose of the M. T. W. No. 510, to bring the question of affiliation to the Red International of Labor Unions before the general organization of the I. W. W. and do its part to bring about its consumation. But pending such result, the M. T. W. will greatly profit by establishing and maintaining friendly connection with the International Propaganda Committee of the Revolutionary Transport Workers affiliated with the R. I. L. U. It should be clearly understood, in view of much misrepresentation, that affiliation to the R. I. L. U. involves no affiliation to political organizations, since the organic connection between the Communist international and the R. I. L. U. was dissolved at the Second Congress of the R. I. L. U. The R. I. L. U. does, of course, believe that a revolutionary political party, such as are the sections of the Comintern, is necessary to a successful struggle for overthrowal of capitalist dictatorship and the establishment of the dictatorship of the proletariat. But it is organically separate.

Fellow Workers! You meet a critical hour. The struggle of imperialist forces acting through Chinese puppets threatens to flame across the world in another war. The consequences of a naval conflict between America and Japan at least, means tragedy to all workers, but first of all to seamen. The R. I. L. U. in May 1923 at Berlin, agreed with the Amsterdam Transport Workers upon establishment of Control Committees to fight both Fascism and War. The Amsterdam international, however, sabotazed the united front. It is possible that the M. T. W. No. 510 may disagree with the R. I. L. U. on some points. But if the M. T. W. understands that, as a force of revolutionary workers, it should fight imperialist war, upon that issue alone, and putting aside all points of dispute, the R. I. L. U. invites you to immediate conference to plan economic action against the War Danger. Fellow workers! You are either for or against imperialist wars. There is no neutral ground. We can fight against war only when the transport workers join the fight! What do you say?

With Revolutionary Greetings,
Red International Affiliation Committee,
1514 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

GITLOW WARS ON LAFOLLETTE IN HOME STATE

Takes Communist Fight Into Wisconsin

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Oct. 5.—Benjamin Gitlow, Communist candidate for vice-president, denounced the anti-labor record of LaFollette as proven by the record of the Wisconsin senator in his home state, in a speech at a mass meeting at the Freie Gemeinde Hall here today.

"LaFollette is an upholder of the capitalist system," Gitlow declared. "The masses must be satisfied to wear cheap clothing, to go hungry, to face the militia and the police court, the bayonet and prison in times of strike, they must be shot down like dogs when they try to establish decent living conditions. And this is the system upheld by LaFollette.

Shows Up Gompers' Aid.

"But you tell us Gompers and the socialists are supporting LaFollette. What about it? Gompers supported the democrats and that did not make the democratic party any leave the representative of labor. This year the reactionary officials of the railroad brotherhoods were prepared to indorse the oily democrat, MacAdoo. Did their indorsement prevent MacAdoo from representing the corrupt oil interests?

"If the labor leaders of the country were actually interested in building up the workers politically, they would use their influence to organize the workers into a mighty political labor party for the purpose of taking over the government in the interests of the working class. Instead of doing that, LaFollette knifed the labor party movement and opposed the St. Paul farmer-labor party on June 17.

"The socialist party has formerly told you to engage only with a separate working class party. But now they are leading their party into a movement which serves business and profits and demonstrates that it will use its political power to crush the workers."

Gary Likes LaFollette.

Gitlow told the enthusiastic audience that even Elbert Gary, of the United States Steel corporation declared in New York recently that he had nothing against LaFollette, "Because Gary knows that LaFollette represents the capitalist class."

Many large Wall Street bankers are supporting LaFollette, Gitlow declared. He told how much of LaFollette's campaign money is being furnished by Rudolph Spreckles, sugar king, out of the oppressed Negroes in his sugar plantations. Gitlow stated Frank Vanderlip, head of the National City bank, is also supporting LaFollette. "The Workers Party is the only party in the campaign that truly represents the interests of the workers," Gitlow declared.

Coming Gitlow Meetings.

Gitlow's future dates are:

DULUTH, Minn.—Monday, October 6, 8 p. m., Shrine Auditorium, 2nd Ave. W. and 1st St.

SUPERIOR, Wis.—Tuesday, October 7, 8 p. m., Tower Hall, 13th St. and Tower Ave.

ST. PAUL, Minn.—Wednesday, October 8, 8 p. m., Labor Temple, 414 No. Franklin Ave.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. — Thursday, October 9, 8 p. m., Colseum, 27th Ave. South and Lake St.

CHICAGO, Ill.—Sunday, October 12, 2:30 p. m., Ashland Auditorium, Van Buren and Ashland.

To Organize Printers.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 5.—The executive committee Mexican Federation of Labor is sending out special organizers to unionize all the printing trades and newspaper men in Mexico. This is in preparation for the sixth convention of the federation to be held next month.

A Fundamental Issue

All signs point to an early and sharp parliamentary contest in Great Britain.

For months the Labor cabinet has been able to sidestep and avoid contests of strength with its Liberal and Conservative opponents by proposing compromises at the eleventh hour. The tide has turned. A snag has been hit by all sides. The ostacle is the treaty with Soviet Russia. Then, there is the further opposition of the self-styled lovers of the freedom of press in the Asquith and Baldwin camps of the Labor government's dropping the case against the editor of the official organ of the Communist Party, the Worker's Weekly.

No better issues could be sought by the workingmen of Great Britain. No issues could touch more deeply the sorest points of difference between the exploiters and the workers in the British Isles than these. The British imperialists will certainly think thrice before they throw down the gauntlet to the Labor Party on these questions. A sharp conflict over the treatment of Soviet Russia and the supremacy of Scotland Yard over the organization of the Communist workers will certainly stimulate the class solidarity and consciousness of the laborers.

The workers will ask why it is that the reactionary Morning Post has the right to state its opinions against the organized labor forces while the latter are denied the right to criticise the military forces, the strike-breaking agents in uniform. The workers will ask why it is that loans to Horthy's bloody Hungary and the puppet Austrian government are guaranteed, but loans to the Workers' and Farmers' Soviet Republic of Russia are boycotted. In this very asking the workers will learn of the fundamental opposition of their interests as a class to the Lloyd Georges, the Asquiths, and the Baldwins.

And should the MacDonalds, the Hendersons and Thomases and Snowdens refuse to accept the challenge of the capitalist spokesmen, the working class of Great Britain will come another step nearer learning who is who in their own camp. Herein lies, in the immediate sense, an even greater danger to the employing class of England. It is for this reason that we still doubt whether the British exploiters who have years of experience as a ruling class will undertake to challenge the Labor Party at this time and in this manner. In many ways the British imperialists will fear a victory on their part far more than a defeat.

Come what may as a result of the probable election in Great Britain, the Communist forces will be strengthened in the contest.

Leadership of the Youth

Speaking of crime among the youth at the recent convention of the American Bankers' Association, a New York judge opined that the "need is for men who will give personal service to lead the boys to grow up right."

Now, where could the required leadership be found in more abundance than among bankers? They are the finest collection of thieves operating under the screen of legality that could possibly be gathered together altho there are some who are in favor of awarding the crown for crookedness to the lawyers. We, however, will defend our choice to the death. The American idea is to get the money and it is little wonder that young men and boys who have before them the example of wholesale robbery such as the bankers indulge in without interference, consider that the method matters little so long as one gets away with the loot.

The whole system of capitalism is a crime against the working class and this paper is not going to concern itself with minor violations of the capitalist code. We feel that for some considerable time the leadership of the masses, young and old alike, has been in the hands of the plunderbund and that it must bear the responsibility for any crudeness that manifests itself from time to time among the youth who are not always able to get a bank charter, hire an attorney and go into the business of robbery on a genteel basis.

Self-Exposure

Senator Brookhart's choice of senator, now Supreme Court Justice Kenyon, as one of those whom he desires to emulate, has its weak points. Kenyon was the leader of the farm bloc, but he left his followers in the lurch to accept from Harding an appointment to the supreme bench. He evidently preferred security to struggle and in that he is like ninety-nine and forty-four hundredths per cent of the bourgeois radicals.

They long for security and worship respectability—the fetishes of their class. The mention of this particular idol by name gives a fairly correct estimate of Senator Brookhart's radicalism and sticking qualities.

Wheat and the Farmers

As a result of the world crop situation the price of American wheat has been rising in the last few months. The slight gains that may accrue to the farmers from this spurt in the price of wheat and corn after the grain gamblers, the mortgage holders, the tax collectors and the bankers get thru taking their share of the so-called prosperity will approach the insignificant at best.

But the latest rise of wheat to $1.51 a bushel is now being seized upon as the occasion for a declaration that all is well with the farming masses and that bleak days are behind. The department of agriculture, organized supposedly to help the farmers, [illegible] in this great outflow of buncombe which is part of the political piffle peddled by the Coolidge clique in order to enhance their own campaign capital.

Even if every cent of the rise in certain crop prices would go to the farmers, in the period of European extraordinary demand, the deplorable condition of the great mass of farmers in the country would remain fundamentally unchanged. In fact a careful analysis of the roseate report about the "good old days" in the rural areas belies the preposterous claims. This report by Mr. Gennug tells us: "It may be that for a considerable period agriculture will stand at some disparity with urban industry." We are further informed that "Dairymen are beginning to feel the pressure from higher prices of grain feeds. Milk prices have stayed at rather discouraging levels. . . . The cattle situation remains an enigma. It has been a four-year story of liquidation, which still continues." The cattle men are still losing money. In so far as the coast country is concerned, drought, frosts and foot and mouth disease have given the conditions a turn for the worse in the last year.

Apparently the picture is not as delightful as we are asked to view it. Add to this the bankruptcy ravages, the collapse in the crop values, the land values, the fall in the general earnings, and the rise in the indebtedness that has been going for the last five years and the situation is presented in its truest light—the same old troubles.

Spain—The Catspaw

News from the Moroccan war zone, where the forces of decadent Spain are trying to regain the losses inflicted upon them three years ago by the war-like Riffian tribes, is not any too encouraging to those gentle persons whose sympathies are automatically with the Christian armies which carry the cross against the infidel.

Spain has 150,000 troops in Morocco, but is able to make little headway against the tribesmen who know their country, are dead-shots and are fighting for independence. They have isolated the Spanish garrison at Checouan and altho an army of 20,000 Spaniards, divided into two columns, is attempting to relieve the garrison it is not believed that it can be successful.

Spain holds no part of Morocco except a waterless, treeless waste. Her troops suffer unbelievable hardships but the government, faced with revolt at home in the event of the failure of the Moroccan campaign, dare not quit the mad adventure.

Spain has been made to foot the bill for greater powers in this profitless war. The only value of Morocco is its possible use as a naval base for sea power in the Mediterranean. Spain has been too weak to challenge either France or England in this respect and has been allowed to keep her Morocco holdings.

France watches anxiously the progress of the campaign and if Spain is driven out as seems likely there will arise another serious situation in European imperialist relations, due to the conflicting interests in the Mediterranean. England wants no extension of French power there.

How long the Spanish working class will remain quiescent while the useless slaughter of their fellows is carried on is a matter of conjecture, but it is reasonably certain that the failure of the Moroccan campaign will result in the overthrow of the present dictatorship.

Trouble in Tampico

A general strike looms—it may be actually in progress as this is written—in Tampico, the scene of so many bloody struggles centering around the oil industry.

Government troops guarding the Mexican Gulf Petroleum property have fired on striking workers and feeling is running high in working class circles. The workers are particularly incensed over the fact that under the present Mexican government, saved from the counter-revolutionary land-owning elements under de la Huerta by the working class, such an atrocity has occurred.

All Tampico unions have sent protests to the government while the preparations for a general strike proceed. The lesson of the recent affair is that a government must have something more than a labor complexion to be a real workers' government. The first requisite is that all elements except the workers and their rural allies be disarmed. This is the only guarantee for any working class and this has not been done in Mexico.

Meanwhile we extend our heartiest good wishes to the striking Tampico workers and hope that they will be successful in avenging their fallen comrades and preventing further terroristic acts of this kind.

Movies for the Workers

By WM. F. KRUSE

TWENTY thousand motion picture theatres in this country pull fifty million Americans into their doors every week. This audience is made up mainly of workers, for the movie is essentially the theatre of the poor. In addition 80,000 churches, clubs, schools and other organizations are equipped to show films to their own more restricted audiences, and do so on a weekly or monthly basis. The tremendous propaganda power of the hundred thousand projectors outshines all the newspapers, magazines, pulpits, lecture platforms, and public libraries put together. To paraphrase a famous saying: "Let me make the movies and I care not who writes the sermons."

It takes a lot of pictures to supply all these machines. The program must be ever interesting, ever changing. Hundreds of producing and distributing companies are kept busy supplying it. Seven hundred full length pictures and 1500 short subjects are produced annually at an estimated cost of $200,000,000. The film industry is "Big Business," with a pay roll of seventy-five millions, and five millions annual appropriations for newspaper advertising, three millions for printing, two millions for lithographs, and another wo for cuts, photos, slides and other accessories.

Film "Fact" Mostly Fable

The kind of stuff shown at the theatres is known to our readers—sloppy, sentimental gush, cut to a standard cheap pattern, and teeming with anti-labor, race prejudicial, pro-capitalist propaganda. But low as is the character of most theatrical film, the non-theatrical sinks lower still. Very few pictures are made directly for this field because the profits therein are much smaller. So only those films too poor and uninteresting to make the grade are given non-theatrical "first run." The bulk of the pictures available for the use of clubs, churches, etc., are those that Noah brought with him on the Ark. Advertisement film and government departmental productions finish the list of non-theatrical film sources.

If the regular theatre program is loaded with anti-labor propaganda the non-theatrical program is saturated with it. A catalog of a film house which appeals principally to colleges and churches starts with the announcements that its pictures were "made by Thos. A. Edison, Inc. according to a definite plan." What it really means is that an old film company once graced with Edison's name, went out of business and turned its junk over for a song to the price. But the school or church program selector imagines that Edison himself spent some of his sleepless nights picking out and planning out these particular pictures. The catalog goes on to say that its listings "can be safely placed before any audience in church or school without censorship." When the workers of America achieve power that statement will certainly no longer be true.

Enter the "Patriotic."

The suggested program generally include one or two short features, a comedy, a scenic, and a "patriotic." The last named is an undisguised effort to foster a servile spirit of capitalist militarism—for instance a picture of the Military School at West Point is guaranteed to "arouse patriotism and inspire alike the boy who will be a man and the man who has been a boy." "The film is strengthened with appropriate and patriotic subtitles," a further recommendation. Another picture shows a boys' military school, and the halt here is: "The boys being trained and hardened and taught to live healthy and cleanly lives, will grow up to be men worthy of the name 'American.'" Still another picture shows the Marine Corps which is guaranteed to "arouse in the observer a feeling of pride in those of our boys who revel in the slogan, 'The First to Fight'"—no matter for whom or against whom or why or where—just "First to Fight." Great stuff for our imperialist masters, and so appropriate for a church program!

The features are just as rotten and more dangerous because of their subtlety. The poor boy comes to college and 'makes the team' despite the rivalry of his rich and experienced fellow student. Who says there's no chance for the poor but honest? Jimmy, the Boy Scout, after making several blunders thru his overzealousness and bravery, traps and captures a German spy making maps of Podunk Corners. The Noble Prince finds that the Secret of Happiness consists of "Work and Deeds, not possessions . . . harmony of thought and action." The old fiddler gets his sight back and is so impressed by the ugliness of the world that he wants to remain blind, therefore "doesn't that all go to prove that contentment is the best thing in life?" And of course the strike theme is not neglected: "A gang of laborers, incite by Tony, one of their number, who has been discharged, overpower Hennesy, their foreman, and plan to wreck an incoming train which is said to be bringing strike-breakers." Anti-strike. Anti-foreign born worker. And right in line with the violence charges heaped by the capitalist press upon every effort of workers to better their conditions.

Poisoned Film Is Plyta Gas Attack

These are facts that we must face. We do not lament over the wickedness of the capitalist class in poisoning the minds of the workers against their own interests. The struggle for the mind of the masses is basic in the class war today. Only by holding it can the masters retain their privileges, and to hold it they use every possible means—certainly not overlooking such effective machinery as the motion picture. Poisoned film is the churches is merely a tactic in the attack upon the labor movement.

The only answer to artillery is counter artillery. The only answer to capitalist film in the church is working class film in the labor temple. As in every other field of battle our enemy has an enormous advantage over us in wealth and experience. But that should not deter us. The enemy has thousands of papers to our handful, but we battle on just the same. Against his resources we match our determined class spirit, and our wits to do strikes with little.

Only Effective Answer: Workers' Film.

The greatest contribution to labor films thruout the world has been the work of the International Workers' Aid. Its headquarters in Berlin sent pictures of the Russian struggle to all parts of the globe, and thru credit connections made enough foreign film available to Russia to start the film industry on its feet there. In return they now get the best Russian productions and send them broadcast. The American section of this organization has been the most active in making full use of these pictures. Hundreds of showings reaching many hundreds of thousands of American workers have been held in all parts of the country.

Any film capitalist will readily agree, that to make a picture is one thing, but to get it shown thruout the country is quite another. Only since the organization of the film trust have even big commercial producers begun to market their own pictures, until then the distribution involved entirely separate machinery. Yet with our limited resources we have produced and distributed right from the start.

Available Working Class Pictures

Thus far the pictures produced and distributed by the I. W. A. include six news films and three dramatic pictures. The news films, in the order of their appearance were:

"Russia Through the Shadows," six reels, showing actual revolutionary battle scenes, the famine, and American relief efforts culminating in the F. S. R. tractor unit which sought to help kill the cause of famine introducing machine farming.

"The Fifth Year," eight reels, showing all phases of Russian life during the fifth year of the Soviet Republic, parades, warfare, treason trials, fighting famine, building industry, travel, Comintern Congress, sports, and other events.

"Russia and Germany," eight reels, mostly photographed by the writer, showing Russia steadily improving under working class government, while the German workers were sinking to desperation under capitalist domination.

"Russia Today," one reel, showing how the Russian workers actually live, and at the same time illustrating a very instructive industrial process, the mining of asbestos.

"Lenin Memorial," one reel [illegible], showing events of the life of the greatest working leader of our time.

"Russia in Overalls," three reels of Russian life, particularly interesting to American workers because it shows their contributions thereto thru the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' factories in Russia, the "Kuzbas" coal mines and the I. W. A. tractor units.

Fiction Films Also

The three fiction films thus far offered by the I. W. A. include:

"Polikushka," made from Tolstoy's immortal tragedy, by the Moscow Art Theatre, with Ivan Moskvin as the star. It won the highest praise from American critics, but would not go over with the distributors because it was "too artistic and too sad." They wanted something called "Her Latest Sin," or "Bedrom and Bathroom Beauties."

"Soldier Ivan's Miracle," a two reel comedy, went with the above to round out an interesting all-Russian program, and sometimes a single news reel was also shown.

"The Beauty and the Bolshevik," the newest and best feature film brought from Russia, modern in every respect. It is a romance of Red Army life, well acted, cleverly titled and directed, and excellently photographed. It compares favorably with really good American pictures. This is just begining to tour the country after a phenomenal two weeks run in New York. It is combined with "Russia in Overalls" to make a complete program.

In addition plans are under way to use Upton Sinclair's "The Jungle," together with a two reeler showing the "Life and Deeds" of our paper, The DAILY WORKER, to further enrich the list of labor films available to the American workers.

Small Locals Can Succeed

These pictures are here now. Some have been shown in many places, but none of them have had full runs to which they are entitled. The greatest difficulty has been the limited number of cities with a labor movement large enough to support a showing of our pictures. The cost of single showing has been too high, sometimes hundreds of dollars had to be paid for a theatre, to say nothng of advertising. In large cities this is easy, a big theatre draws a big crowd, and success is assured. But in smaller cities the costs mounts so high that in many cases the profits hardly pay for all the energy put in. Thus far, while commercial producers hope for 20,000 showings for their product, we have only been able to get less than 200 per picture.

To remedy this situation in the smaller cities the I. W. A. is offering the films on a basis now that will permit their showing in labor temples or other low cost halls, thereby placing the picture show within the reach of the smallest locals of our organization. In this way it is also expected that pictures which have already been showing once in big theatres of big cities, can be shown again and again in the outlying sections of town, especially in the foreign language "colonies." Very attractive terms can be offered for showings, especially of the older pictures.

Can Rent Films.

Then there are many second and third run movie theatres in working class districts that would be willing to run these films if properly approached. If the manager were guaranteed an organized support of a movement such as ours he would be willing to pay a little more than the trifle he buys his junk films for. Or we run on a percentage basis, sometimes he gives us the returns on all tickets we sell in advance, sometimes a percentage of his gross receipts, sometimes a direct rental. Where the manager is not willing to run a full length picture he may take on the "shorts"—in addition to those mentioned "The Fifth Year" has been divided into seven short subjects that could be run once a week. In this way no risk is undertaken and our pictures are shown at least to some small profit.

In writing to the International Workers' Aid, 19 S. Lincoln St., Chicago, Ill., for particulars, you should also give as much information as possible about the conditions under which you expect to show the film. State whether a regular motion picture theatre or only a hall is to be used, and if it is a hall state whether or not motion pictures have ever been shown there before, whether the hall has the necessary machine, screen, etc., for the showing. If pictures have never before been shown there, find out whether they are being shown in your local churches and halls, in what sort of equipment is used there for the showing. This information is necessary to see whether hall showings are permitted by fire laws. Sometimes you can rent a machine and hire an operator from such a source.

Showing Movies Easy, Sure Success

The actual runing of a picture show is easier than the running of a meeting. It is easier to sell more tickets and at a higher price. And once you have the audience the picture does the rest. It is entertainment and propaganda put together in the most attractive form.

But there are details of arrangements on a picture show that are entirely different from those of arranging a lecture. So don't hire a hall and write us: "Please send us a picture." Give us details and await our suggestions. Of course every reader is interested in getting a show in his town. The C. E. C. of the Workers Party has again called the attention of the Party membership to the importance of supporting the work of the International Workers' Aid—and on no field can this support be given as easily and effectively, with as little interruption of regular work, than on the pictures. If you are interested write us in detail about your local conditions. What kind of hall have you in mind, what day or season it can be had, how much it will cost, what kind of audience you hope to attract and how large, what is the employment situation, what sort of local administration have you, and anything else that may help us, out of the experience of other places that have run the shows, to suggest the proper arrangements for you. Address all communications on pictures to the writer, 19 S. Lincoln St., Chicago, Ill.

Any More Nerves We Can Get On?

AND so we opened the letter and this is what we read:

"Your constant appeal to the member for more activity in the election campaign is really getting on our nerves. Especially the urge of the Central Executive Committee for collections in the shops to finance the campaign, struck the very bottom of our patience.

"I immediately took a contribution blank and said to our comrades in the 'Laisve' that whereas we are a shop we must take up a collection among ourselves, and that this is especially opportune at this moment because our paper, the 'Laisve,' carries appeals to the comrades to make a special shop drive for the campaign fund and in support of the Workers Party candidates.

"Some of the workers in our shop said that they had already contributed at the last branch meeting. These were told that they then contributed to the branch drive, but his was a shop drive for funds and that they ought to contribute again.

"They wholeheartedly agreed with this point of view, a collection was taken and $11.50 realized. I am sending this money in and am writing these few lines to inform you that your agitation is beginning to hit home.

"A. BIMBA, Brooklyn, N. Y."

THERE ARE THIRTY SHOPS IN THE UNITED STATES IN WHICH PARTY PAPERS ARE PUBLISHED AND THERE ARE MANY OTHER "SHOPS" IN WHICH PARTY MEMBERS ARE BUSY WITH THE PARTY WORK. WE WOULD ALSO LIKE TO HAVE OUR AGITATION FOR CAMPAIGN FUNDS "HIT HOME" THERE. IN WITH THE DOLLARS!

MUSIC - LITERATURE - DRAMA

By The Piper

"CYRANO de Bergerac", the romantic swashbuckling play of Edmond Rostand, is being presented again at the Great Northern after a silence of over twenty years imposed upon it by an injunction. Walter Hampden is playing the name part.

The story of "Cyrano" deals with the adventures of a Gascon soldier, in and about seventeenth century Paris. Cyrano is a captain of the cadets of Gascyone, and afflicted by a huge nose, of which he seems both proud and ashamed. In the first act, occuring in a theatre he kills a cavalier who has dared to make fun of his face, composing a ballad the while, to the intense delight of the crowd, and of his cousin, with whom he is in love. But the cousin has looked with favor on a member of his company, and forces Cyrano into a promise to take care of the fellow, Christian de Neuvillette, by name.

Cyrano and Christian enter into a contract, by which the captain is to write the love letters, and the subordinate is to do the rest. Follows a scene in which, at midnight, de Bergerac makes love to Roxane, and makes use of a passing priest to marry his cousin to enforce friend. The company is ordered off to war, and during the campaign, Roxane, enchanted by Cyranno's letters signed with Christian's name, comes to join her husband. Christian becomes angry at her constant raving over his correspondence, and is about to disillusion her, when the company is attacked, and he is killed.

But fifteen years later, thru the circumstances of Cyrano's being able to read one of the Christian's letters in the dark, she discovers her error. Cyrano dies, due to the fact that one of his enemies manages to drop a log of wood on his head.

This is but the barest sketch of the plot of a play half the charm of which lies in the dialog. Much of the character of the hero is revealed in the first act where, being called a fool for giving a purse of money to the actors, which purse contains his last cent, he answeres, "But what a gesture!"

The poetic pastry cook of the second act almost deserves a play to himself. His wife has taken some of his profitless manuscript and made of paper bags of it, which causes him to double the amount of pastry he gives his customers to get the bags back.

The scenery and costumes of Claude Bragdon are very good, and preserve the spirit of medieval romance of Rostand's play, and the new translation of it made by Brian Hooker.

One saying of Cyrano must not go unquoted. It occurs during the time that Roxane and Christian are being married. He, in order to deter a soldier who has come to see the lady, lies on the pavement and tells him that he has just fallen from the moon.

Cyrano—"Are we in Venice? Genoa?

De Guiche—(Trying to pass) "A lady is waiting for me.

Cyrano—"So this is Paris!"

That is Walter Hampden's Cyrano swashbuckler, poet, swordsman, and would-be lover with a great big nose

McDONALD RESIGNS WEDNESDAY

Morgan Plans to Give France Two Billions

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

THERE is a serious crop shortage in Germany. The capitalist press of the United States will not attribute this to "Communist mismanagement," as they do droughts, tidal waves and other misfortunes that occasionally visit Russia. Germany is ruled by the capitalist class and until they were beaten by the capitalists of the Allied combination, were looked upon as efficient managers. But it appears that they have lost their punch and all attempts to inject pep into them has failed. The best of efficiency experts can do nothing with a rotten system.

EVEN the pacifists are getting tired protesting against the military programs of the American capitalist class. Oswald Garrison Villard, one of their outstanding leaders is busy trying to elect Robert Marion LaFollette president of the United States, and manage his open shop mine in between. Queer how open shoppers flock to "Fightin' Bob." There is Warren S. Stone and others who fortunately for themselves is not had the spotlight of publicity thrown on their relations with their employes.

THE National Guard Association is protesting against the elimination from war department figures of increased appropriations for the National Guard. The world flight of the United States aviators was made the jumping-off ground for a big campaign for larger appropriations for a gigantic air navy. General Pershing, champion militarist of America is slated for the job of secretary of war. The United States is getting its spurs sharpened for the next blood bath. The pacifists are helpless to stop it even if they would. The working class alone can put an end to war by waging war to end war on the capitalist system.

THE German nationalists are about to be paid for allowing the Dawes' plan to go over. The present German cabinet is slated to go and another one with a representation of three monarchists on it will take its place. It is also rumored that President Ebert, socialist, will resign and that Chancellor Marx, Catholic, will take his place. The monarchists want the chancellorship and no doubt will get it. "Democracy" has worked well in Germany! What have the workers left of the gains made in the revolution.

KLUX MAYOR BREAKS UP BLOOR MEETING AT CHRISTOPHER, ILL.

(Special to The DAILY WORKER.)

CHRISTOPHER, Ill., Oct. 6.—The mayor of this city, a well known Ku Kluxer, staged a grand attack on the Communists at a meeting of the Workers Party on Sunday at Trustees Miners' Hall. Mother Bloor was scheduled to speak. When she arrived she encountered a large crowd in the street, with the mayor frantically shouting at the comrades that they cannot hold any meeting in Christopher. The mayor had entered the hall. Mother Bloor was told by the comrades, and had chased every one out into the street.

Mother Bloor addressed herself to the crowd in the street. She asked all those who wanted to attend the meeting to follow her to the city limits. Everyone in the crowd went along and a splendid Communist meeting was held out in a country road lit up by one solitary flashlight.

The whole audience sat down under a big tree and the meeting proceeded until the very end without any further interference.

The comrades are delighted with the way Mother Bloor put it over on the Ku Klux mayor of Christopher.

U. S. MONEY TO WIN FRENCH AID TO WALL STREET

Line Up Paris Diplomat Against Soviet Russia

By LAURENCE TODD
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—Discovery that official spokesmen of the United States government—which means the Coolidge administration—have "unofficially" suggested to the French government that the American people will give the French $2,000,000,000 in interest charges on the war debts in the next ten years, if the French will agree to a refunding of that debt, has been confirmed here from absolutely authoritative sources.

This secret deal was proposed before the French accepted the Morgan-Dawes plan of collecting reparations from Germany. It may be taken as the price which Morgan & Co. decided their American subjects should pay for the acceptance by France of a Morganization of Germany.

Will Accept Default.

In detail it is a proposal that France refund her $4,000,000,000 debt to America, on condition that a ten-year moratorium on interest be given by America. Ten years' interest at five per cent on $4,000,000,000 is $2,000,000,000.

This is the first installment of the European default on the war loans that the United States is to acknowledge; others, more serious by far, will follow if Europe does not find some magical means of paying.

This offer of two billion dollars to France, coming just at the time when Mr. Hughes is most anxious to prevent France from recognizing Russia, might be construed as having an anti-Russian significance.

However, its chief purpose is reported to have been the bringing of the French politicians into line for the Morgan-Dawes' scheme, like the secret clauses underlying most of the European treaties.

Try to Strengthen France.

Its effect, if accepted by the French government, would presumably be to strengthen the franc on the European exchanges, and to impress the smaller states of Europe with the value of French alliances.

Claim American Killed in Mexican Oil Strike District

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., October 6.—United States Consul James B. Stewart, at Tampico, has notified the state department that Mr. William B. Massey, the terminal superintendent of the Metropolitan Oil Company, has met death at Tomo, a small town in the oil area. The Mexican charged with the killing is Jaquin Saenz.

For some time there has been a strike of the oil workers in this district. The private corporations, principally Americans, have been resisting the application of the Mexican labor laws.

Worry About the Dirigible.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—It is possible that the dirigible ZR-3 may start its flight from Germany to the United States on next Thursday, but Saturday, Oct. 11, is the most probable date, said a dispatch to the navy department from Captain George W. Steele, senior American observer at Friedrichshafen.

R. Manthey, chief engineer of the Certified Ice Cream company was shot dead by policemen who came on him and two other men in an alley beside the company's plant. Police said they thought the men were bandits and that they opened fire when the men failed to heed their command to halt.

E. J. Corrigan was thrown from a speeding automobile and died without regaining consciousness. He is believed to have been a victim either of beer runners or of Chicago's latest taxi war.

25,000,000 TO FOLLOW RADIO DURING WINTER

Expect Half of U. S. to Become Fans Soon

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—American radio leaders gathered here today to perfect voluntary agreements that are necessary to assure entertainment for 25,000,000 wireless devotees this winter.

Newspaper men, representatives of the big broadcasting stations, scientists, government experts and manufacturers of radio equipment were included in the delegations.

Spend $400,000,000.

Authorities estimated that nearly $400,000,000 has been expended in the last year for radio equipment and that within five years half of the people of the United States will be among the nightly "listeners in" to the various broadcasting services.

Secretary of Commerce Hoover, who opened the convention formally tonight, said today that the program calls for allocation of wave lengths, studies of interference problems and a campaign to obtain from congress adequate regulatory legislation.

"Not only are there questions of orderly conduct between the multitude of radio activities in which more authority must be exerted in the interest of every user whether sender or receiver, but the question of monopoly in radio communication must be squarely met," Hoover declared.

Predicts Monopoly.

"It is not conceivable that the American people will allow this new-born system of communication to fall exclusively into the power of any individual group or combination.

"It cannot be thought that any single person or group shall ever have the right to determine what communication may be made to the American people."

Will He Make Good?

Hoover placed himself against censorship of broadcast material either by individuals or the government. While favoring a free development of radio communication, Hoover emphasized the necessity of further legislation. He said the problems involved in government regulation are "the most complex and technical that have yet confronted congress."

Among the subjects for consideration will be division of wave lengths among the several classes of stations, possible revision of the zoning plan, power requirements and limitations, improvement of programs, revision of class requirements and the question of licenses for operators.

MELLON TRUST GRABS PROFITS IN ALUMINUM

Andy Has Several Ways to Control Market

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—Secretary Andy Mellon's aluminum trust comes in for rough criticism at the hands of the Federal Trade Commission, in the report just made to the senate on the latter's inquiry as to why house furnishings are so costly.

The third section of this report, dealing with kitchen utensils, is now complete.

Make Cooking Utensils.

"The Aluminum Goods Manufacturing Co.," says the commission, "is the largest manufacturer of cooking utensils in the United States and is affiliated with the Aluminum Co. of America. The competitive methods of this company include various kinds of price discrimination between customers.

"In some cases special discounts have been made in consideration of carrying a full line; in other instances discounts have been granted in consideration of the favored organization handling the Goods company's products exclusively. The Goods company has also been active in maintaining resale prices. Data from several sources show that the Goods company has received a special five per cent discount on purchases from the Aluminum Co. of America."

Mellon's squeezing of the households of the nation is seen in the next sentences in the report: "The Aluminum Co. of America has a practically complete monopoly of the production of aluminum in the United States, and is the only domestic source of supply for aluminum cooking utensil manufacturers. This fact, combined with a high protective tariff on aluminum, enables it to control the price of aluminum."

Has Subsidiaries, Too.

What aluminum ware Mellon does not manufacture directly, thru his Aluminum Goods concern and his United States Aluminum Co., subsidiary to the Aluminum Co. of America, he grudgingly permits other makers to turn out, if they can stand the long delays of delivery of sheet aluminum which he imposes. From 30 to 55 per cent of the orders are shipped in the month in which shipment is due. In some cases, he dumps big quantities of metal on a customer who cannot use it, or he fails to deliver at all. The federal trade commission suggest that the aluminum combine seems to be violating the terms of the "consent decree" under which the department of justice dropped an anti-trust suit some time ago—tho that decree was totally inadequate to restore competitive conditions in the industry.

Controls the Industry.

The same report shows that there is no real competition in the production of vacuum cleaners, washing machines, sewing machines and refrigerators. The Singer sewing machine corporation controls 75 per cent of the business in that industry.

Expect Action in Courts.

Action in the United States courts under the Sherman anti-trust law against the Aluminum company of America, controlled by the family of secretary of the treasury Mellon, was forecast today as a result of the report of the federal trade commission charging the company with the maintenance of a monopoly.

The Aluminum company and its subsidiaries were declared to be violating the consent decree entered against them in 1912 under the Sherman law. The report of the federal trade commission was submitted to the senate in response to a resolution asking for information on trade conditions of household furnishings.

ANTHRACITE MINERS FEEL LASH OF MINE OWNERS WHEN LOCAL GRIEVANCE STRIKES ARE BANNED

By THOMAS MYERSCOUGH

Wilkes-Barre and Scranton, the twin cities of northeastern Pennsylvania, thirty minutes apart on an electric road, are synonymous names when used in the discussion of anthracite coal.

In these cities and the many dilapidated towns that surround them, live the thousands of miners with their families. To the casual passerby, these thousands of human beings are regarded as necessary evils or as objects of curiosity, but in the large cities where the product of the miner is sold at a high price, they are usually regarded as money hogs and grafters because of that fact.

To the student of human nature and the observer who stays in these parts for a while, a much different picture is presented, for he faces daily the stern realities of life as they present themselves. He sees the wan and sallow faces of the men as they wearily walk homeward from the mine, here and there he can see a crew of workers engaged in the task of bolstering up a house that has sunk several feet, a result of a cave-in of old mine workings and the "too numerous" things that daily come into view.

Too many people consider the miner in an unfavorable light, because they do not even stop to consider who gets the enormous price they pay for the coal they use. They seem to take

REPORT SEVEN KILLED, 57 WOUNDED IN AN ELECTION DAY CLASH IN CUBA

(Special to The Daily Worker)

HAVANA, Oct. 6.—The military guard about the presidential palace was heavily reinforced today as a result of the fatal election battle at Camaguey, in which seven men were killed and 57 wounded.

Fifteen of the wounded men are in grave condition. The pitched battle in the streets of Camaguey between adherents of former president Menocal and police raged for two hours. Buildings along the streets were riddled with bullets and windows smashed.

Soldiers Patrolled City.

Soldiers are called from their barracks and finally restored order. Feeling at Camaguey is running high.

At 2:35 o'clock this morning wire communication between Havana and Camaguey was interrupted. The last message sent before the wires were cut was that soldiers were patrolling the city and that order prevailed.

The fighting followed an attack upon Menocal's special train near Camaguey. A number of shots were fired at the train and two men were wounded.

Tried to Disarm Police.

General Menocal, who is a candidate for president, had accused president Zayas and other members of the Cuban government of working for the election of his opponent—General Machado, a liberal.

According to adherents of Gen. Machado political followers of Menocal started the trouble by attempting to disarm the Camaguey police.

COOLIDGE HEARS WAR VET PUT IN HIS COMPLAINT

Army Head Is Heckled at President's Meeting

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—President Coolidge today witnessed the heckling of Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, director of the United States veterans' bureau, while the latter was making a speech before the national convention of the American Red Cross on the efforts of the government to care for disabled veterans of the world war.

The president was the first to address the convention, and at the close of his speech introduced General Hines, who spoke in laudatory terms on the work of the veterans' bureau and outlined the extent of the service extented by the government in rehabilitating world war veterans.

He Doesn't Get Enough.

"I cannot picture," Hines said, "any American veteran who does not receive the care of medical treatment which he deserves because of his service."

"Here's one," shouted a man in the audience, struggling to his feet and shaking a finger at General Hines. "I only get $25 a month."

He continued mumbling words that could not be heard distinctly, while a general murmur went up from the hall.

Should Have Grabbed Coolidge.

General Hines paused in his speech, and President Coolidge looked straight ahead, not moving a muscle of his face. Two husky detectives hustled the heckler outside.

The heckler was taken to a government hospital for mental observation. He was Nikola Sesum, a Serbian, 45 years old.

DAWES PLAN OVERESTIMATES THE ABILITY OF GERMAN NATION TO PAY

By JAY LOVESTONE
(Fifth Article)

One of the cardinal errors of the Dawes scheme is its gross over-estimate of the economic capacity of present-day Germany to pay reparations.

This insistence on blinking the effects of the war and the subsequent financial collapse arises from the fact that the Experts' Committee based its plan on the Versailles treaty for the economic and political dismemberment of Germany.

Germany's Staggering War Losses.

As a result of the imperialist war to save the world for dollar democracy, Germany lost Alsace-Lorraine containing huge iron ore and potash deposits. Posen, West Prussia, and Pomerania, rich in agricultural lands, were taken away. A valuable agricultural part of Schlewig was given to Denmark. Thru a fraudulent plebiscite a large proportion of the coal reserves was handed over to the Polish capitalists by the Entente. We are not speaking of the huge colonial and foreign capital investment losses at this time.

Under the so-called peace arrangements Germany was deprived of ten per cent of its population, 12 per cent

INDICTMENT OF COMMUNIST, RED TREATY, ISSUES

Expect King to Oust the Parliament Thursday

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Oct. 6.—The MacDonald Labor Cabinet has decided tentatively to resign. The Labor prime minister will propose the resignation of his cabinet at Wednesday's session of parliament.

This decision of the Labor cabinet is brot on by the motion of the tories demanding a censure of all parties responsible for the quashing of the indictment of the editor of the "Workers Weekly," official organ of the Communist Party of Great Britain.

May Dissolve House of Commons.

The resignation of MacDonald's cabinet means also that the dissolution of parliament will be sought. By Thursday it is expected that the king will be asked for the formal decree dissolving the House of Commons.

It is not yet certain what the attitude of the labor party will be to the motion which the liberal party will make demanding an inquiry into the dropping of the indictment against the Communist leader. MacDonald has declared:

"I will explain the quashing of the Communist indictment in the Commons. Then if the House votes censure of the government, the cabinet will accept the vote as meaning that immediate resignation is in order. I have been carrying burdens perhaps too heavy for any man. If I am to be relieved of the strain I shall rejoice for myself but not rejoice at the prospect of confusion and frustrated achievement."

Ranks of Tories Divided.

There is much division in the ranks of the liberals and tories as to what course they will take on the Communist indictment and the Soviet Russian treaty. Many capitalists fear a general election now.

They fear the depressing and disturbing influence such a contest would have on trade. The other day, thirty liberal members of the House of Commons issued a proclamation repudiating the official party statement against the Russian treaty.

FILM FRIGHTENS PHILADELPHIA MOVIE CENSOR

Pales at "The Beauty and the Bolshevik"

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Oct. 6.—The film, "The Beauty and the Bolshevik," the Red Army romance which was shown with tremendous success in New York City, was held up by the Pennsylvania board of censors on the ground that it was "Soviet propaganda and tended to incite class conflict."

The censors declared that the picture put the landowner and property owner in a most unfavorable light and promoted the idea of confiscation.

Board Has No Authority.

Those were the flat-footed statements of the board upon which they refused to grant a license, despite the fact that the board has no authority whatsoever to hold up a film on grounds of differences of political or social theories.

The Committee for International Workers' Aid, which is running this picture, was compelled to resort to legal counsel and only upon the threat that the matter will be taken up to court did the censors grant a new hearing and finally allowed the picture to be shown. William Weinstone secretary of the International Workers' Aid, and David Wallenstein, Philadelphia attorney, pointed out to the censors that the picture records events in Russia and that matters pertaining to division of the land among the poor peasants and the fight against the land owners and the factory owners were historical facts which the picture accurately presents. The New York State Board as well as the National Board of Review, have both passed the picture without any eliminations.

Show Film Oct. 11.

The film will be shown Oct. 11, instead of Oct. 4, as previously announced, at Lulu Temple, Broad and Spring streets. All workers should see this new feature film which presents the struggles of the Russian workers. All tickets bought for Oct. 4 will be good for Oct. 11.

Russian-Japanese Treaty Still Open, Says M. Melnikov

(Special to The DAILY WORKER.)

MOSCOW, Russia, Oct. 6.—The Russo-Japanese treaty is still unsettled and will continue to be so until Japan makes up her mind to retire from northern Sakhalin, just as she entered, free of spoils, was the gist of a statement made by M. Melnikov, chief of the far-eastern department of the soviet foreign office.

It will be remembered that for over a year the Russo-Japanese negotiations have been going on and Russia has been holding out and is still holding out for a treaty free from plunder. Japan insists upon oil and coal rights and other concessions from northern Sakhalin.

BLACK AND BLUE PREDOMINATE IN PARTY COLORS AS LIQUORED LADIES AND LEGISLATORS LIVEN UP COURT

The way of the politician is hard, so near election time. If a poor democrat worried, by his chances at the polls goes out with a worried republican, and gets drunk and beats up a copper or two he may even be arrested.

Republican state senator John T. Joyce representing the 29th senatorial district and state representative Lawrence O'Brien, a democrat from the same district, went out on a "little party" Sunday night and ended up in the Austin police station charged with disorderly conduct, driving an auto while drunk, and assault and battery.

The solons didn't know what to say or what to do. In their efforts to forget the cares of politics they had succeeded in inducing a state where they didn't remember anything. The story the police tell is something like this: One of the two worthy ornaments of the state house at Springfield was driving a car up Washington boulevard. Now, the car was going as if it didn't like either side of the street. Police officer Tom O'Connell of the traffic squad stopped the car and the two legislators jumped out and started to beat him up. Two ladies also jumped out of the car but instead of stopping to see the fight, they went and the police believe they are still going. No trace has been found of them up till now. Police officer Victor Larson of the Austin station, passing on his way home thought that the fight was a public one and in a spirit of sportsmanship, joined in on the side of his brother officer. The effects of old J. Moonshine Barleycorn soon began to tell on the senator and his partner, however. The police subdued the pair and took them to the station.

Their condition was such that they didn't even remember who they were so they were booked on the three charges. Possibly if they had remembered, they, wouldn't have been booked.

Pictures not Judge's Cause Worry.

That is the story the police tell. The legislators don't want to tell any story till after election, they say. Yesterday morning when they were brought before Judge Joseph W. Schulman in speeders' court, they were chiefly worried about the attempts of the news photographers to get their pictures. Before their case was called there were a half dozen conferences between the interested parties in the judge's chambers. When their case was finally called only their lawyer appeared at the bar. The senator and representative were alike absent. The judge turned to the police officers.

"Till After Election."

"Are you officers willing that I grant a postponement in this case? Till after, ah, ah, you know. Are you?" asked the judge. The two coppers looked at each other then nodded said nothing. Again the judge. "It's all right with you if I give these gentlemen time to prepare their case, isn't it?"

Again nothing but a look of dumbness was to be seen on the faces of the officers of the law. Finally the judge said it right out in open court. "Are you willing to grant a postponement till after election?" And the look he gave the cops said more plainly than words, "You thick witted turkeys."

Intelligence Dawns.

A look that in a way resembled intelligence, dawned on the face of one cop. To the other one he whispered for a moment. A look crept over the face of the second copper that might have indicated to an anthropologist, had one been there, that his prehistoric ancestors had had brains. "Yeh, judge, yeh, it's O. K. with us," they said in chorus.

In the meantime, neither of the solons had come near the bar or within range of the cameras of the news photogs. "Case continued till November 10," barked the judge. "Call the next case."

More Trouble.

But, and, woe betide. The troubles of Joyce and O'Brien were not over. The news photogs, smelling a rat while the conferences were going on, divided their forces. One man stood behind the judge, one took up his stand in the main part of the court and the third waited on the stairs for departure of the gentlemen from the 29th senatorial district.

The man in the court room managed to make a flashlight of representative O'Brien. O'Brien's bodyguard of about 12 tough eggs, which until then had been quiet and unnoticed, began to fume. When on the stairs they met M. Kostle, the third picture man; they took their revenge. They kicked the camera out of his hand and began assaulting him. He gave as good as he got, but by this time the police knowing who their prisoners were, no longer remained neutral. Officer Freeman of the Desplaines street station thinking to distinguish himself in the eyes of two mighty politicians, took a healthy sock at the eye of the photographer. Yelling to the gentlemen who were trying to avoid publicity to "beat it," Freeman dragged Kostle off to a cell.

Frank Gondeck, a reporter, remonstrated with Freeman and was also taken off to a cell. He was later released, but Kostle was booked for disorderly conduct. Later Judge Schulman no doubt thinking that the favors he had shown to the two legislators had contributed to the trouble, ordered that Kostle be released on his own bond.

Kostle intends going before Judge Schulman this morning and demanding a warrant charging assault and battery against Mr. O'Brien. Freeman has already been suspended from the police force as the result of a complaint lodged with Chief Collins by Kostle's paper.

The troubles of a politician are numerous before election time.

FRENCH HOLD FASCIST ACCUSED OF AIDING MATTEOTTI MURDER

MARSEILLES, France, Oct. 6.—Acting on the request of the Italian consul, the police have arrested August Malaoria on a charge of complicity in the murder of the Italian deputy, Matteotti, the kidnapping and slaying of whom aroused furor in Rome. Malaoria is being held until the Italian government's demand for his extradition can be passed upon by the French judicial authorities.

NEW ATTACK IS MADE ON NEGRO RIGHTS AS RACE

Klan Backs Attack on 14th Amendment

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 6.—The "illy hite" attitude of Harding and Coolidge, conveyed in public speeches and by private communication to the enemies of Negroes in the south is held responsible here for the latest attack on the citizenship rights of the 12,000,000 Negroes in the United States.

A suit attacking the validity of the fourteenth amendment from a new angle was filed here today in federal district court in the form of a petition seeking to enjoin Walter A. Cohen, Negro, controller of customs of the port of New Orleans from executing the duties of that office. The action, if successful, would disfranchise every Negro in the United States.

The petition, as published by the newspapers, charges that Cohen "falsely alleged himself to be a citizen of the United States" when he took the oath to office.

"Not Citizen."

It asserts that the defendant is not a citizen of this country but is "a person of African blood and descent and is inherently incapable of being a citizen of the United States."

The suit is to be brought in the name of H. Edwin Bolte, an attorney of Washington, D. C., and declares that the grounds upon which it is based never have been the subject of decision by the courts. The petition sets forth that three-fourths of the states did not ratify the fourteenth amendment nor was it adopted by the required two-thirds vote of both houses of congress.

Suit From New Angle.

Mr. Bolte was quoted as saying that altho he and his associates had examined all of the more than 200 decisions of the supreme court of the United States which had to do do with the amendment, in not one of them were the points raised in his action passed upon nor were they made an issue.

The petition charges conspiracy to the authors of the amendment in congress and various sections are cited in effort to show that they put the amendment into effect unlawfully.

As to Cohen, the petition charges that when he took the oath of office in Washington April 16, 1924, he swore falsely to his alleged citizenship, claiming to be a citizen under "the provision of the alleged fourteenth amendment to the constitution of the United States."

The petition alleges that article XIV. never was legally proposed by two-thirds of both houses of congress, that it never was ratified by three-fourths of the states, that eleven states of the Union at the time of the adoption of the resolution "culminating in the alleged article XIV." were unconstitutionally deprived of their equal suffrage in the senate, that six states were by coercion forced to ratify it, and that congress "did without power or authority unlawfully declare said amendment to the constitution adopted and a part of the constitution."

The petition then requests the issuance of an injunction restraining Cohen from serving further as controller and from drawing the salary for that office.

Twice Rejected.

Cohen, a leading republican politician of Louisiana, has been a storm center ever since his nomination to the post by the late President Harding. The senate refused confirmation on the ground that he was personally obnoxious to the Louisiana members of the body.

President Harding then issued a recess nomination and he served several months without pay. President Coolidge later sent his nomination back to the senate and again confirmation was denied on the same grounds as before. Upon reconsideration, however, the nomination finally was confirmed.

Opinion here is to the effect that the suit is the first step in a legal battle financed by the Ku Klux Klan whose object is the repeal of all provisions of the bill of rights as it now applies to Negroes.

An Appeal for Coolidge and Notice of New Wage Reduction—Side by Side

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the coal miners around Moundsville, West Va., are carrying another political lesson around in their heads. It grew out of a comparison of posters put up on the bulletin board of the Glendale Mine, where they work.

"Vote for Coolidge and Dawes!" said the first poster.

It had been up only a few days when the mine owners posted another bulletin announcing a 20 per cent wage reduction. The second notice read:

"Wages will revert to 1917 scale effective forthwith."

Both notices were put up by the mine owners. It wasn't difficult for the coal miners to put two and two together. The same source that urges "Coolidge and Dawes," in the presidential elections, is demanding that wages be reduced.

Contributions by a corporation to churches are an "ordinary and necessary" expense in "carrying on its business." That is a contention we have always set forth. This position has now been endorsed by the board of tax appeals at Washington.

It is part of good business for corporations to promote religious activity among their employes, and so the tax board has ruled that proper deductions may be made in the income tax returns. The commissioner of internal revenue didn't think the deduction ought to be made in the case of the Poinsett mills, of Greenville, S. C., manufacturing cotton goods. It was shown that this corporation, in 1920, contributed $1,006.49 to a Baptist church in the mill village. Workers baptized in religion make very good mill hands. Especially the children must be taught that they are destined to work in the mills, and that they ought to like it. Trade unions are not encouraged in South Carolina. Expenses for strike-breaking, and maintaining the open shop, will no doubt also be classed, by the revenue collectors, with religious donations as "ordinary and necessary in carrying on business."

The Von Steuben Society, in its publication, "The Progressive," joins hands with Rudolph Spreckles, the sugar millionaire of San Francisco, in pointing out why they are in favor of LaFollette. The confession appears under the heading, "Why Capitalists Support LaFollette," and should be made an important document of this year's presidential campaign. We publish it in full as follows.

"I am supporting LaFollette and legislation looking to the conservation of the water power of the State for the benefit of the public, but not because I am a Socialist or a radical. I have a good portion of capital and I desire to hand it down to my children. When men of the stamp of Regua—Regua is the manager of the Coolidge campaign in California and also vice-president of the Sinclair Oil Company, frequently mentioned in connection with the Senate investigation of the Teapot Dome leases—continue to ignore the wishes and the welfare of the masses on whom the security of property depends, these masses may some day rise in their indignation and begin to destroy. I am a better friend of the people of my class, the capitalist class, than those who permit graft, corruption and exploitation to go unchecked. The day will come when they will say that I am right."

Spreckels says he is a better friend of his class, the capitalist class, than are the Teapot Dome Oil capitalists. He wants to hand down his wealth to his children.

But it is the biggest capitalists, with the most unscrupulous methods, who rule in industry and dominate capitalist politics. Spreckels may give a liberal fringe to the capitalist class, thru supporting the small business class candidate, LaFollette. But that will not hurt the capitalists. It will only fool some workers and farmers into believing they are going to get something under capitalism.

Spreckels is the catspaw of his class. And LaFollette is the mouse that the catspaw is playing with. If the workers want to be lured into this trap of their enemy class, then all they have to do is follow LaFollette. If they want to fight for their own class interests, they must join with the Communists.

In this connection it should be mentioned that the territorial grand jury, in Hawaii, has just indicted 76 of the 133 plantation strikers arrested following the struggle here, Sept. 9, between the sugar workers and the police called out to break their strike. Nearly all of those killed were strikers. But not a single plantation owner has been indicted.

We are reliably informed that Spreckles is heavily interested in the Hawaiian plantations. Out of the exploitation of helpless Japs, Filipinos, Chinese and Hindus, Spreckels wins profits to keep his children in idleness and luxury. Spreckels got his start as a sugar millionaire as head of the Hawaiian Commercial and Sugar Company. And the United States is on the job, on behalf of the plantation owners. This is shown by the terse statement that "there have been no disturbances" in the islands since the struggle that resulted in the death of 20 participants.

Dr. W. A. Evans, the health expert of the Chicago Tribune, tells us that, "During the centuries of safe existence the luxury of the slow awakening habit has been indulged until it has become instinctive."

For fear that all the readers of The Tribune might not be able to enjoy this luxury, and might resent mention of it, he adds, "Whether a person awakens slowly or quickly is purely a matter of training. One is almost as instinctive as the other."

But the worker doesn't need this superfluous health advice. He must awaken at the call of the alarm clock, not by instinct, but by necessity. This will be so until the social revolution acts as an alarm clock to call all the people including the parasite rich, to do some useful work. Then the workers who rise before dawn, at the alarm clock's call, to begin the long workday, may have a chance to sleep a little longer.

'DAILY WORKER' SELLS WELL IN GARY'S EMPIRE

Much Talked About in the Steel Mills

By JACOB RUSAK
(Special to The Daily Worker)

GARY, Ind., Oct. 6.—Now that the DAILY WORKER has reached hundreds of Gary's slaves, it is beginning to be the principal topic of discussion in the steel mills. Hundreds of copies are being sold every day, and the workers are certainly anxious to get the paper.

While I was selling the DAILY WORKER Friday morning, I yelled to the workers as they came out of the mills: "Get the DAILY WORKER, the only Communist Daily paper. Read all about William Z. Foster, the only presidential candidate that carries a union card in his pocket."

"Sup" Has Decided Views.

About a hundred workers flocked around and bought the paper, saying, "Foster is the man for us." Suddenly a superintendent came running up and said, "Let's see what the red has to say." He gave me three cents and said, "This guy Foster ought to be in Russia, or have a rope around his neck."

As the superintendent stopped talking, about 50? workers mobbed him and cursed him. Some said, "You dirty scab." Some called him a K. K. K. That frightened him and he was forced to run into the New York Central station across the street for protection. While he was fleeing he called back over his shoulder, "I'll get some of you dirty Bolsheviks."

Cop Violates Own Ruling.

While John Heinrichson, circulation manager of the DAILY WORKER for Chicago and I were walking along Broadway, we met a city cop. We asked him if we were allowed to distribute sample copies of the DAILY WORKER, and as soon as he heard the words, "DAILY WORKER," he answered in a harsh voice, "NO."

Then Heinrichson gave him a sample copy of the paper and the cop said "thank you" very politely, thus violating the ruling he had just made.

ganization of young workers—the shop nuclei.

All the business of the city central that preceded or followed the presentation of this plan was in one way or another affected by this change in our form of organization.

Membership books were called in and all members ordered to pay up their dues and become in good standing. Transfers are no more to be given out indiscriminately, but must all be OK'd by city to prevent confusion during the reorganization.

All literature, dues stamps and ticket bills are to be immediately cleared off so that with a clean slate we can proceed with the reorganization.

Membership Meeting Friday.

A membership meeting to give the members a chance to discuss the reorganization plan in all its details has been called for Friday, October 10, at 722 Blue Island Ave. Conscientious and intelligent support of every member of the League is required to perform the reorganization and to begin with new and more productive work.

But neither were other affairs of the League and Party forgotten at this meeting. A resolution was passed commending The N. E. C. on the strict measures taken against comrades failing to perform anti-militarist work assigned them. Minnie Lurye was elected to direct the work of the League in the election campaign League branches were instructed to meet together with Party on the 12th of October at 10 a. m., to mobilise for the literature bombardment during the last week of the campaign, October 26 to November 2. Branches were instructed to assist in every way the Party in organizing and advertising the Foster-Gitlow election meeting on October 12. Lillian Reiseroff was appointed city children's director with Anna Letchinger, Gilbert Greenberg and Emma Blechschmidt as assistants and a call was issued for more leaders for junior groups.

Each branch was instructed to elect a YOUNG WORKER sub agent and the issuing of a leaflet advertising the YOUNG WORKER was recommended to increase the circulation of our paper in the Chicago shops.

Members were asked to send in articles on shop conditions to THE YOUNG REBEL, League's local bulletin and the meeting adjourned to meet the last Monday of October when the League will be already organized on the working area basis.

Frank Farrington Halts Another Strike Of the Coal Miners

DANVILLE, Ill., Oct. 6.—Sixty-five miners, all the employes of the Chicago Collieries Co. at the present time, returned to work today on orders from the district president of their union, ending a strike which started September 22. They struck because a bridge engineer employed by the coal company in structural work at the mines did not give idle coal miners preference in work as laborers and teamsters.

Union Not Liable for Pickets.

HAMILTON, Ont.— Ontario courts have upheld an injunction against picketing here but refused to hold the union liable for damages for the actions of the pickets. The case grew out of a dispute in the moving picture industry in Hamilton. The court held that there was no allegation that the union was possessed of a trust fund, or that such circumstances existed as would entitle the plaintiffs to resort to such a fund in satisfaction of their claim.

ROME, Oct. 6.—The Duke of Pistoia has prepared for a globe circling trip of research that will carry him 83,000 miles in three years, and include search for sunken ships, experiments with motion pictures 13,000 feet under the sea, and long motor trips inland at little visited points in Asia.

Don't Like Alien Miners.

SYDNEY, N. S. W.—Miners are objecting to the employment of aliens in the coal and metal mines in Australia. They contend that as the aliens do not know English or have at most only a slight knowledge of it, it is inconvenient and dangerous to work with them.

MEXICAN CHARGES INVESTORS FROM FOREIGN LANDS SEEK TO MUTILATE REVOLUTION'S PROGRAM

(By The Federated Press)

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 6.—"We need foreign capital, we invite foreign investments in Mexico, but we do not want capital from large trusts run by men interested only in coupon-clipping and who look upon the workers only as a source of piling up wealth," was the statement of President Obregon to a group of American employers in banquet assembled in Mexico City.

He asked financial interests to co-operate in carrying out the revolutionary program of the last 10 years to help the workers to a better economic existence.

The majority of foreign investors, especially Americans, he said, have tried to mutilate the program of the revolution and to present it to the world as an anarchist attempt to deprive the capitalists of their gains, because they feared their fortunes would be in danger if they conceded a living wage.

Obregon ended his speech by calling upon foreign capital to make investments in Mexico, but in a spirit of co-operation, to help the government to contribute to the economic and cultural well-being of the masses, and if they could not come in such a spirit, they need not come at all.

WILLIAM E. BROWDER LAUDS THREE MILLION DISTRIBUTION CAMPAIGN

Dear Comrades:—Your general letter calling for a series of general membership meetings on Oct. 12 to prepare for the distribution of three million pieces of literature has been received, and wish to report that we had already set our meeting day for Oct. 10, as we expect to do some work on Sunday, Oct. 12.

It appeals to me that the plan is a first class one and only needs the co-operation of the membership to make it a big success and to have a very strong effect. This will do as much as any other one thing to hammer the party into a unit.

Fraternally yours, Wm. E. Browder, Secy., City Central Committee, Kansas City, Mo.

"NEPMAN" GIVES HIS VIEWS ON SOVIET RUSSIA

But the Comeback Nearly Knocks Him Cold

Before a select audience of Chicago professional and business men, orgauized into the "Homo Sapien Club," Boris Michaelis, formerly associated with the Ford agency in Moscow, spoke on the theme: "Russia As I Saw It."

From his talk it would appear that the sun never shone in the two years he spent in the Workers' Republic.

Likes "Good" Business.

The speaker deplored the tendency of travelers to look at things thru the spectacles of their own interests. He declared himself as impartial as a photographic plate. As a business man he had been very well treated, he read his credentials from the highest Russian authorities, explained that his friendship with L. A. K. Martens, former Soviet representative in the United States, had opened the doors in Russia to some excellent business, of which he had taken full advantage.

He arrived in Russia during the first terrible period of famine in 1921, and in exchange for a promise to feed the starving asbestos miners his company was given an enormous asbestos concession in the Urals. The grain with which the feeding was done was bot in this country by his company for the Russian government. Ford products was chosen as representing the one manufactured article of which Russia was in greatest need, and also no doubt, the one that she could least readily economically duplicate.

Not Easy with Bribe Takers.

But despite this good business the speaker said he was impressed by the lack of "idealism" in Russia. The people there were too "cruel." Two non-Communist specialists in the "Vnstorg," the foreign trade department who had been most obliging to him and his company were executed for "bribe taking." Their wives, the speaker he said, that the wife of one of them was spending more on clothes in one week than her husband earned in a month.

Another instance of "cruelty." There had been much grafting among the local renting agents of the Communal Housing Commission one day a clean sweep was made,—all suspected grafters were jailed and their victims invited to give evidence against them. Only three months later were the innocent released. The speaker was particularly solicitous about his own renting agent. He knew that this man would not take graft because he had offered him some—$25 for a safe worth $200. This man did not need graft, he had been a rich man but had not run away at the outbreak of the revolution. He had been sensible enuf to put his wealth into gold and diamonds which he hid in a hole in the wall, and his job as janitor was just to cover up the source of his wealth. This man was so well off that he had a supply of coffee when none was to be had in all Moscow, and the speaker explained how pleasant it was to visit this janitor and partake of his hospitality. And one morning he came for coffee and found the Cheka on the job he even had to give an account of himself, but the American passport did the trick and he did not tell them about the coffee either.

Grafters Quick to Go.

Yet the speaker had not been slow to remove would-be grafters by a timely appeal to the dreadful Cheka whenever that graft interfered with his business interests. A train of supplies was being sent to his Ural concession, and was being held up en route on the claim that a certain bridge was not strong enough to permit the cars to pass over. A special train was put at his disposal so that he could see personally what was to be done. The station master intimated that a hundred poods of grain left at his home would strengthen the bridge miraculously. Yet he could not pay graft—it might have compromised his whole concession if it were found out. So he notified the Cheka and that night the grafter "disappeared." A business conscience is an elastic thing.

After a little squeamishness he became accustomed to seeing beggars die in the streets during the famine. But he attended a Christmas party at which there were also "rank-and-file Communists" present, and everybody gorged and got drunk. He was very sad over it the next day. Others have felt that way. But he explained that the big leaders did not do these things, as far as he knew. Lenin lived strictly on the rations. They also fed the speculants on rations, but he lost twenty pounds. There had been plenty to lose.

The government was not a workers' and peasants' government he thot. There was no use going into a Communist court to sue the Soviet government. All Communists stuck together, they were soldiers and just obeyed. So, failing to find the "spiritual environment" he had anticipated would follow a revolution he had come back to the United States.

Crowd Razzes Nepman.

Four members of the audience availed themselves of the chance to make five-minute speeches, and many more would have liked to only for the lateness of the hour. These meetings begin at ten and last until midnight. Every one of the speakers from the floor took exception tn the speaker's conclusions. One of the four stated that it was precisely such speeches as this that were turning him from an anti-bolshevik into a supporter of the present Russian order. It was clearly shown from the floor that credit rather than blame must attach to a proletarian state that has just emerged from the most terrible throw of one of the oldest and rottenest autocracies in the world, and that was fighting at one time the most terrible famine of history and the invading counter-revolutionary armies of the whole imperialist world. The food rations complained of were absolutely just and necessary, and a grafter at such a period was a traitor to the new order and had to be dealt with as such.

The speaker's only answer was that those who now defend the Bolsheviks would be among the first to be shot in the event of an American Bolshevik revolution. It is expected that the next speaker will be a traveler recently returned from Russia who favors the present regime.

May Discard Hanging.

AUSTRALIAN LABOR COUNCIL IS DIVIDED INTO INDUSTRIAL GROUPS

By W. FRANCIS AHERN.
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent.)

SYDNEY, New South Wales, Oct. 5.—Under the new system adopted by the Labor Council of New South Wales, the council is divided into industrial groups, formed from unions having the same interest in industry.

There is a transport group, which is composed of unions connected with the transport industry. The building trades group is represented by delegates from the building trades; the iron trades group is made up from the iron trades industry; the manufacturing group is composed of unions engaged in the manufacture of commodities in factories. There are other groups.

Each group meets separately and transacts the business that comes within its own ambit. They have power to make recommendations which are sent on to the open council. This method of organization allows the different questions arising to be assigned to the group most vitally interested, which results in keen interest being taken in matters that come before the respective groups.

Gets Better Results.

Also, the matter when it comes before the group is more freely discussed as the standing orders are suspended to allow full discussion. It would be impossible to allow the same freedom of debate in open council as in a group meeting, because of the rules governing debate.

Before the group system was organized matters were brought before the council which a great number of delegates either did not clearly understand, or as the matter did not interest their respective unions they had little interest in the question before the chair. The result was that, instead of an animated debate on the subject before the council, the discussion drifted into a dispute on the question of points of order.

Under the group system, the decision is reached after the experts in the industry have thoroly discussed the matter. Resolutions of a group are usualy adopted, unless the matter conflicts with the policy of the council. Thus, after a group has debated a question and come to a decision, the question then comes before the council with the full weight of the group. Council, if it endorses the recommendation, gives to the group the support of the whole industrial movement.

In Experimental Stage.

The group system is hardly out of the experimental stage, but prominent industrialists say that they are favorable to the new method of organization. It is claimed that the group system is the first practicable step towards industrial organization. Other labor councils in Australia are proposing to inaugurate the same system.

BLOOR MEETING AT PEORIA, ILL., IS BIG SUCCESS

Party Speaker Gets An Excellent Response

By MAX COHEN.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

PEORIA, Ill., Oct. 6.—The destruction of posters placed on walls, fences and on the windows and doors of the hall in which she was to speak did not stop "Mother" Ella Reeve Bloor from delivering her address in Peoria as scheduled. We conducted an open air meeting instead She spoke before a crowd of over 300 that filled the huge walk in front of the court house to overflowing.

"Mother" Bloor is a great drawing card. It so happened that an "old time" socialist was making use of the speaker's platform as "Mother" Bloor and the committee came to the scene. He was talking incoherently about the workers getting together and voting for LaFollette. At first there were six listeners, then two, and when these got restless, he was informed that a lady was preparing to address the meeting.

"Mother" Bloor Gets Crowd.

He was kind enough to introduce her to what was left of the audience, shouting that "she represents the Workers Party, which is against all parties and I will not be responsible for what she says!"

Before "Mother" Bloor had spoken two minutes the crowd had grown so big that the people were asked to come nearer the speaker in order not to congest the sidewalk.

In her speech Comrade Bloor assailed the assumption of leadership of the two contradictory groups of one-eyed men and labor by LaFollette, and came out directly for a government of workers and farmers as against the control of the means of production and distribution by and for a few.

"There is class dictatorship," she declared, "and it is a question of choosing between the dictatorship of capitalism in the interest of a few or that of the working class for the benefit of the producers of all wealth."

She also told of the progress being made by Soviet Russia in the reconstruction of its economic and educational systems.

Many Questions Asked.

The audience gave close attention and asked numerous questions at the close of the splendid address.

The "old timer" seized an opportunity for a "come back" before the crowd had dispersed, declaring that "we in the United States are not ready for a revolution therefore we will have nothing to do with Soviet Russia."

Little wonder that the socialist party (or what is left of it) is going to the dogs when their membership is so ignorant as to assail the first Workers' Republic on earth, while even their misleader, LaFolletter, is favorable of the recognition of Soviet Russia!

NOT SO GOOD FOR WALTHAM WATCH SCABS

3,000 Workers Hold Out in Big Struggle

By ESTHER LOWELL
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent.)

WALTHAM, Mass., Oct. 6.—With women and girl strikers waving yellow feathers, yellow flowers, and yellow handkerchiefs, the forlorn faithful few still go into the Waltham watch and clock factory every day, and with the men strikers clapping and hissing, the fight against the wage cut and for the collective agreement is becoming bitter in its eighth week.

Nearly 3,000 workers, most of whom never struck before nor participated in collective action as far as their work is concerned, are still holding out against the new management of the watch workers and are organized in the Watchmakers' Protective Association.

This workers' organization has already taken the first steps toward affiliation with the American Federation of Labor thru its becoming part of the Jewelry Workers' International union. The workers in the machine shops which make the Waltham watch-making machinery are already in the Machinists' International.

Town Backs Strikers.

The whole town of Waltham is behind the strikers. The other citizens have contributed $10,000 in all to help the strikers win a living wage and the right to organize. The Irish landladies who are losing tenants as strikers seek work in other towns come out to the semi-public square across from the long old-fashioned red brick buildings of the factory and boo and shout with the pickets. All of the strikers picket morning, noon and night and a few are left on duty between to warn prospective workers that there is a big strike on at Waltham. Mayor Henry Beal has made himself most unpopular by bringing in extra police from Newton, the next town, altho only one arrest has been made and that not of a striker.

The Waltham Watch and Clock Co. came under the direction of Kidder Peabody Acceptance corporation in February, 1923. This firm of bankers controls the Amoskeag mills of Manchester, N. H., where the workers are reported to have accepted a wage cut thru their company union recently. President Frederick C. Dumaine of Waltham is treasurer of Amoskeag. Since the bankers took over the direction of the watch works, trouble has been brewing, secretary Howard N. Mayhew of the Protective Association insists.

Organization Leaders Fined.

I. E. Boucher, who was brot from Amoskeag to be Waltham superintendent, soon changed the old system of an aggrieved worker dealing directly with the management as had been the custom for more than 70 years. A strike accurred in the assemblers' department within a few months—the first strike in the factory—and the Protective Association began. The unrest in the union did not spread far nor last long so that the organization was practically dead by this last summer. The leaders had been fired long before.

When wage cuts up to 40 per cent were announced for Aug. 11 this year, the finishing department workers tried to send a committee to Boucher and failing, walked out. The strikers hired a hall at once, decided to call a mass meeting, sent a man with a banner to march up and down in front of the factory announcing the big meeting for that evening in a larger hall. The place was packed. Next day a workers' band was assembled and went by the factory leading a parade to the bicycle park. The workers poured out of the factory doors, and left their jobs.

Would Strike in Recognition.

Ernest Faulkner, who had been in the earlier union nucleus, became president of the revived Watchmakers' Protective Association and the organization began to function with all the workers backing it. Demands for recognition of the association and for the right of collective bargaining, for return of workers fired during the two past years for union activity; for the return of every worker on payroll of Aug. 11 to their former jobs; for the arbitration of future discharges with the association; for time and a quarter for overtime and time and a half for Saturday afternoon; for no further wage reduction without arbitration with the association; and announcing no return to work until the scale of Aug. 10 was restored were given the company.

By the end of the seventh week the union had made an offer for all workers to return to work if no girl making under $20 and no man making under $40 per week were given a cut in wages. The company seemed ready to accept, when late at night Boucher announced that those whose wages he could not raise that arrangement were too few! The workers marched around the factory shouting to the superintendent until very late.

Faced Third Wage Cut.

Two of the girls who do the highly skilled finishing work said that the wage cut of Aug. 11 would have been their third this year. The first cut amounted to one-third and the second to one-eighth of their earnings and both of them said that living costs were high in Waltham. "One woman with three children was paid only $13, the minimum wage," one of the friendly neighbors of the strikers said. The girls estimated that about two-thirds of the Waltham watch workers roomed out and that most of them were girls. They declared that many girls were barely getting the minimum wage and they were positive that they could not live on such low wages.

"Stick" is the badge worn by all the strikers and sticking they are. Pres. Faulkner says that the company has got to recognize their collective bargaining power and that workers who have spent 20, 30, 40 years in the factory can own their homes and their fixtures as well as he without having their personal property made an excuse for cutting their and other workers' wages. The workers are nearly all American for generations back, he emphasizes, and won't stand for this overbearing management. The Protective uses the old american cry "United We Stand" and is holding its members to the fight.

Oil Workers Win Strike

MEXICO CITY.—The strike of the Huasteca Oil Co., (Doheny) ends in victory for the workers. Of the 25 per cent increase asked 18 per cent was secured with recognition of their union. The company agreed to take no action against the leaders of the strike.

The strike against the Pierce Oil Co. also ended victoriously for the workers of the capital. They secured the disciplining of the foreman who used to lend the workers money at usurer rates, the 8-hour day, time and a half for overtime, 40 per cent increase in wages for all factory workers, and medical care for diseases contracted on the job.

Story Sounds Flshy

VALPARAISO, Chile.—"We have taken over the government only temporarily—until we give our country a new constitution and until we win the masses," is the cry of the military group that forced Arturo Alessandri to leave the presidency of Chile. Judging by the proverbial reaction of the military class of Chile and from such men as Gen. Altamirano, who is in the new Chilian cabinet, it is hard to believe that they have taken power only temporarily.

Claim Tide Favors Freedom

SAN FRANCISCO.—A swing toward sanity in California is noted by the defense office of the Industrial Workers of the World in San Francisco, during the first nine months of 1924. 73 I. W. W. have faced trial as political offenders under the criminal syndicalism law. Of these 48 were dismissed or acquitted, 16 got hung juries and 9 were convicted.

CARRY SACCO, VANZETTI FIGHT TO HIGH COURT

Five Separate Appeals for New Trial

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DEDHAM, Mass., Oct. 6.—The complete text of the decision of Judge Thayer denying five motions for a new trial asked by the two Italian labor leaders Nicola Sacco and Bartholomeo Vanzetti became public today.

A great part of the comment on the motions is taken up with an attack on Fred H. Moore, chief of defense counsel and a defense of the frame-up tactics of the district attorney's office.

Shift Scene of Fight.

The decision of Judge Thayer will merely shift the scene of the fight to save the lives of Sacco and Vanzetti from the court in Dedham to the state supreme court.

The first thing that will be done is to appeal to the supreme court asking a new trial on exceptions taken by defense lawyers to certain of the decisions of Thayer during the trial.

If the motion for a new trial is denied by the higher court then the supreme court will be asked to pass on the judge's decision denying the five motions for a new trial. Each motion will be made the basis of a separate appeal.

Justice Works Slowly.

The motion for a new trial which the judge has just denied have been before the court at intervals since 1921. The first motion denied by Thayer was one based on affidavits that Walter Ripley, foreman of the jury which tried Sacco and Vanzetti had on his person at the time of the trial certain bullets very much like bullets introduced in evidence in the case. Ripley it is charged by the defense used the bullets in his possession as a basis of comparison with those introduced in evidence. He thus violated the constitutional guarantee of the defendants that they must be faced by all evidence brot against them.

If the state supreme court decides against granting a new trial to the two labor leaders this motion will be used as the basis for an appeal to the U. S. supreme court.

The second motion made on the strength of affidavits made by persons who saw the holdup and murder for which Sacco and Vanzetti face death and in which these witnesses say that neither Sacco nor Vanzetti were among the bandits was dismissed by the judge as "weak, unsatisfactory and unconvincing."

In denying the third motion for a new trial Thayer began to show his prejudice against Fred Moore whose brilliant fight to save the lives of his clients often set him into conflict and under the displeasure of the judge. The third motion was based on information that one of the star witnesses used by the prosecution was nothing less than a common horse thief and that at the time he was called by the prosecution they knew his character and his criminal record. In an affidavit made for the defense by Goodrich after the trial he tells that he was under indictment for larceny at the time of the trial but that when he volunteered to testify against Sacco and Vanzetti the district attorney had him given a suspended sentence in order that he might try to swear away the lives of the Italians.

The judge in his decision on this motion says that Moore frightened "Goodrich into swearing something that was false against the district attorney's office."

He Wanted All the Graft.

The testimony of Mrs. Lola Andrews, chief witness for the prosecution, who has told five different stories about her part in the trial of Sacco and Vanzetti was the basis of a fourth motion. In denying this motion Judge Thayer charged Moore with using duress in obtaining an affidavit from Mrs. Andrews. Of the charges against the prosecutors that they had intimidated Mrs. Andrews the judge said nothing.

The fifth motion was based on long technical testimony of various bullet and firearm experts given to the court after the trial had closed and while the motions for a new trial were being argued.

The long fight for the lives of Sacco and Vanzetti of which the decision of Judge Thayer is the latest development grew out of the red hysteria of 1919 and 1920. They were arrested and questioned as radicals in May, 1920. A few days after their arrest they were charged with having committed a payroll holdup and murder in South Braintree, Mass. on April 15, 1920.

When brot to trial a long line of government witnesses whose testimony has since been proven to be false by the defense "identified" Sacco as one of the pay roll bandits. The framed testimony against Vanzetti was weaker than that against Sco but it was easy to get the jury to return a guilty verdict as both admitted they were radicals and had fled to Mexico to escape the draft during the war.

Ten Million Protest.

When the trial was over and the men were awaiting sentence the workers in nearly all the countries of Europe and South America held huge demonstrations protesting against their legalized murder. It is estimated that tens of millions of workers declared their belief in the innocence of Sacco and Vanzetti. The demonstrations had the effect of delaying the carrying out of the sentence of death which was expected to follow the verdict and so gave a chance to the lawyers to continue the legal phase of the fight to save the condemned men from the gallows.

Against War in School Books

ADELAIDE, Australia.—The Adelaide Trades and Labor council has cautioned the South Australian ministry for education (Mr. Hill) to delete the boosting of empire and the glorification of war from the schoolbooks of the state, now under Labor rule, and order the teaching of industrial history in its place. The minister asked the council to go thru the schoolbooks and suggest what should be cut out. He added that the Labor government was opposed to militarism and believed in school children being taught to abhor war.

CHICAGO PARTY ORGANIZER BACKS 3,000,000 DISTRIBUTION CAMPAIGN

By ARNE SWABECK.

We are not always successful in convincing our fellow workers, when speaking to them, about the necessity of uniting their forces for a militant struggle for the needs of their class, because we lack the power of expression. We are not always able to demonstrate the need of following a revolutionary policy as the only solution for the labor problem because we lack the proper approach.

Print many times speaks louder than words and with more effect. The written propaganda, the press, is our most powerful instrument. That our comrades should realize and make use of to its fullest extent.

The plan proposed by the national office for a special propaganda week in which the whole membership is to be mobilized for the purpose of bringing the Communist message to the greatest possible number of workers is an excellent one. No Communist who knows his duty will shirk his responsibility in this particular field of activity, and I am sure our members will line up to a man and distribute millions of copies of our literature.

HOGLUND GROUP DRIVEN OUT OF SWEDISH PARTY

Membership Is Loyal in Communist Ranks

(Special to The DAILY WORKER.)

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 6.—An overwhelming majority of the Communist Party of Sweden has voted in favor of the decisions of the Communist International and against the tactics of the Hoglund group, the final count in the party referendum ordered by the Comintern shows.

The most important section of the party press remains in the hands of the Swedish Communist party, "Norrlund-Kuriren," one of the two party organs which still adhered to Hoglund, has come back to the party.

Hoglund is now organizing his own group, hoping to take with him a section of the party. He is already publishing his own organ, a daily newspaper called "Den Nya Politiken," in opposition to "Den Politiken," the party organ. It is generally understood that, while Hoglund still calls himself a Communist, he is definitely planning to allay himself with the social- democrats.

The bulletin on the situation in the Swedish Communist Party, issued by the Communist International is as follows:

The crisis in the Swedish Party developed in the middle of August into an open split. On August 18, the "Politiken" published a declaration of the majority of the central committee to the effect that it definitely declined to carry out the referendum demanded by the Comintern. At the session of the central committee on August 19, the delegation carried the following resolutions of the Comintern: (1) Only comrades nominated by the members of the Party can be Communist candidates for parliament, and not the opportunists nominated by Hoglund. (2) The referendum on the question of the decisions of the Comintern must be carried out immediately. (3) The editorial board of the "Politiken" is to consist of a representative of the Hoglund group, a representative of the opposition and a representative of the executive. The Hoglund group refused to carry out the instructions. During the night from August 20 to 21, the proposed alteration in connection with the editing and managing of "Politiken" was carried out. The Hoglund group met this with the complete split. The delegation of the executive retaliated with the initiation of an energetic campaign against Hoglund and his group. The Comintern Executive addressed a manifesto to the Swedish Party to the effect that Hoglund himself had placed himself outside of Communist International, and had gone over to the bourgeoisie. Therefore the Comintern only recognized the opposition led by the minority of the central committee as its section and urged unity against the Party split.

Hoglund is now organizing his own party, which he still calls a Communist Party, and endeavors to create the impression that he intends to continue to fight the social democrats. But the tone of his article shows already that he is preparing for organizational association with the social democratic party, and the purpose of his party is to provide him with a backing when he definitely enters the ranks of the social democratic party. On September 1, Hoglund began to publish a daily organ "Den Nya Politiken." The congress of the Hoglund party will take place on September 6 and 7. We are safe in saying that Hoglund could only take away with him a minority of the Party. Most of the hitherto vacillating elements have decided in favor of the Comintern. The Party has obtained a majority in all the important districts. The three largest cities, Stockholm, Goteborg and Malmo are solid for the Comintern. Also Norbotten, the largest district which has a membership of 1,700. During the last few weeks the vacillating districts, Varmland, Eeengermanland, Uppland, Cestergotland, Skane, Kalmaland and Medelpard have declared themselves in favor of the Comintern. The Hoglund party is also endeavoring to form its own youth league. Of the 350 local youth groups with a total membership of 12,000, 28 local groups with a total membership of 1,000, will perhaps go over to Hoglund.

The most important section of the Party press is in the hands of the Swedish Communist Party. With the help of the entire bourgeois press Hoglund carried on an extensive boycott campaign against the press which had remained loyal to the Comintern.

September 6 was the last day of the referendum. The overwhelming majority of the Party has remained true to the Communist International. One of the two party organs which still adhered to Hoglund, "Norrland-Kuriren" has come back into the Party.

The reorganization of the Party, which has been taken in hand very energetically by the new central committee, is greatly favored by the general growing acuteness of the economic and political situation in Sweden. The election campaign, which has now reached its culmination, is accompanied by a fierce campaign against the Communists on the part of all the bourgeois parties. Simultaneously with the election campaign serious economic conflicts are taking place. The strike of the Stockholm electrical workers was answered by the employers with a general lockout of all electrical workers. The furriers are affected by a general lockout. The agricultural laborers have declared a sabotage of harvest work in the event of a refusal to raise wages as demanded. In view of these conditions we can expect that the Communist Party, in spite of the difficult circumstances under which it had to carry on the election campaign because of the split, will have considerable progress to report.

Hoglund has begun negotiations with Tranmael, the leaders of Norwegian opportunists about the formation of a new "International." Tranmael's organ "Arbeiterbladet" is publishing articles acknowledging that this is so. A bureau is to be formed for all independent "Communist" Parties and groups. Tranmael's organ states that the purpose of this new international amalgamation is not by any means "the establishment of a new International, but the bringing together of all clear thinking revolutionary workers."

THE POWER COLUMN

Twice every week—this column uncovers to your view the motive power behind the DAILY WORKER. Here for the interest and inspiration of every reader—and especially the DAILY WORKER agents and committees—are tried and proven suggestions and accomplishments to drive the DAILY WORKER to further conquests.

Here is POWER—the power of brain and effort of men and women of the working class who not only believe—but ACT!

EXTRA! EXTRA!

First Locals Organized in the D. W. B. U.

BEGINNING October 4, the day we announced the special "Build The DAILY WORKER" campaign, the following members have sent in new subscriptions—REAL bricks to "build on it." These live members of the labor movement are the charter members of the busiest locals that from now on until November 7 have taken off their collars and put on overalls to carry bricks to build up YOUR paper. The list of names is the list of live wires sending subscriptions in one and a half days (Friday and Saturday). Some of them have secured more than one as the numbers near their business indicate. These charter members are entitled to special recognition and they are setting a splendid example for YOU to follow. Under the leadership of the DAILY WORKER agents in their cities whose energy in behalf of the DAILY WORKER entitles them to serve as business agents of the D. W. B. U.—they make fine reading.

LOOK 'EM OVER!

CROWDS GREET FOSTER TALKS IN CALIFORNIA

Audiences Impressed by Communist Speeches

(Special to the DAILY WORKER)

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 6.—With his arrival heralded by headlines in the local capitalist press, William Z. Foster, presidential candidate of the Workers Party, held two very successful meetings here.

He spoke in the High School Auditorium in Berkeley to a crowd of 500, of whom probably a hundred were University of California students. A collection of $113.41 was taken, $25 worth of literature sold, besides sixteen of the special DAILY WORKER subscription cards.

The next day he addressed a crowd of over a thousand which filled California Hall in this city to the limit. Here a collection of $207 was secured and over $40 worth of literature sold.

LaFollettes Crestfallen.

The audiences in both cities were greatly impressed by his speeches and the considerable number of La-Follette supporters who attended emerged quite crestfallen after listening to Foster's masterly analysis of the Wisconsin senator's reactionary middle class policy.

A special meeting of all party members was called at 6:30 to hear Foster on the problems facing our organization. Tho many could not atend owing to the early hour, yet the hall was crowded before he finished. His remarks on the application of party tactics to the present situation left a lasting impression and there is little doubt but that these, with the success of the meetings, will have a most beneficial effect on the local movement.

Reorganize the T. U. E. L.

The reorganization of the Trade Union Educational League for this section will be accomplished at a mass meeting of all party members who belong to unions, and plans will then be launched for an aggressive industrial campaign.

Politically, the party in California is in a difficult situation. The tidal wave among the workers toward La-Follette is particularly noticeable here. Renegade members of the organization are very active in the La-Follette movement.

It was impossible to get the 10,000 names required to place a Communist presidential elector on the ballot. It was similarly impossible to get enough names for our congressional candidates. Only two had been named, E. Levin, in Los Angeles, and James H. Dolsen, in San Francisco. Consequently the only Communist to appear officially on the ballot will be Dell for the 66th assembly district of Los Angeles.

The District Executive Committee has decided to carry on a "write in" campaign for these candidates who failed in the petitions and to wage a strong fight both in the Los Angeles and San Francisco districts.

Distribute Literature Regularly.

In the fifth congressional district, comprising a great working class section of this city, a regular Sunday morning distribution of Communist literature will be carried on. By action of the District Executive Committee and with the unanimous approval of the membership mass meeting held recently, all members in San Francisco are to be required to give at least an hour each Sunday morning during this month to such work. The DAILY WORKER and our local paper, Labor Unity, will be used principally.

Campaign Meeting Sunday

Sunday night, Oct 12, the first Communist congressional rally will be held at our headquarters, 225 Valencia street. James H. Dolsen will be the speaker. Open air meetings have also been instituted, the first having taken place at 21st and Mission street, last Saturday. Jack Carney, editor of Labor Unity, spoke to a good-sized crowd.

Young Workers League in New Jersey Aiding the Party Campaign

PERTH AMBOY, N. J., Oct. 6.—The Young Workers League of this city will follow up its three rousing open air meetings of September by meetings to be held at Maple and Smith Sts., Oct. 4, Oct. 11, and Oct. 18.

The Workers' Party candidate for U. S. senator from New Jersey will speak at Washington Hall, on Fayette street, at ten o'clock on Sunday after noon, Oct. 26.

UNDERPAID GIRLS GIVE DIMES AND QUARTERS TO COMMUNIST CAMPAIGN

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 6.—The shop collections drive is reaching many spots otherwise untouched by the Communist message.

Here is the Lichtenstein & Lieberman millinery shop. The workers in this line are unorganized and underpaid. The radical movement has never succeeded in establishing a contact with them—still, on the mere call for support, twenty-three girls out of thirty-five employed in the shop responded with their dimes and quarters, placing their names on List No. 21774, which was circularized among them by Comrade Helen Painin, who states that she will get another job just as rotten as this if she is discharged for making the collection.

There are twenty-men employed in the same shop, and Comrade Painin says that a man comrade is circularizing a list among these workers also. She says: "First a list, then discussion, then organization—a strike and a union."

Money comes also from other sources. Comrade Storgin has been sent out on behalf of the Campaign Fund by the Left Actions Committee of the Workmen's Circle and turns in a donation of ten dollars from Branch No. 545 as a result of his first effort. Branch No. 26 sends ten dollars by mail. Workmen's Sick and Death Benefit No. 3 sends ten dollars more, and so it goes.

Is your organization on the list of donors?.

"Uncle Joe" Tells How to Get On

By WILLIAM F. KRUSE

IF you are a bright young lawyer chap, anxious to "make your way" in old party politics, listen to the words of an old-timer who knows just how it's done. He has been there.

Our informant is none other than Joseph G. Cannon, "Uncle Joe", who for many, many years faithfully served Wall Street from the speaker's desk in the House of Representatives. The most hardened criminals are moved to confession by the approaching rustle of death. So also with "Joe," as he himself describes it, "only waiting in the cloakrom of the future life for the final bell to ring." It will ring just as soon as the Devil needs his vote to put down the insurgents in Hell—no one ever doubts where "uncle Joe" stands.

But the rising young men who are looking for advice can find out just how he got his start by reading his article on "Party Discipline" in a well-known reactionary weekly. He explains how he had just moved into Illinois from Indiana, and that he was a very poor young lawyer, and therefore presumably honest. The whole town was trying to get on the train to hear the Lincoln-Douglas Debate, but poor and honest "Uncle Joe" could not go, he had no carfare. But he went down to the station and hung around to see what would turn up. That is the recipe, boys, wait for something to turn up. Sometimes its the cop and he turns you in. Not so with "Uncle Joe."

Along came another kind of lawyer, a successful lawyer. He asked Joe if hewas going to the debate and Joe, being still poor and therefore presumably honest, told him the truth. This lawyer was a regular magician, otherwise known as a railroad attorney, he reached into his pocket and wrote out a railroad pass. This was Uncle Joe's start in politics. He went to the debate on a free pass, and drew his political inspiration therefrom forever and ever. Amen.

PLAN BIG DRIVE OF MEETINGS ON NORTHWEST SIDE

Workers Party Holds the Right to Speak

Efforts are being made to hold bigger open air meetings than ever on the northwest side of the city.

In spite of the bluff and bluster of military agents and detectives, speakers for the Workers Party are now unmolested by outsiders at open air gatherings held at the corner of Lawrence and Sawyer streets, where Peter Herd was arrested last week.

Urge Hammersmark for Congress.

Th Party's determination to reach the workers of the district, where Sam Hammersmark is the Communist candidate for congress, took a little of the starch out of the police, who had expressed their deterination to break up any meetings held by the Workers' Party at this spot.

The fact that five party members: Ben Gitlow, Communist candidate for vice-president of the United States, Paul Cline, Sam Hammersmark, Peter Herd and Karl Reeve addressed the crowd which gathered at the corner and were not troubled, shows that the letter displayed by a detective, which he said was signed by the chief of police, ordering that all future meetings conducted by the Workers' Party on the corner of Sawyer and Lawrence, be stopped, was a fake.

The detective who told George Maurer, when he appeared in court on behalf of Comrade Herd, that he would see to it that a "gang" of his own appeared whenever the Workers' Party attempted to address a crowd on that corner, failed to appear at the last meeting.

Say Charge Is Frame-up.

Comrade Maurer insists that the charge of "inciting to riot" placed against Comrade Herd was a frame-up. The only disturbance during the meeting at which Herd was arrested, up to the time that the police appeared, was caused by a group of reservice men who overturned the truck from which the party members were speaking.

Speakers for the Party who had been assigned to other corners last week-end report large crowds and high enthusiasm. Every available copy of the DAILY WORKER was sold.

Stir the Shops!

The very best place to carry on a working class campaign is in the shops and factories where the workers gather to earn their living. It is there that minds are open to the measures, parties and candidates that stand for concrete solutions of the problems of bread and butter facing the working class. It is in the shops that the workers will see most clearly, for example, the difference between Foster, the union organizer and fighter for the workers, and LaFollette, the lawyer and fighter for the middle class. SHORT TALKS OF BEATING HEARST WITH CHEAP GUFF

Fakers Steer Clear of Sympathetic Strike

SEATTLE, Oct. 6.—More militancy in the fight against Hearst's nonunion Seattle Post-Intelligencer, the morning daily, is demanded of union men in a circular to organized labor of Washington state signed by President William Short of the state federation.

"Lengthy and expensive telegrams addressed to Mr. Hearst direct have gone unanswered and unrecognized by him," says Short. "There seems to be a spirit developed on the part of the Hearst organization that our movement here is incapable of making an effective fight against them, and it is vitally important that this attitude on their part be changed thru a militant campaign directed against the paper by every branch of our movement in every section of the state.

"Committees should be named by every branch of our movement to conduct a campaign among their own members for cancellation of subscriptions and also among business houses, especially restaurants, barber shops, cigar stores, news stands, and pool rooms.

"The committee should make it plain to all concerned that the only issue involved in the strike against the Post-Intelligencer is the paying of the same wages and providing the same working conditions on the Post-Intelligencer that are now in effect on all the other daily newspapers in Seattle, provided for under mutually accepable contracts between the newspaper publishers and the printing trades union."

Well, Who Cares?

VANCOUVER, B. C., Oct. 6.—Captain Allen Lascelles, secretary to the prince of Wales, announced officially that arrangements had been made for the prince to visit Chicago, Detroit, and, Massachusetts points, as well as Toronto, Ottawa, and Montreal, before sailing for England.

Dawes Plan Overestimates German Ability to Pay

of its area, 26 per cent of its coal, 75 per cent of its iron ore, [illegible] cent of its zinc ore, 15 per cent of its wheat and rye, and 16 per cent of its potatoes. For 15 years the Saar Basin, rich in coal deposits, is to be administered by the League of Nations. Then another bayonet plebiscite will be held to determine its status. Before the war, Germany was a coal-exporting country. Now it is becoming a coal-importing country. In 1913, Germany's net coal export was 24,058,000 metric tons. In 1923, Germany was compelled to import 24,004,000 metric tons net. Likewise, the present area of Germany containing 75 per cent of the iron and steel producing plants provided only 25 per cent of the national output of iron ore. It is this increasing difficulty to obtain the necessary raw materials to keep the German industrial machinery running that accounts heavily for the Reich's economic breakdown.

Add to these blighting factors the disasterous results of the Ruhr occupation. In 1913, the Germans produced in the territory within the Versailles boundaries, 140,926,000 metric tons of anthracite coal. In 1923, this total fell to 62,235,000 metric tons or to only 44 per cent, for the same area. At the same time and for the same areas the 1913 production of pig iron and steel ingots was 10,900,000 and 11,600,000 metric tons respectively. For 1923, as an aftermath of the Ruhr occupation, these figures fell to four million metric tons of pig iron and five million metric tons of steel ingots and castings.

Fictitious Enrichment of Germany.

But the experts would have us believe that the German railroads, industries and government are today richer by the very amount in which they were freed from debt thru the depreciation of the mark currency. Perhaps this so-called enrichment of Germany is to make up for the economic losses she suffered as a result of the robber peace treaty of Versailles! It is on the basis of this source of "enrichment" that the billion gold mark bond issue secured by a first mortgage on corporation properties is to serve as a source of income for reparations.

At the bottom such reasoning is based in fallacious economic principles. The wiping away of these debts in Germany, while in themselves a gain to the debtors, is a corresponding loss to the creditors, to the debtholders. The wiped-away debts of the corporations and the government were once the wealth of the holders. Consequently, the sponging out of all these debts turns out to be a source of fictitious enrichment for Germany as a whole, as an economic entity. In effect this process has materially helped bring about considerably diminished standard of living, a reduced economic consuming power amongst the great masses.

Overlapping Sources of Revenue.

Another basically unsound approach of the Dawes' committee is found in its method of presenting various sources of revenue as separate and distinct. Here again we have a glaring example of the failure to view Germany as an economic entity.

If the railroad freight rates are to be high enough to yield reparations revenue, they may lower the capacity of certain industries to produce payments for the Allied imperialists.

Burdensome taxation will have a tendency to raise costs, in turn reduce consumption, and then repress the railroads and the industries. It is clear, therefore, that the experts' estimates of the sources of revenue are to a large extent overlapping.

Let us not forget the din constantly emanating from the camp of the capitalists in protest against high taxation. Yet, the paying out of such huge sums as the standard annual six hundred million dollar reparation tribute to other countries, to capitalists of other national groups tends to be far more oppressive than the most onerous within the particular country. The charges upon the profits of industry thru domestic government taxation are in part counteracted by the increased volume of profits going to these same capitalists as a result of the expenditure, primarily within the country, of the huge sums collected by the government in taxes.

When, however, these taxes are paid to the capitalist governments of other countries in the form of reparation levies, the last named source of profits is entirely closed to the German industrial overlords. The latter's competitive capacity in the world market, a capacity on which rests the greatest possibility of reparation payments, the export surplus, tends to be decisively reduced.

Of course, the German capitalists will seek to fill this gap in their bank accounts, to pile this burden on the working masses by reducing wages, lowering the living and working standards, and raising hours of labor. Such attempts will prove only the fruitful source of sweeping industrial unrest and its consequent serious derangements in the system of production and exchange. Waves of mass strikes and revolutionary clashes are just what the Dawes' plan aims to make impossible. Instead, its operation only lays the basis for gigantic class conflicts—the most vital danger to the stability of international capitalism and the continuity of the reparation payments.

Evidently, the Dawes' plan is helpless and lost in the maze of these insoluble contradictions of capitalism. Instead of making barren the fertile soil for the revolutionary class struggles, it, in reality, only supplies new and broader bases for their being waged on a more intensive and extensive scale.

Paramount Problems Evaded.

Comprehensive a scheme to stabilize international capitalism as the Dawes' plan is, it avoids and leaves hanging in the air numerous sources of danger to the continuity of the present system of production and exchange. At most, the French imperialists will receive only $300,000,000 annually from the reparations tribute. This sum, staggering as it is, will scarcely meet the interest, at the present rate, on the bonds sold by the French government for reconstruction purposes. Then, the French government faces the further terrific problem of meeting her indebtedness to Great Britain and the United States whose claims total a sum at least equal to, if not greater than, the reconstruction indebtedness.

The problem of reparations is in turn bound up with the complication of international capitalist indebtedness. This difficulty the Dawes' plan does not deal with at all, despite the fact that the success of its operation is unavoidably interwined with the debt solution. The countless complications of the budgets, currencies and tariffs of the other capitalist countries are another source of obstacles not met by the Dawes' scheme.

Finally, the much-heralded Dawes' plan does not concern itself with the total debt of Germany. Avoiding this issue at best only postpones facing serious snarls. The failure of the Dawes' plan to fix the total number of years Germany is to pay tribute will sooner rather than later, prove a cause of acute troubles to the imperialist powers which signed the London pact.

A New Dangerous Menace.

Obviously, the Dawes plan, or the decision of the Entente capitalist rulers to accept less reparations than they had first demanded in the infamous Versailles stipulations, provided they can secure hegemony over the economic life and resources of Germany, is encountering a barbed-wire network of unsurmountable obstacles. The insistence of the Allied imperialists on crushing German capitalism as a dangerous competitor in the world, has only hastened the development of a far more dangerous capitalist competitor than Germany could ever be—American imperialism.

Anthracite Miners Feel the Lash

for granted, the things that are published in times of strikes about the high earning capacity of the miner, but never do they consider the robber role of the rail and coal monopolies.

Neither do they see the miner as he fights with the hazards that confront him, from the time he enters the mine until he again breathes the fresh air and drags his weary frame to the shack he calls home. Often, yes too often, the miner fails to come home, sometimes he awakes on a hospital cot and sometimes he is laid on an undertaker's slab. The ever hanging rock is ever ready to slip its moorings without warning, the innocent electric trolley wire is always liable to give a kick with a deadly charge. Then there is the treacherous gas that always lurks where there is coal, ready to deal a death blow at any time.

These are common things to which a major portion of serious accidents are attributed, but there are innumerable other forms of danger constantly at hand. The miner must face them all while he grinds out profits for the greedy operator and railroad magnate. Drilling holes in rock and coal, blasting, then groping around in the smoke and dust to load big cumbersome cars that hold three and four, mostly four, tons of coal is the daily task of the miner and his laborer.

For this dangerous work the miner is paid about from $2.31 to $3.00 a car of coal, with a little additional for rock and yardage. Thus it can be seen that, altho the consumer pays from about $14.00 for the inferior grades and up to $17.00 and more for the better grades, the miner does not get any too much for his share.

There is nothing resembling uniformity in the wage schedules at the different mines, for each company has a separate agreement with the miners and for the same kind of work the pay is determined according to the company the miner works for. The retail price of anthracite coal is always high, the wages are always low and the hard coal workers are high, almost without exception, and one of the hardest tasks of a miner's wife in the Scranton-Wilkes Barre region is to make the pay envelope cover the debts incurred during the period between pay days. A mediocre standard of living is all that the average anthracite miner can adopt, and it is very doubtful if he could live at all if he suffered from intermittent employment as his brother, the bituminous miner, does. The miners in this district are feeling the effects of the last settlement, which carried the ten per cent advance in wages and an indeterminate advance in living costs. Some of the locals have not yet signed up, preferring to work under the old rate sheets (the name given to individual mine agreements), than to sign the new ones offered to them.

They are also beginning to feel the lash of Lewisism thru charter revocation, and with the visit recently of a committee of International Board members, they were warned about local strikes. These local strikes, and all agree that this section of the country has had plenty of them for various reasons, were the "one reliable assurance" that those engaging in them would have their wrongs righted.

Since the visit of the committee and the denial of the right to strike, some of the operators have become much bolder, they will shut down a mine where the men become unruly, using the "starvation route" to beat them into submission.

If things keep going as they are, the men of the anthracite region will find themselves face to face with a situation that will be hard to correct.

They will be forced to fight, to remedy the things that their present slow-moving and unsatisfactory conciliation board fails to do.

YOUNG WORKERS IN NEW YORK CITY OUTLINE PLANS FOR ACTIVITIES

At the last meeting of the District Executive Committee of the Young Workers League, District No. 2, the committee was completely reorganized. Every member of the committee was assigned a definite task.

The work was blocked out into departments and a member of the committee was placed at the head of each department. He will be responsible for the work of his department directly to the district, and failure to carry out his work will result in his removal from the District Executive Committee.

The matter of shop nuclei was taken up first. In view of the fact that the work of transforming our league from the present territorial basis to one built on the shops and factories is not a division of our work, but is the organizational basis, the center of gravity about which all our work is built, the district organizer is to be directly in charge of this work.

The following were then elected to head the various departments:

Industrial—Forman.
Educational—Elston.
Junior—Thompson.
Membership and Propaganda—Stachel, Glass, and Herberg as assistant.
Press, Publicity, and Research—Zam, Kitzes and Herberg as assistants.
Anti-Militarist—Fishbein, Glass as assistant.
Child Labor—Fox.
Unemployment—Rubin.
Literature—Zam, Kitzes as assistant.
Bookkeeping—Kitzes.
Sports—Frankfeld.
Foreign Languages—Don.

An educational committee, consisting of Comrades Elston, Herberg, Don, Stachel and Milgrum was also elected. The committee is to start work immediately on the course in Marxism and Leninism, and also on the Training School.

A secretarial, consisting of Comrades Stachel, Zam, Herberg and Don was elected to direct the entire work. This secretariat will have all the powers of the District Executive Committee between meetings, except when a change of policy is concerned.

In the future, the District Executive Committee proper will have one business and one educational meeting each month.

The department heads were instructed to secure a committee to help them carry out their plans and begin work immediately.

This is just the beginning of the reorganization in accordance with N. E. C. instructions, which the District Executive Committee is planning to carry thru to the branches.

Indian Population In U. S. Shows Slight Increase for Year

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—The Indian population of the United States increased 2,619 in the fiscal year ended June 30, 1924, the interior department announced today.

The total number of Indians in the United States on that date was 346,962, a gain of 16,283 in the last 11 years. The state of Oklahoma has the largest Indian population, with a total of 119,989.

MACDONALD AND ZAGHLUL FAIL TO AGREE ON SUDAN

Egyptian Premier Shows Anger Over Neglect

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Oct. 6.—Negotiations between Premier MacDonald and Zaghlul Pasha, Egyptian premier, looking toward the liquidation of the controversy over the Sudan question appear to have fallen thru.

Zaghlul has stated to the press that no agreement has been reached and in the course of the interview hinted rather broadly that Premier MacDonald had considered other questions of much more importance and had not been any too cordial. "If I have gained nothing," said Zaghlul, "at least I have lost nothing."

The Sudanese demand that their territory be placed under the Egyptian government and that all English troops and officials be withdrawn. Mass demonstrations in which Egyptian students and native soldiers have taken part have occurred recently and the foreign office takes a serious view of the situation which is believed to be a reflection of the unrest in India as well as part of the resentment aroused by the British clash with the Turkish forces in Irak. The Sudanese are Mohammedans.

Dedicate Temple of Graft.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Oct. 6.—Special trains, automobiles, wagons, and even airplanes brought thousands to Jefferson City today to participate in the dedication of Missouri's $5,000,000 new state house.

Relics Get Close Call.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—Many old buildings of civil war construction in the business district of F. street here were imperilled by fire today when flames destroyed a millinery shop in the Lowe's theater building resulting in three alarms being turned in and damage estimated at $100,000.

Solving the Class Struggle

Warren Stone, head of the Locomotive Engineers' Union, is to be congratulated. He has proved, without any wish to do so, that a union which conducts a capitalist enterprise is no different from any other capitalist concern.

He has refused to sign an agreement with the United Mine Workers of America governing the mines in which members of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers are the sole stockholders and in giving thereasons for his refusal repeats the same accusations against the United Mine Workers voiced by the other coal operators of West Virginia. He denounces the check-off and the no discrimination clauses and announces the intention of his company to hire and fire whom it pleases.

In the correspondence that has taken place between Stone and the United Mine Workers' officials the latter have had all the best of it because they have stuck to the plain facts of unionism. They have placed Stone in the position of the steel trust property heads on the matter of a reduction of miners wages and he even raises the old familiar issue "undesirable agitators" among the miners which his company locked out and which the union has been forced to support.

No one can accuse us of undue affection for the Lewis machine that has largely wrecked the once militant and powerful U. M. of A. but in this particular controversy they should have the sympathy of every section of the labor movement. It may be possible that the Lewis machine is being used by the steel trust operators to check unwelcome competition from the mines of the brotherhood but competition is one of the fetishes of Stone and his followers and one of the risks that all capitalists must take. The labor movement is interested only in seeing that the Brotherhood properties operate on a union basis.

Stone is the petted darling of the so-called liberal element. His financial achievements have been the subject of many long and enthusiastic articles written in the best Brookwood College—Nation—Labor Age style. The entry of unions into banking and other enterprises has been hailed as the long-waited solution of the labor-capital problem and it has been held by most of the enthusiasts that here is complete refutation of the theory of the class struggle and the necessity for the dictatorship of the working class advanced by the Communists.

We are willing to let the case for the class struggle in the coal mines owned by the Locomotive Engineers be presented by Messrs. Lewis, Murray and Green of the United Mine workers. As is well known, their love for the Communists is not sufficiently ardent to prejudice them in this matter. The only evidence they need to present is the fact that Stone closed his union-owned mine rather than sign a union agreement.

The Chicago Tribune is in high spirits over the controversy between Stone and the United Mine Workers and not the least important of the indictments that can be brought against Stone and his followers is the opportunity they have given the capitalist sheets to ridicule the labor movement. In this the guilt is shared by all the tribe of trade union bankers, B. and O. planners, class collaborationists and capitalist tools generally who have made of the labor movement a timid, confused and ineffective thing that the bosses neither fear nor respect.

Concerning Consuls

"Too much government in business" is the stereotyped complaint of the babbitts who parrot the inanities of the Mellons and Hoovers. Yet without the government the businessman in foreign trade would be helpless. It is of interest to note that no complaint is ever raised against the activities of governmental agencies abroad whose task is to smooth the road of the investor in foreign enterprises. No one yells more loudly or continuously for aid than the American businessmen when his greed arouses protest from the people or government of some backward nation. He is only too glad to have plenty of government in business on these occasions—preferably government represented by fully equipped marines or a cruiser cleared for action.

The above remarks are inspired by the perusal of an article on "our Foreign Service," by Edward N. Hurley, published in the "Manufacturers' News." Mr. Hurley is the former head of the U. S. shipping board and is distinguished chiefly for his rather open attempts to give the properties under his control to the private shipping interests and pay them liberally for taking them. It is evident from this fact alone that he is eminently qualified to speak on any subject having connection with patriotism.

Mr. Hurley rises to the defense of the American consular service and says:

> "It is a wonderful thought that, through his government, the American businessman virtually has foreign representatives in every important trade center in the world. They are there to serve him, and he gets prompt, courteous and efficient service whenever and wherever he requests it.

This is certainly a wonderful thought for the American businessman and it is also a matter that is worthy of considerable thought by the workers who are exploited at home by these same business interests. A worker who went abroad for employment and who asked an American counsul to assist him in getting more than the prevailing wage would be considered insane. At least he would be told to get back to "God's country" and upbraided for ever leaving it. How different with the businessman! He is commended for extending American commercial enterprise and, if the country in which he operates is weak, is encouraged to violate its regulations and exploit its people to the utmost. The armed forces of the United States government stand ready to protect him.

This is a form of government in business that the imperialists do not object to but demand. Just as at home the power of government is used against the native workers so abroad it is used against the workers of other nations.

It is over the slaughter of workers in the Philippines, Honduras, Porto Rico, Haiti, Santo Domingo and China as a result of conflict between them and American exploiters that American workers are supposed to cheer, throw their hats in the air, and swell with pride. It is for the business interests that the expensive consular machinery is maintained and it is because the imperialists of America are about to launch a new crusade for profits abroad that such articles as Hurley's are published.

Speeding Up the War Game

Defense day has come and gone and now the American masses are asked to get ready for Navy Day on October 27. Then will come Armistice day, November 11, when another geyser-like eruption of patriotism is expected. After the first of the year Lincoln's birthday, followed shortly by Washington's birthday, will give the spread-eagle orators opportunity to discharge some urgent appeals for more and better armies.

Then comes Decoration day and the Fourth of July with "constitution weeks" and other 100 per cent enterprises sprinkled in. With the agitation against the Japanese given color and pungency by the British attitude at Geneva, we are of the opinion that the paytriots will be able to keep fairly busy.

The above short list of occasions on which the advocates of bigger and better wars find excuse for giving tongue is informative in that it shows that much organized effort is needed to keep the American masses in the proper mood for slaughter and that artificial means are necessary to convince the average plug that the best proof of his love for his country is his willingness to get himself killed in a particularly horrible manner for something he does not understand but which someone has told him is an "American ideal."

The organization of these military agitations for which more excuses are being found daily is ample proof that our imperialists are preparing for a war. The agitation serves two purposes. It creates the proper atmosphere for a war of aggression abroad and it mobilizes the fascist elements for war on the discontented masses at home whenever such a course appears to be necessary.

Every one of these militarist holidays must be utilized for propaganda against war by the revolutionary workers and a clear distinction between the revolutionary opposition to imperialist war and the pacifist objections, which in the final analysis are pure humbug, must be drawn.

Another Bad Smell in Omaha

J. A. Lochray, editor of the Mid-West Labor News, Omaha, one of the privately-owned publications that presume to speak for labor, after tentatively supporting the farmer-labor movement, swung to the LaFollette ticket and has now come out for Cal Coolidge.

There was a time when Lochray was quite a red. It was when there was no particular opposition in the labor unions to certain radical policies, before the reactionaries organized to preserve the status quo and their jobs. Then he suddenly became orthodox. He abandoned the struggling farmer-labor party and threw in with the middle class which dominates the LaFollette movement. Apparently the Coolidge forces have come thru with some thing real in the line of cash or other good and valuable considerations and Lochray now has a new view of the political situation.

We mention this matter not because anything that Lochray does is of any importance, but simply to point out the real benefit to the working class movement of such periods as the present which are wonderful in the way that they show up the traitors and weaklings in the movement. Elements that are ready and willing to denounce, at the orders of fakerdom, the Communists and the Communist position, as Lochray was, are found to be a good recruiting ground for the worst reactionary movements.

The chances are that Lochray will next be heard from as the Omaha organizer of the Minute Men of the Constitution headed by Dawes. This is about the only work that could be more treacherously slimy than his present occupation.

That offensive smell in Omaha does not come from the stockyards alone.

THE MINERS' STRUGGLE

By KID BURNS.

DISTRICT 18, United Mine Workers of America had a special convention that was called for the purpose of considering the situation brot about by the strike in the district. The convention lasted four full days and a couple of night sessions closing sine die without doing anything toward solving the problem as to how the miners of District 18 could carry the strike to a successful conclusion. The pitiful state of the miners of District 18 and their families was laid before the convention by every delegate sent by the rank and file: it was pointed out by the rank and file delegates that we have lived up to the laws and policies of the United Mine Workers of America in every respect and now we demand that we get financial support to help us win this strike. John L. had his flunkies there in the persons of Andrew Steel and Dave Watkins. On the question of support from the International, those two duffers drew the gloomiest picture of the miners of the United States that could be expected from such well-fed buffers of capitalism.

They covered every district in the United Mine Workers of America where the three-year agreement was signed; one by one they pointed out the thousands of miners out of work since the 15th of April, they told us of 400,000 miners who were out of work and that sufficient coal was on hand to last six months and that the miners of the United States are worse off than the miners of this district. Even tho they have a three-year agreement they had no work and could not help the miners of District 18 they said the figures given out in the International report was not money that could be got hold of. It was tied up one way or another and therefore nothing further could be promised to the miners of District 18 from the International in the way of relief.

They said that nothing less than the Jacksonville agreement would do in District 18, that the International would not sanction any agreement that would not carry with it the 1923 wages and conditions; they had no suggestion to offer as to how to get it, only to sit tight, live up to the laws and policies of the United Mine Workers of America, and refuse to go to work till the boss gives you what you ask for; but if you get bad and refuse to live up to the laws and policies of the United Mine Workers of America "you will find yourself in the same position as others who tried to break the laws and policies of the International." This stuff was continually before the delegates: the laws and policies of the International. One of the policies of the International is separate agreements in a district that is on strike. We have many union mines working all around us and the majority of the delegates came to the convention to vote the mines closed, but when they were told what would happen if they did they went opposite to the wish of their locals, and their own wish was supplanted by the fear of the International power to revoke charters. Some delegates came to the convention with mandates from their locals to vote against the policy of separate agreements but after hearing the lickspittles of Lewis tell the convention what would happen if the laws and policies of the Lewis gang were not lived up to, they did not have the courage to make Lewis and his gang do it.

I claim that if we are going to jump every time Lewis cracks his whip, and do as he orders us to do, we will be doing all the dirty work and he will go scot free. Let us have the guts to make him do his own dirty work; he has enough flunkies now doing his bidding, many of them doing it thru fear of their job. They know it is wrong but they are job-conscious not class conscious.

Lewis and his gang get us bound hand and foot with fear of policies and then tell us we have to win or there will be no settlement of the present strike; it is like a manager of a wrestler telling his man he must wrestle fair while the other fellow has a stranglehold on his man, and has him almost dead from suffocation. How much longer are the miners of District 18 going to stand for this treachery of Lewis, Sherman, and company? Steel told us in the convention, in a roundabout way, that the three year agreement could not live if the districts outside of the Central competitive field did not sign up on the Jacksonville agreement. If that is so what is the International doing toward protecting that three year agreement? They are trying to break it, not save it, because of the fact that they won't let the miners of the districts that are holding out for the three year agreement take action such as would bring those operators to their knees, but the miners will have to take such action as they see fit regardless of what Lewis or the policy says.

With Backs Against Wall.

We are fighting with our backs against the wall, the master having used his most effective weapon against us to put us in the position, namely, hunger.

The help of the officials of the union to tie our hands till the master beats us into submission, has been obtained. I ask you comrades how much longer are you going to allow these traitors to bluff you into keeping still while the master takes your living away from you. Rise up from your sleep, fellow workers, take such action as you see fit against the boss to bring this strike to a successful conclusion, if you are not prepared to fight, then you are going to go down to defeat in this strike, no militant in the ranks wants to see the workers defeated just for the sake of saying I told you so, just to prove that a great organization like the United Mine Workers of America, in the hands of Lewis and his flunkies is to go down to defeat because of their treachery No, that is not what the militants want, they want to bring the workers out victorious in every battle they engage in, because victories give courage to the workers, and defeats give discouragement and makes it almost impossible to rally the workers quickly for another battle, therefore we are not interested personally in John L. Lewis, Sherman, or any of the rest of that type. If Lewis or Sherman is willing to lead the workers in the direction of victory for the workers, and defeat for the boss then we will back them to the limit, but when they lead the workers to sure defeat as they are doing today we will fight them fearlessly, show up their acts to the rank and file and allow the rank and file to take the action that is necessary to remove them from the positions which they now hold.

The miners of this organization now have a chance to free themselves from such leadership. Elections for these offices will be held in December, miners what will your answer be to such traitors? Will you remember the Edmonton strike, the Nova Scotia strikes, the telegrams from Lewis and Sherman in that strike of 1923? The three year agreement and no work, the revoking of charters by Lewis in many districts, the revoking of the Drumheller charters by Sherman and many other sins too numerous to mention? Miners, you were short of money and memory in the past, will you allow it to be again said that you are still short of memory?

Vote for your progressive ticket to lead the miners to victory—or vote for the old slate and take the defeats that are coming to you!

AS WE SEE IT - - By T. J. O'Flaherty

tion that overthrew the kaiser? Nothing. The socialists continue to sing the praises of the American dollar and paint Dawes as a Santa Claus Ebert quits his post when he has fulfilled the task assigned to him by the bourgeoisie.

THE United States has declared war on the League of Nations. It was originally an American scheme but a section of the American capitalists looked on it with suspicion. They were afraid they could not control it. Morgan was in favor of it. He owns America only a little more than he owns other capitalist countries, and is a real internationalist and above factions. But even Morgan is not all powerful, in his own country. The other big capitalists have something to say in the management of the affairs of the world.

THE prophet Woodrow Wilson died in his bed to put the League across. The job killed him and Harding became his heir. Harding slammed the League every chance he got and put up a proposition that resembled it as much as two peas. Coolidge followed up the good work by having unofficial observers at every League conference. The unofficial observer saw to it that the League did nothing detrimental to the interests of the American capitalists. It looked as if there was a chance America could control the League and use it as a weapon in its scheme for world hegemony. But suddenly something burst. Japan threw a bomb into the assembly and showed the United States imperialists that it was not so easy as they thot. Now the eagle is screaming angrily for battle. World court plans and peace protocols are thrown into the discard and General Pershing is going to Europe to visit his son, who is at school in Switzernad and incidentally to learn the lay of the land in Europe.

THE latest editor of a so-called labor paper to switch his alleged influence to Coolidge is J. A. Lochray, of the Mid-West News of Omaha, Nebraska. Some weeks ago we commented on that gentleman's flop to La-Follette and his clean break with all the principles that he had hitherto given lip service to. But it appears that the expected cash did not roll in, even tho there was a noticeable increase in the advertising carried in his paper.

LOCHRAY visited Chicago recently, last week if I remember rightly, and toured the headquarters of the various political parties in quest of funds. His paper would be turned over to any party for cash. He was out to sell it to the highest bidder. Evidently he struck oil in the Wrigley building, where Coolidge has his national headquarters, as the Mid-West News has declared for Coolidge. As usual Brother Lochray has not given a convincing excuse for his treachery. He simply came to the conclusion that LaFollette would not be elected and that a job from the republican party, even as prohibition agent looked better than running a so-called labor paper.

IN an interview to the press, sent out by the Coolidge campaign managers the honorable Lochray declares that he made a trip to the labor centers in search of wisdom. He made a trip to the labor center of Chicago in quest of dough. He did not care where it came from. He would not turn it down, not even, we venture to say if it came from Moscow. Exit Lochray.

ANOTHER gentleman from Chicago, a labor editor, that is, he edits a paper that holds up business men for blackmail advertising, refused to use a matrix sent out by a political party because it was made in Germany. The faker's name is Peter Cunliff. His paper was Gompers's mouthpiece in Chicago, before that worthy made peace with John Fitzpatrick and the New Majority changed its name to the Federation News. Now that the latter is licking Sam's boots there is no necessity for relying on the gas pipe bridage's hold-up rag. This election campaign is some show.

GOMPERS FEARS FOR HIS JOB

Drawn Especially for the Daily Worker by Walter Carlson

Views of Our Readers on Many Subjects

THE MISTAKEN PROLETARIANS.

To the DAILY WORKER.—In an editorial in the September Proletarian, the official organ of the Proletarian Party, the editor charges the Workers Party of Detroit with having supported, last fall, candidates for public office running on the old party tickets. He based this charge on an article of mine in The Worker of Dec. 1, 1923, reporting a decision of the Party in Detroit to support candidates indorsed by the Detroit Federation of Labor.

Not only is the charge false, but it is made at this time for the purpose of covering up a sin of the Proletarian Party, the sin of omission to publicly announce the expulsion of Batt from the Proletarian Party last December. The profound silence of his expulsion was discarded for an attack upon the Workers Party when the DAILY WORKER recently published the story of Batt's candidacy in the recent primaries for republican nomination for state legislator.

Every one who is at all familiar with Detroit municipal politics knows that the city elections are non-partisan, no party names appearing on the ballot. The election last fall was a city election. The Detroit Federation of Labor supported 5 candidates out of 9 which comprise the City Council. The Workers Party of Detroit indorses these candidates. Why? Everybody in Detroit knows that since the acquisition of the street car system by the city the issue in all the elections has been whether or not the administration would deal with the unions. The trade unionists are immensely interested in the city elections for this reason. For this reason and also because the Detroit Federation in that election decided to challenge a majority of the Council, the Workers Party of Detroit correctly applied the united front policy by endorsing the candidates of the Detroit Federation of Labor. Of course, if the election had been partisan and these candidates were running on the old party tickets, the W. P. of Detroit would not have indorsed them. The motion for indorsement passed by the City Central Committee was made by me, and contained in addition to a statement embodying the analysis of the situation the provision that UNDER NO CIRCUMSTANCES would the W. P. indorse candidates running on old party tickets.

There is ample proof that the editor of the Proletarian did not make the charge in good faith. In the first place if the charge is true why did not the Proletarian make this charge earlier? The indorsement of the candidates took place just about a year ago.

In the second place the editor makes the statement twice that the candidates indorsed ran on old party tickets, whereas he knows that the city elections are non-partisan.

In the third place he makes the statement in the same editorial that the candidates indorsed by the Federation and by the Party were so reactionary that the conservative Building Trades group opposed their election. The fact of the matter is that the most reactionary of the candidates was the representatives of the Buildings Trade group, Robert Ewald, who on the floor of the Detroit Federation made the statement that the reason he and his group were opposed to indorsing five candidates was that in his opinion two representatives in the City Council was the correct proportion of labor representation; that to challenge a majority of the Council would antagonize and arouse the employers and exert them to efforts to defeat the entire labor slate. The article from which the editor of The Proletarian quoted the endorsement contained this information. Why did the editor print the false information that the candidates were too reactionary for the conservative Building Trades Council?

What will the reply of the editor of the Proletarian be to this challenge?

Cyril Lambkin.

RULE COMMUNISTS OFF BALLOT

New Russo-Chinese Pact Hits Imperialists

LAFOLLETTE IS ALLOWED TO GO BEFORE VOTERS

Workers Party to Fight Action in Michigan

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 7.—The secretary of state of Michigan has dug deep into the hoary records of the election laws, and has attempted to bar the Communist - presidential electors, pledged to William Z. Foster and Benjamin Gitlow, presidential and vice-presidential candidates of the Workers Party, on an ancient technicality, altho the LaFollette presidential electors, governed by the same technicality, have been officially placed on the ballot.

The Workers Party has engaged counsel to fight to a finish for the right to go before the workers of Michigan as the only political party in the campaign representing the working class.

Sec Catering to LaFollette.

While Bert Chilton, deputy secretary of state, has wired all county clerks to place LaFollette's name on the ballot, he has sent a wire to keep the Foster-Gitlow electors off the ballot. Evidently having nothing to fear from LaFollette, and knowing that Foster and Gitlow will poll a tremendous vote for workers' and farmers' control of government, the employing class of Michigan is thus catering to LaFollette.

Cyril Lambkin declared the Workers party will fight to the last ditch to rescind the order of the deputy secretary of state. The discrimination shown against the Communists is flimsily based on an attorney general's ruling that the party has not complied with the primary and election laws in the requirements that the state central committee must be elected in odd years. Altho exactly the same technicality applies to LaFollette, no obstacle has been placed in his way by the Michigan capitalists.

New Red Baiting Begins.

Detroit papers are taking the opportunity to come out with stories denouncing the "reds," and hinting that the Workers Party should be kept off the ballot because "it is affiliated with the Moscow soviet party."

Fix Minimum Wage.

SYDNEY, New South Wales, Oct. 7.—The board of trade has fixed the minimum wage for unskilled male labor at $19.68 per week, and for unskilled female labor, $9.96 per week.

WORLD FORCES CLASH IN CHINA

Imperialists War Against National Movement in Southern China.

At the end of August last telegrams from China reported that the Sun-Yat-Sen government had seized a steamer with a cargo of weapons, which had arrived from an English port in the chief portiof the Kwantung province and was destined for the English comprador in China, Tschen-Lin-Pak. This merchant stands at the head of the military troops set up for the protection of the property of the Chinese merchants in the province of Kwantung. At the congress of this body held in May of this year, it was decided to centralize all these divisions of troops. This was an indication that the Chinese merchants, along with the village profiteers and with the support of the English imperialists, were preparing an action against the revolutionary people's party, against Sun-Yat-Sen.

Sun's Hands Tied.

The relations of power between the government party Koumintang, and the merchants who were organizing against it were such that at the time Sun-Yat-Sen did not decide to disarm these counter-revolutionary bands. Sun-Yat-Sen even assumed that he would succeed without having recourse to force in gradually gaining control of these military forces; he intended to use them in the fight against the reactionary general Tschen-Dsun-Min, who was supported by the English imperialists. Sun-Yat-Sen did not perceive the spiritual unity between the reactionary movement of this general and the action of the merchants which was preparing. He was also not aware that behind the counter-revolutionary movement in South China, there stands the Mac Donald government. But the ship laden with weapons which was seized, the boycott strike of the merchants in Canton, the note from the English consul to the civil governor of Sun-Yat-Sen, and finally the English cruisers and gun-boats at Canton revealed to Sun-Yat-Sen the counter revolutionary policy of the merchants and English imperialists.

Sun-Yat-Sen to MacDonald.

In a telegram addressed to Mac-Donald on the 5th of September, Sun-Yat-Sen declared the following:

"To the Right Honorable Ramsay MacDonald:

"The head of the Hongkong-Shanghai Banking Corporation has organized a band of so-called Fascists, the purpose of which is the overthrow of my government. This aim is to be achieved by means of arming rebels and with the help of arms and weapons which were brought here on board the ship 'Gaf.' This steamer arrived on the 10th of August at Canton, and was immediately confiscated by my government. Since then a revolt has occurred in Canton in the form of a strike, which the rebels, together with all other counter-revolutionaries, have organized. At the moment when I decided to take the necessary measures against the revolt, the English General Consul sent to my government the following letter:

"'I have received from the commander of the British naval forces the information that he has received orders from Hongkong to adopt suitable measures in the event of a bombarding of Canton by the Chenese authorities.'

"In view of the diplomatic and financial support which the British government has constantly afforded to the Chinese counter-revolution, and also in view of the fact that my government is at present the only center of resistance against this counter-revolution, I must draw the following conclusion, that the real aim of this ultimatum is the overthrow of my government. I emphatically protest against this recent act of imperialist interference in the inner affairs of China.

"Sun-Yat-Sen."

The chief reason which prompted the English imperialists to come forward openly as the initiators of counter-revolution in South China was the consolidation of the Chinese bourgeoisie, as well as the powerful revolutionizing of the broad masses of the rural and town population of South China.

National Solidarity Increases Fast.

The congress of the workers and craftsmen of Canton, which took place almost simultaneously with the congress of the mercantile military forces, has shown that the Chinese masses are proceeing rapidly forwards on the road of class consciousness, and are exerting pressure upon the democratic Koumintang Party in the sense of rendering this more revolu-

THE NEW WORLD WAR

THE great powers are conducting in China maneuvers that are probably the preliminaries to a new world war. Just as the struggle of the entente and central powers for the balance of power in the Balkans and contiguous territory to which they were the key resulted in the shambles of 1914-18, so does the conflict for the privilege of exploiting China point inevitably to the outbreak of another titanic struggle.

China is the last great field for potential exploitation which combines two necessities for imperialistic enterprise—First: Enormously rich natural resources; Second: A population of millions from which the requisite cheap labor can be recruited.

The strategy of the great powers has had as its object the dismembering of China and its apportionment among themselves. The rising tide of national and workingclass consciousness which tends to unite the Chinese population against the foreign exploiter has become a tremendous obstacle to the plans of the imperialist. They now promote internal strife and thereby hope to be able to pounce upon and devour a China that has been exhausted by internecine warfare. The following article describes in detail the two important factors in the Chinese situation—the crystallization of the national and workers' movement and the efforts of the great powers to prevent China becoming a nation.

BIG RAILROAD IN CHINA GOES UNDER SOVIETS

U. S. Dollar Diplomats Do Not Like It

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SHANGHAI, Oct. 7.—Soviet Russia and China have concluded an agreement whereby they will work jointly for riding the entire territory of the Chinese people from foreign imperialist interests.

For some time the Soviet Republic has been making it increasingly uncomfortable for the foreign interests in China. This agreement comes as a climax of the Soviet campaign to help the Chinese redeem their country.

Soviets to Run Railroad.

The agreement decrees the turning over of the Chinese Eastern Railway to Soviet administration. This decision puts the quietus on the plans of the imperialist powers to take over the principal Chinese roads on the pretense of preventing the transportation of troops and thus pacifying the country. This suggestion originated in the camp of the British interests which proposed that the United States should take the lead in such intervention.

The Soviet embassy and consular offices have been [illegible] in Shanghai and Peking. [illegible] are flying at full mast in both cities. In Peking a rousing reception was tendered the Communist Ambassador, Karakhan.

Irritates Americans.

This manifestation of genuine friendship to the Soviet government in the area of China where the greatest Peking is proving especially irritating to the American and other imperialistic groups. The latter had been looking forward to the Peking government refusing its recognition of Soviet Russia, because of her arrangement with General Chang Tso-lin for the disposal of the Manchurian Railway.

Soviet Ambassador Karakhan views the friendly trend in Russian-Chinese relations as dealing "a crushing blow to imperialist states, destroying their last chance to grab the Eastern railway."

For Russo-Chinese Friendship.

The strengthening bonds of friendship between the Soviet Republic and the growing force in China and are enabling the chaotic effects of years of foreign imperialist intervention. It is the growing unity of the Chinese people in close alliance with the Soviet Republic that the American and European imperialist powers fear most. They see in this more than anything else a blow to their program of Chinese dismemberment. America is especially hard hit because she counted on her puppet, Wei Pu Fu to fight Soviet Russia.

Communists Go On New York Ballot

MINNEAPOLIS "RED BAITERS" IN LAST STAND TRY TO SMASH THE LOCAL TRADES AND LABOR ASSEMBLY

By LESLIE R. HURT.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 7.—That "labor fakers" will resort to the most despicable tactics in their mad effort to protect their "pie cards" is proven by the action taken by local conservative labor men in publishing thru the columns of "The Minnesota," a "red-baiting" sheet edited by Louis Harthill, a call for the formation of a new central labor body in Minneapolis.

It might be explained here and now that Harthill was formerly chief of police under the administration of "Pa" Van Lear, war-time socialist mayor of Minneapolis.

Republican Camp Follower.

Both of these leading lights have been so thoroly discredited in the eyes of honest trade unionists that neither are ever seen around labor headquarters.

During the recent state primaries, Harthill, it is alleged, was up on the Iron Range counselling the workers to vote for "General" Geo. E. Leach, candidate for the republican nomination for governor of Minnesota. Leach is at the present time mayor of Minneapolis, thus the Harthill-Leach-Van Lear combination is quite understandable.

The call is signed by seven local labor unions and is to be held Friday, Oct. 10, at the headquarters of the Cooks' Union. Leslie Sinton, secretary of the Cooks' and Waiters' organization, has consistently aligned himself with the "labor wrecking" crew in the Trades and Labor Assembly ever since his release from the County jail where he, together with three other organizers, was confined because of the violation of an injunction secured by the Citizens' Alliance restraining organized labor from picketting the "scab" Wonderland Theater.

Whether or not Sinton had become afflicted with "cold feet" is left to the imagination of the readers. The fact of the matter is, however, Sinton is one of the leading figures in this latest attempt to smash the labor movement and the meeting is to be held in the hall under his jurisdiction.

Roll Call of Wreckers.

The following named organizations are listed as signers of the "call to

DEVER SAYS HE IS HELPLESS IN WAR ON WEALTH

Mayor Dever admitted his absolute helplessness before the power of the wealthy class, and declared he couldn't do a thing to help the teachers, in an interview with the DAILY WORKER yesterday.

"I can't do a thing to help the teachers," said the mayor, to the DAILY WORKER, admitting his impotence in a situation affecting 400,000 school children and ten thousand teachers in the city over which he is mayor.

Cater to Wealth.

"As long as there are wealthy men there will be men in office who will cater to them. And no matter how good and promising these men are when put into office, they will cater to wealth after they are in office a while."

When asked why he spurned the teachers' meeting, if he professed such warm regard for the fight they are making against tax dodgers, mayor Dever said, "I didn't want to sit there and be told what to do."

"But I'm with Miss Haley all the way in her fight against the tax dodgers," Dever said. "I think what Miss Haley says about the tax dodgers is absolutely correct." The mayor made no concrete promises other than moral support, however.

"Are the men who hold office on the

MUST HUNT FOR THE KIN OF FLOORWALKER; DIED WORKING AT 65

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 7.—Police have notified authorities at Milwaukee, Wis., to try and locate relatives of A. J. Brand, 65, floorwalker for a downtown store here, who was found dead here.

THOUSANDS TO HEAR PLEA FOR SACCO, VANZETTI

Thousands of Chicago workingmen and women are expected to attend the meeting at the West Side Auditorium tonight, to protest against the action of Judge Thayer, of the state superior court of Massachusetts, in denying a new trial to Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, the two Italian-American militants who for two years have lain in prison on a frame-up charge of murder.

Antonio Presi, editor of "Il Lavoratore," Italian Communist daily, will speak to the workers in Italian. Alexander Bittelman, will address the crowd in Jewish and William F. Dunne will speak in English.

All three speakers will show how the "conviction" of Sacco and Vanzetti is typical of the tactics of the American courts of justice in relieving the American labor movement of all militant workers.

The Workers Party hopes to raise a sum sufficient to cover the cost of a new trial for Sacco and Vanzetti. The West Side Auditorium is at Racine and Davis streets.

PARTY WINS BIG VICTORY IN THE EMPIRE STATE

By JOSEPH MANLEY
Campaign Manager, Workers Party.

The Workers Party is on the ballot in New York state. Chas. Krumbein, district organizer, has filed at Albany the petitions containing signatures far in excess of the required twenty thousand. The Party organization in New York state is to be congratulated for this real victory in the first Communist election struggle.

That it is a real struggle can no longer be doubted in view of the attempt to keep the Foster and Gitlow electors off the ballot in both Michigan and Wisconsin.

Home of Wall Street.

In view of the restrictions, obstacles and last-minute discriminatory rulings against our party, the New York district victory is therefore, all the greater. The red flag of international Communism is raised in the election campaign and will appeal to the militant workers in the giant industries of this most thickly populated and capitalistic developed state.

In New York, perhaps as in no other section, poverty and riches are developed to the extreme. For instance, New York City's East side contrasts with Park avenue, probably more than anywhere else. New York is the home of American and international capitalism, the real dictators of which operate in that crooked little street, called Wall.

Fought Many Struggles.

New York's labor movement from the days of Henry George up to the present is replete with the history of struggles invariably ending in debacles for the workers. Recently, in the trade union movement itself, to beep or not to beep has been the question. Tammany controlled unionism is here at its worse.

No middle class Messiah named LaFollette can lead the workers of New York against their capitalist masters. The revolutionary program of the Workers arty is the only complete historic answer to this stronghold of imperialist capitalism. From today and until November 4th in the political campaign the slogan for New York can well be: Communism, or capitalism.

WEST MADISON ST. HEARS MAURER TALK ABOUT THE CAMPAIGN

The Workers Party invaded the LaFollette open air camp Tuesday night when George Maurer spoke to the free lancers gathered at Madison and Green Sts. Maurer devoted most of his speech to exposing the LaFollette regime in Wisconsin. He pointed out the fact that LaFollette's supposed record as a friend of labor is a colleasl fraud. Maurer mentioned that Wisconsin has a national guard which is smaller than few in the country.

Maurer told how the open shoppers flocked to Wisconsin from all over the country because LaFollette's regime protects the employers and insures them of a cheap labor supply and plenty of profits. A meeting will be held tonight at the corner of 32nd and Halsted Sts., where Victor Zokaitis and Karl Reeve will be the speakers.

GARY'S STEEL TRUST REAPS RICH PLUNDER BY TURNING REAL ESTATE SHARK TO SELL WORKERS "HOMES"

By KARL REEVE
(Staff Writer, Daily Worker)

GARY, Ind., Oct. 7.—The Gary Land company, subsidiary of United States Steel corporation, makes feudal serfs out of steel workers by selling them, at an enormous profit, cheaply t houses which it takes the steel workers ten years and more pay for.

FRANCE TO RECOGNIZE RUSSIA

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, Oct. 7.—Premier Herriot's committee appointed to study methods of recognizing Soviet Russia has decided that France shall immediately extend de jure recognition to the Soviet government. The full de jure recognition will be formally extended by France not later than Oct. 20, officials here declare. The decisions of the committee have been transmitted to Washington, in view of the unwritten agreement between the United States and France, that the same attitude be taken by the two countries toward the Soviets.

Some reports in Paris had it that the United States is anxious to change its attitude toward the Soviet government, and put pressure behind France to take the lead toward recognition.

Other sources, however, pointed out that France is practically a bankrupt nation, with the Dawes plan burdening the nation with the collar of J. P. Morgan's gold, and millions of workers clamoring for Soviet recognition. The friendly attitude of Japan toward the Soviet government, with the impending trade agreement between the two nations, and the Manchurian government's recent overtures to the Soviet government, have made France realize that her unfriendly relations with the Soviet government were quickly taking from her the Asiatic trade markets.

Altho the committee announces that the czarist debts must be paid, Herriot's change toward Russia is regarded by all as a surrender to necessity. Herriot had many times bombastically stated that France would have no dealings with Soviet Russia until the old czaristic debts were paid to France's financiers. He has been forced by the growing influence of the Soviet government with both European and Asiatic countries, to bring France into line in an effort to rehabilitate France's decaying economic structure.

LABOR PLACES TRIBUNE ON ITS LIST OF SCABS

Non-Union Work Puts Up Newspaper's Tower

Another indictment of the open shop Chicago Tribune, as an enemy of labor, was added to the list of many condemnations by labor organizations, Monday night, when the Painters' district council No. 14, having jurisdiction over all the painters in Cook County, placed the Chicago Tribune on the unfair list.

The Painters' District Council, which has for many years looked with an unfriendly eye on the anti-labor union activities of the Tribune, declares the Chicago Tribune to be unfair to organized labor because it has let the contracts for the "Tribune Tower" to non-union contractors.

Work Under Landis Award.

The paining for the Tribune tower will be done by the firm of J. B. Noelle, which does its work under the infamous "open shop" Landis award.

Between thirty and forty painters are to do painting work on the Tribune tower under the scab working conditions.

When the Tribune office was asked for a statement with regard to the letting of their contracts to non-union firms, no one in he Tribune organization seemed to know anything about the matter. Mr. Cadell, in the office where the contracts were let, refused to make any statement to the DAILY WORKER.

A secreary to the business manager told the DAILY WORKER: "Our attitude is well known to organized labor. The union men know we are friendly to them."

When asked by the DAILY WORKER reporter if it didn't seem a little inconsistent to let contracts to non-union firms he secretary replied that it did, but "You better talk to Mr. Underdonk."

Praise Open Shop Plan.

This worthy gentleman, who has charge of the letting of the contracts, was strangely absent, but his office referred the DAILY WORKER to the business manager of the Tribune. There is was stated that the business manager was out of town, and no statement could be made by the Tribune until his return. Representatives of the company were loud in their praise of the "Landis award," which is a fancy name for "open shop," nonunion conditions in the building industry.

Says 12 per cent is Average.

DETROIT.—There has been a good deal of conversation and publicity about the "legitimate profits" of capitalists, the impression being given that legitimacy ended at about 6 per cent. Sen. James Cousens, of Michigan, addressing a Kiwanis convention at Ann Arbor, defended his ownership of millions of tax-exempt government bonds as follows: "The average price on federal, state or municipal bonds is between 4 and 4½ per cent. In other words, despite the surtax, I would have been much better off if I had invested my capital in manufacturing interests and received only the average return of 12 per cent than I am after having invested in tax-exempt governmental bonds."

Bryan Knows Just What's Wrong.

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Cal., Oct. 7.—Bill Bryan is alternating his democratic campaign speeches with anti-evolution propaganda. Speaking under the auspices of the Seventh Day Adventists in Mountain View, he stated that all the ills from which America suffers can be traced back to the teaching of evolution. "It would be better to destroy every other book ever written, and save just the first three verses of Genesis," he declared.

STEEL TRUST REAPS RICH PLUNDER

of $600 per small lot. The Gary Land company now owns 14 sub-divisions in Gary, the returns from their renting and selling projects bringing in hundreds of thousands of dollars a year.

Hundreds Lose Their Homes.

Many hundreds of the steel workers have lost their homes and their savings by being fired before their houses were paid for, the houses reverting to the steel corporation. Houses are cheaply built by the company, with no conveniences, and cost more than similar structures in Chicago.

One of the latest subdivisions to be built up by the steel trust, the eleventh subdivision, is typical of the land profiteering carried on by the steel trust. Houses here are built of stucco, without a cellar or basement, with four small rooms. They cost the steel workers from $4,000 to $6,000.

One of these little houses, the occupants told me, cost $3,700. In addition it cost $365 to install a dry air heating system, $250 to have a cellar dug, in addition to the six per cent interest charged by the Gary steel company for "lending" the workers the money.

The eleventh subdivision, of average size, runs from 11th Ave., to 16th Ave., and from Madison Ave to Grant Ave., being five blocks by ten in size. Two houses are being built on one of the streets near Madison which are to cost the steel workers' families $9,000 plus the interest. A house of five rooms, without the basement and without the heating plant, cost $6,000, the occupants told me. We pay $48.00 a month toward the house," the man of this house told me. "We had to pay $550 down before the company would start building. We installed our own cellar and heating plant. If wo neglect to pay the installment, oven for only one month, the steel company raises the interest, and for every month we fail to pay the interest is raised a little higher. The company does not care whether we are working or not—the same rules hold."

Must Buy; Can't Rent.

A steel worker who went into the offices of the Gary Land company asking to rent a house was told by Mr. Colton, who works for the steel corporation, "We haven't rented any houses for four years. You'll have to buy a lot from us first, and then we lend you the money at six per cent interest to have the house built, by the contractor. The average lot costs around $500. We don't start building the house until you get the lot entirely paid for."

The biggest complaint of the steel workers against the Gary Land and pany is that in buying a house they become greatly obligated to the steel corporation. They must cling to their home at all costs, as there is no other work in Gary except in the steel mills. There are at least 3,000 steel workers laid off in Gary, at the present time, and most of the others are working on half time or less.

Their house payments are falling behind, and meantime interests and debts are piling up. The workers cannot move away from Gary if they want to retain the money invested in their homes. Thus the steel corporation, besides reaping immense profits from the steel workers, wields a constant threat over the steel workers to "be good little boys and not talk unionism."

The steel trust, while it is very exacting toward the collection of rents from the workers, spends money liberally to build up the churches of the town. It is a well known fact that every large steel church in Gary is controlled by the steel trust. The Russian orthodox church recently received a "loan" of over $5,000 from the U. S. Steel corporation, it is declared by members of the congregation.

Church Much in Evidence.

Near the eleventh subdivision are four church buildings and three large priest houses in one block. This is the block running from Madison to Monroe and from 12th to 13th Aves. The Slovack Roman catholic church, with father Ignats Steponcheck in his immense priest house, the Greek catholic church, a gorgeous new building costing thousands of dollars, and the Slovack Greek church, with father Lucas in his twelve-room brick priest house, all of which are on this block, all received money from the steel trust, old residents of the town stated, either to build new churches or to keep their church going.

Directly across from these churches is the commodious armory where the 113th engineers regiment is stationed. The armory, which covers an entire block, was built on land originally owned by the steel trust.

After buying these houses for exhorbitant prices, living in the shadow of the steel trust churches and the guns of the soldiers, the steel workers must pay monthly doles to the Gary Gas, Heat and Water company, which is also owned by the steel corporation. The minimum charge for gas paid to the steel trust coffers is $1.00 every month, the minimum charge for electricity $1.00 per month, and for water 75 cents per month. The rate charged for water by the steel trust averages $2.00 per year more than the rate charged for water in Chicago. The Chicago charge for gas, is 95 cents per 1,000 cubic feet, but the steel trust charges $1.00 per 1,000 cubic feet or five cents more for every 1,000 cubic feet than is charged in Chicago.

Holds Monopoly on Housing.

The steel trust is carrying its feudal system of control of the workers to a greater extent in the erection of the new tube works on the eastern edge of the city. Several hundred houses are being built there in which workers will be practically forced to live because of the monopoly on Gary housing held by the steel trust.

Every device is used by the steel trust to control the working and housing conditions, the living expenses, the working hours and wages, the standard of living and even the religion of the Gary slaves. Because they have no union the steel trust slaves have no control over their own lives.

POLICE ATTACK STRIKE THRONG AT PATERSON

Tried to Assemble in Front of City Hall

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PATERSON, N. J., Oct. 7.—The Paterson police, after refusing the striking silk workers here permission to meet in their hall, Monday night charged into a crowd of over 2,000 strikers, arresting fifteen, beating others with their clubs and riding rough-shod over the crowd of men and women.

The strikers, led by Louise and Alice Kimball, marched from in front of Turn Hall, where they were locked out by the police, to the city hall, where open air meetings were started.

The police arrested John C. Butterworth, who was addressing the crowd, and charged into the peaceful assemblage swinging their clubs on the heads of men and women alike.

Police Sergeant Kelliher ordered the raid on the crowd, altho it is well known here that the silk mill bosses are enraged at the success of the strike and are using brutal violence as a last desperate means to keep the silk workers from victory.

Took the Top Off.

arms" against the "left wingers" of the legitimate trades union movement: Steamfitters' Union, Plumbers' Union, Hod Carriers' Union, General Drivers' Union, Hotel and Restaurant Employees' Union, Hoisting Engineers' Union, and the Lathers' Union.

The "fakers" plea is as follows:

"To All Labor Organizations:

"Dear Sir and Brothers:

"You and your executive board are invited to attend a meeting for the purpose of organizing a new central body.

"No doubt you will agree with us that the time has come when the Trade Unionists of this city must show by their actions, whether the American Federation of Labor and its laws are going to be respected or not.

"The Minneapolis Trades and Labor Assembly, as it is conducted today, is but a branch of the Communist Party. Its very activities are not in harmony with the bonafide trade union movement. Two of the officers are avowed Communists and members of the Workers Party. Every action in the assembly is a direct slap to the earnest trade unionist in the American Federation of Labor. Where do you stand?

"Show your colors by attending this meeting which will be held Friday, Oct. 10, at 8 p. m., at the Cooks' headquarters, 54 S. Third street, third floor."

Just Another "Sell-Out."

That the whole move is of great political significance cannot be denied. To your correspondent it looks like another attempt to "sell out" the workers of Minneapolis to the old political gangs. The "labor fakers" know full well that it would be dangerous for them to endeavor to put over a "compromise" with the republican "machine" while the Communists were on hand to expose their manevers. So they have taken the easy way out by forming a little union all by themselves. But even this will be of no avail—for, as Harthill says, the Communists are like Cascarets—they work while you sleep. Yes, the fight will continue against that element that seeks to betray the American producer until the battle is won.

Push Straw Ballot.

Beginning this week the DAILY WORKER STRAW VOTE campaign will open full blast in Minneapolis. Speakers from the Workers Party will talk during the noon hour at every large industrial plant in the city. Sentiment for the Communist standardbearers, Foster and Gitlow, is growing daily. Arrangements are nearing completion for the meeting to be addressed by Ben Gitlow, vice-presidential candidate on the Workers Party ticket, in Minneapolis, Oct. 9, Coliseum Hall. This is the answer of the Communists to those who would betray the workers by LaFolettism. This is the answer of the Communists to the "labor fakers" of Minneapolis.

AND SO THE DAY WAS SPOILED FOR MILITARISTS' CELEBRATION

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—Military uniforms were massed around the south end of the state, war and navy building, martial airs were played by the band, flags were draped and paraded, and the dedication of the monument erected by the First division of the overseas forces was in full swing, when newsboys came along with a local daily in which Leonard Hall, dramatic critic for the Scripps papers, had this to say concerning "What Price, Glory?":

"The play tells the truth about war, and we mustn't have any truth about war on the American stage. Some day we shall have to go and get potted for some new and high-sounding bunkum.

"No doubt, six years after Belleau, the gold braids are only too glad to forget the plain and unadorned truth—that war makes beasts of men and not armed angels in the service of God and humanity.

"The marines, in the play, fight over a blowsy French cow-girl. Enlisted men are uppity to commissioned officers, and commissioned officers are dirty, profane and libidinous. The men who went away to save the world for democracy are shown living as pigs, and acting in a way to shame the more cultured shoats.

"The assault on 'Glory' has a most amusing side. Stallings, the author, has one of those war records one sees in the movies. It is impeccable and unassailable—he fought, and very nearly died, in the heart of the hog wash of war. He knows—and he tells—and so he is a man to be feared and suppressed.

"Every man who stood face to face with the hopeless horror knows that the gristly painting is true. Stallings has simply done what every soldier thot, and tried to forget in the face of home town incredulity. Perhaps it is too bad that he had to write this play . . . Perhaps it will be better to go back to the flour dust and clanking sabres of "Secret Service" and "Shenandoah." Then recruiting will never be hurt, and blaring bands will never be called murderers, and the red stripes in Old Glory will mean only valor—not blood. And those who come after us can read the war sonnets of Rupert Brooks, take the king's shilling, kiss their girls a long goodbye and go to some God-forsaken mouldy ditch to find out for themselves—"What Price, Glory?"

Refuses to Bind the League.

Small Shows LaFollette How the Double-Cross Is Used in Aid of Coolidge

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, Len Small is out in the open.

The governor of Illinois, endorsed for re-election by the LaFollette campaign, has brazenly thrown his support to Coolidge.

• • • • •

Governor Small jumps onto the Coolidge bandwagon. But whom do we find hanging onto Small's coat tails?

There is Frank Farrington, president of the United Mine Workers of Illinois; John H. Walker, president of the Illinois Federation of Labor; Victor Olander, secretary of the Illinois Federation of Labor; and John Fitzpatrick, president of the Chicago Federation of Labor, to mention only a few.

All dragged aboard the Coolidge bandwagon on the coattails of the Ku Klux Klan governor of Illinois.

• • • • •

Gov. Small worked an artful double-cross on the LaFollittes. He withheld his open endorsement of Coolidge until the time expired for filing of petitions for independent candidates.

Early in the summer, the LaFollette campaigners had intentions of filing their own candidate. It was known that the Wisconsin senator would very much like to see Raymond Robins as his candidate for governor. But Robins, the Roosevelt Bull Mooser in 1912, climbed abroad the Coolidge wagon long ago and got a front select seat.

• • • • •

Len Small has the support of the most reactionary labor officials in the state. So it was natural that the Bolshevik-hating senator should fall in line, and accept Governor Small, with the understanding that the governor should double-cross Coolidge, and throw whatever support he could to LaFollette. At any rate, the LaFollette campaigners plunged on Small, with the result that they have now landed in the Coolidge puddle.

• • • • •

It was in the local theater at Harrisburg, Illinois, where Governor Small was on the program with the regular republican candidates. The clock was fast ticking away the zero hour for filing petitions at Springfield. Speaker after speaker, delivered themselves of the usual campaign oratory, for the republican party of Wall Street, and its national standard bearer, "Strikebreaker" Coolidge. Then, with one eye on the clock, Small joined in the chorus with:

"I have been a lifelong republican and always expect to be. I approve of everything that has been said by those who spoke before me."

• • • • •

"That was all," comments the political reporter of the "open shop" Chicago Tribune. But evidently The Tribune feels that it was enough, as it greets the governor's return to the official republican fold with the headline, "Small at Last Gets into Step with Coolidge."

• • • • •

The workers and farmers of Illinois should now have an easy time deciding where to throw their support in the November elections. LaFollette tried to sell the workers and farmers to the Len Small campaign. Small, in his turn, is trying to deliver the workers and farmers to the Coolidge ticket.

In declaring war on the treachery of their own officials, who tried to straddle both the LaFollette and Coolidge campaigns, and by repudiating all capitalist political candidates, the workers and farmers of Illinois will make a good beginning in the fight for their own interests.

• • • • •

Against the LaFollettes, the Len Smalls and the "Cal" Coolidges, the political lackeys of the bosses, stand the Communist candidates of the Workers Party. Against Coolidge stands Foster; against Dawes stands Gitlow; and in Illinois, in the struggle for governorship, against Len Small stands the Communist candidate, William F. Dunne.

The Farringtons, Olanders, Walkers and Fitzpatricks cannot deliver the workers of Illinois to Coolidge. The workers will fight this treachery and join hands with the Communists, for the war against capitalism, for the triumph of labor.

CAPPELINI NOT AROUND WHEN COAL MINERS ARE FORCED TO FIGHT SCABS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ARCHBALD, Pa., Oct. 7.—Two thousand miners employed in the mine of the Hudson Coal company struck here yesterday because the company imported three hundred scabs in an effort to break the organization of the mine workers' union. Rinaldo Cappelini, head of the mine workers in the district around Scranton, with jurisdiction over Archbald, has not yet been heard from as to his attitude toward the strike.

MILITANTS HAVE FULL SLATE FOR STEEL WORKERS

Program for Campaign Is Already Drafted

The progressive elements in the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers are determined to give battle to the officialdom in the coming election and a full slate will appear on the ballot. All militants should take notice and work hard for the election of the following candidates:

H. M. Waddell from Granite City, Ill., against M. Tighe for president. A. M. Jennings, also from Granite City, against D. J. Davis for secretary-treasurer. James Strong from Canonsburg, Pa., for assistant secretary, against L. Leonard, the present incumbant.

P. J. Morgan for managing editor against the present editor, Ben I. Davis. For vice-president of boiling and finishing division, William Grey against Herbert F. Reese. For vice-president, sheet and tin division, Frank Marshall against Walter Larkin.

For resident trustee, Edward D. King against Wesley Riley. For international trustee, Bert Caldwell against Thomas Godfrey and John A. Price against R. H. Larner.

The Amalgamated Association of Iron Steel and Tin Workers, which is practically the only organization functioning in the steel industry, has like all other unions been cursed with a reactionary leadership headed by president Tighe and secretary D. Davis.

The policy of the present leaders of the A. A. I. S. T. W. is one of class collaboration of the rankest kind, which has resulted in the organization becoming stagnant and infested even with race antagonism. Locals in some places have even become units for the K. K. K.s. The official journal looks more like a buyer's guide than a labor journal. Under the present leadership the union has developed into a mere job trust for a selected few and nothing has been done to organize the great mass of unorganized and unskilled steel workers, who in 1919 under the leadership of William Z. Foster put up a great battle against their masters, but were greatly handicapped by the lukewarm attitude of such leaders as Tighe and the rest of the A. F. of L. cult that had jurisdiction in the strike.

All militant and progressive members of the union should carry on a real campaign in the various localities for the election of the above-named brothers and the organization will be able to take its place among the progressive unions in this country. We shall publish the program upon which these candidates are running in a later issue but in the meantime remember the slate.

To Organize Steel Workers.

CLEVELAND, Oct. 7.—Wage reductions in the textile industry foreshadow cuts in the steel industry's payrolls also, according to John Olchon, steel workers' organizer. These two industries take the lead in the wars against the workers' pocketbooks, Olchon says, because they are largely unorganized. Quiet work is being followed in the Cleveland district to unionize the steel mills. Olchon, who knows the southeastern European languages, is in charge.

Printers' Apprentices in Sydney.

SYDNEY, New South Wales, Oct. 7.—Conditions of apprenticeship in the printing industry have been determined by the Board of Trade. The general period of apprenticeship is fixed at from four to six years, with the same hours of employment as those of journeymen.

MACDONALD IS WAVERING AS FIGHT NEARS

Indications Are That He Won't Resign Today

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Oct. 7.—The MacDonald labor government is beginning to show signs of wavering in meeting the challenge of the liberals and tories in parliament.

It is said that there is an increasing likelihood that MacDonald will not resign and precipitate a general election despite the fact that he is bound to meet defeat on the motions of censure that will be made against his government by the combined employers' parties.

Amongst the business interests there is a growing opposition to precipitating an election contest at this time, because of the bad effect it might have on industry. This view is strengthened on account of the doubt in many minds as to the results that the Dawes plan will bring.

Election Before Christmas.

A general election before Christmas is now regarded as a certainty. It is believed that the laborite cabinet will resign after the tory motion of censure is brought up in Commons tomorrow. MacDonald probably will ask the king to dissolve Commons and summon a national election.

When the premier appeared on the floor of the labor party conference, he outlined the "successes" of the labor government, adding:

He Sure Didn't.

"We did not hope to create a new world out of our imagination. But we do believe that the old world is beginning to show a new response to a newly created spirit. I think we have succeeded in that."

MacDonald declared that British unemployment had been lessened and that the budget is now more favorable to the workingman. The next budget he said would be even more favorable.

He Likes Dawes' Plan.

He praised the Dawes' reparations plan, saying it gave the necessary machinery to "bring us back to wisdom."

The premier was without illusion and warned that there are still troubled waters ahead.

Then He Attacks Communism.

After attacking Communism, he turned to the liberals and said that former premier H. H. Asquith's speech indicated that "the liberals expected the laborites to eat out of their hand."

The liberals' inquiry motion, the premier charged, "was conceived in a spirit of medieval crookedness and torture." He continued:

"But we shall surrender nothing. If there is an election responsibility for it will not be upon us. It will have been caused by abuse of parliamentary votes. Every labor supporter will resent this chicanery.

Expects Greater Victories.

"It will make our victories at the polls more numerous. When it is time for the government to dissolve the thousands gathered here will return to their posts, no to defend, but to attack our enemies."

The conference unanimously adopted a resolution endorsing the premier's decision to oppose the tory motion of censure and the liberal motion for an inquiry into the withdrawal of prosecution against the Communist editor.

World Forces Are Clashing in China

tionary. The province of Kwantung is of enormous importance as a revolutionary rallying ground, not only for China but also for the islands and the districts on the Pacific coast; this was shown by the first conference of the transport workers of the Pacific Ocean, which took place in June of this year. The imperialists, and in the first place the English imperialists, who have the greatest interest in this portion of China and possess the most efficient colonial apparatus, could not overlook these facts.

Soviet Recognition a Big Factor.

On the other hand, the recognition of the Soviet Union by the Chinese central government in Peking, which took place in spite of the efforts of the imperialists, has already begun to have its effect thruout China in the direction of a growth in the anti-imperialist movement. The recent organized League for the Struggle against Imperialism has given rise to a stormy outburst of sympathy for the national liberation movement in South China, and an equally stormy explosion of hate against the enslaving treaties of the imperialists which debase the Chinese people and exploit [illegible] in a barbarous manner. The English government has openly decided to check the process of the liberation movement in China by means of arms.

The Proceedings in Central and North China.

Simultaneously with the events in South China, there is taking place an even fiercer struggle in Central China, and according to the latest telegraphic communications there has been drawn into this struggle all the chief forces of Southern, Central and Northern China. The immediate pretext for the struggle between the military governor of the province of Kiang-Su, Marshall Tschen-Sun-Tuan and the Governor-General of the province of Tse-Kiang, Lu-Yun-Sjan, is the dispute over the administration of Shanghai, the most important trading center of China, which has a population of 1½ millions and is an important strategical point on the Pacific Ocean.

Imperialists Foment Civil War.

Shanghai belongs to the province of Kiang-Su. When, however, the former military governor of this province was appointed as governor to the neighboring province of Tse-Kiang he retained in his hands the administration of Shanghai and nominated one of his own party as chief of police of this city. The dispute of the governors of these two provinces over the administration of Shanghai has already lasted a long time; it has, however, not yet come to an armed conflict. There is no doubt that the dividing up of China into economic spheres of influence of the imperialists promotes the struggle of the Chinese military governors. The civil war in China is caused not only by the intervention of the imperialists, but also thru the inner economic process. Thus, for example, the basis of Sun-Yat-Sen in South China is being continually consolidated, as is the basis of the militarist Tschan-Dso-Lin in the three northern wheat growing provinces, which explains his great independence as a military factor in the Chinese civil war.

The National Groups.

Viewed from the standpoint of the national factors in China, the struggle between the military governors of the provinces of Kiang-Su and Tse-Klang can be regarded as a struggle between the militarist war party "Tschili," on the one side, and the "Fyntjan" group, along with the followers of the former Anfu-Club, on the other. At the head of the first clique stand Wu-Fei-Pu; at the head of the second there stands marshall Tschan-Dso-Lin and one of the oldest politicians of China, the reactionary Duan Tsi-Dschuj. These two cliques have their followers among the provincial governors of Central and South China. In the struggle which is now proceeding, the provinces of Kiang-Su, Anchwei and Fukian will openly support the Tschili party, whilst Tschan-Dso-Lin has already conducted negotiations with representatives of Sun-Yat-Sen. The reason why Sun-Yat-Sen can be drawn into this struggle lies in the fact that he is immediately threatened by the Tschili clique, while the sphere of influence of the Fyntjan group does not border geographically on the province of Kwantung. Neither Sun-Yat-Sen nor Tschan-Dso-Lin conceal the fact that in the event of a victory over the Tschili Party they will have to enter into struggle against each other.

"Divide and Conquer."

The reason of this is to be found in the fact that after the revolution of 1911, when the administration of China was dismembered by the imperialists, there set in the so-called Dudsjun system, that is, the rule of the military general governors. Since then China has ceased to exist as a uniform state and has been split up in a number of separate principalities. The movement, at the head of which stands Sun-Yat-Sen and which aims at abolishing this Dudsjun system, will at the same time promote the liberation of the working masses of China.

At the present time, when the revolutionary students and the workers' organizations form the center of the anti-imperialist movement, MacDonald, Herriot, Coolidge and the Japanese government are greatly interested in promoting inner reaction. This is why, in spite of the diverging economic interests of the imperialists in China, they are in entire agreement regarding the question of intervention, which is being openly prepared on the basis of a treaty in which the inspiror and initiator of the imperialist offensive against China at the present time is English imperialism.

FARRINGTON OUSTS McDONALD FROM LOCAL No. 448; UNION IS DEMANDING DESPOT'S RECALL

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SPRINGFIELD, Oct. 7.—Duncan McDonald, a life long member of the United Mine Workers of America, for many years secretary of the Illinois miners, and president of the Illinois State Federation of Labor, was dropped from membership by his local union, 448, last night, under protest, to save their charter from being revoked. The local is now circularizing the district for a special district convention for the purpose of removing Frank Farrington from the presidency of the district.

The technical reason for the expulsion of McDonald, is that he did not pay his Herrin assessment on time. This is denied by the local secretary who says that it was he and not McDonald to blame. That McDonald paid the assessment.

For years Frank Farrington and John L. Lewis have been trying to expel McDonald, who has been fighting both their corrupt machines, pointing out to the miners that no progress could be made so long as Lewis and Farrington controlled the administration. McDonald incurred the undying enmity of Farrington, when McDonald refused to line up with Farrington in his fake fight against Lewis, telling the miners that Farrington and Lewis were of the same caliber and that when it came to a pinch they would make up their differences, join forces and fight the progressives.

Farrington and Lewis Desperate.

The expulsion of McDonald shows how desperately Lewis and Farrington are fighting to keep control of the National and District 12 administrations. Lewis was forced to adjourn the Indianapolis covention before the business of the convention was completed, with hundreds of delegates on hand, their feet demanding the floor. While Farrington was thoroly defeated in the district convention, in spite of the fact that Lewis, Green, Murray, Walker, Olander and other reactionary labor leaders adressed the convention telling them to beware of the reds and what a wonderful leader Farrington was, the convention stripped Farrington of his appointive power and demanded a new trial for Alex Howat, thru a special convention.

A Deliberate Plan.

The expulsion of McDonald, like the expulsion of Alex Howat and his colleagues, Tom Meyerscough, the removal of Jim MacLachan as secretary and Dan Livingston as president, and the revoking of the charter of district 26 (Nova Scotia) is to try and terrorize the miners into retaining these fakers in office.

Frank Farrington feels the reins of power slipping from his grasp. The Springfield sub-district officials and militants have carried on a relentless war against Farrington's class collaboration scheme, and have based their policy and tactics upon the class struggle.

The expulsion of McDonald was also to include the removal from office of John J. Watts, the fighting secretary of Springfield sub-district. It was a slick trick and the local union, No. 448, showed real intelligence in not falling into the trap set by Farrington and Lewis. If they, thru their loyalty to McDonald had refused to drop McDonald from membership, the local's charter would have been revoked and automatically Watts would have been removed from office. McDonald however, would not allow this, pointing out the necessity of fighting from within the organization. The local is determined to carry on a real fight for McDonald's reinstatement and for the removal of Farrington as president of the district.

National Ticket.

The progressive miners have a complete progressive slate in the National and the District election which takes place on the second Tuesday of December. The National slate is:

George Voyzey, Verona, Ill., International president.

Arley Staples, Chritopher, Il., International vice-president.

Joe Nearing, Glace Bay, Nova Scotia, secretary-treasurer.

District 12 Progressive Slate.

J. W. Hindmarsh, Riverton, president.

E. B. Hewlett, Orient, vice-president.

Louis J. Conturiux, Orient, secretary-treasurer.

J. C. Mason, W. Frankfort, International Board Member.

These are only a few of the elective offices and candidates, but this is the real reason for the intensifying of the reign of terror of which the expulsion of McDonald is only a forerunner. The answer of the militants to this new attack is a more determined effort to remove these capitalist lackeys from office by electing militant candidates on the progressive ticket.

JAPANESE ROCKEFELLER PLANS TO SPEND $750,000 ON 88TH BIRTHDAY

(Special to The Daily Worker)

TOKYO, Oct. 7.—A plan to assassinate Baron Shidehara, foreign minister, General Ugaki, war minister, and other high officials was reported today to have been revealed thru the police investigation of an attack by three armed members of the Taiso (Red Blood) Society on Shidehara's secretary.

The three members entered the foreign secretary's office and belabored the secretary. They said they were protesting against Shidehara's policy of neutrality in China.

The Taikosha society which dispersed the Imperial Hotel dancers last summer, today sent a warning to Baron Okura, Japan's Rockefeller, against his reported plans of spending a million and a half yen ($750,000) in a colossal celebraton of this eighty-eighth birthday, Oct. 20. The society threatened to interfere if he went forward with his plans.

Plan to Launch Big Fight to Prevent Loss of Rights to Negroes

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 7.—Ku Klux Klan anti-Negro elements in the south, emboldened by the republican party's growing indifference to the Negroes as a political weapon in the south, are closing in on Walter Cohen, Negro controller of customs of New Orleans, having formally filed suit in the federal district court claiming Cohen is not a citizen.

Mr. Cohen has turned the matter over to United States attorney Burns, who declares he will file answer to the suit within ten days. Cohen declares he does not take the suit seriously. The hard-boiled "lily-white" followers of the Morgan lawyer, John Davis, democratic candidate for president, who so loudly applauded Davis when he spoke for allowing the constitution to remain as it is, are now attempting to nullify the fourteenth amendment, claiming that a native of Africa cannot be a citizen of the United States.

Davis declared that any attempt to change the constitution was dangerous and a blow aimed at the sacred institutions of our country. He declared the constitution very satisfactory to him as it stands, but his "lily white" southern followers are now singing a different tune as it suits their Negro-hating convenience.

Catch the Illinois Central Railroad as Big Tax Dodger

The Illinois Central must pay the state of Illinois hundreds of thousands of dollars in taxes upon which Judge Samuel C. Stough of the circuit court of Grundy county, Illinois, has ruled the railroad company dodged payment. The judge also ruled that other millions of dollars are accredited in the account books of the Illinois Central railroad to lines of the company south of the Ohio river and east and west of the Mississippi instead of the charter lines of the company.

This method of accounting made a huge difference in the revenues due the state, for under the law the charter lines of the company were required to pay an extra assessment of seven per cent. This money must now be collected, acording to the judge's ruling.

The Hon. Len Small is a director, ex-officio of the Illinois Central railroad. Will the state ever collect the money?

Try to Hide Heavy Spanish Losses in War with the Moors

(Special to the Daily Worker.)

LONDON, Oct. 7.—Spanish losses in the war to keep the Moors a subject people have been so heavy that the wounded are sent to provincial towns to prevent the people in the Spanish capital from learning of the defeats inflicted on their army, according to the latest reports received here.

The Spanish troops have now evacuated Adru and Sunna, formerly two of their best strongholds. It is said that dictator de Rivera's troops have suffered losses of more than 10,000 since the beginning of July.

Dever Admits That Wealth Rules

board of education also in the class you speak of?" Dever was asked. "Do they also cater to wealth?" the mayor was asked by the DAILY WORKER.

Margaret Haley Hits Back.

"I don't know," he replied. "Miss Haley says these men are no good, but she asked me to put them in office. She is asking me to take them off." Miss Haley later denied this statement to the DAILY WORKER, declaring she has made no recommendations for the board of education or similar office except many years ago when she recommended Jane Adams for public office.

Mayor Dever declared he would be glad to confer with Miss Haley with regard to appointments of the four men who have served their term on the board of education, but so far, he has made no definite move of co-operation with the teachers' organizations, altho they have made several overtures to him, all of which he has ignored.

Rich Threaten Mayor.

Miss Haley gave the DAILY WORKER good evidence as to why the mayor is doing nothing to aid the teachers in their fight to preserve the teachers' councils and repel the institution of the chamber of commerce of the platoon schools and the intelligence tests.

Miss Haley declared that she had been informed that the mayor had been threatened that if he continued to allow wealthy tax dodgers to be held up to ridicule, the city council would be organized against him and his traction program would be defeated by that body.

What About Tax Dodgers?

Miss Haley pointed out that "The chairman of the finance committee of the board of education has inquired of certain members of the city council which alternative they would recommend in order to reduce the budget of the board of education; an increase of four or five or more pupils per teacher, thereby eliminating a large number of teachers, or by cutting the salaries of the teachers and leaving the number of the teachers as it is."

In a letter to the corporation counsel, Mr. Busch, Miss Haley said in part: "When you told me on the 17th of last December, that Litzinger and Barrett (members of the board of review) had threatened the mayor, they would organize the city council against him and defeat his traction program if he, the mayor, continued to allow wealthy tax dodgers to be held up to ridicule and opprobrium in this community, I did not believe you then that it was Barrett and Litzinger that had threatened the mayor. I did believe you last December when you prefaced that statement about Litzinger and Barrett by this one, 'I am going to say something now and if I ever hear it repeated I will deny that I said it.'

C. of C. to Reduce Salaries.

"There are other things which you were reported as having said last Saturday which you failed to include in your letter to me, notably, that 'the yellowest message that was ever sent by a mayor to the city council was that message of Mayor Dever of July 2, 1923,' quotations of which appear in the statement to the public which was adopted by the teachers at the Auditorium meeting last Friday. The mayor's message contained a startling array of facts and figures showing the alarming extent of tax dodging in Chicago and stated that it is the duty of the city council to see to it that such an assessment as is contemplated by law is made by taxing authorities of this county and state.

"The teachers wonder if you realized the situation as you sat last Wednesday at the speakers' table at the Association of Commerce with five members of the board of education and heard the spokesman for the board tell about his plans for getting more efficient work out of those teachers whose salaries are to be cut or whose already too large memberships are to be increased."

Open Shop Drive.

Latest developments show that superintendent of schools William McAndrew is endeavoring to foist on the teachers a substitute "union of teachers," which he would absolutely control, and which would smash the federation of teachers. Altho the city administration is trying to hold off the "open shop drive on the teachers" until after election day, it is thot a drive to reduce salaries will soon be in full swing.

Miss Haley told the DAILY WORKER that altho there are many pet projects which Mayor Dever and other city officials are pushing while they are out of town for a ride on the side track the teachers' fight against the tax dodgers, she holds the welfare of the school children and the teachers as paramount in importance over any selfish project such as the traction project of the mayor.

It was stated at the offices of the Teachers' Federation that Mayor Dever is doing absolutely nothing to help the teachers in their fight.

1,500 TEACHERS MUST GO, SAYS 'BIG BIZ' RULE

New Drive by the Tax Dodgers on Schools

Fifteen hundred trained teachers in the public schools of Chicago are in danger of losing their jobs within the next few months.

These teachers may lose their jobs because the Board of Education has been unable or unwilling to prevent the theft of enormous sums by board employees; because a dozen or so rich corporations, notably Sears, Roebuck and company, avoid the taxes imposed on them by law; because half a dozen other huge firms refuse incorporation in order to avoid paying something towards the maintenance of the public schools; because a few important business men have the "corner" on the purchase of supplies, which are supposed to be obtained after competitive bidding; and because the land which the city has given over for the use of the schools has been leased for a song to various concerns, chief among these the Chicago Daily News and the Chicago Tribune.

Increase Size of Classes.

No indication has been made that there will be any attempts to remedy these conditions. What is suggested in a letter sent from H. H. Brackett, auditor of the Board of Education, to Julius F. Smietenka, chairman of the finance committee, is that the number of children in the class rooms be increased—teachers will tell you that their rooms are already over crowded to a point that makes teaching almost an impossibility—and that 1500 of the teachers be dropped from the payroll.

Other measures, too, are already under consideration by the superintendent and members of the board. The penny lunch room, according to Julius F. Smietenka, ought not to be continued.

"Almost every parent is in a position today to take care of his child," says Smietenka.

It is also possible that the Cook county school for boys may be dropped altogether.

The report is being considered quietly and under cover. Members of the board were unfortunately "out of town" all day yesterday. It is probable that they will remain "out of town" until the time comes to slide thru at a board meeting the new cut in the teaching staff.

What Job Loss Means.

How loss of employment affects teachers can hardly be understood unless it is remembered that years of preparation are needed to gain admittance to the system, and that the requirements differ from state to state, making it almost impossible for a teacher who has been "fired" from the system in one state to get employment in another state.

That the small militant group which has been putting up an open fight against the slave-driving tactics of William McAndrew, superintendent of schools, and against the big business board which is behind him, will be the first to feel the effects of the new "economy" is unquestioned. The revision of the budget offers an opportunity to get rid of the last remnants of self-respect and independence left to the teachers of Chicago.

Federation Officials Silent.

Officials of the Chicago Teachers' Federation met all questions as to the position which they intend to take on the employment slash in their usual non-committal manner. It is problematical whether the officialdom of the union will take any action whatsoever, in spite of the fact that the rank and file of the teachers are eager to fight the school board.

MORE SOLDIERS CALLED OUT IN CUBAN RISING

Predict Revolution on Nation-Wide Scale

(Special to The Daily Worker)

HAVANA, Cuba, Oct. 7.—The Cuban pre-election troubles are assuming extraordinary proportions. Today President Zayas sent another train load of soldiers to help those despatched a few days ago to crush the outbreak of last Sunday.

To date, eleven have been killed and fifty-eight have been wounded.

Admits Situation Serious

President Zayas for the first time admits that the situation is "serious." He is preparing to take energetic measures to prevent the outbreak from developing into a revolution on a national scale.

Towards this end he has ordered that no political speeches be delivered after Oct. 20th.

Interfered with Elections

The repeated attempts of President Zayas to interfere with the election is the immediate cause of the disturbances. The Cuban president has been seeking to have a puppet as his successor.

Zayas has been a willing tool in the hands of the American capitalists, especially the railways and sugar interests.

Got $2,000 Diamond Ring.

HOLLAND, Mich., Oct. 7.—Police here today were searching for two men who held up Miss Hazel Donlky, 25, last night, pulled her from a horse she was riding, robbed her of a $2,000 diamond ring and a wrist watch and after binding her, rolled her down an embankment.

France Continues to Decline.

TOURS, France, Oct. 7.— Anatole France, famous essayist and novelist, who is critically ill, declined still further today. The pulse was 96; temperature 100. The writer is 81 years of age.

Another Omen of War.

LAKEHURST, N. J., Oct. 7.—The big air cruiser, Shenandoah, cast off from her mooring mast at the naval air station and nosed south and west on the start of the longest air voyage she has ever made at 10 o'clock today.

TETUAN, Morocco, Oct 7.—Spanish troops are expected to evacuate Tetuan and Sheshuan, recognizing the impossibility of keeping the Tetuan-Sheshuan road open against the Riffs.

MEMORABLE MEETING IS ADDRESSED BY FOSTER AT PORTLAND, OREGON

By JOSEPH MANLEY.
(Campaign Manager, Workers Party.)

William Z. Foster, presidential candidate of the Workers Party, held a memorable meeting at Portland, Oregon.

Portland marked the half-way point in the seventeen thousand miles of his present campaign itinerary.

Returns to Familiar Scenes.

Foster felt very much at home in Portland. He sailed out of there as a sailor on a square-rigged ship in 1901. After two years before the mast and sailing around the globe, he returned to Portland. He lived in Albina for a while, working in the railroad yards; then he took up an Oregon homestead, near Mosier and proved up on it.

Single handed he cleared twenty acres of Oregon timber and raised twelve hundred dollars worth of potatoes on the clearing. That was shortly before the 1907 panic. Foster was then a member of the socialist party and took an active part in what was to be the first left wing fight, as a leading left winger. Foster still has three sisters living in Portland, and having lived there himself for almost twelve years, he now returned to his old "stamping ground" as the Communist candidate for president.

Meeting is Enthusiastic.

The Foster meeting held in Portland on Sunday night, Sept 28, was the most successful and most enthusiastic meeting yet held on Foster's Pacific Coast trip. The Oddfellow's Hall was filled to capacity by an audience that had paid twenty-five cents admission each. District Organizer Norman H. Tallentire presided at the meeting. A collection of almost two hundred dollars was taken and almost fifty dollars worth of literature was sold.

For a solid two hours Foster analyzed and pilloried the capitalist institutions and the political organizations of the capitalist class, the leaders of the political groups in the present campaign. He paid special attention to Robert M. LaFollette. From beginning to end of Foster's speech the audience was riveted with attention. Time after time as he slashed into Coolidge and Davis the audience cheered loudly. His expose of LaFollette, as the saviour of the "independent businessmen" and the capitalist system was roundly applauded.

Hits Social Cancer.

Foster said, in conclusion: "Private ownership of industry is the social cancer which is forcing workers into lives of poverty and misery.

"Unemployment is the sign of the breakdown of the capitalist system. There is no cure for unemployment, but the abolition of the wages system. This can only come about thru the organization of Soviets and the dictatorship of the proletariat. Communism is the hope of the world's workers."

REACTION IN CANADIAN LABOR MOVEMENT WHOOPS IT UP FOR GOVERNMENT CONTROL OF LIQUOR

(By The Federated Press)

TORONTO, Oct. 7.—The indorsement by the Canadian Trades & Labor Congress of government control and sale of liquor, as asked by the Toronto brewery workers' union, is stirring the country pro and con. It assumes special importance at the present time as there is to be a referendum as between prohibition and government control in Ontario Oct. 23.

The labor congress opposition to the resolution was limited to less than a dozen and the leaders came from Nova Scotia. Delegate McLeod of that province put the matter very strongly when he declared that "the sale of liquor simply means a greater control by the capitalist of the working class." In this he was echoing a view repeatedly voiced by officers of the United Mine Workers in Cape Breton.

"I regard this resolution as reactionary in every sense," said McLeod. "As with the questions of autonomy for the Canadian trade unions and affiliations, the congress is living up to a standard of reaction. Liquor," he added, "has created more sorrow and hardship in the homes of workingmen than any other one cause."

The delegates from Quebec, which has government control, did not vote as they did not wish to be criticized as trying to influence Ontario, a dry province at this time. They spoke, however, and protested vigorously that there was less immorality in their own province than in Ontario.

Win Sympathetic Case.

SYDNEY, New South Wales.—The conspiracy case against seven union officials of the Transport Workers' group of the Labor Council of New South Wales, collapsed suddenly. They were arrested in connection with the holding up of the steamer Port Lyttelton in Sydney harbor. They refused to allow members of their unions to work on the vessel unless she was made seaworthy, after striking a rock. The vessel was held up at Sydney for six months because the unionists refused to carry out the repairs till certain members of the crew were released from jail.

W. P. DEBATES WITH S. L. P. IN KANSAS CITY

S. L. P. Speech Turned Into Debate

By GEORGE McLAUGHLIN
(Special to the DAILY WORKER)

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 7.—Verne L. Reynolds, candidate for vice president on the socialist labor party ticket was slated to speak at the Bookbinders' Hall in Kansas City. When he arrived, he found about thirteen people in the hall. He was given a dodger announcing the Workers Party Gitlow meeting which is to take place at the Musicians' Hall, 1017 Washington St., Tuesday, Oct. 14, 8 p. m. He straightway challenged the Workers Party to a debate. The challenge was accepted by Comrade J. Mihelic.

Reynolds thereupon said he wished to give his regular talk first and after he finished the time would be split up for the debate, each speaker speaking once. The subject of the debate was to be resolved: That the program of the socialist labor party is correct and that of the Workers Party is wrong. Altho Reynolds said he would cut his regular talk short so as to give more time for the debate, he spoke exactly one hour and forty-five minutes. About one hour of it was taken up with the cheapest kind of slander on Wm. Z. Foster and the Workers Party.

Mihelic Replies in 30 Minutes.

Reynolds seemed to be trying to crawl out of the debate and when he finished his regular talk he said it is getting late and suggested that Comrade Mihelic be given 30 minutes and said he would not take more than 15 minutes to reply. Altho Reynolds originally was supposed to speak first, Comrade Mihelic accepted this latter arrangement and proceeded to pepper the socialist labor program full of holes, leaving personalities entirely out of it.

Speaking of the I. W. W. Reynolds in his regular speech had said it was wrong because there was a capitalist man-made law in the way that would first have to be changed by the ballot box. Previous to that he had accused the Workers Party and socialist party of being alike in trying to use the capitalist machinery of government. Comrade Mechlic pointed out this contradiction as well as many others.

Comrade Mihelic spoke only 25 minutes but when he had finished altho Reynolds said at the start of the debate he only required 15 minutes he proceeded to take 35. The first 15 of it was taken up with the rankest kind of meaningless slander on Foster and the last ten was a general slander on the Workers Party. The rest consisted of a bunch of meaningless phrases. Because Reynolds had taken 35 minutes Comrade Mihelic requested five minutes in which to reply.

What Does S. L. P. Do?

He defended Foster and the Workers Party splendidly and pointed out that when the big steel strike was on, the socialist labor party stayed in the background instead of making good among the masses.

Reynolds had wasted a lot of time during his regular speech and also in the debate splitting hairs and drawing pretty pictures of just how the industrial socialism was to be organized and how it would work. He also said the Workers Party could not explain this point.

"Why don't you explain it yourself," challenged Comrade Mihelic and after firing a broadside at Reynolds's silly argument Mihelic pointed out that in the recent railroad strike a Kansas City socialist labor party man scabbed on his fellow workers using the same argument as Reynolds. "We have got to break up the American Federation of Labor."

"This is the type of rats who are going around the the country slandering Foster and the Workers Party and it's a strange thing indeed that we find Sam Gompers, John L. Lewis, the socialist party, LaFollette, the capitalist press and the socialist labor party issuing the same arguments against the Workers Party," concluded Comrade Mihelic.

Still Reynolds was not satisfied and took 15 minutes more rehashing the same line of bunk as before. In the debate Reynolds took in all 50 minutes as against 30 taken by Comrade Mihelic and he made a very sorry showing thruout even tho he is one of the standard bearers of his party.

On leaving the hall I bot a copy of the socialist party weekly paper and I find that altho it is only a weekly, two-thirds of it is filled up with the same kind of cheap slander used by Reynolds and this is how the socialist labor party proposes to educate the working class.

Stir the Shops!

The very best place to carry on a working class campaign is in the shops and factories where the workers gather to earn their living. It is there that minds are open to the measures, parties and candidates that stand for concrete solutions of the problems of bread and butter facing the working class. It is in the shops that the workers will see most clearly, for example, the difference between Foster, the union organizer and fighter for the workers, and LaFollette, the lawyer and fighter for the middle class. RHODE ISLAND LABOR FIGHTS BOSSES' UNION

Amoskeag 'Union' Took Ten Per Cent Cut

By ART SHIELDS
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent.)

CROMPTON, R. I., Oct. 7.—Polish workers, who predominate in the big Crompton company velvet and corduroy mills here have voted down their employer's proposal for a company union.

The company union is politely called a plan for industrial democracy by Frank Richmond, the aged owner, and he announces that he will continue the agitation until he converts the workers to the idea.

Union Fights the Plan.

A stiff fight is being made against the company union idea by the Amalgamated Textile Workers' Union, which has an active local in the Pawtuxet Valley, and which recently won a strike for higher wages in the Crompton dye house.

The company union Pawtuxet Valley employers are urging is modelled after the one that has just accepted a ten per cent cut in wages in the Amoskeag works at Manchester, N. H.

It gives the employers final decision on all questions. Under the proposed plan the Crompton workers would elect only one of three bodies, the House of Representatives. A settlement of grievances effected in the House is reviewed by a Senate, which has a majority of overseers, as foremen are called here, and a minority of operatives. Final decision rests with the Cabinet, consisting of the owner and superintendent.

Workers in Fighting Mood.

Unless the industrial democracy plan is put thru a wage cut in this company's plants does not seem likely in the near future. The workers are in a mood to fight back as they did in the 9-month strike of 1923 when a wage cut was defeated. And the Crompton company is relatively busy as compared to neighboring mills of the B. B. & R. Knight company, which have done nothing for months. The Crompton mills are on two reduced shifts for the weavers, spinners and carders and a 54-hour week for the dyers.

The dyers' conditions illustrate the hard lot of the New England textile worker who is supposed to be enjoying the benefits of a republican tariff and other G. O. P. legislation. The 54-hour week is part of their republican comforting. A 48-hour week law was invalidated when a republican secretary of state failed to sign it.

And the dye house workers' full dress fall, such as he can fill on an average wage of $23 a week, he has to empty in the intervals of work. He gets no time off for lunch in the Crompton mill. The dyeing machinery must be kept going, so the worker has to grab his food as he can, without taking time to rest or to clean off the poisonous chemicals in which he toils.

Develops Bad Cough.

A typical dye house worker is pale and frequently afflicted with a bad cough. He breathes the confined atmosphere, saturated with unhealthy fumes, and his clogged feet slosh about in poisonous liquid. Usually the dye house worker is too tired and depressed at the day's end to consider organization. In the Crompton plants, however, they are the best organized group of workers.

None of the cotton mill work is healthy. In the weaving, carding and spinning departments ventilation is kept at a minimum while the air is kept warm and moist. The humidifiers use the Pasteurz Process of sterilized by the dye houses of mills further up the valley. Pulmonary diseases are common.

Wages Very Low.

When the worker gets home unhealthy conditions continue. One, two and six family tenements are rented to the workers unfurnished. Few have modern sanitary devices. The only repairs I heard of as made by the company were in the homes of Jacob and Pawl Pankiewicez, shot up by state guardsmen in the 1922 strike. Seven shots went thru the doors. Since the strike the company put in new doors—to hide evidence of its crimes, workers say. But there are bullet marks which remain. These are scars on the Pankiewicez brothers themselves. Jacob, a father of seven, shot in thigh and ankle, and Pawl, shot in the abdomen.

The average wage for all departments, totaling 1,200 workers, is slightly less than $20 weekly.

Rubber and Tobacco Wages for Women.

TORONTO.—The Ontario minimum wage board has fixed minimum wages of women workers in the rubber and tobacco trades in Toronto at $10 per week the first six months and $11 for the next six months. After a year's experience the minimum is $12.50 per week. In the same city the minimum for girls is $8 per week for the first six months, then $9 for six months and after that $10. The rates for smaller cities and towns are lower, the girls ranging from $6 to $9 in all places below 5,000 population; while for the same class of place the minimum for experienced workers is $10 per week.

Iowa Klan is Split.

MARION, Ia., Oct. 7.— Difficulties which are said to have resulted in the revoking of the charter of the Ku Klux Klan in this county and the removal of all officers will be discussed here tonight at a meeting of more than 3,000 members of the independent Klan, formed following the split with the parent organization. The dissention is said to have resulted from efforts of the Iowa domain of the Klan to swing members of that organization behind W. J. Burbank, Klan gubernatorial candidate.

Child is Electrocuted.

ROCK ISLAND, Ill., Oct. 7.—Warren, 16 months old son of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold A. Braach, was dead here today as a result of placing his tongue in a live electric light socket which had been disconnected from a washing machine.

1,500,000 WORKERS WHO EARNED MEAGER LIVING ONE YEAR AGO NOW COMPLETELY OUT OF JOBS

By LELAND OLDS.
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

Approximately 1,500,000 workers are out of a job who were earning a meager living in the factories in August, 1923. This is the true story of the August employment report of the United States department of labor which enabled President Coolidge to broadcast his republican optimism before the full figures were given to the public. The report shows employment 15 per cent below the level of a year ago and total wages down more than 17 per cent. The slight gain as compared with July was below normal seasonal expectation.

A gain in working time furnishes the only real ground for hope. This is represented by an increase of 3 per cent in the per cent of capacity operation and of 1 per cent in working time. But this means nothing more than the end of inventory vacation periods which generally occur in July.

The significant facts are that 4 per cent of the reporting establishments were altogether idle and that the remainder were operating only 88 per cent of full time and 77 per cent of full capacity. That means that the factories of the country in August were turning out less than 68 per cent of their normal full-time output.

The real situation is reflected in the table which shows for the major industrial divisions the pro cent decrease in employment from a year ago and the per cent of full-time capacity operated during the month of August.

INDUSTRY	Employment decrease	Pct. of Operation
Food and kindred products..	7	77
Textiles and their products	17	82
Iron and steel and products	22	58
Lumber and its products....	8	76
Leather and its products..	13	64
Paper and printing	—	81
Chemicals, allied products	15	63
Stone, clay, glass products	7	77
Metal products, not iron....	13	58
Tobacco products	1	72
Vehicles for land transport	17	72
Miscellaneous	17	63

Such figures reflect a depression in manufacturing industry which the powers that rule big business seem unable to talk themselves out of. The important fact to be read in the table is that the manufacuring power of the country has been expanded far beyond the ability of the people to consume its product. Reports indicate that the distribution of commodities is going on at a comparatively high rate. In other words with producers in industry and on the farms forced to accept a low return for their labor their dustry working at about three-quarters of capacity.

Financiers are trying to tell the country that all will be well when the international situation is straightened out so that the extra quarter of the country's product can go abroad to furnish capital for other peoples. But any improvement from this source would be of very short duration. Economists even of the conservative school are beginning to realize that the only permanent solution is to increase the purchasing power of wage earners and farmers sufficiently to enable them to buy all that they can produce working full time. Higher wages which will enable the workers to enjoy the fruits of the increased productivity which comes from invention represent the only way by which a chronic state of depression can be avoided.

FRAME-UP ON NORWAY REDS IN U. S. STYLE

All Officials Indicted in Drive on Communists

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CHRISTIANIA, Norway, Oct. 7.—Efforts to swing the Norwegian trade unions solidly for the Amsterdam international have failed.

Following a campaign of frame-up and terror without precedent in Norway, and which seems to have been patterned after similar campaigns against the reds in America the reactionaries failed to ge the support of the unions in the key industries.

The failure of the enemies of the Communist elements in the unions to swing the bulk of the key unions for Amsterdam is surprising, due to the fact that the Communist party of Norway, reorganized a short time ago in accordance with instructions of the Communist International, is no longer a party of unions but of the flexible character prescribed by the Communist International, composed of known revolutionists.

The officials of the Communist Party have all been indicted previous to a general election.

This was a deliberate move on the part of the government to hamper the party in the election campaign and since their indictment obvious attempts to prejudice the masses against them have been made. The authorities claimed to have found dynamite placed to destroy the water supply of Aker, a suburg of Christiania and accused the Communists of the crime.

Following this event, the government "discovered" nineteen dynamite cartridges under the floor of the prosecuting attorney's office and again accused the Communists of plotting terrorism.

Orders for the arrest of all the Communist officials have been issued as a climax to the persecution of the party.

The attitude of the government has done much to heal the breach in the ranks of the revolutionary movement that expressed itself in the split in the party last year.

Pennsylvania Censors Change Minds About 'Beauty & Bolshevik'

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 7.—After turning down the new Russian comedy-drama, "Beauty and Bolshevik," the Pennsylvania state board of motion picture censors reconsidered the decision and permitted the showing to go on with a few minor title changes.

The picture will be shown at the Lulu Temple, Saturday, Oct. 11, and it is confidently expected that its success will be fully up to the mark set by all previous pictures. The action of the censors in almost barring the labor film greatly increased the interest in the picture. In every case where there is censorship opposition large crowds are attracted that would otherwise remain indifferent. In Philadelphia picture shows have always been exceptionally successful so those who want to be sure of seeing this feature film will do well to buy their tickets in advance at the local office, 521 York Ave.

MEXICO CITY.—Of the 8,772,000 barrels of oil exported to the United States from Mexico during the month of August of this year, Standard Oil exported 2,040,000; El Aguila (Branch of Royal Dutch-Shell) 1,590,000; Royal Dutch 1,700,000; Sinclair 927,000; Mexican Gulf 1,020,000; The Empire 373,000; Texas Co. 220,000; New England Fuel 174,000; Mexican Seaboard 76,000.

ARE YOU A METAL WORKER? DO YOU LIVE IN NEW YORK CITY? ATTEND THIS MEETING!

Every metal worker residing in New York City will please read the following letter. It is for your special consideration:

To the Metal Workers Who Are Rebels:

You are a metal worker and a rebel. To be a militant—to be a true rebel—you must actually participate in the everyday struggles of the rank and file. We know that you are very anxious to participate and not only to participate, but do everything in your power to further our movement.

Perhaps, you are not fully informed, of the present situation in the metal industry, perhaps, you do not realize the seriousness and the significance of the present movement among the metal workers. Nevertheless we know that you are anxious and ready to fall in line with the rest of the rebels and help carry on the fight of the rank and file.

We believe, that if you are a rebel—you cannot but answer this appeal—and you must answer if you desire to consider yourself to be a part of the left wing movement.

Here is our appeal to you:

Join us—to do your duty. Join us—to participate in the daily struggles of the rank and file. Join us—to help strengthen and build a strong Metal Workers' Union.

This is your opportunity—Join us this Wednesday, Oct. 8, 1924, 8 p. m. sharp at the Hungarian House, 350 East 81st street, between First and Second avenues.

Come to answer the roll call—If you know any progressive and rebel metal worker who did not receive such a letter bring him along with you, but please be on time.

Fraternally yours,

The Executive Committee,
Metal Trades Section,
Trade Union Educational League,
Gustav Obergfell, Secretary.

Would Dodge Eight-Hour Act.

VANCOUVER, B. C.—The lumber bosses are working tooth and nail to postpone the operation of the 8-hour day legislation which is to go into effect in British Columbia, Jan. 1, 1925. The latest move to annul the legislation is the compiling of lists of workers working more than 48 hours weekly and to press claims that they should not come under the provisions of the act because they are either "temporary exceptions" to the provisions of the act or "exceptional cases" to be permanently excluded from the legislation. There are in all approximately 35,000 workers in this province who will be affected by the act.

Cop Guilty of Attacking Girl.

Indirect confirmation of labor union charges that Chicago police force is brutal and offensive in their treatment of girl pickets in the dressmakers' strike of last spring is seen by unionists in the conviction of Thomas Guilfoyle who attacked a girl in the city hall while he was still on the Chicago police force. The jury convicted him in five minutes. The sentence will be 1 to 14 years in prison. Guilfoyle appealed.

AMERICAN GOLD IS FINANCING PEKING TROOPS

Flashlight Thrown on Chinese Situation

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, Russia, Oct. 7.—M. Melnikov, chief of the far eastern department of the Soviet foreign office, throws an interesting flashlight on sinister forces at work behind the scenes in the present Chinese conflict. He lays considerable responsibility at the feet of the United States government, which, he says, is fostering the Chinese war for its own ends.

"Definite proofs that American government gold is behind the Peking group in the present struggle is naturally impossible to supply," said Melnikov. "But every known fact points in that direction. Anglo-American investments and enterprises are all wrapped up in the progress of this group, and Americans only support it.

"For proof of participation of Americans in the struggle we need only to point to the fact that the foreign negotiations in Peking under Anglo-American leadership have agreed to maintain peace in the central capital, thus enabling Wu Pei-fu to withdraw troops from there and fling them into the battle line. In effect, that is the same as if the United States directly moved troops into line."

Russia's Position.

In explanation of Russia's position towards China, Melnikov made the following enlightening diagnosis of the Chinese situation:

"Fundamentally, the present Chinese conflict is a struggle between Japanese interests on the one hand and British and American interests on the other. As Great Britain and the United States possess greater resources than does Japan, they probably will win.

"While the Russian people have sympathy with certain Chinese groups, and say so, the Soviet government takes no part. We stand by the provision of our Chinese treaty, which we mean to observe. The Chinese must fight out their domestic differences between themselves. It is their business to settle their internal disputes without foreign intervention.

For Complete Independence.

"Russia stands for the complete independence of China and complete freedom from restrictions upon that independence, whether thru the maintenance of foreign exterritorial rights or by other means. Admittedly the condition of China presents many difficulties for other countries. The weakness of the central government makes it difficult to secure respect for treaty provisions in the outer provinces. We know this to be a fact, for it is true of our own treaty with China. Still, foreign intervention would only do harm.

"At the beginning Chang Tso-lin declared himself against the enforcement of parts of our treaty, including the problem of the Chinese Eastern railway. Now he has changed his views entirely. However, we have to maintain some relations with Chang Tso-lin, for he is the real ruler over a great area consisting of three outer provinces which border for a long distance on our country.

"How far Japan supports Chang Tso-lin we do not know, but it is common knowledge that Japan is permitting him to use the South Manchurian railroad for the movement of his troops."

POLICE CZAR OF PATERSON IS SHOWN UP

Workers Party Calls His Latest Bluff

(Special to the DAILY WORKER)

PATERSON, N. J. Oct. 7.—The Workers Party has become a major issue in the strike of the silk workers here. Chief of Police Tracey, in closing the halls of Paterson to the strikers, declared that his action was based upon the fact that H. M. Wicks, of the Workers Party, had been delivering objectionable speeches. The intention was to make it appear that the Workers Party was an obstacle to the conduct of the strike.

In order to force a showdown the Workers Party instructed Wicks to insist that he be withdrawn from the list of speakers by the strike committee and thus put squarely up to the chief of police the closing of the halls.

The strike committee, in special session, and after long debate, agreed to the proposition and issued the following statement:

"While the committee feels that its rights and the rights of free speech have been violated by the chief, we realize that our main task at this time is to win the strike and we cannot stop to engage in a fight that would detract from the main issue.

"We want it distinctly understood that the action of the committee was a the request of Wicks and not initiated by anyone else."

This statement was published in the Paterson Call on Thursday morning, and the committee selected to call upon the chief of police and demand the opening of Turn Hall. The committee discussed the matter with Tracey for several hours, but was unable to get any satisfaction.

Tracey declared that he would not open the hall, thus proving conclusively that his object is to break the strike, and that he was using the attack upon the Workers Party as a subterfuge in order to demoralize the ranks of the strikers.

The newspapers have been carrying screaming headlines day after day to the effect that it was Communist participation in the leadership of the strike that is responsible for Tracey's action. The action of the party in voluntarily withdrawing Wicks as a speaker is considered a strategic move of the first magnitude because it exposed the real motives of the chief of police.

Strike Committee Acts.

The emergency committee met and discussed the latest developments and decided to demand that the chief of police open Turn Hall or Wicks would speak at a meeting to be arranged somewhere in Paterson in defiance of the closing orders of the chief. Wicks himself issued a statement to the public and the strikers regarding his attitude in which the history of the strike, his own participation in it, the attitude of the capitalist press and the illegal activities of the police are given in detail.

He declares it is his intention to carry on the fight for free speech in Paterson and he has the full support of the Workers (Communist) Party of America and the Civil Liberties Union in this struggle.

Fight Continues.

A hall for a huge mass meeting is to be secured at an early date and prominent speakers will be on the program. Leaflets are planned to open a campaign for free speech and free assemblage that will settle once and for all the question of the rights of the masses in Paterson.

Meanwhile the picket line remains unbroken and the silk bosses are being taught a lesson of workers solidarity that they will never forget.

The End of Fascism

The French authorities, at the request of the Italian consul, are holding a member of the Italian Fascisti accused of complicity in the murder of Matteotti. This little item of news is more convincing than long analytical articles of the weakness of the Mussolini government.

Contrast the present zeal of the Italian authorities in running down the degenerates whose crime shocked the world with the unyielding attitude at first taken by the head of the Fascist government. There are other facts that show the awakening of the Italian masses, among them the widespread activity of the Italian Communist Party and the support it is getting from workers who a few months ago were afraid to call their souls their own.

Mussolini and Italian Fascism are nearing the end of their rope and if resentment expressing itself in revolutionary organization continues to grow in Italy, as it doubtless will, this may turn out to be more than a figure of speech.

In Paterson

The Workers (Communist) Party of America has out-maneuvered in Paterson a specimen of one of the sub-orders of vermin that infest every American city dominated by a particular industry. The chief of police of that city, ever since Workers Party speakers have been addressing meetings of the strikers, has made loud claims that he has closed halls to the strikers only to stop Communist propaganda.

The Workers Party has now withdrawn its speakers voluntarily and the strike committee has issued a statement explaining the situation. Subsequently a committee of the strikers interviewed the police chief and insisted that he allow them to re-open the halls. He has refused and every worker in Paterson knows him now for what he is—the rather clumsy tool of the silk mill bosses.

The fight is being carried on with redoubled rigor and the party has gained in prestige while the police chief and his overlords are finding trouble in setting up another smoke-screen with which to hide the basic issues in the strike—the desire of both to make of Paterson a stronghold of industrial feudalism.

Morgan Says "Yes"

The power behind the throne of American politics and the uncrowned king of Europe, Mr. J. P. Morgan, has just issued a statement to the world assuring it that the Yankee financiers will do their bit in putting over the Dawes loan.

This announcement is of extraordinary significance. No one expected Mr. Morgan to say No, after the American financiers turned the London conference into marionette show doing the bidding of Wall Street. The vital feature in the Morgan announcement is its very issuance. Many had been holding their breath. They were becoming perceptibly worried at the delay in floating the first Dawes loan. A word from Mr. Morgan and all is at ease in the realm of international finance.

Mr. Morgan is speaking for the composite class interests of the American industrial and financial overlords. He is the agent plenipotentiary of American imperialism in Europe. While Coolidge says "Hands Off America," Mr. Morgan says "Hands On the World." Historically and economically it was most fitting for the two declarations to be simultaneous.

The DAILY WORKER is giving its readers a thorogoing analysis of the Dawes plan and all its implications and dangers for the workers. At this moment there is no more momentous question confronting the working masses of the United States and of the other countries than the agreement of the United States and of the other countries than the agreement of the international capitalists to have the Wall Street school of finance take over the salvaging of international capitalism.

At the convention of the American Bankers' Association, Mr. Woodruff, President of the National Bank of the Republic, told his colleagues to be fully prepared for all eventualities. Mr. Woodruff was frank enough to let the bankers know that the capitalist world can be saved only by their taking over the securities of Europe. The Chicago banker called upon the high princes of American finances to assume the leadership of world capitalism without any fears.

And then Mr. Woodruff urged the banking solons to girdle their loins for a fight for lower wages. This is an essential, tho unwritten part, of the whole Dawes scheme. The challenge has been flung into the teeth of the workers of the whole land by the leading moneyed lords. Mr. Morgan has said Yes. All the workers must answer him and his class in the only language the exploiters understand—organized struggle for political and economic power.

They Pay Him For This!

The manufacturing capacity of our country is now highly developed and is far ahead of our ability to distribute effectively and economically. The problem of American business, then, is the problem of distribution and I venture to say that during the next forty years the keenest minds in our business world will be working on it. The great "inventions" will be in connection with new methods of distribution rather than with new methods of manufacturing.

In fact it has become far more than a mechanical or economic problem. It is rapidly becoming a social—almost a spiritual problem—which can only be solved when everyone involved in it realizes his position and his responsibility and undertakes a veritable crusade to cut sales costs and reduce selling expense.—Roger W. Babson.

The gentleman whose name is signed to the above undoubtedly rejects the materialistic conception of history—if he knows what it is—and would resent any insinuation that his effusion (part of his latest bulletin to business men) was motivated by the present serious crisis facing American industry and is therefore an example of the method by which the above-mentioned theory explains history.

Babson is a sort of oracle for American business. He is paid a large amount of money for telling his clients why business is good or bad, but his real caliber is indicated by his proposed solution of the problem of over-production i. e. "to cut sales cost and reduce selling expense."

In the Babsonian world there is no room for the theory of surplus value. Every one gets what he is worth and cheap production is the panacea for all ills. It never occurs to him that cheap production—replacing workers with machinery, which is what cheap production means—is only another way of reducing the consuming capacity of the workers and adding to the general misery among the masses and chaos in industry.

In America, where cheap standardized production has developed the most efficient industry in the world, and where distribution is organized until it works with machine-like smoothness, we face a crisis growing out of the simple fact that the markets are glutted.

The day of the Babsons is drawing to a close. American industry faces an impasse. There is not enough consuming power granted the workers under the wage system to absorb the flood of products that they turn out with the specialized machinery owned by their rulers. All of the advertising and special selling campaigns that the rest of the world gazes at with amazement, fail to extend the limits of the domestic market. The limit has been reached. Foreign markets? War must be waged for them and if he was honest Babson would say so.

Fortunately for the working class, the law of capitalism compels the industrial and financial lords to struggle always for cheaper production—to wage war on the living standards of the workers and force them to fight back. "Sales cost" and "selling expense" cannot be reduced without reducing the number of workers and thereby curtailing markets. So what Babson's advice amounts to is just the old slogan of the capitalists—"reduction of wages"—the sovereign remedy of the parasites for all economic ills.

It sure requires intelligence of a high order to be an advisor to the American businessman.

Communist advice to the exploited victims of Babson's clientele required more intelligence to formulate, but it is simple enough to be easily understood: "All Power to the Workers!"

Birds of a Feather

Mr. William English Walling, once officially on the roster of the Socialist Party, and now in the same camp with Hillquit and Berger fighting for LaFollette, is doing presisely what we said a few days ago he would do.

The vicious foe of the class conscious workers of the United States and every country in the world is now a full fledged democrat—locally at least. Mr. Walling who only a few days ago called down Spargo for jumping on the republican bandwagon has decided to take another leap himself—backward of course. Mr. Walling has been chosen as the dehocratic candidate for Congress in the fourth district of Connecticut. Incidentally it might be noted that this section breeds and harbors numerous millionaires, of whom Mr. Gompers' lickspittle is one of the wealthiest.

Here we have a very interesting phenomenon taking its full course. Mr. Walling is the chief and vilest propagandist of Mr. Gompers at work in disrupting the labor movement. Mr. Walling is feverishly on the job rendering the bosses of the country inestimable services. When any working class organizations is to be attacked for its opposition to unspeakable conditions of employment, it is Mr. Walling who always comes across with the rankest and most poisonous sort of an onslaught.

This is the Mr. Walling that is the sworn enemy of the Soviet Republic. This is the Mr. Walling who is doing a magnificent work for the open shoppers in the office of the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor. This is the same Walling who is calling on the workingmen to support LaFollette. This is the very Mr. Walling who has just been choosen to represent the multi millionaires' row of Connecticut in the House of Representatives. Last but not least, it is with this Mr. Walling that Hillquit. Berger and the other socialist leaders are today co-operating in an effort to stifle the growth of a class farmer-labor party.

Mr. Walling promises to vote with the democrats in Congress. He promises to be "progressive." His evolution is complete. The socialists had better rejoice at the inspiring company they find themselves in today in their most ignoble efforts to send the Walling-Gompers-LaFollette-Wheeler Spreckles-Vanderlip alliance into power.

Steel, Finance and War

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE.

In an interview given September 30, secretary of the treasury Mellon gives plenty of evidence that the Dawes plan is the joint enterprise of American finance and industrial capitalists. His statements show that all results of the plan have been carefully considered by both groups.

Mellon speaks both for the banking fraternity and the steel barons. He comes from Pittsburgh, the center of the steel industry and the close connection between his financial enterprises and the steel business are too well-known to need detailed explanation here.

A Dual Problem.

The dual problem that the Dawes plan must solve, apart from the stabilization of European capitalism, is to find an outlet for the flood of gold that has accumulated in the coffers of our capitalists, and which, with its ever present threat of inflation, seriously hampers American capitalism in maintaining a favorable balance of trade. Plainly put, the American capitalists have most of the available gold supply of the world and other nations can purchase but very little from them.

The second part of the problem is how to revive European and particularly German industry without disorganizing American production by reason of a flood of cheap commodities produced by European workers for starvation wages.

It is almost needless to say that no consideration for the American workers enters into this desire to prevent the swamping of American industry. It is a desire dictated solely by the fact that in spite of more or less careless talk about the domination by finance capital, the basis of American capitalism is heavy industry—iron and steel and kindred products. The American capitalists are not, in a world where war is just around the corner and where God is on the side of the nation that can produce the most steel, going to surrender their present supremacy in this field for any price.

Mellon Speaks.

It is at this point that the observations of Andrew Mellon become of interest. Here is what he says:

1. The American steel industry is not endangered by foreign competition even though under the Dawes plan the furnaces of Belgium, Northern France and the Ruhr operate to capacity.

2. Some competition is expected from European steel in the Atlantic seaboard markets but foreign producers cannot undersell American manufacturers in interior markets because of freight rates which local plants do not have to pay.

3. European producers will be able to meet competition of Americans in markets with some success but in this respect American steel manufacturers will be no worse off than before the war.

4. The German steel industries will cut costs to the minimum but their reparation payments will be a charge against the industry and will serve to discount their lower labor costs lessening chances of German steel to compete in American markets.

5. American steel interests will gain more than they will lose by increased production in Europe and Europe's increased buying power will react more to the benefit of the United States than to any other nation.

The Imperialist View.

We may take it for granted, I think, that these statements which could have been made only after considerable deliberation, represent the view of a powerful section of American capitalists as to the effects on basic industry in America of the operation of the Dawes plan. American industry is being rapidly curtailed at present, basic industries are selling little to Europe and the black pall of depression, lightened here and there occasionally, but still indicating a steady trend downward, is settling over the United States. The revival of German industry cannot possibly have much more of an adverse effect than is the case today. American basic industry as a whole operates on an export basis that represents about 20 per cent of domestic production. If thru German competition American manufacturers lose a portion of this market the loss will be made up by the interest on loans made to European governments and European industry.

Where Control Counts.

But our imperialists do not intend to lose any of their proportion of world trade—they intend to increase it. American capitalists will be in control of German industry for the simple reason that they are furnishing most of the money needed to revive it. American experts will allot raw materials, they will specify what commodities are to be produced, how much of each and where they are to be sold. American capital refused to come to the assistance of Europe until its terms had been met and this is the price it has exacted from the desperate and fearful capitalists and governments of Europe whose only alternative was to be engulfed by the rising tide of revolution.

Great Britain is the only powerful rival of American imperialism. Just as American imperialism is based on the production of iron and steel so is the imperialism of Great Britain and the Dawes plan is a sword pointed straight at its heart with the hilt in the hands of the most brutal and powerful group in the world—the American capitalist class.

England's coal and steel and shipbuilding industry are in ruins as a result of her "victory" over Germany and the collapse of the world markets. She has no immense domestic market to bulwark her iron and steel trade as have the American capitalists. She looks to China but there she meets American competition that has created a rivalry so fierce that Americans are no longer welcome in English clubs in the orient—a surface indication of the deep seated antagonism between Great Britain and America that no amount of "blood is thicker than water" speeches can wipe out.

No Mercy for Rival.

Revival of the German steel industry will hurt Great Britain more than any other nation and she can expect little mercy from the representatives of American capital on the experts committee. Her navy and her mercantile marine need fuel oil but again she encounters the rivalry of American imperialist and this rivalry will not be forgotten by the hardboiled committee of American capitalists when it is a question of her markets or theirs that are to suffer from a flood of German commodities.

A great producing nation like Germany cannot come back into the world markets without some national economy suffering but every word of Mellon's testimony indicates that the American capitalists have decided that they will not furnish both the capital and the markets for German heavy industry. Some inroads cannot be prevented but the principle sufferer will be Great Britain—the ancient enemy and the one that disputes with the American rulers the markets of the world and the oil supply of the world.

The recent abolition of "Pittsburgh plus" must in light of the statements of Mellon be interpreted as a preparation of the steel industry to allow interior plants to meet German competition. It is thus corroborative evidence of the American capitalists to surrender none of the domestic market.

More Straws.

Another indication of the ever-increasing antagonism between what the proponents of Nordic superiority like to refer to as "the two great Anglo-Saxon nations" is found in the remarkably frank expression of resentment aroused in our imperialist press by the support accorded Japan by Great Britain at Geneva recently. The Chicago Tribune warns Great Britain of the vulnerability of Canada and points out the conflicting viewpoints of the colonies and the motherland on the Japanese immigration issue. Beneath this attitude again is the solid economic fact that American investments in Canada now exceed those of British capitalism and that in Australia also a home industry, making that colony more independent of British manufacturers, has grown up during and since the war.

Japanese imperialists are the enemies of American imperialists in the Pacific and Britain must either give up her alliance with Japan and weaken her position in China or face the possibility of desertion of her dominions. All of which is grist in the mill of American imperialism. American capitalists now attack Great Britain in Europe with the Dawes plan and in the orient with the issue of Japanese immigration.

The Line of Struggle.

Perhaps some one will say that we place too much faith in the ability of the American capitalists to protect their markets but nothing is farther from our mind. We are interested here in discovering the general line of development of the imperialistic struggle, of determining the intent behind all the lovely phrases like "bringing peace to Europe," "repairing the wreckage of war," etc. that are used to disguise the real purpose of the Dawes plan.

Nor should we be understood as saying that the operation of the plan will have no effect on the wages and working condition of American workers. It will. The bogey of German competition will be raised and the industrial depression that is here, without any assistance from the Dawes plan, will be used to beat down wages and club the American working class into the state of subjection and helplessness so necessary for the bloody purposes of imperialism.

The Big Issue.

The vitally important thing in connection with the establishment of American capitalist hegemony over continental Europe is the impetus it gives to the rivalries between American and British imperialism—the threat of war that every provision of the plan breathes.

Trotsky in a recent speech, put forward the idea of a sort of United States of Europe as the last resort of European capitalism in the struggle against the domination of American imperialism. The chief obstacle to this new alignment is the rivalry between French and British capitalism but one thing is certain—the extension of American imperialist rule must sooner or later bring some sort of unity between the nations that pay tribute to American supremacy.

British imperialism fights for its life and it can be depended upon to seek and secure allies.

The Dawes plan is not a match thrown into a powder magazine. It is rather a heavy mass of inflammable material thrown on live coals. It smothers them for a while, no heat whatever can be felt. But the destructive forces are present and later the whole mass bursts into flames.

So it will be with Europe and America unless in the meanwhile the power of the imperialists is wrested from them by the working class.

Famine Reports in Soviet Russia

By ISRAEL AMTER.

RIDICULOUS, unfounded reports about a "famine" in Soviet Russia are filling the American capitalist papers—and unfortunately also the revolutionary press.

Crops were bad this year in the southeastern part of the country and in the Ukraine. The Volga, which experienced a devastating drought in 1921 has been attacked again. The Ukraine has had the same fate. But in neither case is the drought to compare with 1921. There has been reduced production. Had the situation been the same as in 1921, the peasants would have had no seed for sowing. Had the railways been in the same condition as in 1921 neither seed nor other help could have reached the peasants.

But we are living in the year 1924. The Soviet government is better able to take care of such catastrophes as droughts. The railways are working well. Hence there is and will be no famine. No such thing occurred as peasants eating "roots and grass." This is purest fabrication. The peasants were frightened, since they still had in mind the experience of 1921. Had they eaten their crops, there would have been no seed for next year. As soon, however, as the government was apprised of the seriousness of the drought, it made preparations for providing seed to the peasants, who will not pay for it for three four or five years, according to the condition of the peasant. There is plenty of grain in Soviet Russia. The crops turned out 8 per cent less than last year; there are stores of seed for such emergencies. The peasants, therefore, ate their own store and waited for the seed.

In August, Comrade Rykov made a tour of the Volga, going far out into the country, to review the situation. Before his arrival the seed was on hand. The peasants were also promised funds and later products to help them over the winter.

In the Ukraine the situation was not nearly so serious. The peasants will be pinched for the winter, but will get help. To be sure, the rich peasants are complaining. They expect the same aid as the poor peasants—but it will not be forthcoming. They have grain in their sheds. They have funds with which to get seed. They try to evade their taxes—but the improvements on their farms show that they are not suffering.

In addition to the widespread assistance which the Soviet government is giving to the poor peasants, there will be more than 1,000,000 tons of grain for export. This is less than had been hoped for, but Soviet Russia will get thru without any difficulty. The statement in a recent issue of the "Isvestia" and "Pravda" that the British loan which is sorely needed to build up industry, will not be accepted on the usurious terms that will be forced on Germany, demonstrates clearly that Soviet Russia is capable of dealing with all the problems confronting her. Neither drought nor Georgian uprisings paid for and instigated by international imperialism—and put down by the workers and peasants of Georgia themselves,—nor part of Danzig port which has been granted to Poland by the League of Nations, for the erection of a munitions depot—clearly against Soviet Russia; nor Liberal and Conservative haranguing in England against the Anglo-Russian treaty; nor a Finnish-Lettish pact against Soviet Russia; nor a thrust, against Soviet Russia in the East thru intervention in China, can touch Soviet Russia. We are living in the year 1924—and Soviet Russia of the Workers, Peasants and Red Soldiers can meet all the problems facing them. A serious drought and famine would have pleased the world imperialists. But there is no famine.

BIG OVERFLOW AT FOSTER MEET IN LOS ANGELES

Communist Candidate Is Given Big Reception

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Oct. 8.—A mass of over four hundred people were turned away from the Gamut Club Auditorium, and every inch of seating and standing room was filled to overflowing; to hear the Communist candidate for president, William Z. Foster, here.

The auditorium was filled before 7:45 p. m. and with the opening of the meeting the stage and every other possible place where it was possible to either sit or stand was taken.

Foster Dissects Capitalism.

Foster's appearance brought the audience to its feet with cheers, enthusiasm reigned for over ten minutes. Even Foster's motions commanding the ovation to be shortened was of no avail.

For an hour and three-quarters, Foster held his audience spellbound with his keen and lucid analysis of the system under which the working class suffers, what it entails, and the problems confronting the proletariat and the real remedy that will forever sweep off the face of the earth the basic factors that cause exploitation, misery, unemployment and war.

He analyzed the present political campaign and the parties participating in it. He showed the distinction between the two old parties as being the difference between twin brothers fed out of one and the same dish—WALL STREET.

Stakes on Coolidge.

He pointed out that the only reason Wall Street does not support the LaFollette movement is because big capital and its parties can still befuddle the minds of the workers, and make them vote for Coolidge. "Capitalists always bet on the winning horse," said Foster, "and in this campaign Coolidge is the horse their stakes are laid on. But when capitalism finds itself in this country in the same position that German capital found itself at the end of the world war, it will then turn to the LaFollette movement to save it for them, just as the German exploiters turned to the social-democrats to save them."

Urge Workers' Rule.

After analyzing the capitalist system and its institutions, Foster showed what the system means to the workers, how the government and all institutions under capitalism are owned, controled and directed by the capitalists, and the only way that the working class can emancipate itself is by abolishing the system and substituting for the capitalists' dictatorship, the rule of the working class.

Shoe Strike in Massachusetts

WAKEFIELD, Mass., Oct. 8.—The Shoe Workers' Protective Union is conducting a strike against the L. B. Evans Shoe company which declared open shop recently after 15 years with the union. The company had asked for the Haverhill price list and then would not accept it. More than 300 workers are picketing the shop.

BIG MINE OWNERS DECLARE FOR WORKING CHILDREN IN THE MINES

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Oct. 8.—The American Mining Congress, composed of mine owners, meeting here, has gone on record in favor of child labor in the mines by opposing the proposed twentieth amendment to the constitution of the United States which proposes to regulate labor of children under the age of 18. Altho the reason given for being against the child labor amendment, was that the mine owners believe the separate states should govern child labor, it is believed here that the mine owners do not want their boys who do various jobs in the mines prevented from working. The Mining Congress also condemned the corporation income tax laws, which take some of their huge profits away from them, and declared against government ownership of mines. E. L. Doheney, of Los Angeles, was elected first vice-president, and also one of the 13 national directors.

RELIEF COMMITTEE OF WORKERS PARTY ISSUE IN PATERSON STRIKE

(Special to The DAILY WORKER.)

PATERSON, N. J., Oct. 8.—The Workers Party Relief Committee for the Paterson silk strikers has issued an appeal for funds. Declaring that, "The silk manufacturers of Paterson with the aid of police and the Paterson courts, are doing their best to starve the Paterson silk strikers into submission.

"The silk workers of Paterson are conducting a militant struggle to win the eight-hour day, recognition of the right to organize and to establish the two-loom system," states the Workers Party committee.

"Show your solidarity with the ten thousand silk strikers. Help them to win their just demands; help to defeat the injunction brot against them by the bosses; give at once as much as you can to keep up the splendid spirit and solidarity of the Paterson silk strikers in this struggle."

Workers Party Candidates Draw Open Air Crowds

Greater crowds than ever before are attending the Communist open air meetings, at which Workers Party speakers and candidates are listened to with great interest as the campaign draws towards the home stretch. J. Louis Engdahl, editor of the DAILY WORKER, and candidate for United States senator from Illinois, spoke last night at Wilton and Belmont to a great audience which eagerly bought DAILY WORKERS, the Young Worker, the latest pamphlets of the Workers Party, and tickets to the Foster-Gitlow mass meeting, to be held in the Carmen's Auditorium, Oct. 12.

Other Workers Party candidates speaking in the local outdoor campaign, "Bob" Minor, Communist candidate for congressman-at-large, first district, Sam Hammersmark, Workers Party, candidate for congress in the seventh district; Jack Johnstone, candidate for congress in the ninth district, and George Maurer, Workers Party candidate for congress.

Fruits of the War.

SAN FRANCISCO.—Set down another triumph of the war to end war. Joseph Betz, 24, came out of France totally disabled and with an acquired drug habit. A girl took pity on his plight, loved him and cared for him, tho she had a husband who would have divorced her. The jealous policy, urged on by a rejected admirer of the girl, arrested the pair. They paroled Helen and she threw herself from a speeding train. "I don't care what happens to me now," says Betz. "All I want is to see Helen once more."

They let him see Helen—in the morgue.

W. P. TICKET ON BALLOT IN WASHINGTON

Coast State Makes the Twelfth

A wire from N. H. Tallentire, district organizer of the Workers Party at Seattle, Washington, advises that the secretary of state of the State of Washington has certified the nomination of Workers Party presidential electors and the workers and farmers of that state will have the opportunity of casting their ballot for Foster and Gitlow.

There are now eleven states in which the Workers Party has placed its candidates on the ballot. These states are: Massachusetts, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, Iowa, Colorado, Montana and Washington.

May Get Four More.

There are still four states where the time limit for filing of presidential electors has not expired and in which the Workers Party ticket may be filed. These states are Rhode Island, Connecticut, Indiana and Missouri.

In the state of Michigan, altho the legal requirements were complied with by the Workers Party, the secretary of state has barred the Workers Party ticket from the ballot on a trumped up technicality.

CHICAGO SCHOOL HEAD IS OLD TIME LACKEY OF EMPLOYING CLASS

Proof that superintendent of Chicago schools, William McAndrew, is an old time educational lackey of big business, is contained in a delicate appeal to the owners of the public schools—the employing class—which appeared in the bulletin of the Brooklyn chamber of commerce on March 9, 1923, when McAndrew was associate superintendent of public schools. McAndrew asks the capitalists how he can best serve them, what they think of the product he is turning out and how he can make "it" more valuable to the employers.

McAndrew's statement, which appeared at the time when big business wanted to know whether he would serve them well if they gave him a good job, follows:

"An appeal to employers—What's the use of night schools? If you were elected superintendent of them and were determined to use your highest endeavor to make them the best you know how, what would YOU do? As a citizen or as an employer, what do you find most needed that the high schools can supply? If you have had experience with the output of night schools, what do you think of it? Please particularize. We are engaged in a periodic survey of the service and need advice." (Signed) William McAndrew.

McAndrew is now engaged in making a sneaking assault upon the teachers' councils, and upon the teachers' salaries.

SIX RED NIGHTS FEATURE PARTY FIGHT IN N. Y.

58 Speakers to Talk at Open Air Meetings

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—Putting the Workers Party presidential electors on the ballot in New York State with many more than the required 20,000 signatures secured, was just a start for the New York City party members.

Six RED NIGHTS have been arranged, Charles Krumbein, district organizer, reports to the DAILY WORKER, with eleven large open air meetings every night, at which 30,000 pieces of Communist literature will be distributed, and 58 speakers will be rushed into the campaign every night.

Five thousand people are expected to march to the main meetings with banners and red lights.

Each of the six RED NIGHTS will cover a different section of New York City. Tomorrow night the Williamsburg section will be covered, with the main speeches on Grand St.

The Grand St. meetings will be followed by meetings in Harlem Saturday night, with the main speeches at 110th St. and Fifth Ave. The other sections are to be announce later. The marchers will parade to the main speaking corners.

RAISE QUESTION OF FIRING WOMEN WHEN THEY DECIDE TO MARRY

The United States railroad labor board today took under advisement the question of whether or not a railroad has a right to discharge a woman employe when she marries. The question arose in a dispute between the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers and Express and Station Employes and the Kansas City Southern railroad. The decision on the case will affect thousands of women employes of railroads thruout the country.

SPRINGFIELD COAL MINERS DEMAND SPECIAL DISTRICT CONVENTION IN FIGHT ON EXPULSION OF McDONALD

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Oct. 8.—At a meeting of Local Union No. 448 (Klondyke mine) held last night it was decided to demand a special district convention to combat the high handed method of Frank Farrington in his effort to have Duncan McDonald expelled from membership.

This effort on the part of the fakirs at the head of the United Mine Workers is in line with their general policy of trying to get rid of every progressive member who is not in harmony with the policy of the officialdom who act in concert with the bosses and carry out their desires.

When interviewed McDonald stated that this matter had been pending for some two years and arose over a mistake in the secretary of the local of which McDonald is a member. As McDonald found it impossible to attend the meeting at that time he wrote the secretary asking how much he owed for dues and assessments and on being informed sent a check for the amount due. Some months later some of the gum shoe sleuths of Farrington ton checked up the books of the local and found the secretary had failed to charge McDonald with some two dollars for the alleged Herrin assessment. This money was supposed to be used for the Herrin miners, but in reality was used to buy votes for Farrington in the miners' election.

History of Case.

When the secretary discovered he had made a mistake he notified McDonald and received the amount due for this alleged Herrin assessment. Some seven months later Farrington notified the members of this local to drop McDonald from membership because of the mistake of the secretary which the local as promptly proceed to do. The matter rested until eleven months later when again Farrington notified the local to have representatives appear before the district board to show case why their charter should not be revoked for failure to expel McDonald.

Notwithstanding the fact that the miners' constitution does not give either Farrington or his board the power to revoke charters he holds this over their heads at every opportunity and especially when they go out on strike against the wishes of the bosses who Farrington serves.

The local then sent representatives to Indianapolis at the invitation of vice-president Murray, who promised them a hearing before the charter would be revoked. When they reached there they were told they must obey the mandate of Farrington and expel McDonald before their case could be heard. At first he promised to give them a hearing later, but reversed himself at Farrington's suggestion and stated that the time for appeal had passed. When the committee reported the results of their conference with Murray a motion was made and passed refusing to expel McDonald at the bequest of Farrington. McDonald was present and suggested to the members that in order to save their charter so that they could vote in the coming election they reverse themselves and drop him from membership under protest. This was finally done and then the fireworks started. It was finally agreed to send out a message to the members in all other locals in the state informing them of the action taken and also appeal for a special district convention to take up this question. A mass meeting in Springfield to pass on this matter is under consideration.

Farrington Inconsistent.

It was pointed out that Farrington had himself denounced Lewis for the expulsion of Alex Howat, for expelling him from membership without even the formality of a trial and then far no charges have been preferred against McDonald who is a charter members of the United Mine Workers.

Farrington reserves the right to set aside the constitution at his will and not long ago was found giving the list of miners' votes to a republican candidate for governor.

He also furnished a letter of endorsement for the same party on the official stationery both of which offenses are in violation of the miners' constitution and subjects the guilty party to loss of membership. But Farrington got away with it.

Accused of Crookedness.

It was also pointed out in the meeting where he had stolen elections, kept his entire family from funds of the Illinois miners' treasury, used the funds for his honeymoon trip, made trips to New York, Seattle, California and many other places at the expense of the organization. That he loaded down the miners' treasury with pie-counter patriots, and packed every convention with pay-rollers to keep him in office. McDonald told of Farrington burglarizing his office and stealing the carbon copies of letters and how later the attempt to burglarize the safe in his office was made, but it was such a crude job the perpetrators were well known to be amateurs at this sort of thing. That not even a lock was broken to get in and that the party who did it had keys to the office and he knew who had the keys.

Farrington's Election Trickery.

McDonald is known to be in opposition to Farrington in the coming miners' election and Farrington apparently thought this was the time to push the case. John J. Watt, candidate for lieutenant-governor on the Workers Party ticket is a member of the same local and is a candidate for re-election to the position he now holds as subdistrict secretary-treasurer. Several other members of the same local are candidates for office in the coming election and the effort to get McDonald may have been made to prevent these other members from running for office.

McDonald Popular.

A committee was selected to prepare and send out the appeal to all other locals in the state and a merry row is looked for. McDonald has already received invitations to go to different parts of the state and explain this matter and will probably tour the entire state in defense of his position.

BRITISH TORY LEADS IN FIGHT ON LABOR PARTY

Dropping of Attack on Communist Editor Hit

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, October 8.—Great Britain is now face to face squarely with the question of whether the MacDonald cabinet is to continue in office.

Sir Robert Horne, a tory, has placed before the House of Commons a motion to censure the Labor cabinet on the ground that it quashed a criminal indictment against the editor of the official organ of the Communist Party of Great Britain, the "Workers' Weekly."

MacDonald in Weak Defense.

Sir Horne declared that this action by the laborites was due to pressure from the extremists. The attorney-general who handled the case is being charged with inefficiency.

So far MacDonald has not made a vigorous defense. The labor premier said: "If administration of law becomes the subject of political expediency, then justice will disappear." Whether he will demand the dissolution of parliament upon being defeated on the issue, is still a question. MacDonald is not very anxious to go before the country on an issue that would bring out the class alignments so sharply and in which the Communists fare so prominently.

Situation is Complicated.

The situation is further complicated by a new factor. Usually it is only a matter of formality for the king to assent to a dissolution request. The king, as the ruber stamp of the biggest industrial and financial interests, is now intimating that he will reject such a request if it comes from the cabinet.

These capitalist groups would rather see Stanley Baldwin, the prominent steel manufacturer, again take his place at the head of a conservative cabinet than throw the country into a sharp election struggle.

Expect Bitter Debate.

The debate is expected to be a very bitter one. Communism will be the central issue. The liberals and tories will make it so, for MacDonald will do all in his power to show his enmity to the Communist workingmen. In order to prove his enmity to the Communists and to make himself invulnerable from such sharp class criticism and disapproval by the capitalist parties, Mr. MacDonald is even planning to outfight the Lloyd George-Baldwin alliance in their fight against the Communists. The premier is proposing to expel every Communist who is a member of the labor party.

There is much bitterness in the debate because of the amendment of the liberals to appoint a special committee to investigate the entire matter of the Workers' Weekly indictment. McDonald has branded the liberal proposal as a "piece of medieval crookedness."

NEW TASKS IN WOOLEN MILLS FORCE STRIKE

Workers Walk Out Under Heavier Burdens

(By [illegible])

MIDDLEBORO, Mass., Oct. 8.—Two hundred and fifty woolen workers in the Nemasket Mills are on strike against additional tasks. The company ordered each of the two-loom weavers to do additional tasks connected with the fancy fabrics.

The strike is partially under the control of the Amalgamated Textile Workers' Council, an independent organization restricted to the woolen industry.

This union claims 1,500 to 2,000 members. It sprang up after the 1922 strike. Its program calls for industrial organization with departmental features and it declares its readiness to recognize the card of any other union without insisting on affiliation with its own organization.

Develop Open Shop Policy.

CROMPTON, R. I., Oct. 8.—John Swanson, superintendent of the Crompton mills, who worked himself up from weaver, has been on a prolonged vacation, which seems likely to be permanent. His place has been taken by a Crompton company salesman named Moran.

The latter is now trying to "sell" a company union to the workers. Moran used his sales car during the big strike of 1922 to transport strike-breakers. Recently he fired five members of the Amalgamated Textile Workers' organization. The theory of union workers is that the change in superintendents is in line with the developing open shop policy of the company.

Investigate Conciliator.

BOSTON, Mass., Oct. 8.—United States conciliator Charles G. Wood is under investigation by the joint committee of the Boston Central Labor Union and the Waltham Central Labor Union for misuse of his office in connection with the Waltham watch makers' strike.

The charges are that Wood wrote a letter to Ernest Faulkner, president of the Waltham Employes' Protective Association, strongly urging acceptance of the company's "shop plan of settlement" and the acceptance of a wage cut.

At a meeting of the Boston Central Labor Union it was decided to proceed judicially in the matter—tho the facts, as borne out by a copy of the commissioner's letter, seem perfectly clear. Should Wood be formally declared guilty of the charges, a strong protest to the U. S. department of labor, based on his unfitness, will be made.

Standard Oil Trust Protests That It Is Serving Public

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Oct. 8.—An answer to ouster proceedings seeking to bar it from further operation in this state on grounds that it was guilty of violating the anti-trust laws, was filed in the supreme court here today by the Standard Oil company of Indiana.

The answer makes specific denial of all charges in the petition for ouster and declares that "the corporation has served the public and has voluntarily enlarged the trade opportunities of its competitors, instead of reserving all the benefits of its patents for itself as it might lawfully have done."

PAYROLLS IN NEW YORK STATE ARE SLIPPING BACK TO 1921 LEVEL

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

A gain of 1 per cent in total wage payments by the manufacturers of New York state between July and August indicates to state industrial commissioner Shientag that the low point in the industrial depression has been reached. His report, however, shows that the depression is still general and that the change in total wage disbursements is small.

It is estimated, says Shientag, that weekly payrolls are about $4,800,000 less this August than August, 1923. This is not a measure of the full difference for payrolls for August, 1923, were slightly reduced on account of the closing of many plants for president Harding's funeral.

Shientag goes on to make a comparison between the low point of the present depression and the low point of approximately $4,000,000 or 8 per cent higher than the lowest point of that depression which came in August, 1921.

Industry Irregular.

The comparison shows that the industrial situation is very irregular. On the one hand are the building supply industries with payrolls half again as high as in 1921 and actually higher than in previous periods of prosperity. On the other are the textile and clothing industries where payrolls are today lower than in the middle of 1921. Between the two come the metal and wood industries with payrolls one-third higher than in August, 1921, and the chemical, paper, paper goods and food industries which are to a smaller degree above the 1921 level.

The most significant thing about the clothing and textile industries, according to Shinetag, is not the reduction in employment so much as the slowness of recovery, in contrast with the way in which they led the movement of 1921. This is part of a downward trend for these industries in New York state which shows in good and bad times alike.

Shientag's comparison with 1921 should be carried further. Factory payrolls 8 per cent above August 1921 are still about 13 per cent below August, 1923 showing that they have fallen nearly two-thirds of the way back in the direction of the worst depression the country had known in years.

Getting Close to 1924.

If we take the employment figures instead of the wage disbursements it appears that the number on factory payrolls in August was less than 6 per cent above the level of August, 1921, indicating that industrial employment has fallen more than three-quarters of the way back into that depression.

The outstanding fact about the present depression down to most recent reports is that it has resulted in less severe wage cutting than in the 1920-21 period. This accounts for the fact that total factory payrolls present a somewhat more favorable picture than actual employment figures.

Streetcar Men's Gains.

MONTREAL.—Great improvement in conditions among Montreal street railway workers in the last 15 years, owing to the operations of the union, are called attention to by W. B. Fitzgerald, first vice-president Amalgamated Assn. of Street & Electric Railway employes. Fifteen years ago, he said, wages were 12 to 15 cents an hour as compared with 60 cents now. Nine hours is the average today with some runs involving 14 to 15 hours, while 15 years ago the working day ran 17, 18 and 19 hours. Fitzgerald is here to prepare for the biennial convention of his organization next September. A thousand delegates are expected to represent the 135,000 members of the union.

When the Workers Seize Power.

Shoe Strike in Sixth Week.

CHELSEA, Mass., Oct. 8.—The Amalgamated Shoe Workers' local union No. 1, is in its sixth week of strike against the James Miller company. The workers went out when a 12½ per cent wage cut was given after a 25 per cent cut had been in effect only a month. The Chelsea aldermen offered to select a committee to arbitrate the matter. The Amalgamated is really a part of the old United Shoe Workers' organization and may join the Protective which grew out of the United.

HARD TIMES HIT THE MOVIES

An army of seven million men out of work looks bad to the owner of a small "picture show." The movies are the theatre of the working class, and when workers cannot go to work they cannot go to the show either. In the largest houses in New York and Chicago the pinch is not felt so quickly, but it has hit the smalled houses so hard that many of them have had to close up.

Wide-awake sections of the labor movement have taken advantage of the little movie-owner's plight to persuade him to run working class films which otherwise he would never touch. If a local committee representing trade unions, fraternal societies, or even the Workers Party alone, approaches one of these managers with a proposal of organized support for a certain picture they are interested in, he will be found, these days, to be theroly interested. He needs crowds in his theatre if he is to make money, and our crowds look good to him.

In several Minnesota and Michigan towns the Finnish workers have done this. In a single day three dates were made in small communities for "The Fifth Year," one of the older pictures released by the International Workers' Aid. The showings are at Rock, Mich., on Oct. 12; at Sebeka, Minn., Oct 14; and at Lawler, Minn., on Oct. 15. What the Finns did in these three instances can be done by workers of other nationalities elsewhere.

The pictures are furnished by the International Workers' Aid, 19 S. Lincoln St., Chicago, Ill. Two dramas, one comedy, two full-length educational features, and several short subjects are on hand, all of them made in and dealing with Soviet Russia. The proceeds go to the workers' relief funds, but in special instances, where labor organizations or newspapers thru their work alone make a show possible, a share of the proceeds goes to the co-operating organization. This is an ideal method of raising funds locally for press and other purposes.

Sometimes the theatre manager pays a direct rental, sometimes he pays a percentage of his ticket sales, sometimes he takes the film free and allows our committee to keep all proceeds from the admission tickets he sells. If there is a chance to run our films on any of these methods in your locality, get in touch with the International Workers' Aid, 19 S. Lincoln St., Chicago, Ill.

Sure to Show "The Beauty and Bolshevik" In Philadelphia, Penn.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Oct. 8.—In spite of the fact that the Pennsylvania board of censors fears that this new film will start a revolution in America, and on that ground refused to grant a license to show it, Philadelphia is going to experience the rare thrill of seeing the first Soviet film that has yet come to America. This is made possible only after legal pressure was used to convince the board that it had no authority whatever to hold up a film on grounds of differences of political or social theories.

"The Beauty and the Bolshevik," the fascinating Red Army romance, tells the story of the young commandant of the Red Army and the daughter of the reactionary landowner and priest of the village in which the army settles after four years of severe warfare. It is very humorous to follow all the incidents that lead finally to the marriage of Kombrig, the commandant and the girl, daughter of Kulak, the priest, and the final stirring scene of the Red Army marching out of the village, led by Kombrig and his bride, and followed by the curious population of the village.

This picture has been postponed for this Saturday night, Oct. 11, at Lulu Temple, Broad and Spring Streets, Philadelphia. There will be two performances starting at 6:30 and 8:30 p. m. Those who have already bought tickets, may use them for this week's showing. Australian "Big Biz" Has Few Stunts of Its Own to Put Over

ADELAIDE, South Australia.—Sensational evidence showing how the recent anti-labor government of the state of South Australia tried to drive state-owned trading concerns established by a previous labor government out of action, in order to prevent competition with private enterprise, was given by the manager of the South Australian state shipping service before a commission appointed by the present Labor government.

By order of the recent anti-labor government profits from the state concerns were paid into the general fund of the state, and if subsequently a concern showed a loss, instead of subtracting the loss from the previous profit, the loss was set down against the concern. In this way, some were pronounced as losses and closed down.

Compulsory Labor in Bulgaria.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—A report from Bulgaria, issued thru the International labor office, Washington branch, shows that the compulsory labor law in that country is now in operation. Any municipality which needs labor for its local work may obtain a minimum of 50 persons from the compulsory labor office. The maximum who may be so compelled to labor for the city or town must not exceed the number already at work. Payment of wages must be made, half of it in advance, to the office furnishing the conscripts. The municipalities must see to the feeding, clothing and other care of the laborers, according to a fixed scale by the office, and must employ the labor not less than two months nor more than six months per annum.

WOOLEN TRUST FOR METCALF IN RHODE ISLAND

Backs Millionaire for the U. S. Senate

(By The Federated Press)

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Oct. 8.—Nomination of Jesse H. Metcalf, millionaire woolen manufacturer, strikebreaker and father of the two-loom, speed-up system in the woolen mills of Rhode Island, for United States senator by the republican convention, surprised few persons in the state.

The Rhode Island textile manufacturers control the political machine of the high tariff party and it is considered logical that a woolen manufacturer should take the field in person instead of leaving the job to a political satellite. Metcalf was named for the unexpired term of another open shop manufacturer, the late senator Le Baron B. Colt.

Wars on the Workers.

Jesse H. Metcalf is remembered by woolen operatives for the long drawn out strike in his Providence mill thirty years ago when a movement for better living conditions led by the American Federation of Labor was crushed.

Several years after the strike Metcalf inaugurated the two-loom system, by which each weaver ran twice the machinery he had run before. Other manufacturers followed; the two-loom system became universal and its author today is backed by his fellow manufacturers for the highest legislative office in the land.

Build United Front of Native and Foreign Born to Aid Communist Press

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, on the editorial page, [illegible] an appeal of our Lithuanian Communist daily, Laisve, calling upon its readers to support the subscription getting drive of the DAILY WORKER.

Similar appeals have already been published in the Italian Communist Daily, IL LAVORATORE, and our Russian Communist daily, NOVY MIR. We shall gladly publish these in early issues. All of our foreign language publications, daily, as well as weekly and monthly, will join hands in this campaign of the DAILY WORKER, because they realize that the triumph of the American Communist movement will only be assured when it has enlisted the workers of all nationalities under its crimson standards.

• • • •

The DAILY WORKER is just as much the weapon of the foreign-born as of the native-born worker. It is the champion alike of all oppressed labor. It speaks the common language of the universal fight against the enemy, capitalist class.

The foreign-born worker, intelligent and aggressive in his own language, must not dodge support of the English-language Communist press by the excuse so often heard, "I cannot read the English language." That is the excuse of a shirker.

That the Communist foreign-language press does not intend to shirk any responsibilities in the present campaign of the DAILY WORKER for a greater army of readers, is shown by the enthusiasm with which it is taking up its share of this task of today.

• • • •

Every foreign-language worker is in close touch, in his neighborhood, and on his job, with English speaking workers. This present drive is a good time to introduce the DAILY WORKER to native-born toilers, many of whom are dropping much of the 100% pay-triotism with which they were supersaturated during the war. The growing unemployment, the continued high cost of living, the efforts of the bosses to cut wages, are all contributing to the complete awakening of "The Great, Free-Born American Citizen." He is beginnnig to realize which side of the class struggle he ought to be fighting on. He will welcome the Communist message that the DAILY WORKER will bring to him.

• • • •

That is a very good suggestion that the editor of the Lithuanian Daily, Laisve, has to offer to the foreign-language speaking fathers of native-born children. He urges that the fathers subscribe for the DAILY WORKER for their children. It is pointed out that in this way the children will develop a desire for Communist literature. They will be won away from the capitalist press.

Winning the children for Communism is probably the greatest task of the American Communist movement. It is the same in other countries. Unless the children turn against the Moloch social order of capitalism; the social revolution is impossible. For the children of today are the grown workers of tomorrow. Public school education, the contents of the whole capitalist press, the movie, the radio and every other avenue of communication and propaganda are all used to hold the children as staunch supporters of the established social order, which clutches them frantically in its profit grip.

The slogan of the Laisve should be raised by every other foreign-language Communist publication. Every reader of our foreign-language press should get a young worker to read the DAILY WORKER. Bring the DAILY WORKER into the home of every foreign-born worker.

• • • •

But there is a way for the English-language speaking workers, who have already been won for Communism, or who sympathize with its message, to reciprocate. They also have a task to perform. Their duty is also clear.

Let every English-language speaking worker, who reads this appeal, interest some foreign-born worker, not yet reached, in the foreign-language Communist publication issued in his language.

• • • •

The foreign-born toiler constitutes the majority of those who labor in the nation's great basic industries; in the mines, and in the steel mills. This is also true of the great textile and other industries. Criminally long hours give them little time to learn the English language. The cruel exploitation of the body numbs the brain and leaves it incapable of study. Leisure moments are rare. The days of unemployment are worse than those on the job, because they carry with them the nerve-wrecking hunt for another place to toil. But the foreign-born worker will read literature in his own language. The Communist message will come to him like a welcome deliverer.

It is the duty of every English-language worker, while the DAILY WORKER is carrying on its subscription campaign, to get as many new readers as possible for our foreign-language Communist press. In order to acquaint our readers with our press published in the various foreign languages, a list of these publications is published herewith:

RECOGNIZE THE WORKERS' RUL... LABOR DEMANDS

N. Y. Toilers Also Urge Prisoners Be Freed

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—Resolutions demanding the full recognition of Soviet Russia by the United States and calling upon the governors of the states, and upon the president of the United States to release working class men and women sent to prison under laws which limit and curtail the right of free speech, were adopted and sent to Calvin Coolidge by a conference of representatives from trade unions, fraternal and political organizations held at the Labor Temple, 243 E. 84th St., here recently.

The resolutions, which have been sent to "Silent Cal," are as follows:

For Recognition of Soviet Russia

Whereas, the nations of the world are one by one extending recognition to the Union of Soviet Republics, the union of workers' republics; and

Whereas, such recognition has not only been of material assistance in promoting employment for the workers, but also has been a step toward the establishment of friendly relations between the workers of all nations and those of the Union of Soviet Republics and therefore a step toward real world peace;

Be it therefore resolved, that we call upon the president of the United States to immediately enter upon negotiations with the Union of Soviet Republics to the end that full recognition may be speedily accorded to them; and

Be it further resolved, that we call upon the workers of the United States to use their organized power in order that such recognition may be speedily extended to the government of their fellow workers in the Union of Soviet Republics.

For Release of Political Prisoners.

Whereas, the prisons of various states in the Union are today occupied by the members of the working class, men and women convicted under laws which limit and curtial the right to free speech and free expression of opinion;

Be it resolved, that we send greetings to these men and women and pledge them our whole-hearted support in order to secure their early release; and

Be it further resolved, that we call upon the governors of the various states in which these workers are imprisoned and upon the president of the United States, to immediately free these men and women, who have been guilty of no crime but that of freely expressing their opinion, as guaranteed them by the constitution of the United States; and

Be it further resolved, that we call upon the workers thruout the nation to use their organized effort to free those who have been imprisoned in their behalf, and use every effort to have removed from the statute books those laws which in any way limit or prevent the free exercise of freedom of speech, press or assemblage.

Greek Government Ousted for Failure To Crush Strikes

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ATHENS, Oct. 8.—The Democratic party headed by Michalocopoulos, has come into power in Greece following the fall of the Sotoulis government.

A vote of lack of confidence in the present cabinet is understood to have been due to the failure of Sotoulis to crush the recent strikes among the workers in the printing trades and on the railroads. Members of the new cabinet are expected to take severe measures against the General Confederation of Labor, which has stood solidly behind the strikers.

The ministry of the interior is now in the hands of General Kondylis, leader of the Fascist forces of Greece. Kondylis recently turned the southern part of the country, denouncing the World War Veterans, a revolutionary organization.

The democratic party is popularly known as the Venizelos party. Venizelos who is now in London is openly the agent of Paris allies, pledging Greece to make use of the Greek army in the event of Communist uprisings in the Balkan states.

RUSS EMIGRES IN WASHINGTON HEAR AN ECHO

Story Is Retold About Port Arthur Deal

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—Russian emigres who have found fashionable refuge in Washington, are reminded of the "good old days" by the publication of a detailed account of the agreement of the Japanese imperial government to pay to the late General Stoessel, who surrendered Port Arthur to Japan and thereby made Japan a world power, the sum of 10,000,000 pounds sterling ($50,000,000.)

A copyrighted story from the Paris bureau of the Chicago Daily News, printed in the Washington Star, gives them the savory morsels of this affair as set forth by a millionaire associate of J. Pierpont Morgan, who was asked by an Englishman to buy a share in the claim of General Stoessel's widow against the Japanese government.

For Tokyo did not pay for the "act to be performed by Gen. Stoessel," mentioned in the agreement which turned up in London after the world war. It is explained that the Japanese embassy officials in London agreed that the document was genuine, but inasmuch as Stoessel had died, and no promise to pay his heirs was found in the bargain, and no proof as to the character of "act" was found, the whole incident was closed.

Diplomatic Washington sees a nice point in this deal. If only the Soviet Union can be overturned, and Grand Duke Cyril be restored to the throne of the czars, then Mme. Stoessel's claim can be put up to Japan as an issue on which the diplomats and soldiers can get new credit. And it gives new cause for their anxiety lest Moscow and Tokyo make a treaty which will wipe out all past claims, including those based on treachery such as this story seems to prove.

World Co-operative Guild Is Organized with London Offices

LONDON, Oct. 8.—Women with the power of the market basket are now organized into the International Co-operative Women's guild with headquarters in London. This new international of housewives and mothers consists of the national women's co-operative guilds of Austria, Belgium, England, France, Holland, Ireland, Norway, Scotland, Sweden and Switzerland.

At its first conference held in Ghent the end of August the guild came out for a co-operative form of society, demanded world organization for peace and urged the learning by co-operators of a common international language, preferably, Esperanto.

A. Honora Enfield is secretary with headquarters at 29 Winchester Rd., London NW3.

Fight City Workers' Wage Cut.

TOLEDO, O., Oct. 8.—This city's practical bankruptcy has called the Toledo Central Labor union into active service for wage workers. Their pay sliced 20 per cent by the city council because of an acute shortage of funds, city water works employes appealed to organized labor for relief.

Attorneys for the Central Labor union were immediately detailed. Suit will be instituted if the city refuses to restore the normal wage.

In With the Dollars!

By ALFRED WAGENKNECHT.

THE trinity of ADVANTAGES ENJOYED by Standard Oil Company employes has been completed. The Republic of Labor, invented by John D., Jr., is advantage number one. Under its beneficent rule, labor and capital are to be married, never to part. Labor disputes are to be settled by a joint committee upon which, say, a thousand workers elected six representatives—and couple of representatives of Standard Oil elected the other six. The superintendent of the works has the veto power. This was called a Republic of Labor.

The opportunity to purchase stock at $60 a share was advantage number two. The dividends of shares purchased by the workers are to accumulate and are to be used to buy more shares. Workers would never strike against the Standard Oil if they were in the company upon an equal footing with John D.—all shareholders together!

And now the Standard Oil Company of Indiana has established a DEATH BENEFIT plan for its 25,000 employes. The insurance costs the employes nothing.

The Standard Oil Company understands the importance of a RIGHT labor policy. Did not Walter C. Teagle, chief of the New Jersey wing of Standard, rob a developing strike of his workers both of its first and second wind by adroitly using the Republic of Labor to throw oil on the troubled waters? Teagle said to his workers at the time that he sincerely wished they would not strike because he needed their co-operation to tide the company over a "very critical situation."

This "critical situation" afterwards was discovered to be the filching from the workers of the largest first quarterly dividend since 1913.

Standard Oil proclaims that it does not work upon the lemon-squeezer principle. It is not one of those industries which are iron-heeled despotism squeezing blood profits out of the poor, down-trodden worker.

Having read O'Sullivan's advertisements, it no doubt uses rubber heels.

But heels are used nevertheless, and very effectively. Each of the trinity of advantages, wherever they obtain, is a heel pressed squarely upon the Adam's apple of every worker.

Republic of Labor, Join the Company, Death Benefit—all three of them are melodies sung to put the workers to sleep. They all proclaim the "behave now and you'll get your reward in heaven" policy of capitalism.

BE NICE TODAY AND AFTER DEATH YOU'LL HEAR THE ANGELS SING! Either this or you will join the awakened advance guard of the working class in its forward surge for ownership of the world.

The mobilization of all Workers Party members and sympathizers for a three million distribution of literature during the week of October 26 to November 2 is on.

Every party branch will meet October 12 to receive contributions from its members for this literature. Every member is to contribute fifty cents.

IT IS IN CAMPAIGNS LIKE THIS THAT OPPORTUNITY IS AFFORDED FOR PROPAGANDA AND EDUCATION WHICH WILL AROUSE THE MISLED SLAVES OF STANDARD OIL AND ALL OTHER VULTURES.

YOU, TOO, MUST JOIN THIS ATTEMPT TO REACH THREE MILLION WORKERS WITH OUR MESSAGE DURING RED WEEK.

COOLIDGE PICTURE ADORNS WALLS OF COTTON MILLS AND SPEAKEASIES IN RHODE ISLAND FACTORY DISTRICT

By ART SHIELDS
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Oct. 8.—Eight to sixteen families drinking water out of the same well; wells taking water that drains by earthen cesspools; the smell of out-houses and garbage in the air.

These are some features of the B. B. & R. Knight company town of Natick in the Pawtuxet Valley. Another is the Coolidge photo, hung from the walls of mills and speakeasies to encourage cotton mill workers to keep things as they are.

The Natick mills have not operated since April. They are part of the Knight string that has more than a half-million spindles in Rhode Island and Massachusetts and is controlled by the Consolidated Textile Corporation, which runs mills in North and South Carolina, Georgia, Virginia, Kentucky and Texas.

William M. Wood, chairman of the board of directors of both concerns, is also president of the American Woolen company and one of the links binding them to larger textile aggregations.

Productivity Is Doubled.

Textile work in Pawtuxet Valley began in the eighteenth century. Remarkable development of manufacturing technique has taken place since then. Even in the last twenty years productivity per operative has nearly doubled. But eighteenth century conditions continue so far as housing and village sanitation are concerned. Especially in Natick. Company tenements here—all but a few—lack those fundamentals of modern sanitation, indoor plumbing and sewage.

Pawtuxet Valley is beautiful at this season. The hills that slope to the winding river that furnishes the power to the mills are glorious in the myriad hues of autumn. But the company tenements have no picturesqueness. They are oblong, shabby, two-story frame buildings, of tarnished white, housing each from two to six families. Sometimes there is space for a vegetable garden and grape arbor but frequently there is room for nothing more than the uniform outhouses and community pumps that are set amidst each set of four tenements. Health officers do little to correct the noisome conditions that prevail. In Rhode Island there is a $134 property qualification for voters in local elections and company towns have few eligible. It must also be said that health officers' efforts are limited so long as sewage facilities are lacking and workers, on low wages, or unemployed, as at Natick, lack funds for good food. So this mill town goes on as it has for years, with a high record of epidemic diseases.

Young Italians Restless.

Natick is occupied by Italian workers almost exclusively. The younger generation, particularly, is becoming restless. During the 1922 strike Natick mills were among the first to be closed by the movement, which locally was under the control of the Amalgamated Textile Workers. There is a spirit of resistance in the air and it is doubtful if the company will follow the example of the Manville-Jenckes company in the Blackstone Valley and attempt a wage cut when the mills open again.

Machine Guns on Roofs.

Workers pointed out to the writer the places on the mill roofs where machine guns were placed during the nine-month struggle. The town was patrolled by national guardsmen and deputy sheriffs. These deputies were appointed by the county sheriff, who in turn was chosen by the legislature. To realize how far removed these peace officers are from popular control it must be understood that the upper house of the legislature is elected under a rotten borough system that grossly discriminates against the industrial districts.

Postpone Deportation of Ben Legere from Canadian Coal Country

By BARBARA FENINGSTON.
(For The Federated Press.)

SYDNEY, Nova Scotia, Oct. 8.—Deportation proceedings against Ben Legere, One Big Union organizer, of Lawrence, Mass., who has been active in the Nova Scotia coal fields, are postponed by the Canadian authorities.

Legere's activity was in Pictou county and on Cape Breton island among the miners and steel workers, where he has been unsuccessfully attempting to get the miners to join his dual union — the One Big Union. Legere was taken into custody by the Canadian immigration officer at Sydney. A complaint had been made to Ottawa that he had entered the country in violation of the immigration law. The charge was that he had served time in the United States. He admitted having served a year for participation in a textile strike in Little Falls, N. Y., in 1913, but held that this section of the immigration law applied only to offenses involving moral turpiture. The officer, ignorant of the meaning of the term and instructed to get Legere decided to hold him on that charge notwithstanding. An appeal was entered, bond of $1,000 presented and hearing set.

Miners and steel workers in Nova Scotia and other parts of Canada held protest meetings. The case was postponed. The miners in Nova Scotia and the workers thruout Canada are determined to continue the protest until the case is dropped.

RICH PALMER ESTATE STEALS $514,000 FROM CITY'S PUBLIC SCHOOLS

The Board of Education says: "Cut the teachers' salaries, increase the size of the classes, cut the teaching staff to the minimum."

The teachers say: "Stop tax-fixing and tax-dodging."

Both the teachers and the business men and manufacturers on the board of education admit that there is an alarming shortage of funds with which to run the public schools. The business men want to make up the deficit by cutting salary raises, firing 1,500 of the teachers, platooning the schools to avoid having to get more class rooms.

The teachers know that the trouble lies with graft among the ranks of the school officialdom, with the failure of rich corporations to pay their taxes, with the willingness of Chicago's city administration to let the tax-fixing go on.

The Chicago Teachers' Federation has issued a circular showing a typical example of tax-dodging by under-assessment. The valuation of land comprising the Palmer House site, as fixed by the real estate appraisers for the purpose of a loan, was $20,000,000. The valuation of the same land, as fixed by the board of assessors for the purpose of taxation, is only $7,425,000.

In other words, at the present rate of taxation, $514,000 is in this one instance being withheld from the public schools thru illegal under-assessment.

Railways in Canada Fire Large Numbers of Workers in Shops

MONTREAL.—The Canadian unemployment problem is being seriously increased by the large number of men now being laid off by the railways. Four hundred shopmen have been laid off here by the Canadian National, while thruout central Canada the number laid off by that railway is stated to be nearly 1,000. Several thousand are also to be laid off by the Canadian Pacific, the employes having voted for reduction in staff rather than in working time.

A new phase of the problem has arisen by the appeal to the ministers of railways by the secretary of the Canadian National federation of railway employes asking him to take up the question of employment. The federation has suggested that the reconditioning of engines and cars for future use would provide more work.

Clerks Strike for Raise.

PERTH, Western Australia, Oct. 8.—Clerks and stenographers employed in business shops and offices in the city of Fremantle and suburbs, on strike for increased wages, won a big victory. The minimum wage for adult clerks was raised by $2.50 per week with proportionate increases for juniors. The new minimum rate for adult male clerks is $22.50 and $15 for adult females. Where females are employed in the same capacity as males they will be paid the same wage. A 48-hour week was conceded, with overtime at time and a half.

STRIKE TALK HEARD AGAIN IN LAWRENCE

Multiple-Loom System Recruits Jobless Army

By ESTHER LOWELL
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent.)

LAWRENCE, Mass., Oct. 8.—Weavers employed by the Pacific Mills, largest cotton mills in the city, are debating whether or not to strike against the introduction of the multiple-loom system, which is hanging over their heads ready to shove three out of every four of them into the ranks of unskilled workers.

All summer long the weavers in Dover, N. H., fought against the destruction of the weavers' craft and their lack of success makes the Lawrence weavers hesitate.

Already the Pacific mills have had a picked weaver trying out the new plan by which the weaver acts as petty boss tending 72 looms instead of his accustomed 18. Three unskilled workers are allotted to each weaver under the multiple-loom system.

Will Scrap Veterans.

An old German weaver who has worked in the mills more than 30 years predicts that the new system will throw him and his fellow skilled craftsmen who have grown old in service into the class of boys. He says: "The younger men will be the petty boss weavers and we will be left to compete with unskilled workers and accept their wages in order to work at all."

Strike sentiment is weakened by the long slack period of the past year during which the mills, excepting the American Woolen company's great factories, have been running only six to sixteen days a month. Workers who had jobs at all found that there was work on only three or four days every two weeks. The cotton mill workers have been hardest hit, altho work is increasing slightly now. Wool on workers in the Selden, International, United States wool and worsted, and other Lawrence woolen mills have had work four days a week every week most of time.

Accept Low Wages.

Normally there are 35,000 textile workers in Lawrence. Less than a third of that number are now employed, workers estimate. Few of the jobless have succeeded in getting any other kind of work. After 14 months of part-time work all the workers whom I asked agreed that there was no possibility of a general strike in Lawrence, not until all the mills are working full time. Even the low wages—the weaver who tends 72 looms gets a paltry $30 a week for 48 hours work—are accepted for the present.

Lawrence has had three big strikes in 12 years and each time been well organized during the fight. Today there is only a trace of any organization functioning among the textile workers. The same fate of neglect befell the One Big Union which controlled the city during the 1922 strike as befell the I. W. W. and the Amalgamated Textile Workers after 1912 and 1919 respectively. Pacific mills workers are in the American Federation of Textile Operatives if they are in any union. The O. B. U. has closed its office and the United Textile Workers has practically no organization in the city, except among the loomfixers. The Amalgamated still claims a few members, but there is actually no actively functioning union of textile workers left in Lawrence. Judging from the statements of the many workers who talked to me and told of their former activities.

Seeks Cheap Labor.

William M. Wood, of the American Woolen company, "scoured Europe for cheap labor. As one supply was exhausted he tried another; Turks Greeks, Syrians, Arabs, etc., until it is a babel here and in time of a wage cut anyone can come in and organize the workers. The United Textile Workers is a conservative craft organization, originally built of the Irish, British and French workers who were first in the mills. The I. W. W. resented the influx of other aliens and did not attempt to organize them. Whenever anyone comes in during a crisis and appeals to these unorganized workers, by blackening all officials who have gone before, he gets the response of these workers who do not understand organizations well."

NOTICE! CHICAGO COMRADES!

Comrades will please call for the Special Chicago DAILY WORKER Edition on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week at the local office, 166 W. Washington Street, Room 300. The Chicago edition will be distributed free at factories, house-to-house, street meetings, etc. The edition advertises the William Z. Foster election campaign meeting Sunday afternoon, October 12, at Ashland Auditorium, Ashland and Van Buren. Branches of the party and Young Workers League shall appoint special squads to distribute at factories and shall assign territory to every member of the branch. 30,000 copies of the Special Chicago Edition have thus far been ordered. Branches can phone in at State 7985 additional orders at the rate of $8.00 per thousand. How many will your branch buy?

Stir the Shops!

The very best place to carry on a working class campaign is in the shops and factories where the workers gather to earn their living. It is there that minds are open to the measures, parties and candidates that stand for concrete solutions of the problems of bread and butter facing the working class. It is in the shops that the workers will see most clearly, for example, the difference between Foster, the union organizer and fighter for the workers, and LaFollette, the lawyer and fighter for the middle class. MANCHURIANS HAMMER AWAY AT WU FORCES

Russ Pact with Chang Angers Imperialists

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SHANGHAI, China, Oct. 8.—The Manchurian forces are continuing their fierce assaults on the Chihlian sector. An interne drive has been launched against the Peking army's position at Shankaikwan. Manchurian airplanes are inflicting heavy losses on their enemy lines. Several troop trains have been bombed successfully.

The effect of the severe defeat met by the Wei-Pu Fu forces at Jehol has been demoralizing to the Chekiang army. The loss of ten thousand men may be the undoing of the Peking defense and bring about an end of hostilities much sooner than many expect.

At this moment the foreign powers are extremely disturbed over the brilliant stroke of Soviet diplomacy in China. The imperialist groups are losing out with the Peking as well as the Chang sympathizers. The Manchurian war lord has imprisoned several "whites" who were in the management of the Eastern Chinese railway. The "white" official Ostromov and three of his colleagues are now behind the bars.

The arrangement between Chang and the Soviets as to the railway is especially important. First of all the imperialist interests have been interested in keeping it out of Soviet hands in order to enable them to utilize the lines as a base for hostilities against the Communist government. Besides, the leading powers are financially interested in the railway.

According to the Isvestia the situation sums itself up as follows: "The agreement is a new victory for Soviet diplomacy, a new victory over entente diplomacy, a new failure of entente imperialism and a defeat of the imperialist powers in China."

Firemen Brotherhood in Open Defiance of Railway Labor Board

CLEVELAND, Oct. 8.—Openly defying the railway labor board, D. B. Robertson, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, has invited managers of western railway systems to negotiate directly with the brotherhood on re-raising the wage scale.

The labor board recently assumed charge of the negotiation of the new contract and haled the brotherhood men to appear in Chicago. The issue is now in federal district court in Chicago.

The Brotherhood officials have ignored the labor board's summons and their latest step is a polite invitation to the corporation-controlled board to keep its hands off the railwaymen's disputes. The firemen are asking increases of 24 to 36 cents a day, which have already been granted by the eastern roads.

McANDREW PLAN FOR JUNIOR HIGH SCHOOLS ACCEPTED BY 'EDUCATORS'

Superintendent of Schools McAndrew's recommendation to the board of education for the installation of 14 junior high schools was passed by the board of education at its bi-monthly meeting yesterday afternoon.

McAndrew, who is trying to cut the budget must be reduced, in pushing the project to further departmentalize the public schools, increases the budget $1,200,000. Mrs. Heffner made an indirect attack upon Andrew Wilkie, in charge of the bureau of requisitions under McAndrew, when she suggested in talking on McAndrew's recommendation, that the four junior high schools now operating in the city are badly equipped and in need of funds, as shops not having been installed as yet. Mrs. Heffner declared the lack of equipment to be "due to the intolerable conditions prevailing in this era of requisitions."

Mrs. Heffner declared it is impossible to put thru the recommendation for 14 more junior high schools unless some change in the system of requisitions is made so as to allow the change to be put thru.

The question of whether or not principals of schools will be allowed to meet with the teachers was postponed until the next meeting two weeks hence. No reason was given for the postponement.

News From Our Readers On Different Subjects

The Navy As It Is.

To The DAILY WORKER:—I have read your comment on secretary of the navy Wilbur. Your last sehtence, "It is not the vulgarity but the truthful picture of war that the play in question presents which is causing the concern of our employing class hooligans in and out of uniform," sums it up correctly. It hits the nail on the head, and hits it hard.

Here is what a friend on whose statement I can rely, narrated to me. This was his first experience and insight into the ennobling life of our hero sailors. He was in Pensacola, Fla., this spring. Three destroyers were anchored and being cleaned up. On Saturday, he talked to a petty officer whose English was all but perfect, of middle age. He informed my friend that same could be inspected every day after 1 p. m. My friend got on the destroyer Sunday afternoon. A sailor just getting over a drunk volunteered to show him around. When they got down into the hold two young Americans joined them. One was perfectly refined looking; could pass for a millionaire's son, or the president's private secretary; the other one showed the imprint of a wage laborer. The guiding sailor became voluminous, and warming up to them, began to tell "tales from school." They corroborated rumors of insubordination, of drunkenness and debauchery. The bunks used as beds were very short, close to the ceiling and one could hardly turn around without bumping his head. The dining room tables looked more like butchers' blocks, only partly cleaned in the cracks. The same half-drunken guide claimed to have charge of a washing machine called laundry, but there was a little leisure when booze cannot be gotten. The guide was kind enough to offer refreshments to his three visitors from the flask in his hip pocket. The two youngsters who admitted having just come off the pile with $1 in their pocket after serving 30 days for vagrancy and having been hired out by the state, parlook of the hospitality, and after having stepped aside for the treat, came back blowing their breath exclaiming, "Hot stuff." My friend saw sailors coming back from shore drunk; some working while hardly able to stand up, others sleeping off the loads that weighed them down. No wonder," exclaimed my friend, "they fill the restaurants and hotels." Their board and lodging while on excursion seeing this glorious county of ours is not much better than the old steerage that brought the sturdy laborers and future capitalists into our shores.

Another blessing that keeps our youth clean and healthy is the fact that they are provided with temples where they worship the "Goddess of Love." There they are also supplied with fermented grape juice of a yellow transportation tinge. The temples are on a side street designated by an electric bulb outside. Entrance free, one need not even knock. They marched bravely in fours, undisturbed even by the policeman who was paid by the city to keep order. It struck my friend who was not a southerner, as being rather funny that the holy sabbath should be so desecrated by our civilizers of the heathen without the good church members and Ku Klux Klan breeds attempting to tar and feather them.—A Reader.

Comrade White Explains.

To the DAILY WORKER:—I wish to take the full responsibility upon my shoulders for the misstatement of Comrade Gitlow's Warren, Ohio speech, and in the notes in which I place him in a very non-communist attitude by my not quoting him verbatim, and thus leaving the impression that he had said something which he had not. I wish to thank him for calling my attention to the blunder I committed and I wish to say that after referring to the notes which I took at the meeting I hold myself wholly to blame for the error in not putting his words just as he uttered them during his speech in my report.

I certainly deserve more severe censure than he gave me for this unpardonable putting him in the light in which my report of his meeting leaves him, and I wish to say that his statement in the WORKER of Tuesday, September the 30th, is the position he took in his talk and not as I misreported him as saying. By referring to the notes taken at the meeting I find that he spoke as he defends himself, and I wish to vouch for the correctness of his words as used in the speech Once again thanking him for the calling my attention to my blunder, and trusting this may place Comrade Gitlow in a correct position and place the blame upon my shoulders where it belongs

I have always been such a poor Communist myself that I did this wrong to Comrade Gitlow thru a lack of knowledge of the fact, that every fight in which the working class engage the capitalist class, whether political or industrial, is a phase of the class war and as such is an effort by the workers to weaken and break down the resistance of the capitalist class and it thus becomes a political struggle. I take this occasion to right myself in this respect.

Again thanking Comrade Gitlow for his lenient treatment of my placing him in a wrong light I offer this in the hope it will set him in a proper light before the readers of the DAILY WORKER.

I remain yours for the revolution,
W. J. White,
Girard, Ohio.

What Hillquit Said in 1917.

To the DAILY WORKER:—In reading of Hillquit's refusal to debate Scott Nearing on "LaFollettelsm," I recall reading a booklet entitled "Socialism Summed Up" by Morris Hillquit, published in 1917. On page 46 he says:

"The socialists attach but slight importance to these 'good government' movements. They hold that paramount factor in politics is measures, not men—class interests, not personal qualities.

"The republican and democratic parties and every reform party organized by 'respectable' citizens are alike founded on the present order of society and consciously or unconsciously they stand for the preservation of that order and for the domination of wealth. They are managed and financed by the possessing class and political officials spring from these classes or are dependent on them for their careers. Whether they are personally good or bad, honest or dishonest, capable or incapable, they are tied to the capitalist class by environment, training, instinct and interest. Experience has demonstrated time and time again that 'good government' is powerless even to check simple crime and corruption in politics for any considerable time. It is indicrously ineffectual as an instrument for the betterment of the lot of the toilers.

"What the socialists are striving for is not a government of good capitalists, but a government of workers for all workers."

How anyone but a hypocrite can write that and then face about and not practice what he preaches, is beyond me.

Either Hillquit did not mean what he wrote or he has betrayed the working class by his surrender to "good government" in the guise of LaFollette.

Fraternally yours,
NATHAN ROBBOY.

LaFollette Idea Antiquated.

To the DAILY WORKER: Forty-five years ago I was in college. The professor in political economy was a "progressive." For the subject of an oration for a college entertainment he gave me "The Encroachments of Monopoly." He gave me the New York address of the "Anti-Monopoly League" from which I could get data. My oration was well received, vigorously applauded and got favorable comment by the town papers. Its burden was: Crush monopoly, extend competition, prevent special privilege, give all business, big and little an equal chance. In other words the progressivism of that time, 45 years ago, was exactly the same that is now being whooped up as an advance movement.

W. P. Alone Revolutionary.

At a later date I was in the St. Louis Industrial conference that put the Populist party on its feet. Powderly, with his Knights of Labor was then infinitely more radical than the Brotherhoods that tried to swap the Cleveland convention for a certain nomination by the democrats. But the Bryan democracy of 1896 swallowed the Populist party without in any way or to any degree disturbing its capitalist soul.

In 1901 I was in the socialist conference at Indianapolis that put the socialist party on its feet, and was especially impressed with the effort to have a constitution iron-bolted against any kind of compromise, or alliance with any capitalist fellowship.

Today, in 1924, the Communists have no rival in the field of revolutionary political action.—L. D. Ratlif.

Message From Furriers.

To the DAILY WORKER—"We are the workers in the Rees & Kass Furriers' shop. It is not a large shop. There are only six of us, but we protest against the action of the Executive Board in trying to force us to accept the endorsement of LaFollette.

"We stand for independent working class political action. We want a Labor Party, not a middle class LaFollette party.

"We stand behind the candidacy of Foster and Gitlow because the Workers' Party is the only independent working class political party in this election. We support them because the Workers' Party is the only organized force that is determinedly working to build the Labor Party, and we call on all of our fellow workers to join us in working for the success of the Workers' Party in this campaign.

"As we are not a large shop we cannot donate much to the campaign fund, but we the sending our first contribution of four dollars, and before long we will have more on our subscription lists."—Rees & Kass Furriers' Shop, New York City.

MACHINISTS LOCAL 390 GIVES $25 TO SACCO-VANZETTI FUND

Local union No. 390 of the International Association of Machinists donated $25.00 toward the Sacco-Vanzetti fund at their last meeting Tuesday night. The local sent the check to Ed Nockels, secretary of the Chicago Federation of Labor, to be forwarded. Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti have been ordered hung by Judge Thayer, of the Massachusetts supreme court, altho they were evidently framed up by New England enemies of labor.

The report of the delegates to the machinists' convention in Detroit was accepted after a lively discussion.

CHICAGO Y. W. L. TO MEET FRIDAY ON NUCLEUS ORGANIZATION PLANS; ALL MEMBERS URGED TO BE THERE

What will undoubtedly be one of the historic membership meetings in the Young Workers League will be held this Friday, October 10, at the Greek Hall, 722 Blue Island Avenue, by the Chicago organization.

The meeting has been called to explain to the entire Chicago membership the importance of the new plan for the reorganization of the league on the basis of shop nuclei thru the formation of six area branches in the city. This plan was adopted at the last meeting of the city central committee of the league, and all efforts are being made to carry the plan into effect.

The plan, which was drawn up by the national industrial department and the city committee in accord with the new national program of action, will be explained at the meeting this Friday by Max Shachtman, editor of The Young Worker, who will lead off on the discussion. All the members will take part in the discussion and questions on the plan will be answered.

The reorganization proposition has been greeted with enthusiasm by members of the league, for it means the first definite, large-scale step towards the re-orientation of the league from the territorial basis to the nucleus basis where young Communist work is carried on at the point where the class struggle is felt by the working youth.

All members of the league are strongly urged to come to the Friday meeting, since the plan to be presented and discussed there concerns vitally the future existence and growth in numbers and influence of the Young Workers' League. Don't forget the place, time and date: 722 Blue Island avenue; Friday, October 10, at eight p. m. sharp. All league members must attend. Party members and sympathizers are invited to come. Be there!

Didn't Have 15 Cents.

NOBLESVILLE, Ind., Oct. 8.—Claude Belzer, 18, who confessed slaying Robert Tompkins, a night watchman in an effort to obtain 15 cents for a movie show, said today he would repudiate his confession and plead not guilty. Belzer had hoped to escape the death penalty by pleading guilty and asked leniency because of his youth. His new move was unexplained.

Smallpox Hits Farmers

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Oct. 8.—State health department officials were notified today of a number of cases of smallpox which have reached almost to the epidemic stage in eastern Edgar County. The disease is believed to have started among foreign coal miners on the Indiana side. All those stricken in Illinois, the reports say, are members of farmers' families.

Joliet to be Scene of Soccer Battle for the Peel Cup

A mixed group of workers of the Workers' Sport and Athletic Association soccer team (formerly Athletic Section Karl Liebknecht branch of the Y. W. L.), will meet a steel workers' team of Joliet, Sunday Oct. 12. The game is to be played for the Peel cup.

The steel workers' team, the composed of proletarians, is under the guidance of the bosses, while the plant workers' sport and Athletic Association team is a representative of the small group of revolutionary athletes working for the ideas of the Red Sport International.

Joliet is to be the scene of the contest. A great number of the steel plant workers whom the Joliet players represent will be present to see the red soccer team exhibit the force not only of their ideas, but of their elbows knees and toe points.

Oil Lobbyists Active.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 8.—The large oil interests are busy trying to wheedle or threaten concessions from the Mexican government. O. W. Swaim for Standard Oil; Avery D. Andrews for Royal Dutch-Shell; J. M. Waitriss for Mexican Gulf; Dean Emery of the Huasteca Petroleum (Doheny); and J. A. Brown for Transcontinental Petroleum Co., are active.

Altho all these companies have made fabulous profits in the past, they ask for a reduction in duties on exports and for practical nullification of article 27 of the Mexican constitution, which provides that the owner of the sub-soil is the government.

LAFOLLETTE TALKS AS IF NO MILLIONAIRES WERE BACKING HIM IN THE RACE FOR THE WHITE HOUSE

(Special to the Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 8.—The charges being spread by the LaFollette, the democratic and the other opposing groups in the election contest, that a huge slush fund running into two millions is being gathered by the republican party in order to buy the presidential office in the campaign are proving extremely disquieting to the Coolidge clique.

A letter signed by Joseph R. Grundy, chairman of the Pennsylvania State Manufacturers' Association, asking that a fund of at least $600,000 be raised in the Keystone state in order to help the republican party carry some of the weaker, doubtful states is the target of the immediate attack that has been launched by the Wisconsin senator.

Mr. Grundy, who is chairman of the ways and means committee of the republican party expressly declared that the funds are "to be used elsewhere."

A demand is being launched for investigation of the entire matter. Some of the prominent industrial and financial magnates associated with the republican money drive are: E. T. Stotesbury, well-known Philadelphia banker and members of the firm of J. P. Morgan and Co.; W. T. Mellon, a brother of the secretary of the treasury, and prominently associated with the biggest steel and banking groups of the Pittsburgh district; S. D. Warriner, a notorious foe of labor and president of the Anthracite Operators' Association; Samuel M. Vauclain, president of the anti-union Baldwin locomotive works and William Butler, chairman of the national committee and a large stockholder in the textile industry of New England.

There is not much likelihood that the senate committee on campaign funds of which Borah is chairman will get into an investigation of the matter. There is less likelihood of the charges being aired thoroly even if an investigation should be held. Too many men of influence in both parties and in the LaFollette organization, might be drawn into the mess. Besides, Borah himself is engaged in a campaign for re-election, in which he is having a hard time.

Quit Seven-Day Jobs.

REDWOOD CITY, Cal., Oct. 8.—Workers in the Portland Cement Co. plant in Redwood City are on strike against a seven-day week with only straight time for overtime. Sundays and holidays. The strikers, 300 in number, include electricians, carpenters, machinists, pipe fitters, steelworkers, riggers and laborers. The machinists' union authorizes the strike. The men state that constant efforts were made to cut the pay below the union scale and that any man who refused the seven-day week was discharged. The company has answered the calling of the strike by shutting down its plant "pending settlement of labor difficulties."

Not the Melon Plan.

MELBOURNE, Australia, Oct. 8.—As a result of the favorable budget of the Australian federal government, which now has a surplus of over $50,000,000, the general income tax exemption is to be increased from $1,000 to $1,500. The married above the ordinary exemptions will be exemptions of $250 for each child below the age of 16. All persons in receipt of less than $6,000 per annum, or 96 per cent of the taxpayers will benefit. The tax payable by individuals who still remain in the field of income tax will be reduced by 10 per cent.

FLIGHT OF SHENANDOAH IS STUNT TO WORK UP PEP FOR NAVY DAY

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Oct. 8.—The navy dirigible Shenandoah, which is making a transcontinental flight to drum up militaristic sentiment leading up to "Navy Day," scheduled for the end of October, sailed over Birmingham yesterday. The United States has been developing the lighter than air machines, which are being made in Germany, as an improvement over the airplane for certain phases of war in the air. The ZR-3, which was to have left Friedrichshafen yesterday, is the latest airship bought by the United States in preparation for the next war.

The dirigible expected to reach Dallas, Texas, by nightfall yesterday.

WORKERS OF NEW YORK! REGISTER!

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 8.—Registration for voting in the coming presidential elections lasts in New York until Saturday, October 11, and it is most important for all Workers Party members and sympathizers to register this week, so that they will be eligible to vote for Foster and Gitlow, Communist candidates for president and vice-president in the elections on Nov. 7.

This is registration week. Comrade H. M. Winitsky, campaign manager of the Workers Party for New York, announces that Communist sympathizers must bear in mind the election laws which make it necessary for new voters to take a literacy test before they are permitted to register for voting at the elections. All Party headquarters in New York State are reminded to assist as much as possible all persons inquiring about the literacy test and registration.

First Donation to Paterson Strikers Received by Daily

The first donation for the striking Paterson silk strikers arrived in the DAILY WORKER business office yesterday, a check for $5 being sent from J. Feldon, Warehouse Point, Connecticut. "I can't afford just now to part with five dollars," writes Feldon, "but we have got to realize that the fight of the silk workers is the concern of every worker in the country. Above all the Communists must demonstrate to the workers that we are with them and for them in their struggles against the employers.

"Kindly turn the enclosed $5 over to the striking silk workers in Paterson."

Dirty Linen in City Hall.

Mayor Dever as been charged by attorney Edgar A. Cook with obstructing an investigation of the pension board, in a letter the attorney wrote to alderman Arthur Albert. Corporation counsel Francis Busch is also charged with attempting to block investigation of the pension board. Attorney Cook declared, "Those who are shouting the loudest for the investigation really want a quiet hearing, the guilty to be handled with silk gloves."

Attorney Cook, who has been retained by the sub-committee to conduct an inquiry into the funds, charges that Busch has constructed himself several times in the last few days when talking about the pension probe.

SCHOOL BOARD AIMS TO WEED OUT MILITANTS

Aggressive Fighters Will Be First to Go

A deficit is piling up in the educational funds of the city of Chicago at the rate of two and a half million dollars a year. The reason is known to anyone who has lived any length of time in Chicago. Valuable property is escaping taxation. Even the mayor of the city has admitted that to be the cause.

But a board of education composed chiefly of men and women who are the puppets of big business meet the deficit in the school funds with the recommendation that the schools are to be crowded even more than they are today and from one to two thousand teachers are to be thrown out of employment.

"They are aiming directly at the backbone of the Teachers' Federation," said Miss Margaret Haley, in discussing the new financial program offered by the auditing department of the board. "Who do you think will be the teachers dropped in this economy scheme. Of course those who have taken an aggressive stand in this fight. They will weed out of the schools the best fighting spirits the Chicago schools have.

"Then they will proceed to instill fear into the teachers by threat of loss of jobs. And under the lash of fear and insecurity they will attempt to reduce the teacher to a spineless, cringing being. This is the type of men and women they wish to develop for the teaching of our children. Can you imagine such a teacher being an inspiration to her pupils?"

Agitate to Organize The Photographers In New York City

(Special to The DAILY WORKER.)

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—A mass meeting of the Photograph Workers' Union of America has been called for Monday night, Oct. 13, at the Stuyvesant Casino, 140 Second Ave., to discuss plans of organizing the unorganized photograph workers and devise means of strengthening the Photographers' Union.

Local New York of the Photograph Workers has sent out a call for the meeting which says in part:

"Do you know that wages have been steadily going down towards the $20 a week mark?

"Are you just going to let things slide? If so, you are heading towards further lower wages, longer hours and intolerable working conditions; or are you willing to come together with your fellow-craftsmen, and join in a mighty efforts to gain material advancement?

"These are big questions that await your answer and upon their solution depends your future livelihood.

A mass meeting of the Photographic Workers' Union of America has been called for Monday evening, Oct. 13, 1924, at 8 o'clock, at Stuyvesant Casino, 140 Second Ave., near 9th St.

"Bear in mind that in union there is strength! Come, attend this meeting and join us.

"Yours fraternally, the Photographic Workers' Union of America, Local New York."

Freiheit Society's Fall Dance.

A Fall Dance has been arranged by the Freiheit Singing Society and Mandolin Orchestra for Saturday, Oct. 11, 1924, 8 p. m. at Roosevelt Hall, 3427 W. Roosevelt Road. The admission, including wardrobe, is only 50 cents. The Freiheit Singing Society and Mandolin Orchestra are well known to workers and comrades in Chicago. They have sung and played at many gatherings of the party, and deserve the support of all party and league members and left wing sympathizers.

All arrangements have been made to celebrate opening of the new headquarters secured by the Freiheit Singing Society and Mandolin Orchestra on Saturday evening, Oct. 12, 1924, 8 p. m., at 2837 W. Roosevelt Road. A splendid program has been prepared and a good time is assured. All workers and party members are invited.

PAY ENVELOPE NOT HELPED BY 'B. & O.' PLAN

Toiler on Big Railroad Calls It "The Bank"

Editor's Note: The following is the first of a series of articles sent out by the Federated Press on the "B. & O. Plan," which the machine of President William H. Johnstone foisted on the membership of the machinists' union at the recent convention in Detroit. The "B. & O. Plan," which must now be put to a referendum vote of the members of the machinists' union, has been installed by the machinists' reactionary officialdom in the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad shops in Glenwood, Pa.

Tom Tippett, in the first of the articles, tells how the "class collaboration" plan has been working in Glenwood. The "B. & O. Plan" of Johnston, the LaFollette follower, is the most brazen attempt up to date of the reactionary trade union officials to sell out their union membership to the employers.

So far, most of the trade union officials have flopped to the camp of the capitalists on only one field—be it either industrial or political. But Johnston, president of the machinists, has been active in attempting to sell the workers on both fields of struggle. In politics, Johnston has sabotaged all attempts for independent working class political action. On the industrial field he has tried to sell out the membership of his union by means of the "B. & O. scheme."

By TOM TIPPETT.
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent.)

GLENWOOD, Pa., Oct. 8.—After experimenting one year with the Glenwood co-operative plan the men at work in the Baltimore and Ohio railroad shops are beginning to wonder where their share of the results is coming from. So far the plan has succeeded beyond expectations, but the benefactor is the B. & O. and unless it shows signs of including the workers in the division of returns the bottom will fall out of this new panacea.

At least that is the opinion of the rank and file members of the federated shop craft unions that comprise the road's working force and are doing the co-operating. The shops employ about 400 men, most of whom are union members.

The co-operative plan was installed here a year ago after the strike that almost destroyed the railroad organization. O. S. Beyer, jr., with Wm. H. Johnston, head of the machinists' union, induced president Daniel Willard of the B. & O. to try it out on that system. Beyer is now employed by the union. He installed the proposition here and supervises it.

The plan has been extended all over the B. & O. system with the heads of the shopmen's unions eager to expand it to other roads. The Glenwood plan is intended to "help the stabilization of employment on the B. & O. railroad, thereby producing a situation of satisfaction and a contented personnel with improved morals and consequently improvement in service and production by greater efficiency and better quality of work."

A biweekly co-operative meeting is held in the shop. The workers are represented by eight men. Across the table are eight bosses from the company side of the house. The business of the joint committee is:

"To meet for frank discussion of questions relating to the planning and carrying on of work and having in mind that the specific purpose of these meetings is mutual helpfulness and not one of criticism or fault finding. It is understood that these meetings are not for the purpose of discussing or adjusting grievances."

A perusal of the minutes of such a meeting on March 19 showed that 76 separate suggestions were entertained and acted upon at this one meeting. The character of the questions and action taken may be seen in the following items chosen at random:

1. Installation of furnace in the blacksmith shop for use of boiler force.—Referred for attention of general committee, Baltimore.

2. Opening of apprentice school.—Referred to Dist. Master Mechanic but no advice rec'd.

3. Installation of separate drinking fountains for colored and white employes.—Ten white and four colored signs painted.

4. Condition of toilets.—Referred to division engineer for handling and is taken up with Gen. Supt.

5. Suggestions that ladders be built for use of employes when performing work on locomotives to avoid loss of time by climbing up thru cabs, etc.—Referred to care foreman to have these built.

So far as the local committee can remember the company has offered but one suggestion in the co-operative meetings and that was an unimportant item regarding work checks.

The co-operative machinery does not in any way interfere with that of the trade unions. They carry on their business as before or as they do on roads where the plan is unknown. If a worker has a grievance against the boss over some question covered by union agreement he applies to the union for redress.

The men have diligently carried out the co-operation. Before the plan was established the material shop expense per man was $15.08 a month. Now it is $7.43. Repair work on locomotives that used to take 60 days is now done in 21. Engines that were formerly overhauled in contract shops are now repaired at home at a saving of $4,000 per engine to the company. Men who would not go along with the efficiency stunts were gotten rid of, according to the men in the shops.

Continuity of work, the only definitely stated benefit to the workers stated in the plan has not been fully realized. There are still furloughs here as in other shops. The wages paid are mechanics, 73 cents per hour helpers, 50 cents, laborers, 40 cents. If the company doesn't want to carry out a proposal it doesn't.

My interview with the workers' co-operative committee and the local union heads brot out the following:

The meeting is in the washroom of the shop at noon. There are 18 workers in overalls present. The question each answered in turn was: "What is your honest opinion of the co-operative plan, speaking for publication."

The replies were:

"The plan is all right. It gets production but we haven't got anything out of it. This is one sided co-operation."

"I'd be for this thing strong if we had a man on the company board of directors so that we could have something to say in the actual management of the road. We have a right to benefits for all the extra work we've done. As it is I'm not for it."

Five others—ditto.

"I'm for it strong. It isn't working as it should but that's because it's new. It will take time. The company isn't coming across now but it will."

"It's the bunk. We got rid of the agitators. But the company didn't get rid of the men we didn't like. As an efficiency plan, this is it but we want to see the results in our pay envelope."

"This plan has brot us nearer to the company. We're now talking to you and we really ought to be working, that is an improvement—(it was a few minutes past whistle time)—and we have a promise of steady work."

Dawes Plan Next Logical Step for U. S. Imperialism

In the London negotiations it may have been the voices of Hughes and Mellon that were heard but the hands of Morgan and Lamont guided the decisions.

Three Imperialist Doctrines.

The Monroe, the Hay and the Dawes doctrines forge a powerful chain—link by link—bounding and limiting the spheres of influence, the vassal countries of the expanding American imperialist domain. The three doctrines reflect three epochs, three stages in the development of capitalist imperialism in the United States.

The Monroe doctrine ordained the closed door in Latin America for all other capitalist national groups. It served notice on these capitalist powers that the political domination of the weak, industrially undeveloped Latin American countries was the sole privilege of American imperialism.

Then came the Hay doctrine which decreed the so-called Open Door policy in the Far East, the guarantee of "equal and impartial trade with all parts of the Chinese Empire" ostensibly for all powers, but in reality and primarily for the Yankee imperialists. Soon the Hay doctrine superseded in importance and urgency the Monroe flat, tho it did not displace the first commandment of American capitalist aggression. The Hay doctrine, it will be remembered, was the foundation for the Washington conference.

Dawes Plan Logical Step.

Today the Dawes doctrine is the composite expression of the aims and plans of American imperialism. The Dawes doctrine, which is the last word in the attempt of our ruling class to establish their financial and commercial world hegemony, does not do away with the Monroe and Hay policies but is only the logical next step of these policies.

The Monroe, Hay, and Dawes doctrines are characterized by the same underlying principles. The three doctrines have been formulated to avert "dangers" to American political institutions and economic aggrandizement. In the three doctrines the American employing class government reserves to itself the right of final definition, interpretation and application. The three doctrines were conceived as war plans—brewing a hell-brew that could only explode.

Why the Present European Policy.

If one will analyze the conditions in which the Dawes plan took root in the United States, he will find that there were four outstanding, impelling forces making for large-scale, intense American participation in and domination of European political and economic affairs. These forces, underlying the politico-economic situation in the United States and in Europe, have been at work simultaneously and jointly.

The causes of America's adoption of an out-and-out aggressive, active European policy may be enumerated as follows: (1) The pressing need for a foreign outlet for the superfluous capital, particularly gold, which has been accumulating in the United States. (2) The imperialist plans of American capitalism to secure a firmer hold on the industries and markets of the world in order to minimize the detrimental economic effects of its productive system which became highly overdeveloped as a result of the artificial stimulus of the war needs. (3) The Yankee imperialists' growing consciousness of the menace to its own economic structure in the sharp challenge of the International Communist, the revolutionary movement to the war-weakened capitalism of the European countries.

Rapid Course of Industrial Development.

America is today not only the workshop but the pantry of the world. As a result of the war it has become the mightiest reservoir of capital. The war dealt the death-blow to the period of financial isolation for the United States. Mr. Harvey E. Fisk in his volume, "The Inter-Ally Debts," published by the Bankers Trust Company, has estimated that on June 30, 1923 there were invested abroad 7,650 million dollars. This sum is exclusive of the eleven billion dollars that is due to the United States government by foreign government debtors. In 1913 the total foreign investment of the United States was only 2,605 million dollars. Allowing for the depreciation of the value of the dollar in this decade, we find that the American foreign investment is today at least 5,000 million 1913 gold dollars, or an increase of nearly one hundred per cent.

Before 1850 the United States was primarily an underdeveloped agricultural country. From 1850 to 1920 America's population increased 3.6 times. In this same period, however, the physical production of agricultural crops rose 5.2 times; manufacturing increased 28 times; and mining more than 77 times. Between the years of 1900 and 1920 the volume product—not the value—of American industries increased 95 per cent, while the population increased only 40 per cent.

Within the boundaries of the United States we find 40 per cent of all the installed water-power of the world; 35 per cent of the railroad mileage; 57 per cent of all telegraph and telephone lines; the production of 41 per cent of the world's cereals; 71 per cent of the cotton; 50 per cent coal; 54 per cent iron; 64 per cent steel and petroleum; and 52 per cent of its timber.

American Industries Top-Heavy.

Discussing the economic effects of the surplus producing capacity of the United States as a consequence of the world war, Prof. Walter R. Ingalls declared in the Annalist of June 2, 1924: "First class producing and manufacturing capacity in this country was abnormally expanded to meet wartime demands. We know that the excess ought to have been written off and amortized at once. But we have tried to eat our cake and keep it too. The result today is that many industries are carrying dangerous burdens of inflated overhead and personnel—perhaps in some cases even inflated financing."

And at the last convention of the National Purchasing Agents' Association held in Boston it was authoritatively stated that American manufacturers can produce in seven months all the commodities needed for national consumption during the whole year. What the speaker really meant and should have said is: all that the working and exploited farming masses can buy back from the bosses on the basis of their wages and meager income gotten in twelve months in addition to the amount consumed by the owning class.

According to an analysis made by the Federal Reserve Bank of New York and the Standard Statistics Co., on the basis of the peak of activity reached in any month in 1923 by twenty leading industries, we learn that the excess industrial capacity compared with normal requirements was 31 per cent in the motor industry; 52 per cent in sugar; 37 per cent in the meat industry; 30 per cent in oil; 29 per cent in shoes; 28 per cent in steel; 26 per cent in flour; 24 per cent in iron and 16 per cent in coal. In fact, many of these industries could have been operated to produce at an even higher rate than in the peak months.

Seek Foreign Outlet.

It is plain to the most purblind that there is getting to be less and less room for profitable re-investment in the United States for the surplus capital with which the American capitalist class is gorged. More and more foreign loans have been serving as an outlet. From January to July 1, 1924, flotations in America for interests outside of the country have totalled about four hundred million dollars. Foreign flotations are today running on a larger scale in New York than in London. Many expect the sum to reach a billion dollars by the end of the year. The overbuilt, topheavy condition of American industrial plant equipment is driving an increasing portion of the capital investment fund elsewhere. The companies taking out charters in the first five months of 1924 showed a decrease of eleven per cent in number and thirteen per cent in authorized capital as compared with the same period for 1923. One of the primary causes of the present wave of unemployment is this top-heaviness.

Great Inflow of Gold.

Since the world war there has also been a great flow of gold from the other countries to the United States. The director of the mint has officially declared that on August 1, 1924 the United States held about fifty per cent of the world's monetary gold, more than four and a half billion dollars worth. Since 1910 the gold stock of the United States increased 175 per cent. In the four years before the world war the American gold stock showed an average annual increase of seventy million dollars. Since the war the inflow of yellow metal has been terrific. In 1921 alone the increase in gold bullion was more than 800 million dollars.

While America is facing this plethora of surplus capital, a shortage of capital is manifesting itself in many parts of the world. Germany and Poland, for example, are forced to pay terrifically high interest rates. Similarly such money is available for a few favored American capitalists. The present rate for call money is 2 per cent. Bankers' acceptances can be had on a 1% and 3 per cent basis for thirty days. Nine day money can be had at 1½ per cent. Four years ago the rediscount rate of the New York Federal Reserve Bank was seven per cent. At present after a third reduction in one year it is [illegible] per cent—the lowest anywhere in the world and in the history of the Federal Reserve System. Thus has America's surplus gold wealth swelled its bank credit.

This credit structure has been further dangerously broadened by the Federal Reserve Banks' continued purchase of government securities at a time when rediscount rates were low. From November, 1923, to July, 1924, the Federal Reserve Banks have increased their holdings of government securities from seventy-three to four hundred and seventy-seven million dollars in an effort to be able to put the brake on in case the country is again confronted with the danger of inflation.

Fear Danger to American Financial Power.

The danger of this glut of the money markets due to the unprecedented flow of gold to American shores has been clearly seen by the solons of Yankee big finance. On May 12, 1924, the advisory council of the federal reserve board, consisting of the most eminent bankers of the different sections of the country, held a meeting in Washington to consider the seriousness of the situation and to indorse strongly the Dawes plan as a means of relieving this super-saturated credit condition. We quote in part from its significant statement:

"It is obvious that our credit power cannot continue to grow indefinitely without the danger of oversaturation. If the stream of gold that floods our shores is not stemmed in time, it is to be feared that, ultimately, we will not be able to ward off its inflationary effects. And inflation would only aggravate the economic maladjustment already existing within our own boundaries; a maladjustment which not only disturbs and endangers our trade with other countries, but which makes our agricultural situation particularly difficult and distressing."

Then the report goes on to urge the re-establishment of the universal gold standard as the best way out of the difficulties facing the capitalist world. It continues to argue strongly for the adoption of the gold standard by the Dawes plan bank issue in Germany in order to hasten the other countries' adoption of the gold basis, which is today the dollar basis. The this proposal is made as a solution for the world's ills, it is fundamentally and foremost an effort by the American capitalist class to save itself

Altruism Threadbare.

In the light of these facts, the lofty and altruistic motives that are so much emphasized in the plans of the American capitalists to aid European reconstruction become threadbare. The economic why and wherefore of American imperialism initiating and being for the Dawes scheme becomes plain—ugly—starkly naked. These are the economic conditions giving rise to the development of the latest stage in American imperialism — the Dawes doctrine.

ARRANGE TOUR FOR SALZMAN IN MINNESOTA

Will Visit Y. W. L. Units in Minnesota

Max Salzman, organizer for the Young Workers League, will tour the Minnesota district for the organization.

In this tour he will cover the important industrial centers in addition to the small mining towns, where in the past the workers have gone thru bitter struggles.

This trip is being made to strengthen the units of the organization, and also to acquaint the members with the plan of work adopted by the National Executive Committee of the Y. W. L.

On this trip special attention will be paid to the work in the industrial centers, where thousands of young workers are employed.

The dates are as follows:

Monday, Oct. 13 to Wednesday, Oct. 22, Minneapolis and St. Paul.
Thursday, Oct. 23, Brainerd.
Friday, Oct. 24, Cromwell.
Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 25-26, Cloquet.
Monday, Oct. 27 to Monday, Nov. 3, Superior and Duluth.
Tuesday, Nov. 4, Hibbing.
Wednesday, Nov. 5, Chisholm.
Thursday, Nov. 6, Virginia.

British Imperialism and MacDonald

It is the irony of fate that the two acts of the Macdonald government which the masses forced it to perform against its will are the issues on which the liberals and tories are challenging it and on which the resulting election will be fought.

The recognition of and the treaty with Soviet Russia and the quashing of the indictment returned against the editor of the Workers Weekly for telling soldiers and sailors not to shoot their fellow-workers are the only two acts of the MacDonald government that have had any working class character. The treaty was signed because the left wing laborites in the House of Commons threatened to go before their working class constituents if there was further delay.

The indictment against Comrade Campbell was dropped because the Communists had the support of the majority of the organized workers when they pointed out that certain members of the MacDonald government, among them MacDonald himself, had said just about the same thing during the war before power and association with imperialists had squelched their pacifism.

It was the organized might of the British workers that was responsible for these two measures and not the MacDonald government. It has allowed the imperialists a free hand in India, Irak, Persia, the Sudan and China. It has built battleships for the financiers and the industrial capitalists. It is for the League of Nations with Britain holding the power. It has taken up the hue and cry against Soviet Georgia and gave moral support, at least, to the abortive and hopeless attempt of the Georgian mensheviks to overthrow the power of the Georgian workers and peasants.

It is for the Dawes plan and the slavery and exploitation of European workers that is the intent of the plan.

It has traded its heritage for a series of compromises and betrayals of labor that rank with the worst exploits of the German social-democracy.

It has not tried to weaken the hold of British capitalism upon the working class in any way. It discarded, immediately on taking office, the capital levy and nationalization of the mines.

It threatened the British workers, when they went on strike, with the application of the Emergency Powers Act, the equivalent of martial law.

Since the signing of the Russian treaty the British imperialists have conducted a systematic campaign against Soviet Russia on all fronts with the unexpected result that not only did China sign the Russian treaty in spite of them but also turned over the operation of the Chinese Eastern Railway to Soviet Russia. Meantime the Hull conference of the British Trade Union Congress showed that the British labor movement was developing a new militancy.

The function that the imperialists expected the MacDonald government to perform, that of toning down and emasculating the labor movement, it has not, in spite of its studied efforts, been able to carry out and its usefulness to British imperialism is almost at an end. It might indeed, under growing pressure from the rank and file of labor, cause the imperialists much embarrassment.

There are many conflicting interests within British capitalism itself and the capitalists are not a unit in the struggle to rid themselves of a government that came to power largely thru their sufferance but we think that this is about the process of reasoning by which the tories and liberals arrive at the conclusion that MacDonald has outlived his usefulness.

This policy is a dangerous one for British capitalism because it is possible that the labor party may be returned to power and even tho it losses the election in will have a powerful minority in the House of Commons that swept in on wave of working class protest, may prove much harder to handle than the present Macdonald government.

A New Epoch in China

From the standpoint of world politics the agreement between the Soviet Russia and China by which the control and operation of the Chinese Eastern Railway is turned over to the Soviet government is of far more importance than even the Dawes plan. To secure control for themselves has been the objective of imperialist strategy in China.

The striking part of this new development is that, in spite of their differences over domestic affairs, the most powerful groups in China are satisfied with the arrangement. Sun Yan Sen, the leader of the influential revolutionary Kuomingtang, approves of it. So does the Peking government and Chang Tso-Lin, nominally the instrument of Japanese, French and English capital (depending on which power bids the highest) has signed a similar agreement.

This shows just one thing and shows it conclusively i. e. that Soviet Russia is looked upon by the Chinese as a real friend and ally whose desire is just the reverse of the western powers, a desire not to divide but to assist China to become a strong and united nation.

News of the negotiations have been carried by the capitalist press for months but the actual consummation of the agreement has created a panic in imperialistic circles. Coincident with the singing of the agreement the Soviet government has opened its embassy in Peking and established consulates in the principle cities of China. Over all the consulates flies the crimson banner of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

The Chinese people will have no difficulty in understanding the Soviet diplomats. M. Ellender, Soviet Consul general in Shanghai, in the course of his speech at the reception accorded him when the consulate was opened, called attention to the fact that Soviet Russia came to China peacefully and as an equal while the imperialist powers were present with warships and guns to protect foreign financial interests exploiting the Chinese people. Such a statement is unanswerable and such revolutionary diplomacy more dangerous than dynamite to the profit-making projects of the imperialist nations.

The news from Peking, read in connection with the events in Shanghai, is comedy of a high order. It seems that the hopes of the allied powers are now pinned on General Wu. The British minister presented him with a set of binoculars and the Japanese minister gave him several cases of Japanese wines. The Asiatic Petroleum Company, an American concern, has presented him with two carloads of oil. The spectacle of these dignitaries conducting themselves like a bartender in a water front joint when a drunken sailor rolls in will not escape the Chinese people who are a silent but an observant race.

But General Wu is not going to get back the Chinese Eastern Railway for the imperialists. They have been presented with an accomplished fact which tends more than any one thing to unite the Chinese factions. The Russian ambassador in Peking, M. Karakhan, has described accurately this new development as "a crushing blow to the imperialist states, destroying their last chance to grasp the eastern railway." It binds Soviet Russia and China close together with a common bond that is strengthened by the efforts of the imperialists to break it.

A new epoch is beginning in China—an epoch in which the power of the western imperialists is waning and which marks the rise of Soviet Russia to a position of leadership and comradeship with the toiling millions of the Orient.

In every nation whose ruling class is meddling in Chinese affairs there must be carried on a campaign that will divorce the working class from the aims of their rulers, that will make it impossible for the imperialist nations to mobilize armies for the subjugation of the Chinese masses or for a war on the workers' and peasants' government of Russia, which they no longer ridicule but fear.

Hands Off the World!

President Coolidge has added another chapter to the "Hands Off" diplomacy of American imperialism. On the occasion of the dedication of a monument to the memory of the dead of the First Division, the president declared: "We do not propose to intrust to any other power, or combination of powers, any authority to make up our mind for us.

The "silent" Chief Executive then went on to thunder about the United States government being the best in the world today; with Coolidge at its head, of course. The Dawes Plan was hailed as the one panacea which will lay "a firmer foundation for industrial prosperity and a more secure peace."

The pith of the president's address is this: Hands off America! It is a warning to the League of Nations that the United States will not brook even the faintest notions aimed at influencing the course of American policy. The speech is a direct reply to the League of Nations' deliberation on the protest of Japan against the American exclusion policy. The president has simply served notice on the other capitalist cliques that his bosses, the American imperialists, are strongly dissatisfied with a good deal of the talk that has been going on in Geneva.

When the president talks of the Dawes plan in this speech he reminds the European capitalist classes that America is saving their economic system. But the president, in his plea for the world's putting faith in the altruistic purposes of American capitalism, does not say a word about the fact that the United States is compelled by its own economic conditions and by the challenge of the revolutionary working class movement, the communist movement, to international capitalism, to embark upon the Dawes course.

All in all, the Coolidge speech is a war speech. The president, in the toga of the spokesman of our imperialist aristocracy, has decreed that it is proper and necessary for the United States, for its ruling class, to extend sway over the world, to interfere in and determine the infernal affairs of Europe and the rest of the world. Yet, the economic class interests of Yankee capitalism, all its resources, its military and naval prowess forbid any other capitalist group attempting such a policy and practice against the United States.

There is but one answer to this defiance hurled at the world by Mr. Coolidge. The workers of the United States and the other countries should reply in a forceful chorus to the American imperialists: Hands Off The World!

Send in that new "sub" today!

Mr. Davis and Don Chafin

By MAX SHACHTMAN.

DON CHAFIN, notorious tool of the coal companies of Logan County, West Virginia, has been indicted by the grand jury for partnership in a "speakeasy" together with Tennis Hatfield, one of the sons of the late "Devil Anse" Hatfield.

Don Chafin is the democratic leader of Logan County. He is one man who, at the national democratic nominating convention in July, was the foremost advocate of the nomination being given to John W. Davis, West Virginian native son. When others laughed at the possibility of Davis being named, Chafin, his two guns hanging from under his armpits in the regular manner, continued to lobby for the candidate of Wall Street and the non-union coal interests of West Virginia. He is generally credited with having had one of the major parts and being the most active politician in the scheme to put Davis across.

A Booze Artist.

Chafin is now under charges, in the United States district court at Huntington, for conspiracy to violate the law of the land, the Volstead act, and for engaging, unlawfully in the retail liquor business. The indictment sets out as the basis for the charges the assertion that:

"the said Tennis Hatfield paid to the said Don Chafin divers and different large sums of money, among other sums, that of eleven hundred and twelve dollars, which was paid by the said Tennis Hatfield in the said Logan County on or about the ... day of August A. D., 1922. ... which ... was derived from the unlawful sale of intoxicating liquors sold pursuant to said unlawful conspiracy, confederation, combination and agreement."

It is interesting to see what sort of man this is who put Davis across. It would also be interesting to hear what Mr. John W. Davis, who has just made a grand splurge about our dear and non-existent liberties in this country would say about this latest act of his lieutenant. It would be still more interesting to hear what this same Mr. Davis, the presidential nominee of the democratic party, this friend of labor and liberty, would say about the infamous record of his political tooter.

Who Is Don Chafin?

The question: "Who is Don Chafin?" can be asked only outside of the state of West Virginia. In that thug-ruled state, there is not a youngster that could not tell you of Don Chafin. And if he were the son of a worker, he would speak of "Ol Don" in no polite terms. Very few workers can speak of Chafin in friendly terms in that state and maintain the respect of his friends and mates.

When the United States entered the war, unionism among the coal diggers of District 17 grew swiftly, from five to forty-two thousand. Only one county was closed to union organization: Logan County, ruled by Don Chafin and his pickets, or "deputies," thugs—every mother's son of them. The story goes that when a man would come into town who was suspected by Chafin to be a union organizer, he was told to leave on the next train or have his head blown off. Usually, the man left town. Chafin is a good gunman and has a score of notches to his gun despite his forty years.

When the union finally managed to filter into Logan county, Don Chafin, officially the county clerk, got busy. The well-founded rumors of beatings, evictions and brutal murders of miners who exercised their "constitutional rights," Mr. John W. Davis, soon reached the organized portions of the state. And the miners of the other counties, Mr. Davis, did not permit any law to stand in the way of their fundamental liberties; they took their rifles and shotguns and revolvers and began the famous Armed March of September, 1919. And your Mr. Chafin might not be alive today had it not been for the presence of the governor of the state and the president of the Miners' district union, who intercepted the indignant marchers just over the border of Logan county, and persuaded with false promises to turn back.

And in August, 1921, when thousands of miners marched on Logan county, incensed at the cold-blooded murder of Sid Hatfield on the courthouse steps in Welch where he had been tricked into a trap, who was it that met them? When these thousands of American workers attempted to assert the rights they were told they possessed, who was it that led an army of thugs and gunmen to defeat this noble attempt? Don Chafin. And the whole crew of them.

And do we remember you as having said a single word, Mr. John W. Davis, when Don Chafin, your man, and your good friend the governor, Mr. Morgan, contrived to send hundreds of state troopers to the defense of the coal companies in their fight against the union? Where were you then with your speech? Where are you now when Don Chafin is in the hole?

And if memory serves us well you didn't say a word either, when your man, Chafin, now indicted for bootlegging, fitted out his two airplanes so that they could drop bombs of Christian civilization and democratic persuasion on the grouped miners who had come to "defend the constitution." In fact, tho we wrack our mind, we cannot even recall that you uttered a word of protest against the first bomb that was dropped and fell between two women, Sallie Polly and Lizzie Oxley, who would have been blown to bits but for the stupidity of your friend Chafin who was unable to construct a bomb that would not be so clumsily manufactured that it failed to explode. Not a syllable passed your lips when another bomb sent Duis Chambers to the hospital, gassed with the chlorine wafted by your ingenious Mr. Chafin.

Don Chafin is now under indictment for conscious violation of the law of the land, together with a number of his appointed deputy sheriffs. Don Chafin has a not unenviable record of militant anti-unionism. Don Chafin was the gunman who helped to put Davis on the democratic ticket last July.

We have already exposed in the DAILY WORKER the false pretentions of Davis who claims to have defended the miners in West Virginia in a strike action, by showing that Davis was the attorney for the coal companies which were instrumental in prosecuting the miners, amongst whom was Mother Jones.

Wes are glad to give here a glimpse of the record of the outstanding supporter of Davis. It is a significant sign of the interests behind Davis, behind the democratic party.

A New $2\frac{1}{2}$ International

By John Pepper

A NEW host of Vikings are setting out from Norway and Sweden to conquer the big, wide world: Tranmael and Hoeglund plan the formation of a "Scandinavian International" which they hope to transform presently into a real "international international". Tranmael proudly declares that this new International will neither bow to Moscow nor to Amsterdam. The Czaewinkle-Congress of the Hoeglund group declared that this new International is to unite all Communist and other revolutionary parties which are outside of the Communist International. Hence we have to deal with a new edition of the $2\frac{1}{2}$ International. The first appearance of the $2\frac{1}{2}$ International in the labor movement could, with some good will, be called a tragedy. The second, however, is unquestionably a farce.

The initiative for the formation of this new $2\frac{1}{2}$ international originated with the Norwegian labor party. On Aug. 28th its Christiania organ "Arbeiderbladet" published an article under the heading "The International". Tranmael rings the death-knell for the Communist International in this article: "It is clear now that the Communist movement cannot be saved by the Third International. It must remain without that organization. The independent communist parties have a great task ahead of them." The Communist International had to go bankrupt because "the organizational practice of centralism, Jesuitism and the disease of prejudice had gotten too much elbow room in the International and had killed its life-inspiring and uniting ideas." Even the Soviet system in Russia had to go into ruin and became an "empty institution." Old capitalism again raises its head in Russia and "by all appearances a new revolution is necessary even there." The executive of the Comintern pushes the best comrades like Trotzky and Radek into the background; it works with putches and party splits; it pulverizes all mass organizations of the Comintern and transforms them into insignificant sects. Only the "independent" Communist parties outside the Communist international can save the situation: "they must now get into contact with each other, must work together and must create the foundation for the unity of all workers of the world on a broad, Communist basis." The Norwegian labor party has already taken the initiative for the formation of the new international: "Our party shall now get into contact with the Communist party of Sweden. There are chances for connections with similar-minded comrades in Denmark as well as in Finland. During the autumn we surely can succeed in organizing an international conference. Many big parties and groups will participate. And our numbers are growing. These parties and groups have to create organizational unity and an international bureau."

Thus we have the great plan all fixed up and ready. Why should the saviors of the international labor movement not start their march from Christiania? Skeptics, of course, may doubt — but then, skeptics, even one thousand nine hundred and twenty-four years ago, have already asked the ironical question—"What good can come from Nazareth?"

The co-operation between Tranmael and Hoeglund is an accomplished fact. Tranmael appeared at the congress of the Hoeglund group in Stockholm as a representative of the Norwegian labor party. He even had the good fortune to be prevented from speaking by the Stockholm police. The embryo of the $2\frac{1}{2}$ International, therefore, was conceived by the petty bourgeois congress of the Hoeglund group, with Norwegian fortification. Her from inception to birth is a long way—and for the new Vikings of Stockholm and Christiania there is still a long march to the metropolis of the international proletariat of Berlin, Paris, London, and so forth. One need not be a great prophet to foretell that even if the weak infant of this new $2\frac{1}{2}$ International will see the light of this wicked world it will quickly enough return into the social-democratic womb—just as did its infamous ancestor, the first $2\frac{1}{2}$ International.

Upon what do these hairdressers of the new $2\frac{1}{2}$ International really build? First of all, upon the refuse of the Communist movement of all countries. The split-off and thrown out of the Communist International are to be the center for the crystallization of the new international. Tranmael in Norway and Hoeglund in Sweden; the small student group "Prescher" in Denmark; Frossard in France; Ledebour's socialist federation and the scanty independent socialist party around the puny Theodore Liebknecht in Germany; Edvard Huttunen and the other renegades of the former socialist labor party of Finland; the Bulgarian "Communist deputies" who shamefully disowned the heroic rebellion of the workers and peasants; and propably also the latest refuse of the communist world movement—Zeth Hoeglund in Sweden, England and Toman in Austria. Tranmael must really be a very skilfull matron if he wants to succeed in weaving a pretty and useful shawl out of this hodge-podge of refuse.

How do these heroes of this international of thrown-outs really look upon close inspection? It is really a very peculiar salon de refuses. It is really a remarkable gallery of refuse: Tranmael, the labor leader who in the name of the trade union traditions of Norway has betrayed the Comintern, and who, after his breach with the Comintern felt his hands free enough to shamefully betray the metal workers of Norway in their struggle against the bourgeoisie—Tranmael, who still calls himself Communist but who, on the day of his breach with the Third International threw away the fundamental slogan of the arming of the proletariat and went back to the stale pacifism and refusal of military service: Falk, who is constantly suspended in the air between Communism and Fascism, like Mohammed's coffin between heaven and earth: Haakon Meyer, who in his consequent Marxism succeeds in uniting anti-semitism and Communism into a perfect synthesis: the three dozen "clear heads" of Danish students who sympathize with the Fascist Falk but who at the same time approve the expulsion of Hoeglund from the Communist International with correct commentaries: Edvard Huttunen who could not submit to the discipline of the socialist labor party parliamentary group in Finland because it was too narrow for his unbounded social-democratic policies, and because it tended to hold him to real, revolutionary action as the chairman of the federation of labor of Finland: Frederick Strom, the Swedish Tacitus of the Russian revolution who, as a Bolshevik and the secretary of the Communist Party of Sweden could not exactly detect the difference between the Russian Mensheviks and Bolsheviks, and who fought the centralism of the Communist International in the name of the specific Scandinavian workers' psychology: Ledebour, the most continued of all the harebrained of Europe: Steinberg, the social-revolutionary, the former member of the Russian Soviet government, later organizer of attempts against the lives of the leaders of the Russian revolution, and at present secretary of the Berlin committee for the formation of a new international. Zeth Hoeglund, who as a pacifist once joined the Communist International and who now, again as a pacifist, ends in the camp of counter-revolution; Zeth Hoeglund, who last May still approved of all the decisions of the Communist International for the Bolshevization of the Communist parties and who now has become the foremost Bolshevik killer of Sweden; Hoeglund, who once fought against Branting in the name of the dictatorship of the proletariat and who now with open shamelessness takes out of his election program the idea of the dictatorship of the working class and of the criticism of parliamentarism.

These are the leaders and heroes of the future $2\frac{1}{2}$ International. A motley crew that has nothing in common except its variegated deviations from the idea of Communism; a rag-tag whose only title to the formation of a new international is their uniform clinging to their respective national prejudices and traditions. Tranmael broke with the Comintern because he was "Norwegian." Hoeglund broke with the executive because the executive was not "Swedish enough." And now they want to form a common international, the sole purpose of which shall be not to be too international. And with this sentence the whole history of this new international is told. The first $2\frac{1}{2}$ International was at least a mass organization of great proletariat strata who were scared by civil war; but this second $2\frac{1}{2}$ International will be, at best, a sect of petty shopkeepers who are not only scared of civil war, but also of the most elementary duties of the class struggle.

LITHUANIAN EDITOR ASKS FOREIGN LANGUAGE SPEAKING WORKERS URGE CHILDREN TO READ "DAILY WORKER"

EDITOR'S NOTE.—This is the first of a series of articles that we hope to publish from the editors of the foreign-language Communist press. They articles are appearing as editorials in the respective foreign-language publications. The accompanying article by A. Bimba, editor of Laisve, the Lithuanian daily, appeared as an editorial in the Oct. 3 issue of that publication. It is as follows:

By A. BIMBA
Editor, Laisve, Lithuanian Daily.

The Workers Party has made a great step forward in the class struggle of this country by establishing an English Communist daily, the DAILY WORKER. Especially in the presidential campaign, the English daily plays a most important role. Without such an instrument as the English daily the voice of the revolutionary proletariat of America would hardly be heard among the citizen-workers.

The foreign-speaking Communist press plays a very important role in the class struggle, but it cannot reach the English-speaking workers. As long as we did not have the DAILY WORKER there was a very great lack in the Communist movement. Now, as we have the DAILY WORKER we must circulate it so that it will be read not merely by tens of thousands of wage slaves, but by hundreds of thousands of them. The DAILY WORKER is their organ, the untiring and faithful guardian and defender of their interests. They will read it and like it, but we must reach them and explain to them the ideas and ideals proclaimed by the DAILY WORKER.

This is the job of the militant workers. We cannot say that the English-speaking Communists alone should worry about their DAILY. Their group as yet is not very numerous and therefore all class conscious workers must do their bit for the DAILY WORKER, even tho they are foreigners. True, the work is not easy, but all Communist activities require energy and sacrifice. Besides, thousands of Lithuanian workers can read English and they often buy the English bourgeois papers. Why not subscribe for and read your own class paper, The DAILY WORKER? Or why not subscribe for the DAILY WORKER for our growing children who read the English papers? It is our duty to enlighten our youth so that they will understand their class interests and fight shoulder to shoulder with their older comrades for the abolition of the capitalist system. Thru the DAILY WORKER we can reach this aim.

And if memory serves us well you didn't say a word either, when your man, Chafin, now indicted for bootlegging, fitted out his two airplanes so that they could drop bombs of Christian civilization and democratic persuasion on the grouped miners who had come to "defend the constitution." In fact, tho we wrack our mind, we cannot even recall that you uttered a word of protest against the first bomb that was dropped and fell between two women, Sallie Polly and Lizzie Oxley, who would have been blown to bits but for the stupidity of your friend Chafin who was unable to construct a bomb that would not be so clumsily manufactured that it failed to explode. Not a syllable passed your lips when another bomb sent Duis Chambers to the hospital, gassed with the chlorine wafted by your ingenious Mr. Chafin.

Sends Poem to Our Readers.

To the DAILY WORKER:—About four years ago, when I was in the paper makers' union, I learned a poem which I think, should be published in the DAILY WORKER. I am sending it to you herewith:

The Open Shopper.

The open shop is the place, alas,
You will find employed the working ass.
His mind is weak, his back is strong,
His pay is short and his hours long.
He is satisfied and well content,
If he can barely pay his rent,
And just exist from day to day,
That is good enough for such a jay.

"No unionism goes for me,
For I am independent see."
So says the meak dumb driven horse.
The master pats him on the back,
To urge along the braying jack.

NEW BRITISH ELECTIONS NOV. 8

Communists Stay on the Wisconsin Ballot

KING GEORGE ASSENTS TO PREMIER'S ANNOUNCEMENT, PARLIAMENT IS DISSOLVED

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Oct. 9.—Premier Ramsay MacDonald, head of the Labor government, officially announced this afternoon in the House of Commons that the present parliament is to be dissolved. King George has assented to the formality of agreeing to the labor premier's request for dissolution.

The only bill this session will consider is the Irish boundary dispute. Very likely the next order of business will be to prorogue parliament. In that event, nominations are scheduled to be made on Oct. 29.

The cabinet decided to resign upon the adoption of the tory motion of censure by a vote of 364 to 196. This motion was based on the government's withdrawal of a criminal prosecution against James Campbell, the editor of the Workers' Weekly, official organ of the Communist Party of Great Britain.

MacDonald Voices Regrets.

Reviewing the situation at this juncture, premier MacDonald declared: "I regret the turn of events, but it is not of our seeking. It has been forced on us. I would have been glad if we had been able to carry on our policy, which I believe was for the promotion of the common weal."

The labor leader, Mr. Clynes, gave another angle to the critical political situation when he told the annual labor conference now in session: "We were unable to get fair treatment from the commons last night, but we are getting it from the throne today in authority for the dissolution of parliament." It is interesting to note that there was considerable opposition to the MacDonald request for dissolution on the ground that the king should deny "the right of a minority to force the dissolution of parliament."

This defeat is the eleventh suffered by the labor cabinet. The reactionaries are planning to unite all their forces and score heavily on election day, which will probably be November 8. They are counting on the wavering attitude of MacDonald and his followers as well as on the acute economic crisis now confronting the country in mounting unemployment.

Expect Interesting Developments.

Many interesting developments are expected in the impending election campaign. The liberals are planning to spread the notion that Premier MacDonald had special personal reasons for dropping the indictment against J. R. Campbell, the Communist editor, against whom sedition charges were brough. There is no denial of the fact that unless MacDonald meets this challenge squarely on the basis of all workers fighting against the employers along national class lines, he will be in a most unfavorable position.

It is the plan of the tories and liberals to turn their every gun against the Russian treaty also. They point out that on the very day on which the Soviet treaty was signed, the Communist indictment was dropped.

In the ranks of the Labor Party following there is much stir over the situation. The extreme right group does not welcome the election at this time and regrets that it was unable to avoid the untoward current events have taken.

ALL U. S. POWER IS AT COMMAND OF MR. MORGAN

Dawes Plan Has Backing of Washington

By JAY LOVESTONE.
(Seventh Article.)

From the very moment that the Best Minds of the American employing class saw that conditions were ripening for their open, large-scale participation in and domination of the European politico-economic affairs, the United States government put all of its powers and resources at the disposal of these rulers of finance and industry to help them establish and make secure their receivership of Germany.

Within two weeks after the "unofficial" American members of the experts' committee, the Banker-Generals Dawes, Young and Robinson signed their names to the reparations report, President Coolidge spoke of the proposed German loan before the Associated Press in New in these words: "Sound business reasons exist why we should participate in the financing of works of peace in Europe."

Shortly afterward the Federal Reserve Board advisory council declared: "The council recommends that when the new German note-issuing bank, provided in the Dawes plan, is organized, the federal reserve banks take the steps necessary in order to facilitate the rediscounting in this country of properly protected German gold-bills. . . ."

On August 14, 1924, Coolidge reaffirmed his indorsement when he stated in his speech of acceptance: "I shall do what I can to encourage American citizens and resources to assist

CHICAGO Y. W. L. MEMBERS MEET TONIGHT AT GREEK HALL; TAKE UP REORGANIZATION PROPOSALS

The Chicago Young Workers League is beginning immediately to carry out the work assigned to it in the Program of Action adopted by the National Executive Committee.

The first task confronting the Chicago league is to reorganize upon a completely new basis. This means abolition of all the present territorial branches and a reorganization into area branches upon the basis of districts of work. This is a direct transitional step to the complete reorganization of the league upon the basis of shop nuclei.

This has been accepted by the Chicago executive committee and will be presented to the membership at a general membership meeting of all members of the Young Workers League to be held tonight at Greek Workers' Hall, 722 Blue Island Ave., (one block from Halsted St.) at 8 p. m.

Comrade Max Shachtman will present the new plan of organization and a thoro discussion is expected so that all members will be thoroly acquainted and ready to start their increased activity as a result of the new form of organization.

This meeting is a historic one in the annals of the American league since it means the first direct step to completely reorganize a large city unit upon a basis that will make the final reorganization on the basis of shop nuclei, a fact instead of a mere theory.

Admission will be by card. All members must attend or they will not be in good standing. Announcement will be made of the meeting places of all new area branches.

Chinese Lose Faith in Imperialist-Paid Generals

Here we have a group of Chekiang troops resting up after being driven back by a fierce assault of the Manchurian forces. The picture was taken five miles behind the lines of the Peking army. For ten days these soldiers were in the trenches. The only reat they had was when it rained, as it is the Chinese custom not to fight when it pours. The Chekiang forces are thoroly demoralized. They are losing faith in their generals, who, in the main, are bought and paid for by American and British interests. General Wu Pei Fu is especially a notorious American henchman. Many American business men have labelled him the Chinese George Washington.

Georgia Lynch Law in Chicago

MURDER NEGRO WITH BLOW OF BASEBALL BAT

Police from the Maxwell St. police station were washing the blood of William Bell, 29-year-old victim of a mob of rowdies, from the sidewalk near the corner of Miller and 14th Streets, yesterday, but they could not wipe away the stain of the transportation of Georgia lynch law to the city of Chicago.

It has been disclosed that William Bell, 1057 Frank St., a Negro lynched by a mob, many of whom were declared by bystanders to be drunk, was standing on the corner of 14th and Maxwell Streets, talking to friends when the alleged assault on two stenographers occurred.

Killed With Bat.

The two Negro friends of the murdered man, Thomas Clark, of 1040 West 14th street, and Walter Harper, 1045 W. 13th street, and the brother of the murdered Bell, George Bell, 1243 Miller street, have identified Otto Epstein, as the man who struck William Bell over the head with a baseball bat, almost instantly killing him.

In the sacramental wine shop of George Shapiro, 1014 W. 14th street, a few feet from the scene of the brutal lynching, Shapiro and his assistants denied all knowledge of the affair, when interviewed by the DAILY WORKER.

"Epstein is only a common laborer," Shapiro told the DAILY WORKER. "He was employed by me as a night watchman."

Shapiro's assistant, who was in charge of the wine shop yesterday, made several contradictory statements to the DAILY WORKER. "Epstein generally sits outside the door," the assistant said. "He probably saw the affair and ran for the police." A little later, however, the assistant contradicted himself. "Epstein generally locked himself in the wine shop," he declared, closing the door and demonstrating to the DAILY WORKER reporter exactly how Epstein closed the door and locked it from the inside. "He never went out unless some excitement occurred. This place is supposed to close up at ten o'clock every night, you know."

Picks First Victim.

The Negroes of the "Valley District," which is populated by both Jews and Negroes, have a different story to tell of Epstein's activities. Harper and Clark both claim Epstein ran out of his shop trailing a baseball bat, and crashed in the skull of the first Negro he saw, which happened to be Bell. The girls, meanwhile, had run into Bertha Deutch's house, 1047 Miller street.

"They killed Bell for nothing at all," a Negro in the pool hall at 1041 Miller street, across the street from the murder, who saw the affair, told the DAILY WORKER. "Epstein was selling booze to a gang of young fellows, and they were all standing in and around the wine shop. Most of them were drunk. Bell was standing on the corner of Miller and 14th streets talking to friends, when the two girls screamed and ran in the house. There was an auto across the street, but I saw no one lay hands on the two girls. At any rate it was not Bell."

As soon as the girls screamed, Epstein ran out of the wine shop with a baseball bat, followed by a bunch of his drunken customers. Harper and Clark ran, and Bell was immediately beaten to death by the crowd.

Epstein Held Without Bail.

The desk sergeant at the Maxwell street police station declared that Epstein will be held without bail until after the coroner's inquest, to take place this morning at the county morgue.

RUSSIAN TRADE UNIONS FIGHT IMPERIALIST ATTACK ON CHINA

TO THE WORKERS OF ALL COUNTRIES!

HUMANITY is again approaching a world war as a result of the predatory attack of the English, American, Japanese and French governments upon the peacable inhabitants of China. What are all these governments after in China? Why do they send an ultimatum to the revolutionary democratic government of Sun-Yat-Sen? Why are they meddling in the inner affairs of the Chinese people? They are coming forward to protect the Chinese counter-revolution against the workers and peasants of China. They are dispatching their war ships to China because the broad masses of the Chinese people wish to liberate themselves from foreign domination. It is in this manner that the labor government of England and the block of the left in France testify their love of peace and their efforts of disarmament.

We, the workers of the Soviet Union, who have suffered from the attacks of the world bourgeoisie, know who is directing this predatory attack upon the broad masses of the Chinese people. We call upon the workers of all countries to stand up determinedly against this shameful interference in the affairs of the Chinese people. It must not be permitted, that the bourgeoisie of England, America, France and Japan place a noose round the neck of a people numbering 400 million. We, the trade unionists of the Soviet Union, have formed a "Hands off China League." Organize similar leagues! Set the broad masses in motion against this attack! Do not let world-imperialism strangle the Chinese people!

Down with the predatory attack upon China!
Down with intervention!
Down with the world war!
Hands off China!

The Trade Union Council of the Soviet Union.

O'FLAHERTY TO BARE FARRINGTON ANTI-LABOR RECORD IN NEW SERIES

Compiled from documents and data furnished by the rank and file of the Illinois district of the United Mine Workers of America, which Farrington exploits, the series of articles which the DAILY WORKER begins to publish Monday, contains what is probably the most extraordinary story of corruption and betrayal in the history of the American labor movement.

Written by T. J. O'Flaherty in the pungent style that has made his "As We See It" column the subject of favorable comment wherever the DAILY WORKER is read, these articles will throw the searchlight into many dark holes and corners of the Illinois labor movement and become part of the evidence on which the American working class is building its indictment of the tools of capitalism in the American labor movement.

LA FOLLETTE AGENTS, EKERN AND ZIMMERMAN, BALKED IN ANTI-WORKERS PARTY PLOT

By JOSEPH MANLEY
(Campaign Manager, Workers Party)

The Workers Party has successfully called the bluff of La-Follette's Wisconsin officials in their own bailiwick.

In spite of the last minute joint attempt of H. L. Ekern, attorney general, supported by secretary of state Fred. R. Zimmerman, both of Wisconsin, to rule off the official ballot the names of William Z. Foster and Benjamin Gitlow, Zimmerman now rules that the Communist candidates will go on the ballot.

Ekern's discriminatory and last minute ruling insisted upon a petition of one thousand signatures for the names of the presidential and vice-presidential candidates to be placed at the head of the independent column.

The regular petition applying to the party electors had already been filed and the date for the filing of all petitions was but a few days off when Ekern made his ruling.

All Plans Well Laid.

The Workers Party was not surprised at this last minute attempt to keep its candidates off the ballot, while at the same time LaFollette's supporters had been tipped off and all such fake rulings as those made by Ekern provided for. LaFollette and Wheeler were to be on the ballot in Wisconsin but not Foster and Gitlow, according to the plans of the Wisconsin "progressives." Immediately upon learning the facts, the Workers Party proceeded to call the bluff of attorney general Ekern.

Morris Fromkin, legal representative of the party in Wisconsin, went to Madison and interviewed the various officials, both the secretary of state and the attorney general. Their excuses and explanations for their hasty action was not accepted by the Workers Party. The party announced its intention to fight this kind of gang politics and expose the methods of those who run the "model commonwealth" generally throout the country. Now we learn that the secretary of state, Fred R. Zimmerman, will disregard the ruling of the attorney general and will permit the name of William Z. Foster and Benjamin Gitlow to be placed on the official ballot in Wisconsin.

Workers! Draw the Lesson!

The foregoing incident should serve as an object lesson to all those suffering from the LaFollette illusion. LaFollette recently has again assumed his favorite role of martyr, caused by the ruling of the California supreme court, the judges of which voted four against three to rule LaFollette's electors off the ballot in California on some such legal technical and flimsy excuse as his own man Ekern now tried to avail himself of against the Communist candidates in LaFollette's Wisconsin utopia.

Attorney general Ekern is the same one to whom LaFollette, from his Atlantic retreat, addressed the infamous letter denouncing the Communists and the St. Paul convention. In this letter he says, speaking of the Communists: "Their real purpose is to establish, by revolutionary action, a dictatorship of the proletariat which is absolutely repugnant to democratic ideals and to all American aspirations."

Both attorney general Ekern and secretary of state Zimmerman are LaFollette Wisconsin lieutenants. Surely no one will claim that their attempt to keep off the ballot all independent candidates and reserve the space for LaFollette and Wheeler is democratic. It is just as unfair and outrageous an attempt as could be made by the lieutenants of Cal Coolidge himself. It is a general indication of the precinct politics played by LaFollette and his gang in Wisconsin. Should LaFollette, by a miracle, be elected, the same gangster and precinct politics would be a part of the national LaFollette regime.

Realize LaFollette Menace.

The Workers Party from the outset has been conscious of the LaFollette menace to the American working class. Should it get the opportunity it will go further in its frantic support of capitalism than Noske, Scheidemann or MacDonald, whom it likes to hail as its English prototype.

The victory of the Workers Party in Wisconsin in compelling, thru its militant and aggressive fight and its state-wide publicity the LaFollette lieutenants, attorney general and secretary of state, to back away from their bare faced discrimination is a victory for the workers of Wisconsin and the country generally.

The Workers Party exposure of LaFollette's latest autocratic methods has aroused tremendous sentiment among the workers of Wisconsin and is causing much uneasiness in the ranks of LaFollette's official family. The sincere socialists of Wisconsin cannot stomach such LaFollette tactics and are going over, boots and baggage to the Communist candidates.

LaFollette again, as he did in the case of the St. Paul convention, has called to the attention of the workers the rising Communist movement. The workers with a few more such experiences as these will be willing to swap LaFollette's brand of "democratic ideals and American aspirations," for working class political solidarity and a workers' and farmers' government.

CHARGE WHITE MEN, NOT NEGRO, APPROACHED GIRLS BEFORE LYNCHING

That white men and not a Negro approached Betty Goldblatt and Bertha Deutsch, Wednesday night, has just been disclosed by eye-witnesses to the lynching of William Bell, a Negro, whom police admit had nothing to do with the affair.

Harry Crawford, Negro, who runs a pool hall at 1339 Miller Street, a few feet from the spot where Bell was murdered at eleven o'clock Wednesday night, passed the corner of 14th and Miller St. while the two girls were talking to two white men who had tried to "pick them up" in a Ford car which had stopped near the corner. Crawford declares he heard one of the girls say as he passed by, "You'd better go about your business or something will happen to you."

Crawford says he stopped near the corner, and after a few minutes the Ford car drove away. The two girls then walked to the wine shop of George Shapiro, at 1011 W. 14th, and told the crowd of men standing around there that a Negro had attempted to assault her.

Epstein, according to Crawford, came up with a bat, and some of the other men also came up and threatened the Negroes who were chatting on the corner. "One of the men struck me twice and I ran," Crawford declared. "As I fled, I saw Epstein hit Bell on the head with a bat and the others started to kick him as he crumpled to the sidewalk."

When asked about this version of the story by a reporter of the Negro press, Miss Goldblatt admitted she had been approached by two men in a Ford car, and the two girls sent them on their way. Miss Goldblatt claimed the Negro, whom she declares she cannot identify because it was dark, approached her after the two white men had made advances from their car. Then she declared, she went to the wine shop and told the men there about the Negro approaching her. She did not mention her talk with the two white men in the Ford car to Epstein, it appears.

W. H. JOHNSTON DEFENDS UNITY WITH MASTERS

All the Co-operation Done by Workers

The Federated Press is running a series of articles on the "B. & O." plan, which is the result of a conspiracy between the management of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad and William H. Johnston, president of the International Association of Machinists, to turn that organization into a "company union" and become part and parcel of the B. & O. system with the exception, of course, that the railroad owners keep all the profits and the union workers do all the work.

No more vicious scheme than this was ever foisted on any section of the American trade union movement. It is more dangerous to the trade union movement than the Chicago Landis award. That at least is open and unashamed in its attempt to smash the unions.

But this B. & O. plan of the ex-Salvation army drum thumper William H. Johnston, is represented to be the highest development of trade unionism, in the form of class-collaboration, or if that term is too unwieldy, let us say that the union instead of using its power to fight the boss for more of the product of the toil of its members, actually lends itself to fasten the shackles of wage slavery tighter on their limbs and reduces the workers to the status of chattel slaves. Much has been written of the spectacle presented by the black slaves of the south who fought in the southern armies during the civil war, but their ignorance and the power of the masters prevented them from choosing the lesser of two evils. There is no such excuse for the treachery of William H. Johnston. It is nothing else but a clear case of selling out the organized workers to the railroads.

The following article is the second of the series. The first was a result of Tom Tippet's interview with the Glenwood Shopmen's co-operating committee. We are publishing this apology of Johnston's secure in the belief that his defense of the B. & O. system is the strongest indictment of it and of his own treason to the working class.

By Federated Press.

"Briefly I might summarize the development in co-operation on the Baltimore & Ohio first as the acceptance by the B. & O. management of the standard shop craft unions as the proper agencies representing the shopmen," says Pres. William H. Johnston, International Association of Machinists, in discussing the Glenwood, Pa., experiment which has been extended to the other shops of the road.

Class Collaboration.

"But instead of being simply tolerated as a necessary evil with a purely negative attitude towards the welfare of the railroad," Johnston asserts, "the standard craft unions are now regarded as desirable agencies in the stimulation of human efficiency on the B. & O. Thus the ordinary negative attitude which results from the usual status accorded the shop unions by most managements is here displaced by a constructive helpful attitude towards the management.

"On the basis of this understanding we have among other things placed at the disposal of the B. & O. a service to help improve the morale of the mechanical department thru our union organizations. It is our purpose to align the locals, shop federations, districts and system federations of the B. & O. shopmen definitely behind a constructive program of improved shop, yard and roundhouse operation, better maintenance service, increased production, safety and the elimination of waste.

More Work Less Work!

"The management on the other hand has assured us that it will do what it can to make this improved maintenance-economy count in the direction of steady work the year round. Thus the men need have no fear that better production on their part is going to result in furloughs just that much sooner.

"The idea underlying our service to the B. & O. may be compared to the idea which underlies the engineering services extended to railroads by large supply corporations which have contracts with these railroads to furnish let us say, arch brick, superheaters, stokers, or lubricating oils. The union members furnish their services to the best advantage to all. In response to the recognition accorded us and by virtue of the agreement or contract existing between us and the management it becomes peculiarly feasible for us to take steps between management and men and create as it were an all-pervading, collective will for the major purposes of railroading, namely efficient satisfactory service to the public, a fair return to the investors and adequate wages and steady employment for the workers.

United Front With Enemy.

"The effect of the new policy of co-operation on that road is clearly manifesting itself in the splendid service the road is rendering the public, the high economy with which it is being operated and the excellent morale which prevails thruout the rank and file.

"The legitimate standard genuine unions of the shopmen are more than eager to offer the same positive co-operation to any railroad management which is intelligent enough and courageous enough to see the inevitable logic of events and on whose railroad conditions are ripe for such co-operation. I maintain that such a management would never again as long as it retains its good senses desire to see the affiliated shop crafts effaced from the scheme of things on its road."

Value "Penn" Road.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—The interstate commerce commission today placed a tentative valuation of $284,676,760 on the Pennsylvania line west of Pittsburg, formerly owned by the Pennsylvania company. The valuation was as of June 30, 1916.

FOOD WORKERS BACK COMMUNIST CAMPAIGN IN NEW YORK CITY

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Saturday, Oct. 25, the food workers in the Bronx will hold a campaign meeting at Workers' Hall, 1347 Boston Road, in support of the Communist candidacy of Foster-Gitlow. This meeting is being arranged under the auspices of the Foodworkers' Section of the Trade Union Educational League. Prominent speakers including the local candidates and several rank and filers of the foodworkers will address the meeting.

LIBERAL PARTY IN ITALY BREAKS WITH FASCISTI

Salandra Fails to Win Aid for Mussolini

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LIVORNO, Italy, Oct. 9.—The liberal party of Italy, in convention here, has rejected by a vote of more than two to one a resolution favoring collaboration with the Fascisti.

This action was taken in spite of the fact that Salandra, former liberal premier, called on the delegates to help Mussolini.

Salandra had returned to Italy from Geneva, where he had been representing Italy at the congress of the league of nations, when the fascisti premier notified him that the liberal party was in danger of repudiating the policies of the government.

The convention also went on record in favor of the dissolution of the black-shirts, which, they pointed out, form an army outside of the regular army and are called upon whenever acts of violence are to be committed. The black-shirts have been used chiefly as agents of the government against the working class.

Claim Spanish Prince Can't Take Care of Himself in Paris

PARIS, Oct. 9—The prefecture of police issued an order today for the expulsion from France of prince Luis Ferdinand of Spain.

"A matter too delicate to explain gives us reasons for the expulsion," the chief of the foreign department of the prefecture said. "But the prince must leave France before tomorrow noon."

On October 3 the Paris Matin printed a story that the Spanish crown prince, while sightseeing at night was lured into a house and nearly robbed by two sailors. The police intervened just in time. Later the police revealed that, instead of being the Spanish crown prince, the real near-victim was Prince Luis Ferdinand, a cousin of the Spanish king.

Night Work Abolished.

NEW LONDON, Conn., Oct. 9.—Striking workers of the Edward Bloom Sil Co., are returning to work now with night work abolished and increases of two cents on single end satins, one cent on double end satins, two cents on double end wool satins, and one cent in single end wool satins. The weavers have been out for three weeks.

FINE RESPONSE TO APPEAL FOR SACCO-VANZETTI

500 Workers Pledge Aid to Victims

Over five hundred working men and women of Chicago crowded into the West Side Auditorium to protest against the murder of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, the two Massachusetts workers, who have been condemned to die on a framed-up charge of murder; called by the Workers Party of America.

William F. Dunne, editor of the DAILY WORKER, and Comrade Alexander Bittelman, reviewed the events which led up to the conviction of Sacco and Vanzetti on a trumped-up murder charge.

They told how these two labor organizers had taken up the cudgels for another worker, Salredo, who was in the clutches of agents of the department of justice. They told how the man whom Sacco and Vanzetti had tried to defend was later thrown from a window on the fourteenth story of an office building by men who were acting as tools of the government. Organization and agitation in every city was uregd by both speakers.

The apathy of the labor officialdom of the United States towards the fate of Sacco and Vanzetti was scored by Comrade Dunne.

"Nothing could furnish better evidence of the backwardness of the labor movement in America than that the Saco-Vanzetti case is still on the order of business of the courts," said Comrade Dunne. "We must begin a new campaign—a campaign whose slogan is to be: Sacco and Vanzetti must not die!"

Comrade Max Salsman, of the Young Workers League, urged his hearers not to permit the government to go thru with this murder by allowing it to throw over the whole matter a veil of silence.

"When Sacco and Vanzetti first came to trial, the workers of foreign countries stormed the American legations and demanded freedom for the two prisoners. The government thot that if the trial were put off for a number of years the workers would forget. But the workers did not forget."

Antonio Presi, editor of "Il Lavoratore," Italian Communist daily, made a ringing appeal to the workers to bring Sacco and Vanzetti back to the ranks of the labor movement. His address were frequently cries from the audience demanding "Down with the murderers of the workers."

Cheers greeted Pietro Nigri, an Italian worker who had been sentenced to deportation for his activity in the Industrial Workers of World. Nigri told the audience that the attempt to do away with Sacco and Vanzetti is but another link in the long chain of atrocities which the capitalist rulers have committed in their unending war fare against militant workers.

Comrade Alexander Bittelman, acting as chairman of the meeting, announced that the workers present had given $94.89 to help the Sacco and Vanzetti defense.

Fine Type of Christian Layman Talks About Use of Cold Piece of Steel

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the secretary of the National Council for Prevention of War, Mr. Frederick J. Libby, exclaims with horror at the outspoken utterances of Mr. Wilbur, the verbose secretary of the navy.

The special declaration of Coolidge's naval chief, that got under the celluloid collar of the God-fearing pacifist, Libby, was something to this effect:

"THERE IS NOTHING SO COOLING TO A HOT TEMPER AS A PIECE OF COLD STEEL."

• • • •

Wilbur said that in a speech at San Francisco. Libby calls it "Ludendorffian insolence." But why pick on Ludendorff? He is no worse than the Pershings, the Leonard Woods and other American experts in human slaughter. Ludendorff was part of the German branch of world capitalism. But the American money lords, today, have greater ambitions, both at home and abroad, than the kaiser ever had, even in his rosiest days.

The declaration of Coolidge's navy secretary is a good statement of American ruling class policy, not only in its war upon the workers in this country, but in its dealings with subject nations everywhere. And there are few nations on the globe today that have not been colonialized, in greater or less extent, by the Wall Street money power.

Cold steel for the textile workers.
Cold steel for the silk strikers at Paterson.
Cold steel for the coal miners.
Cold steel for the railroad shopmen.
Always the cold steel of ruling class bayonets for workers who demand higher wages or the shorter workday from their oppressors.

• • • •

Cold steel for the Haitians.
Cold steel for the Hawaiians.
Cold steel for the Filipinos.
Cold steel for the Santo Domingans.
The cold steel of the United States army and navy, at the beck and call of Morgan's debt collectors.

• • • •

Morgan's government at Washington tried cold steel on the liberated Russians under Soviet rule. But the Russians met steel with steel, at Archangel and Vladivostok, in North Russia and in Siberia. The cold steel of Morgan's government lost out. Soviet Rule still lives and daily grows more powerful.

• • • • •

Morgan's government supports the cold steel of the counter-revolutionary Chinese military cliques, that can be bought to wage war upon the rebellious masses in their own country. Always the cold steel with the imprint of the dollar mark upon its blade. But in China, as in Russia and Siberia, the Soviet Power, hot tempered against capitalist misrule everywhere, faces the imperialists of the world and they are afraid.

But let the God-fearing pacifist, Libby, speak some more:

"No official utterance of a member of an administration for years has been so outrageous as the sentence spoken by the head of the navy department:

"'There is nothing so cooling to a hot temper as a piece of cold steel.'

"A few days before this was delivered, Secretary Wilbur was entertained by the Washington Congregational conference in Seattle. The invitation to the dinner said: 'As you know, Secretary Wilbur is a fine type of Christian layman . . . He was prominent in California, the leader of large Bible classes in Los Angeles and San Francisco. He is the kind of a man ministers and churches delight to honor.'

"The best we can say for Secretary Wilbur is that he had just come down the coast on a battleship surrounded by battleships. He was drunk with the sense of power and he spoke while in his cups."

• • • •

Let the heathen world laugh at secretary of the Navy Wilbur, fine type of Christian gentlemen.

Every nation, with few exceptions, that took part in the last world war, was a Christian nation. Millions of men were slaughtered in the name of every Christian denomination. Preachers and priests of every religious brand prayed for victory for their respective ruling classes.

• • • •

Libby may prate boldly in days of peace, and he will win some applause from those who follow Christian hypocrites in subsidized pulpits. But we doubt not that Libby will be cheering for murder and Morgan, when the next war breaks.

• • • •

It is so in all wars.

And it will so continue until workers take over all power and decide for themselves to live in a world-wide human brotherhood.

• • • •

The war to end all wars is the war of the workers upon their oppressors. When that war has been won, in every land, then peace will come to the world for the first time in all history.

In that war to end all wars, the conscience stricken, pacifist Libby will be on the side of Wilbur, Coolidge and Morgan. That is where all organized and entrenched religious denominations will be.

But the workers and farmers will win their emancipation in spite of them all. Wilbur did not speak "while in his cups." Wilbur spoke as he visioned the growing struggles of America's revolutionary workers, finally crowned with complete victory.

Wilbur spoke out of "the great fear" of the ruling class to which he belongs, to defend whom he was called to Washington to become the chief of the navy of Morgan's United States of America.

DAILY WORKER SPECIAL LOCAL EDITIONS GROW

48,000 in Three Days; 82,000 for Next Week

No feature of the DAILY WORKER activities has met such instantaneous success as the special local editions.

These editions of which the complete front page carries matter only of interest to the city for which they are printed —and in some cases carrying inside pages, of news for local interest—are now running at a high peak.

Big Chicago Edition.

Wednesday night a special local Chicago edition of 30,000 to precede a Foster-Gitlow campaign meeting at which both candidates are to speak, left the presses for a three-day sale and distribution thruout the city. Thursday night has seen the special Illinois state edition of 10,000 and one of 5,000 for Detroit.

The Detroit edition, leaving tonight makes the second for this city that Comrade Owens is putting on the live wire map. This completes a record of four editions of the DAILY WORKER totaling 48,000 in three days.

District eight of the Workers Party has taken full advantage of this splendid means of campaign activity. Milwaukee has already distributed 10,000 of a 20,000 Wisconsin edition. Chicago received 30,000 and tonight sees the Illinois edition of 10,000. Milwaukee is laying plans for another edition of 10,000 and the Lake County steel district one of 15,000, making a total of 85,000 for this district under the leadership of the fighting Dane—Comrade Arne Swabeck.

Two Eastern Issues.

Next week will see giant editions going to two eastern cities. To precede the Foster meeting of October 19 in New York, this local will receive the record special to date of 50,000. This will also make the third edition for the local and district at whose head is district organizer Chas. Orumbein and completes a total of 74,000 for one city. A record that shows the lead over all locals.

Philadelphia makes its first special of real size. The stamping ground of illustering Butler is going to receive seed for the growth of future Communists.

Special Goss to Pittsburgh.

And to add fame to a state of infamous record in labor annals during the same week Pittsburgh will receive a special of 2,000 to continue the good work. District organizer I. Blankenstein for the territory is going to give the home of steel a jolt.

The success achieved in all cities that have seen these Red Specials opens great possibilities for future local editions for local campaigns in and out of election season. Something seems to have been started that is going to be mighty hard to stop.

Connecticut Party Activities

Weinstone on New Haven Green.

This Saturday, Oct. 11, William W. Weinstone, of New York, will speak at the Central Green bandstand, New Haven, Conn., at 8 p. m. He will discuss the election campaign. This meeting has been preceded by similar meetings, with Rebecca Grecht and Juliet S. Poyntz as the speakers. The meetings have been held at an interval of two weeks.

Simons in Stamford.

Thesecond of a series of open air meetings in Stamford will take place this Friday, Oct. 10, at 8 p. m., on the Town Hall steps. The previous meeting with Simon Felshin as speaker, was attended by a large crowd. The speaker will be District Organizer William Simons.

Carlson in New Haven.

This Sturday, Oct. 12, Carlson will hold two meetings. At 2 p. m., there will be a membership meeting of the Young Workers Leagues in Connecticut. Comrades from New Haven, Hartford, Bridgeport, Stamford, and other points will attend.

The evening meeting, which like the other, will take place at the Labor Lyceum, 38 Howe St., is a campaign meeting, which is being run under the auspices of the Young Workers League, with the co-operation of Local New Haven, W. P.

Foster in Music Hall.

For the Foster meeting on Oct. 23, Thursday night, Local New Haven has secured Music Hall, with a seating capacity of 1,500. Publicity and advertising are being arranged on a large scale, in order to insure the success of the meeting.

Splendid Polish Meetings.

Organizer Kowalski, of the Polish Federation, has addressed several good meetings in Connecticut. His meetings in Bridgeport, New Haven and New Britain were well attended. As a result, two new members were admitted to the Polish branch in Bridgeport, and four in New Haven.

RUSSIAN COMMUNIST DAILY, NOVY MIR, CALLS ON LABOR TO WIN NEW READERS FOR THE DAILY WORKER

EDITOR'S NOTE.—Here is another editorial, published in our foreign-language Communist press, urging support by foreign-language speaking workers of their English-language daily, the DAILY WORKER. Similar editorials from other Communist publications will appear in future issues. The Novy Mir says:

(Editorial in Novy Mir, Russian Communist Daily, Tuesday, Oct. 7)

The DAILY WORKER: Its Importance to the American Workers and the Revolutionary Labor Movement.

The name of the central organ of the Workers Party of America is the DAILY WORKER. The DAILY WORKER is daily informing the American worker about the struggle between Labor and Capital in this country. Every day it carries the message of Communism to all parts of the United States, interpreting events from the viewpoint of the everyday interests as well as the final purposes of the working class.

The DAILY WORKER is uniting the American workers of all languages, unifying them with the language of their common needs, hopes and aspirations. It is the spokesman and leader of the American workers, their mouthpiece giving voice to their demands and needs. Without it the American workers would be like a man without a tongue. A revolutionary party and an effective struggle cannot be thought of without such an organ.

Without it we would find it difficult to recruit workers into the unions and fighters into the party. The voice of the Workers Party could not reach the masses without the DAILY WORKER.

But in order that The DAILY WORKER should function properly and serve as a lever to raise the masses to an understanding of the aims of the proletarian struggle, the masses must daily see it and read it. It is imperative that it should reach the workers. The responsibility to distribute the DAILY WORKER rests upon the party members. We must accept this responsibility and live up to our party duty.

Comrades, boost the DAILY WORKER. You distributed the "underground" literature at a time when it was dangerous. All the more must you as a party duty boost the DAILY WORKER, now that this does not involve any risk.

The masses will be with you when they become permeated with the Communist spirit. Permeation of the masses with the Communist spirit is possible only thru the dissemination of the living Communist message—of the DAILY WORKER and Communist literature.

Comrades, boost the DAILY WORKER!

Foster election campaign meeting Sunday afternoon, October 12, at Ashland Auditorium, Ashland and Van Buren. Branches of the party and Young Workers League shall appoint special squads to distribute at factories and shall assign territory to every member of the branch. 30,000 copies of the Special Chicago Edition have thus far been ordered. Branches can phone in at State 7985 additional orders at the rate of $8.00 per thousand. How many will your branch buy?

FOSTER, GITLOW AND DUNNE SPEAKERS AT BIG COMMUNIST CAMPAIGN RALLY THIS SUNDAY

By JOSEPH MANLEY.
(Campaign Manager, Workers Party.)

The Chicago Workers Party will hold its first great Communist rally Sunday afternoon, Oct. 12, at Ashland Auditorium.

William Z. Foster, presidential candidate of the Workers Party, will be the principal speaker on this occasion. Foster's running mate, Benjamin Gitlow, will also speak.

The big gathering will be presided over by William F. Dunne, recently back from Soviet Russia, where he was a delegate to the congress of the Communist International and the Red Trade Union International. Comrade Dunne is now the Workers Party candidate for governor of Illinois.

Foster Best Known in Chicago.

William Z. Foster is known thruout the country for his activity as a trade unionist and a revolutionist. Well known as Foster is in the rest of the country, it is at home in Chicago where he is best known and has his largest audiences. It was Foster's work amongst Chicago's railroad men, packing house workers and the steel workers of South Chicago, that earned for him a national and international reputation. The railroad men, thousands of whom he organized into the Carmen's Union, the packing house workers whom he organized and fought for—helping them to get the eight hour day,—the steel workers whom he led in the great steel strike, are following the Communist presidential candidacy of Foster with great interest.

The Chicago Workers Party organization has spared on effort to make a huge success of the Ashland Auditorium meeting on October 12. An attractive program has been arranged; the Freiheit Singing Society and the Englewood Y. W. L. Orchestra will supplement each other in entertaining the big audience. Gordon Owens (colored Comrade) candidate for congress in the First District will also be one of the speakers.

Meeting to Reach Masses.

This rally will do much to get the Communist election program of the Workers Party before large masses of Chicago's workers.

SOVIETS TALK BUSINESS TO UNITED STATES

Threaten to Withdraw Their Trade

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, Soviet Russia, Oct. 9.—In view of the increasing orders being placed by Soviet Russia for America cotton machinery, the Soviet government is threatening to transfer the purchases to other countries unless Washington drops its hostile attitude.

American influence against Soviet Russia has been particularly hostile in France and in China. In France, Hughes succeeded temporarily in delaying the Soviet recognition negotiations. In the Far East the Soviet government scored a signal victory over the American manipulators.

A new and interesting turn to Soviet-American relations is being given by the conflict over insurance companies. The Soviet government is insisting that the foreign insurance companies protected by governments which have been so anxious to defend the interests of the big investors, pay the policies and premiums on the hundreds of thousands of holders, poor holders, in Soviet Russia. These claims now total more than 125 million dollars. The principal companies effected are the New York Life, the Equitable and L'Urbaine.

RAIL CLERKS' DEMAND FOR RAISE HEARD

Point Out Profits of the Railroads

By LELAND OLDS.
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

Railroad profits totaling $10,000,000,000 in the last 12 years and now running at approximately a billion a year were stressed by E. H. FitzGerald, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, in opening the wage hearing before the United States rail labor board. Following FitzGerald's presentation the railroads will present their side of the case.

FitzGerald cited the increasing prosperity of the railroads as ground for a reconsideration of present wage rates by the board. How long, he asked, will railroad owners go on making a billion a year before the railroad workers get consideration of their request for a living and saving wage?

The hearing involves the request of the brotherhood for a restoration of the 1920 wage rates. During the severe depression of 1921 and 1922 the board cut wages and asked employes to bear and forebear until the carriers were again on their feet.

FitzGerald said that in view of the acknowledged fine condition of the railroads today the board should make good the implied promise. He used national industrial (employers) conference board as well as government figures to show that wages of other wage earners were close to or above the 1920 level. He showed that the profits of the railroads in 1923 were with a single exception the largest in their history. Since 1921 their net profits have increased by more than 58 per cent and in addition they have increased their expenditures on equipment by more than $200,000,000. The railroad employes have failed to share in this prosperity. Their wages today fall more than 10 per cent short of as good a living as the wages of 1895 provided.

Figures based on government data showing how far the wages of railway clerks and station service employes have fallen behind the cost of living and other wages were presented by FitzGerald:

Percent increase since 1895
Railway clerks' wages	131
Station service employes' wages	125
Cost of living	152
Average railroad wages	165
Trainmen's wages	199
Average wages in outside industry	164

Workers Underpaid.

Compared with standards fixed by experts as necessary to support families according to American standards of health and comfort, he continued, the wages of these railway clerks and station service employes mean lack of absolute essentials of food, clothing and housing for the families affected.

Such extreme poverty results in the employment of mothers, lack of decent care for children, an appalling increase in the infant death rate and children forced into industry before their education is complete. It means undernourished bodies and starved souls. These unfortunate results can be avoided only by a steady and scientific readjustment of wages upward toward a living wage, FitzGerald pleaded.

THE POWER COLUMN

Twice every week—this column uncovers to your view the motive power behind the DAILY WORKER. Here for the interest and inspiration of every reader—and especially the DAILY WORKER agents and committees—are tried and proven suggestions and accomplishments to drive the DAILY WORKER to further conquests.

Here is POWER—the power of brain and effort of men and women of the working class who not only believe—but ACT!

D. W. B. U. LOCALS GROWING

BOILERMAKER BECOMES BRICKLAYER

HUNDREDS of members of organized Labor are joining the Bricklayers' Union. Members of the Steamfitters', Carpenters', Shoemakers', Barbers'—even Office Workers (delicate pencil pushers and ledger jockeys) are joining the hard working overall gang in the D. W. B. U. (DAILY WORKER Bricklayers' Union).

These members of the D. W. B. U. still remain in good standing in their old unions and are active in behalf of the new one—to help the old one. Everyday we are receiving subs from active trade unionists to "Build the DAILY WORKER" and give added strength to the daily paper leading the fight for the American Labor movement.

Some building bricklayers send in subs gathered everywhere. And a good job it is! Some have not yet realized the possibilities of getting bricks in a most important brickyard—RIGHT WHERE YOU WORK! This brickyard is the most promising in which to secure material to "Build the DAILY WORKER."

Read this letter from a boilermaker who has become a bricklayer. His deep interest to "Build the DAILY WORKER" and to build the Labor movement (notice he puts them together) is too good to be improved by comment. For obvious reasons his name is omitted:

Richmond, Va., October 4, 1924

Dear Friends: Enclosed find money order for $2.00, and sub blank for the DAILY WORKER for three months FOR ONE OF MY SHOP-MATES. I was expecting to have at least four but this being the first of the month, rent and other things due, the others could not spare $2.00 but they promised to subscribe next Saturday. And so by next Saturday I am in hopes of at least four more.

I am a boiler maker in the.....Locomotive Works. We have no organization of any kind tho before 1921 we were about 100 per cent in the boiler shop and tank shop. The machinists were strong too. One never hears unionism talked now, they seem to have lost all confidence in the Labor movement so you see I have a hard time getting their interest aroused. I would like to get the whole two thousand or twenty five hundred to subscribe.

But lots of them talked to me like I was a book agent. One told me the other night (I am on the night force) "I would like to help you out, but I can't—winter is coming on." I am afraid I make a poor propagandist. If you can give me a little dope it will be highly appreciated. This is the first time I ever tried to sell anything but my labor.

Yours truly.

This builder of the Labor movement modestly says: "I am a poor propagandist!" We are going to look hard for more of them. And he wants "a little dope" to help him along. Alright, here it is: Keep it up! We are going to ask others to be "poor propagandists."

This list, like a Mack Sennett bathing beauty, is "easy on your eyes." Here are proven builders—men and women working to build up the standard bearer of the American Labor movement. Carrying bricks is a pleasure to these comrades laboring in a campaign to "Build the DAILY WORKER."

L. E. Katterfeld, business agent for Local New York, had a large campaign under way to "Build On It" in New York before the D. W. B. U. was organized. Live members of the Labor movement there were already working to "Build the DAILY WORKER." A banner going to the branch of the Workers Party or the Young Workers League securing most subs will be awarded at the Foster meeting on October 19. These members—PRESTO—became BRICKLAYERS! Today and until November 7 you will find them in the D. W. B. U. They're BRICKLAYERS.

Comrade Katterfeld writes us the brick campaign is "Quite a nifty idea." But so was it "quite a nifty idea" to have his local the first local in overalls in the campaign to "Build the DAILY WORKER."

Comrade Swabeck, district organizer for district No. 8, sends us a sub and writes, "Enclosed is my first brick returned, hoping they will fall thick and heavy from now on." Not so bad for a slogan—make them fall thick and heavy from now on!

SMALL IS HIT BY DECISION AGAINST I. C.

But There's Still Chance to Protect Friends

By KARL REEVE.

The Illinois Central railroad company has at last heard a decision rendered against it, after successfully stalling off the attorney-general of Illinois state for sixteen years.

Len Small, governor of Illinois, will be sorry at the news that Judge Samuel C. Stough of the Circuit Court of Grundy County has decided the suit instituted by governor Deneen in 1908 in favor of the state.

For governor Small is a director of the Illinois Central railroad, and stands to lose much money thru the judge's decision.

Still Chance to Cheat.

But a decision against such a powerful railroad combine as the one which owns the Illinois Central does not always mean that the money is collected. Governor Small can be of good cheer. After election, when the political capital of winning a big suit has done its work in putting attorney general Brundage in a good light before the voters of the state, perhaps Len Small's railroad will find a means of cheating the state of Illinois out of its taxes after all.

Small's railroad was able to clog the wheels of justice for 16 long years. Even then several of the findings of Judge Stough were favorable to the railroad in which the governor is interested. However, the decision that the Illinois Central has for many years been dodging millions of dollars tax payments which were due the state, if carried into effect, means that the Illinois Central must pay seven per cent of the receipts from their charter lines to the state. The Illinois Central has managed to escape this payment for many years.

Backed by Labor Officialdom.

Len Small, who is "ex-officio" director of the Illinois Central, which means that during his term of office he does not officially vote, but takes part in all deliberations and decisions fo the road as director, is running for re-election this year. Small's most valuable support is coming from the reactionary officers of the Illinois State Federation of Labor, and from Frank Farrington, president of the Illinois miners. If Small, with the aid of his labor faker backers, can get himself re-elected, he may yet be able to save his colleagues on the Illinois Central their money.

And Small is associated with a very powerful group of capitalists. The board of directors of the Illinois Central railroad include, in addition to Small, William Vincent Astor, Cornelius Vanderbilt, R. S. Lovett, H. W. De Forest, Stanley Field, R. W. Goelet, and C. A. Peabody.

May Still Reward Friends.

Small has recently thrown over the LaFollette crowd and come out openly, along with his fellow financiers, including Elbert H. Gary, as a backer of Coolidge and Dawes. Small, who established the most corrupt record in modern political history as governor of Illinois, is however, indorsed by the Illinois Federation of Labor officials, who at the last convention of the Illinois Federation of Labor pushed thru resolutions indorsing his record, and Small has the indorsement of John Fitzpatrick, Oscar Nelson, Ed Nockels, and the Chicago Federation of Labor.

The state has won the victory in exposing, after 16 years' delay, the tax-dodging practices of the Illinois Central railroad. But it is doubtful, with governor Small retaining his position as governor, whether it will be easy or expedient for the state of Illinois to collect the millions of dollars due to it.

MICHIGAN HITS NEW BLOW AT WORKERS PARTY

Bridgeman Convention Saw First Attack

By CYRIL LAMBKIN.

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 9.—The state of Michigan has just struck its second blow at the Communist movement by ruling the Workers Party off the ballot.

The first blow was struck more than two years ago when it joined with the federal government in raiding the convention of the Communist Party at Bridgeman and arresting many of the leaders.

Blow Will Prove Boomerang

But just as the first blow not only failed to accomplish its object of destroying the Communist movement, but on the contrary strengthened it, so the second blow will prove a boomerang that will strike back at the capitalist class.

The Michigan election law contains a provision that the state central committee of each political party is to be elected at the first party convention held in the odd years. Obviously, this is meant for established parties and not for parties appearing on the ballots for the first time. As a matter of fact, such was the interpretation given our party representative by the office of the secretary of state.

The party held its state convention at which it nominated 15 electors and four candidates for state offices and elected a state central committee. The state central committee certified the nominations to the secretary of state and the 83 county election commissions.

LaFollette Ticket Gets O. K.

Such, in fact, was the procedure followed by the LaFollette forces. But the LaFollette ticket was not ruled off the ballot.

Without doubt, the capitalist government was glad of the opportunity to bar our party from the ballot. However, there is reason to believe that the state government which represents the big capitalists intends indirectly to strike at LaFollette also.

The politicians have not the courage to strike at him directly. But they reasoned that if we go to court and get an adverse ruling it would apply to LaFollette as well as to us.

The party has engaged counsel and is going to fight to enter the elections in this state this fall. There is a bare possibility that a favorable order will be had. It is more likely that the decision will be unfavorable and we shall then have additional proof that democracy is an illusion.

Foster Urges Real Workers' Co-ops.

Editor's Note: In the following article, written especially for the DAILY WORKER, William Z. Foster, candidate of the Workers Party for president, states the Communist position on the co-operative movements. Foster declares himself in favor of the co-operative movement, when they are run by real workers' and farmers' organizations. Foster points to the co-operative movements in Soviet Russia as an example of co-operatives used as a means for strengthening workers' and farmers' control of government.

By WILLIAM Z. FOSTER.
Communist Candidate for President.

IN the matter of co-operatives, I would say, speaking as the candidate of the Workers Party, the party of the Communists, for president, that I am wholeheartedly in favor of genuine co-operative organizations of the workers. The Communist movement, thru its leadership of the most powerful co-operative movement in the world, that of Soviet Russia, has proved its devotion to the co-operative movement as a part of the general movement of the working class for emancipation from capitalist exploitation, and also the soundness of its leadership.

Co-operatives, when based solidly upon the needs of the exploited masses, controlled by them, and run for service and not for profit, have proved themselves powerful instruments in the hands of the workers and working farmers in the struggle against the gigantic organizations of the big capitalists.

It is necessary, however, that the co-operatives shall be controlled and directed by the rank and file workers and working farmers, and not by the capitalists, the professional bourgeois experts and intellectuals. Otherwise, the co-operatives will cease to be effective fighting organizations against the enemies of the working class and will be turned into organs of class collaboration, attempting to reconcile fundamental class conflicts, and therefore sabotaging the struggle against exploitation. Genuine co-operatives always work in the closest contact with the political and economic organizations of the workers and working farmers, and assist in their daily struggles. All labor union members, unorganized workers, and working farmers should do everything in their power to build such fighting co-operatives, which, in addition to their everyday tasks must militantly favor a workers' and farmers' republic as a necessary pre-condition to the full development of the co-operatives.

In conclusion, the Workers Party pledges its most energetic assistance, in every field of action, to the co-operative movement, upon the basis of the class struggle. We point to the glorious achievements of the co-operative movement in the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics as the proof of the soundness of our program. The home of the most powerful and highly developed co-operative movement in the world is Soviet Russia, where the power of the capitalist class has been broken and the foundations are being laid of a Communist society.

By MARTIN ABERN.

Fifty-six new members were taken in by the Workers Party, Local Chicago, at the City Central Committee meeting, Tuesday, Oct. 7, which indicates that the membership drive is now on in earnest in Chicago. This meeting was the best attended and most lively one that has yet been held. Future signs point to even greater activity.

New members taken in were from the following branches: Douglas Park English, 1; Northwest English, 4; North Side English, 5; Irving Park English, 2; South Side English, 2; Englewood English, 1; Spanish Branch, 8; Lithuanian No. 5, 3; Greek Branch, 3; Ukrainian No. 1, 8; Italian 31st Ward, 1; Russian Branch, 1; Lake View Scandinavian, 1; Finnish, 8; Italian W. S. No. 1, 1; Lettish, 5; Lithuanian No. 2, 1.

A goodly number of union members were included in the 56, among them being four painters, machinists, typographical, tailors, bricklayers, furriers, windowwashers, musicians, one each. There were also a number who will have to join unions.

Spanish Branch Organized.

A Spanish-speaking branch of eight, made up mainly of Mexican and Central American comrades was organized by Comrade Gomez. The branch looks very promising. All but one of them are stock yard workers.

Comrade Tom Bell, T. U. E. L. local organizer, reported in detail on the industrial activity in the various groups. The Amalgamated Clothing Workers' group was in the best shape and was carrying on an excellent struggle in the union and in the shop, especially in connection with the election campaign, was collecting funds for Foster and Gitlow and getting out propaganda.

Discussion on policy in trade unions arose on the action of the Amalgamated Food Workers' group failing to put up a Communist candidate and a Communist program in the elections. The matter was referred to the City Executive Committee to bring in a detailed report at the next C. C. C. meeting.

In the case of a peculiar situation also existing among a number of party machinists the city executive committee is also to take up this matter for final action.

Strengthen T. U. E. L.

More than ever the reports indicated that the T. U. E. L. groups must be strengthened and built and the minority movement in the unions organized against the reactionary and bureaucratic union leadership. The reactionary leadership, recognizing the force of a revolutionary opposition is using every effort to break down the left wing movement. Our party comrades must fight back and organize more strongly than ever within the unions and continue the struggle to win the trade unions to Communism.

At the next general meeting of the T. U. E. L. the machinists' and carpenters' international conventions will be taken up as well as the policy of the left wing in the next national convention of the American Federation of Labor. Meanwhile, union members, get to your group meetings; failure to attend will result in party action.

Shop Nuclei Among Clothing Workers.

A program is being worked out to organize shop nuclei among the Amalgamated Clothing Workers party members and in the next few weeks it is expected that a number of shop nuclei will be in existence. Thus the first actual and practical steps toward reorganization will have been taken.

Some branches have not yet sent in their industrial registration. Only about 10 per cent of them have signed in. To properly handle industrial trade union and shop nuclei work, we must have complete industrial registration of every member. Shoot in your industrial registration.

The Young Workers League delegate reported that the Chicago Young Workers League was doing better work than at any time during its existence. The league was reorganizing completely on a basis of the working area branch as a preliminary to complete reorganization on shop nuclei basis. The reorganization is to be completed by November 1, and 22 new nuclei are to be established within three months after the reorganization. A factory campaign on all mailing order houses is to be started in November.

Election Campaign Activity Increasing

A detailed report on the last activities in the election campaign was given by Comrade Abern.

On the whole, he said, the Workers Party in Chicago had responded well to the campaign to place Workers Party candidates on the ballot. All of the candidates went over and in the congressional districts we were successful in obtaining sufficient signatures to place five out of seven candidates on the ballot. (See other columns of the DAILY WORKER).

All the districts made excellent attempts in the work, District 5 alone not doing by any means as well as it should have. The Young Workers League did especially good service in this campaign and in every district were responsible for a large share of signatures. The league is to be congratulated for its efforts. District 1 did a good job, the Englewood Y. W. L., South Side English and Scandinavian doing the best work.

District 4 also went over, with a number of individuals, reported Comrade Zokaitis, being mainly responsible for putting Comrade Podkulski on the ballot.

District 6, altho failing to get its candidate on the ballot, did very well towards the end of the campaign and if the comrades in that district had started out as well, there is no doubt that they would have gotten the district over.

District 7 made the best job. This district where Comrade Hammermark was candidate was the best organized, altho having the most signatures to obtain, 4,000, the job was done. Karl Marx Scandinavian was one of the branches that did exceptionally well.

District 8 went over, with the Mid-City English and Russian Young Workers League doing the main part of the work, and Italian, Greek and Polish comrades contributing their share.

District 9, Jack Johnstone candidate also went over. The North Side English, Finnish branch and Karl Liebknecht Y. W. L. doing the best work, the there were contributions all around from the rest of the branch es.

Altho the party organization responded well to this first part of the campaign there were many organizational defects, due mainly to our inexperience in this kind of Communist parliamentary activity. In future work of this sort we can be certain that even much better results will be obtained because of these experiences and the possibility of organizing the work much better beforehand. Nevertheless we can feel that a good start has been made and now the job is to put over the second part of the Communist election campaign, Abern concluded.

Many Meetings Being Held.

The congressional districts are now holding meetings in all of their districts for the candidates. District 1, Gordon Owens, candidate, will have a very large meeting Oct. 26, and will also distribute at that time, 20,000 leaflets on the Negro workers.

District 9, 7 and others have already organized meetings. These are in addition to regular street meetings being held and which, as Comrade Maurer reported, were still being held very successfully in many sections of town.

Branches must see to it that their delegates get to the conressional district meetings and participate actively in this work.

Foster-Gitlow Meeting on Sunday.

On Sunday, Oct. 12, the big election mass meeting of the year will be held at Ashland Auditorium at 2:30 p. m. Comrades William Z. Foster, Benjamin Gitlow and William F. Dunne to be the main speakers.

20,000 DAILY WORKERS are to be distributed for this meeting and comrades are requested to call at the local office to receive their share for distribution at factories and from house to house. This special Chicago edition also contains the state and local program which will very likely be issued in leaflet form.

To help at this meeting, we also wish the branches to send as many girls as possible. They should report at 1:30 at the Ashland Auditorium.

The straw ballot carried on by Workers Party, Local Chicago and the DAILY WORKER was very successful and was an excellent means of carrying on our propaganda, getting closer to the factory workers and getting the DAILY WORKER before them. The special DAILY WORKER Chicago edition will be distributed at the factories where we had held the straw balloting.

Poll Watchers Needed for Nov. 3.

Poll watchers will be required for the November 3 elections. Branches are asked to send in the names of comrades who will be able to act as poll watchers on that day. It should be easy to get a day off since it is common for workers to get off for that purpose right along. This is very important if we are to make certain of registering the full Communist vote. Comrade Kora has replaced Comrade Karsner as campaign manager in District 6, as Comrade Karsner has taken over other important work.

As a suggestion to the campaign managers, it was mentioned that wherever possible they get slides in the movies advertising the Communist candidates.

The left wing conference of Workmen's Circles and left wing trade union activists are active in the Foster-Gitlow campaign, raising funds, holding meetings and carrying on other propaganda. They are staging a parade Sunday morning for the Foster-Gitlow meeting. They expect to raise $1,000 for the campaign.

Get Campaign Funds.

It need not be detailed here how great is the expense of a campaign. All branches have not contributed as they are able to. Local Chicago can and must do a great deal better. An urgent appeal is made that the branches push the sale of the campaign stamp books as well as other means of raising funds and send in the money at once to the local office. Thousands of dollars more should come in from Local Chicago. We are sure that the comrades wish to increase the campaign activity and will therefore respond.

Collect funds in your shop as the Amalgamated Clothing Workers party members are already doing. Collect it from your friends, from house to house, get it any way you can, but get it and send it in.

At all the meetings comrades must make certain to have application cards and to have the speaker make an appeal for membership. Where branches have not yet done so, they should elect a committee which organizes a drive for new members, outlines work for every members in the branch and sees that members and the branch as a whole are functioning. Earn your merit stamp! Get a new member or a subscriber to the DAILY WORKER.

DAILY WORKER-Labor Defense Bazaar.

The DAILY WORKER-Labor Defense Bazaar to be held Nov. 26 to Dec. 1 is going ahead well. Local Chicago will also get 25 per cent of the proceeds.

At the last meeting of the bazaar committee a very large attendance was at hand. Branches, however, should make sure of sending regular delegates to the next committee meeting to be held Saturday afternoon, 2 p. m., Oct. 18, at 722 Blue Island Ave., Greek Hall.

Branches shall also take note that the Labor Defense Council has extended its scope and is now handling all Workers Party cases. Much money is needed. Comrades paying their assessment this month should purchase as many additional defense stamps as they can.

The South Slav branch reports that they are selling stamps for the campaign fund as well as doing other work. The Jewish Central Committee is organizing an educational program for the branches and also will have a Sunday morning open forum in two places.

More Educational Activities.

In addition to the open forum and the regular courses to be given in Chicago, there are to be other educational activities. Recommendations of the educational council were accepted:

First, that all new members coming into the party are to attend a special course of three lectures to be given quarterly. These lectures are to deal with the elements of Communism and the program of the Workers Party. Thus we will make certain that new members will be better acquainted with the Communist position.

In addition, lectures are to be sent to the branches on questions based on the decisions of of the Fifth Congress of the Communist International. In this way in addition to the regular courses in education, branch education can be extended.

The city central committee meeting indicated that the activities of the party were extending in all directions and that the party as a whole and its branches were going forward. Industrial activity must be increased many fold, and is now receiving more attention than ever before. The DAILY WORKER must be built at all costs. This is the big job before us. To aid in that direction the proceeds of the November 7th Soviet Anniversary Celebration will be given to the DAILY WORKER.

Every member of the party is expected to become a member of THE DAILY WORKER BRICKLAYERS' UNION, by subscribing to the DAILY WORKER or getting another worker to subscribe. Membership in the Bricklayers' Union is compulsory and comrades who fail to join this union by getting subscribers in this organization drive to build up THE DAILY WORKER BRICKLAYERS' UNION must answer to the party.

Get into the drive. Build the DAILY WORKER. GET into the membership drive. 55 new members at the last meeting is better, but it is only a start. INTO THE UNIONS! ORGANIZE against the reactionary bureaucracy and win the unions to Communism. Build the Workers (Communist) Party!

Stir the Shops!

The very best place to carry on a working class campaign is in the shops and factories where the workers gather to earn their living. It is there that minds are open to the measures, parties and candidates that stand for concrete solutions of the problems of bread and butter facing the working class. It is in the shops that the workers will see most clearly, for example, the difference between Foster, the union organizer and fighter for the workers, and LaFollette, the lawyer and fighter for the middle class. BATTLE TO GET RIGHT TO MEET IN SILK TOWN

Hold Protest Meetings and Fight in Courts

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Further meetings in Paterson, N. J., "to force recognition of the right of free speech and peaceful assemblage" are announced by the American Civil Liberties Union following the arrest of eleven persons at the free-speech test meeting on City Hall steps.

The day after the test Roger N. Baldwin, director of the Civil Liberties Union, was arrested and charged with "unlawful assemblage." Baldwin was held by Recorder Munson Force for the grand jury and released on $500 bail.

His case and that of John C. Butterworth, socialist-labor party candidate for congress and chairman of the meeting, alone go to the grand jury. The others will be tried on four separate charges before the recorder.

United Front Meeting.

The meeting at which the arrests took place was arranged by the American Civil Liberties Union, the Workers Party and the socialist-labor party following the refusal of the Paterson police to allow strikers' meetings in the Turn Hall which they have been occupying for two months.

The reason given by chief of police Tracy for forbidding further meetings was the character of speeches made by H. M. Wicks, of the Workers Party brought into Paterson by the strike committee as assist in the conduct of the strike of 10,000 silk workers, now in its ninth week.

Regarding the Paterson arrests, the Civil Liberties states: "We welcome a test in the courts and on the field of public opinion of the right of peaceful assemblage in Paterson. The police have exceeded all authority in arbitrarily closing up a public hall and in forcibly breaking up a peaceful meeting called to protest against their action.

"Fifty policemen went wild at that meeting when John C. Butterworth started to read the bill of rights of the constitution from the city hall steps to a crowd of 700 strikers. Two men are in the hospital with their heads cracked; others suffered slight injuries.

Police Only Rioters.

"There was no riot except among the police. If anyone should be held for "inciting to riot" it should be chief of police Tracy, who arrogates to himself the power to censor speakers and meetings according to his whims."

The American Civil Liberties is represented in the ligitation by Addison in restoring Europe, with the sympathetic support of our government."

Thus the Magazine of Wall Street admitted in its issue of Sept. 13, 1924: "So far as we know this is the first direct attempt of this government, even unofficially, to encourage purchase of a foreign issue in recent times." Today the leading bankers are talking of having a special loan bureau in the department of commerce.

It is with the unquestioned and unquestionable aid of the United States government that the American financiers and industrialists have established their receivership of Germany—a receivership which is only an entering wedge to the complete economic and political domination of many continental countries other than Germany.

American Capitalists in Charge.

Clarence M. Wooley, head of the American Radiator company, is to be one of the arbitrators of the transfer of reparation payments. Gates W. McGarrah, chairman of the Mechanics and Metals Bank of New York has been chosen to serve as the American director of the new German Bank of Issue. S. Parker Gilbert, Jr., of the law firm of Cravath, Henderson, and De Gersdor, New York City, will be the first agent-general for reparations.

It is clear that American bankers and manufacturers will do most of the administering of the Dawes plan. What powers such administrative control will give the American capitalists can be seen from an enumeration of the duties and rights of the agent-general Gilbert who is only a tool of the Morgan-Mellon interest. Mr. Gilbert will be the virtual director of the German railways and other industrial monopolies. He will supervise the German budget in so far as it affects tax collections, expenditures

P. Rosenkrans of Paterson and will carry the cases to the highest courts if necessary, the statement adds.

Postpone Injuction Cases.

PATERSON, N. J., Oct. 9—The attempt of Paterson silk manufacturers to make their injunctions against the striking silk weavers permanent has been delayed again by vice-chancellor Vivian M. Lewis' postponement of the hearing on the 13 orders. The five contempt cases of picketing silk workers are also postponed.

Lewis declared the strikers had the legal right to picket when he announced continuances of the cases. He stated that the pickets could in a calm, orderly way attempt to persuade others to join them in their strike.

Sergeant Kelliher, who climbed the statue of vice-president Garet A. Hobart to read the riot act to the free speech test meeting is not being spoken of by striking silk workers as the hero he thought he was. The crowd jeered him at the meeting and strikers continue to show their contempt for the officer who so overstepped his authority.

for domestic purposes and reparation payments.

Mr. Gilbert will also have the power to direct the issuance of notes and the maintenance of reserves, demand all documents and statistics, conduct any investigation he deems necessary, to have full authority over currency, supervision over the two hundred million dollar loan, the collection of taxes on customs, beer, alcohol, tobacco and sugar. Truly, Mr. Gilbert will wield as much power in Germany as any Hohenzollern ever did. That is why Owen D. Young, whose place Mr. Gilbert is filling, was called by many in Germany "Owen the First." That is why the German minister of finance, Luther, confessed on Sept. 1, 1924, that "the whole German national wealth is controlled by an American."

Bigger Loot Ahead.

This domination of German resources and industry is only a prelude to a far more extensive receivership. The allied imperialists have been forced to hand over so much power to the American capitalists because they realize that the Wall Street financial wizards will be the ones who will take the greatest proportion of the numerous other loans that are to follow the moderate two hundred million dollar flotation. In its issue of April 24, 1924 the Wall Street Journal discussed the liklihood of international financing to the extent of eight billion dollars as a result of the Dawes plan.

And Mr. R. F. Zinkan writing in the Annalist of May 19, 1924 summed up the enormous possibilities for American capitalists in this fashion: "Thus the United States may acquire a close economic interest in the chief workshop of the world. This development is aided by the technical and economic combinations in 'vertical trusts,' etc., which occurred in Germany under pressure of need for economy. Thus would be made possible a better exchange of services and of rational methods of production and a world economic division of labor on a grand scale. For the preservation of European peace too, the interest of the United States in the heart of Europe would afford a good guarantee. And in this way also the economic contact of the United States with Russia could be far more effectually accomplished."

Within two weeks after the Dawes plan was put in force, the American capitalists were bold enough to propose a sort of a Dawes scheme for France. We have in mind the Hurley plan for France settling its debt to the United States. In this scheme France would have to pay annuities of $100,000,000 for sixty-three years and one-half the sum would be left in France in the form of American capital invested in French industries.

Small wonder, then, that the second most important magnate in Germany declared to a New York Times correspondent at Dusseldorf on February 5, 1924: "If conditions continue unchanged, Europe runs the risk to become a country of slaves."

No Prosperity in Dawes' Plan

Our employing class has been energetically trying to sell the Dawes plan to the American laboring and farming masses on the basis of its bringing prosperity to the country. There is not a grain of truth in this contention.

It is a sine qua non of the Dawes plan that its success depends on a huge German export surplus. In reviewing the prospects for the successful operation of the Dawes scheme Professor E. E. Agger, in the Annalist for March 24, 1924, made it plain that unless the United States accepted large excesses of imports from Germany the reparations program would fail. Prof. Agger said in part: "We are practically driven to the conclusion, therefore, that the main hope for German trade expansion lies in the United States. . . . It is reasonably certain that herculean efforts will be made to get the American market to absorb quantities of German exports." This much for the great boom that is supposed to overcome American industry as a result of the flood of German orders thru the Dawes plan.

But the American industries will face another serious problem, the dangers of which will be menacing the workers, if the Dawes program succeeds. Mr. Albert Strauss of J. & W. Seligman Co., New York bankers, and formerly vice-governor of the federal reserve board, told the Williamstown Institute of Politics on August 19, 1249: "To pay reparations the payer must live frugally, work hard and export the product of his labor. . . . The payer of reparations will thus become a decreasing customer and an increasing competitor." In degrading the German workers, the international capitalists will be striking at the American workers.

Intense Commercial Rivalry.

The Annalist "Business Outlook" for August 25, 1924 views the situation in this light: "As European industry gets under way ,the industries of the United States are certain to meet a steadily increasing competition not only in the export field but in the domestic market."

Charles A. Farrel, president of the United States Steel corporation is also very dubious about the Dawes prosperity when he says in the Magazine of Wall Street for August 30, 1924: "There is no information on which we can base an assurance that the European market can be restored within a reasonable time, nor that Europe's economic interests may not eventually be in directions antagonistic to ours."

Mr. Rufus S. Tucker, acting chief finance and investment division of the department of commerce pierces all the Dawes prosperity bubbles when he sums up the likely events in this manner: "American manufacturers are going to meet with severe competition in the sale of goods of which the value is derived mainly from labor, not only in foreign markets but even at home. In the case of goods made of materials not found in Germany, competition will not be so severe, as the exchange rates will operate against Germany when importing the raw materials. In the case of many agricultural and mineral products there will be no increased competition." In short, not a word about the prosperity wave to overwhelm the American workers.

Lower Wages Coming.

Let no one make a mistake. The American employing classes will not for an instance willingly pay the price of lowered profits because of intensified German and European competition. Our bosses will do their best to transfer the losses to the working class. For example, the New York Journal of Commerce frankly tells us: "The present reparation project, therefore, is essentially a plan which, if successful, would result in shifting our capital power over to Germany for German use, with the result that we must endure the competition that grows out of such development. There is no use in trying to obscure or ignore the fact that, exactly in proportion as these efforts succeed, the United States, like Great Britain, must look for keener competition and in the last analysis must meet such competition by reducing costs of production. This can come only thru a larger product on the part of labor or a lower wage cost." This means longer hours and lower wages.

The Magazine of Wall Street for Sept. 27, 1924 also assures the workers that wage cuts are bound to follow the Dawes plan. It says: "The facts are that Germany cannot be resuscitated financially without at the same time offering her the opportunity to sell more than she buys. For this, she must find markets and these markets are only where British, French and American markets exist. It is to be assumed that in order to find markets Germany will undersell her competitors. This she can do because of her lower production costs. To meet such competition we shall be forced to cut our production costs. This means either an increased output which it will be hard to sell on account of prospective intense competition, or a lower scale of wages for the American workingman. It is toward the latter, probably, that we are drifting."

War Dangers Multiply.

And last, but not least, is the fact that the Dawes plan multiplies and brings closer to the American working and farming masses the dangers of a new world war. It is a fact that the Ruhr region, closest to French imperialist bayonets, holds the bulk of the German loan security. Here is source of conflict. To the American bankers, security for their money is the greatest concern. Our financiers will insist on priority for their loans or else the huge industrial credits so necessary to the success of the Dawes plan will not be forthcoming. The $200,000,000 loan is only a drop in the bucket of the loans to be floated.

The germs of a new imperialist war are found in the very guarantees that the American bankers are today getting. The United States government can be counted on to protect the sacred investments of its moneyed lords with powerful armies and huge armadas. Thus, Charles E. Mitchell of the Rockefeller National City Bank says: "We have taken the precautions that were necessary." On October 15, 1924 J. P. Morgan and Lamont declared the loans are safe investments. The Balkanization of Erope proceeds apace as the grond is being prepared for sending the next gigantic American expeditionary force "over there."

YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE ORCHESTRA ROUNDS INTO CLASSICAL FORM

AFTER a summer of hard practice, the Young Workers League Orchestra of Chicago has mastered an impressive repertoire and is all set for a season of real service. Composed of members of the Young Workers League, the orchestra boasts an array of musical talent which augurs well for its future reputation. This talent includes, among many other, such musicians as Alfred Frankenstein, Lydia Heidell, Louise Pallick, Anna Lawrence, Karl Skalar, Chris Pavlov and Jack Edens.

Altho concerned mainly with the musical proficiency of their orchestra the comrades have not neglected the political aspect. They have drawn up a preamble and set of rules which leave no doubt as to the revolutionary character of their organization. In part this preamble reads as follows:

"Not only does the capitalist class control the economic and political institutions of present-day society, but it commercializes and degrades art. Music does not escape this degradation, and is today the exclusive monopoly of the ruling class. In view of this it is incumbent on the working class to develop its own art and culture. It is in line with this necessity that the Young Workers League orchestra has been organized. As part of the Young Workers League this orchestra declares that its primary duty is to render service to the revolutionary working class movement to the end of realising the emancipation of the working class and the establishment of the Communist society."

The next scheduled appearance of the orchestra is at the Foster-Gitlow meeting on October 12. In preparation for this day, the orchestra has been putting in extra rehearsals in perfecting its program. A big feature of the program will be a revolutionary medley—a piece of original orchestration done especially for the occasion by Comrade Evelyn Mack.

Window Cleaners in New York Put Fate in Hands of Kept Judge

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Judge Edward F. Boyle of the children's court will decide whether the members of the Window Cleaners' Protective Association are to get an increase in wages as they request. The union signed an agreement with the contractors association leaving the wage question to the judge's arbitration.

Joseph Teichholtz of the Guaranty Window Cleaning Co. has abandoned his anti-union tactics and is signed up with the workers again, according to Peter Darck, secretary of the union. Workers who were told not to wear the union button by Teichholtz are now asked to wear it and the employer has discharged the gangsters he had employed to attempt intimidation of the union workers.

Flow-Meters Company Machinists Strike Against Wage Cut

Machinists employed in the Flow-Meters company, 2040 Diversey avenue, were out on strike yesterday, following a cut in wages of ten per cent which the management insisted on forcing upon the men.

Every one of the machinists on strike has applied for admittance to the International Association of Machinists, J. J. Uhlmann, business agent of the district council, declared. The machinists were receiving from 75 to 90 cents per hour with an additional bonus. About a month ago the boss refused to pay the bonus any longer, and later reduced the wages ten per cent.

The men, who up until this time, were unorganized, circularized a petition which all of them signed, demanding that the boss give them their former pay. This the management of the company refused to do, and the strike followed.

Machinists and specialists are advised to stay away from the Flow-Meters company when looking for work.

Plan Mass Meet of Young Workers at Hamtramck, Mich.

(Special to The DAILY WORKER.)

HAMTRAMCK, Mich., Oct. 9.—Plans have been perfected for a huge mass meeting here on Sunday afternoon, Oct. 19, at which working boys and girls will have an opportunity to learn of the aims and methods of the Young Workers League.

The meeting will be held at the Workers' International Home, 3014 Yemans street, and will begin at 1:30 p. m. Comrade Barney Mass of Kansas City, an active member of the league, will address the audience in English. For the benefit of those young workers who do not understand English, arrangements have been made for addresses in Polish, Russian and Ukrainian.

Opera Fights Union.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Ninety per cent of the striking laides' tailors have gone back to their work with the signing up of their shops by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Local 38. The Metropolitan Opera Company is holding out against the union and workers anticipate that this may be just the first step of the opera association to put all its employes on the openshop basis. The workers in the costume shop were in the smallest union of those with which the opera company deals.

Trying to Save Another Nut.

GENEVA, Ill., Oct. 9.—An intricate psychological pattern, with such terms as dementia praecox paranoia and permanent delusion as its warp ond woof, was being woven here today by a corps of alienists about Warren J. Lincoln, lawyer-horticulturist, in an effort to cheat the gallows of its prey.

Bloody Paterson

Paterson is again a bloody battlefield. Angered by the sticking qualities displayed by the strikers the silk mill bosses have ordered their armed forces into action. Clubbing, riding down and jailing of strikers has become the order of the day.

The development of the strike in Paterson could have been written before it was ever called. First comes the strike, complete closure of the mills. Peaceful meetings, organization, a successful picket line. The strike gets stronger and the police close the halls to meetings. The picket line continues and strikers are arrested. Still no break in the solidarity.

Then comes the discard of all pretense of legality followed by a charge of armed police upon peaceful and unarmed workers.

If there were no such thing as the agencies of the capitalist state every strike of workers would end in victory because the capitalists alone cannot run their factories. Neither will workers scab on one another without coercion.

This is the function, and the principal function of government—to force the workers to toil for what the capitalists are willing to give. When a strike cannot be broken by propaganda and the hungry mouths of the unemployed, the striking workers must be beaten, killed and jailed until they give up in despair. This is the role now being played by the Paterson police.

The strike in Paterson is not a big strike nor is it in one of the heavy industries yet in come the armed forces of government in answer to the mandate of the capitalists who own them. It is plain that every strike today has a political character whether the workers want it that way or not. A realization of this fundamental fact and new tactics to meet the problems that arise from it are necessary.

The strikes of workers everywhere today mean either bowing their heads to the blows of the mercenaries of the capitalist state or organization for offense and defense.

Staying away from the job is not enough to win strikes in this era of monopolistic production. The capitalists fear more the increased militancy of the workers that follows a victory than they do a temporary loss of profits. Organizations fit for titanic struggles with all the forces of capitalism must be built and on the revolutionists in the labor movement and among the unorganized workers, because of the cowardly desertion of the official leaders, is placed the task of constructing them.

The struggle in Paterson teaches a lesson to every worker who knows the urgent need for a labor movement that can maneuver in the difficult field of the American class struggle.

Misinterpreting LaFolletteism

If the reports of the Nearing-London debate are reliable Scott Nearing's ideas of the role of the La-Follette group need considerable clarification. He is quoted as saying that "LaFollette is against class rule of any sort" and is said to have proved this from LaFollette's utterances.

If Nearing proved this we are afraid that he is a better lawyer than a revolutionist. If one thing is proved, not only by the utterances but by the acts of LaFollette and his middle class henchmen it is that they are against working class rule but for the rule of the middle class to which they belong.

They break up farmer-labor parties, they denounce the Communists for their belief in the dictatorship of the working class and they maneuver the control of what organization they have into the hands of lawyers and small capitalists and some not so small—like Spreckles and Vanderlip.

The role of the LaFolletteites—the American expression of reformist nationalist socialism—is that of the left wing of the capitalist parties. In certain periods such as the present they engage in a struggle with the big capitalists because they feel that the middle class is being denied power that rightfully belongs to it.

When a real crisis comes for capitalism these middle class elements become its strongest supporters—they become fascist openly as in Italy or mask their terrorist activities behind a thin veil of parliamentarism as in Germany.

LaFollette does not believe in class government? Why then does he fight for the supremacy of his class—a section of the capitalist class?

Nearing thinks that the LaFollette campaign is a personal adventure but Communists look for the class alignments that produce mass movements like that headed by LaFollette. Class-conscious workers can discern these alignments and it should be easy for Scott Nearing whose training in economic and historical research is his chief claim to fame.

Nobody won the debate.

Real Disrupters in Minneapolis

The question of who the real disrupters of the labor movement are has been answered in Minneapolis in a manner easily understood by every honest member of the rank and file.

An open attempt, sponsored by the elements that have fought every move toward building a fighting labor movement, is being made to start a secession drive and split the labor unions into warring factions.

The disrupters have sent out a call for a meeting for October 10 for the announced purpose of organizing a new central labor council. The call is signed by seven unions whose officialdom for years has been opposed to the policies of the Trades and Labor Assembly and which has time after time sabotaged all efforts for independent working class political action.

After having falsely charged the Communists with trying to break up the unions this group now seeks to give its disruptive activities organizational form and one of their complaints is that two members of the Workers (Communist) Party are officers of the Minneapolis Trades and Labor Assembly.

This disruptive movement is led by one Louis Harthill, a pie-counter artist of the first water. He was chief of police under Van Lear and now edits a red-baiting sheet since the Minnesota Star, thru its constant betrayals of the workers and farmers, lost its following and had to suspend.

There is a political angle to the situation which should not be overlooked inasmuch as the disrupters are composed of elements that have been peddling what portion of the labor movement they could control to the capitalist parties for years and wish to continue this lucrative pastime. Harthill, Van Lear and their tools in the unions whose names are signed to the call, are henchmen of the republican party machine and are trying to create a reactionary labor bloc which they can manipulate for the bosses.

We suppose that in spite of the endorsement of LaFollette the disrupters will receive support from the Gompers machine but we believe that the militants in Minneapolis will succeed in preserving the unity of the labor movement against this boss-inspired crew.

LaFollette "Strategy"

Governor Small, running for governor with the support of the LaFolletteites, has endorsed Coolidge without reservation. He is a regular republican, he says, and for the whole republican ticket right down the line.

The endorsement came as soon as the time limit expired for the filing of independent candidates and leave the LaFollette forces helpless. It is too late to discipline the astute Mr. Small who now has the support of the Coolidge republicans and the LaFollette independents.

The LaFolletteites are great strategists. They have been very much concerned lest someone might be able to hurl the charge of "red" at them and to prevent this have allowed the campaign plans in Illinois to be drafted by the labor fakers with the result set forth above. It is probable that the Small endorsement of Coolidge will throw Illinois, which LaFollette had a good chance to carry, into the Coolidge column.

We lowly Communists are supposed to have no conception of the finer points of political strategy and it is true that we make many mistakes. Nevertheless we have never employed the strategy that throws our entire movement behind our strongest enemy in one of the key states of the union as the LaFolletteites have succeeded in doing.

We speak of this painful matter from the standpoint of the revolutionary section of the working class but for the cockroach capitalists who dominate the LaFollette movement it is far less serious to strengthen the following of Coolidge and Dawes than to aid in any way the followers of Foster and Gitlow—Communist candidates.

A New Peace Plan

The European socialists are today simply the mouthpieces of the ruling class which utters plea after plea for the salvation of European capitalism by American capitalism. To the working class of the United States the social-democrats make no appeal. Their statements are directed to the American ruling class.

The latest appeal comes from the French socialists who have come back from Geneva. They have a wonderful plan to bring peace to a suffering world. Nothing rough, of course. The League of Nation's flag is to be flown by every nation and this is to make war impossible.

Say the socialists who supported their government in the world war and who have upheld it in its most oppressive features ever since:

"Armies and navies which fly the flag of the league beside the national flag would by that token become different organizations. They would become symbols of peace instead of war. Everybody would know whether the nation was devoted to peace or not by the presence or absence of the flag."

Here in all its shamelessness is the idea of a national unity under capitalism. No word of the warring class interests or any hint of the fact that the masses of all nations are for peace but that the rulers bring on war.

To depend upon an instrument of imperialism such as the league is to bring peace is the same as expecting capitalism to free the working class from wage-slavery. The social-democrats seem to believe that peace can be "flagged in" the same as a railway train.

British Trade Union Congress

Editor's Note.—In these days when the British Labor government under the premier, J. Ramsay MacDonald, is facing an end of its rule, it will be interesting to read of the events that transpired at the recent British Trade Union Congress, the powerful economic organization of the British workers that listened to an address by M. Tomsky, the head of the All-Russian Trade Unions. We have received an excellent article on the congress from Harry Pollitt, of London. It is as follows:

By HARRY POLLITT.
(London).

THE 56th Trade Union Congress held at Hull, attended by 750 delegates, representing 4½ million workers, was the most important congress yet held. Out of the 105 resolutions covering every conceivable subject, four definite facts, overshadowing everything else, emerge, and all these possess an international significance and importance.

If would be very easy to place on record where the congress failed, what it ought to have done, the issues it ought to have faced, but here we are only concerned with what actually happened at the congress.

The national minority conference, held a week previously, had undoubtedly had its effect upon the Hull congress. And though the general council of the congress refused to place on the agenda any of the resolutions passed at the minority conference and sent on to Hull, these questions were introduced during the various debates that took place.

The Trade Union Congress and the Labor Government.

There had been no attempts or provision made for discussing the policy of the labor government during the nine months of its existence. In the annual report of the general council only a congratulatory reference was made to the labor government, and a sentence inserted declaring that it was not the business of the trade union congress to discuss the policy of the government, unless it was in relation to specific resolutions that had been previously discussed by congress. This part of the report was contested and a protest censured. There was very evident a strong feeling in the congress against the labor governments' actions, particularly in regard to the Dawes report; its policy during strikes and in regard to the Dawes report were roundly condemned, and Robert Smillie was put up to try and defend the government, but he was unable to make out any defence. When the vote took place the motion criticising the government was lost but a very considerable support was gained for the motion, to the surprise of the general council.

Thruout the week, on a variety of resolutions, many strong criticisms were made of the labor government. It was easy to see how nine months of such a government has disillusioned many workers' representatives as to its attitude and policy. This disillusionment is also spreading amongst the masses, but it would be a great mistake to assume that the labor government was not still very popular with the organized trade union movement.

At all past congresses, a special resolution dealing with foreign policy has been discussed. This year the resolution, was only confined to assuring the government of the support of the congress in its intentions to carry out the agreement with Soviet Russia. Congress was unanimous on this point, and the hands of the government in dealing with the opposition against the treaty will be greatly strengthened.

But the most significant thing was the absence of any resolution congratulating Ramsay MacDonald on the results achieved by him at the London conference. At the very time when the London conference and the Dawes report are being claimed as triumphs for MacDonald and the labor government, the trade union congress is silent, and for a very significant reason. That is because the opposition to the Dawes report was so strong within the congress, that had the general council introduced a resolution backing it up, they would have run a serious risk of it being defeated; this would have been a grave political defeat for MacDonald and so no opportunity was given of having a discussion on the question, but throughout the proceedings of the congress many references to the Dawes report were made, all indicative of a growing opposition to this slave plan. I now hear that the miners are to convene a special national conference to discuss the Dawes report, and what is to be their future attitude to this report.

Towards National Unity

The British trade union movement is very sectionalist. There is no central organization backing up the various unions in a common struggle against capitalism. Two resolutions that make for closer working and also towards creating a general staff were adopted at the congress. The first resolution makes it the duty of the general council of the T. U. C. to prepare a scheme for the adoption of the principle of organization by industry. At present there are over 1100 unions in Britain, all overlapping, jealous of each others' rights, constantly quarrelling with each other over the right to organize various classes of workers. The adoption of this resolution means a real step towards the unification of the movement.

The second resolution was brought before congress by the general council itself. At present this council has no real powers or functions. It has been looked upon with varying degrees of tolerance, suspicion or distrust, as the case may be. But it has been a main plank in the programme of the opposition now, organized in the minority movement, that if the workers are to fight successfully, there must be a central organization and leadership, directing and coordinating all their struggles.

In every strike and lockout, the opposition has repeatedly shown the necessity for such centralization, and it is the direct result of this propaganda, that the existing general council has been forced to come and asked congress to give it increased power and authority. Two years ago at Southport, a similar resolution was overwhelmingly defeated. Last year at Plymouth it was again defeated, this year there was an overwhelming majority in favour of the general council having this power, and so by its resolutions on organization by industry and increased powers to the general council the Hull congress has done much to solidify the ranks of the trade unions in Britain.

Towards International Unity

The general council submitted a report of the Viennese congress of the I. F. T. U. It was on this report that a discussion was initiated on the question of international unity. While approval was expressed of the attitude of the British delegation at Vienna, strong criticism was made because the Vienna resolution was expressly framed to exclude all the organizations affiliated to the R. I. L. U., with the exception of the Russian trade unions. A proposal was made that the general council should at once take measures on the executive bureau of the Amsterdam international to arrange for the convening of an all-in international conference, at which should be present all the organizations now affiliated to both the Amsterdam and Moscow Internationals.

There was a strong demonstration in the congress favouring this proposal and A. A. Purcell, the congress chairman, then stated that this question was of such importance that the congress itself should decide what steps the general council should take. The debate then continued, and all the right wing leaders took part. It was very noticeable the way they all concentrated on two things. First a general complaint about the personal criticism they had received, secondly they all went on record for unity with the Russian unions, but were silent as to what was to happen to the other organizations affiliated to the R.I.L.U.

The leaders of the German social-democratic, French and Belgian trade unions will derive no pleasure from this debate, for Tillett of the Transport Workers, Robinson of Distributive Workers, Pollitt and Hullsworth all levelled strong criticism against these leaders and their attempts to sabotage unity. The debate then concluded on the understanding that an emergency resolution was to be submitted to congress.

A resolution was then submitted to the standing orders committee, but was rejected on account of the wording, a second resolution was then drafted and accepted by the standing orders committee and was then brot to the congress. In informing the congress of the nature of the resolution, the chairman gave it as his opinion that the points in the resolution were covered by the Viennese resolution. The right wingers seized on this statement, as providing an excuse not to debate the question again and moved that the congress refuse to discuss the resolution.

A fight then took place on this issue, the writer pointing out, how the resolution came to be drafted and what was the vital distinction between this resolution and the Vienna resolution. At this stage a delegate was stated to have made some remarks derogatory to the authority of the chairman and a scene then took place. It gave an opportunity for the reactionaries to focus attention on this incident, and so pass on to the next business. This was done, but there was a very strong opposition to this course. The next day came the speech of Tomsky, and afterwards telegrams were read from Italy and from Fimmen who was stated to be in Moscow. These telegrams indicated that the workers of all countries were looking to the Hull trade union congress to take real steps towards establishing the unity of the international trade union movement.

Having in mind the strong support of the congress delegates for unity and with the effect of Tomsky's speech upon all the delegates present, the chairman, A. A. Purcell then made the following statement:

"I think I should take this opportunity of impressing upon congress the significant fact that we have now received from practically all those continental nations where the labor movement is in a disturbed condition, messages that they are looking to the British trade union congress for a demonstration of that unity which is so vitally necessary. From Italy, Germany and now from France, the dissident sections have intimated their desire for that unity, and if our movement is to fulfil its great destiny, something must be done to consummate that desire. In no country is unity so firmly established as in Great Britain and it seems to me incumbent upon this congress that, without passing any formal resolutions or indulging in prolonged discussions, it should take such steps as will bring together the different elements of the labor movement in Europe in an effort to establish that solidarity that will make for world peace. I would therefore suggest to this congress, that they empower the general council thru the international federation of trade unions to take all possible steps to bring the parties together."

The congress unanimously agreed to this suggestion, and the position now is, that the general council of the British trade union congress is pledged to work for the unity of the movement and will, I am convinced, after the discussion which took place at Hull, see that all the organizations affiliated to the two Internationals are brought together.

The Russian Delegation.

The reception accorded to the delegation from the Russian trade unions was the greatest ever given by congress. It completely overshadowed all the others. It was the first time that the representatives of the organized workers of Great Britain and Russia had faced each other, and there was no doubt as to the spontaneity and the warmth in the tribute of the British workers in welcoming these Russian comrades.

Comrade Tomsky's speech was in such marked contrast from those delivered by the fraternal delegates from other countries, that this fact alone made it the more impressive. But the acute analysis of the economic situation, the lessons from the past struggles of the workers, the implications of the Dawes report, the growing danger of war, and in this situation the essential need for the unity of the organized workers—this was the theme of the speech and it created a profound impression, and has been responsible for many influential leaders now working harder than ever for the unity of the movement.

The capitalist press realized the importance of this speech, for the next day it was given in full in all the most powerful newspapers. The British trade union congress is to send a delegation to visit Russia, and this will mark a further step towards forging real bonds of solidarity between the Russian and British workers, and thru them between the workers of the world.

The Hull congress has therefore been of the greatest international importance. It neglected to face many important issues, but its work alone on the question of the unity of the trade unions, both nationally and internationally, marks a progressive step in the history of British and international trade unionism.

To All Proletarian Prisoners of the Bourgeoisie

THE First International Conference of the International Red Relief issued an appeal of which we reprint the following extract:

Our International Red Relief was formed in a period of furious capitalist attacks. It was established thanks to the endeavors of the workers and peasants of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics in close co-operation with the revolutionary working class and peasantry of the capitalist countries. Its task is the material and moral support of the victims of the revolutionary struggle. The International Red Relief supports the prisoners in the bourgeois prisons and the families of the fallen and imprisoned revolutionists.

However, the work of building up our organization is not yet at the end. We strive to establish a still stronger red basis for the support of the International workers' and peasants' movement. We must strengthen the connection between the various parts of this organization which constitutes one of the best means for the establishment of the united front of the working class. In order to carry thru this task, the First International Conference of the International Red Relief took place in Moscow. The millions of organized workers and peasants of all countries, represented by the International Red Relief, are united by one idea: to double and even treble their help for the imprisoned and persecuted fighters of the revolution.

We call today to the prisoners of capital: "Do not lose courage! Behind you are the millions of the workers, the members of the International Red Relief and first of all the workers and peasants of the Socialist Soviet Republics. The invisible ties that connect you, the prisoners of capital, thru the iron bars of capitalist prisons with the millions of the workers and peasants outside, will never be separated!"

We are convinced that soon the hour will come when the masses of the workers and peasants will rise for the final struggle against capital.—The First World Conference of the International Red Relief.

VIEWS OF OUR READERS

Owens Hits the Tribune.

To the DAILY WORKER—The prejudice breeding, race riot creating, Negro baiting capitalist newspaper, The Chicago Tribune, has an incurable mania for seeing non-existing things. Every single time that some Negro felon is apprehended, a near lynching occurs, according to this lying and filthy newspaper. Carl Sandberg, of the Chicago Daily News, stated that the Tribune was one of the chief instigators of the Chicago race riots of 1919.

The Tribune, of Tuesday, Oct. 7, tells in streaming headlines on the front page, of the identification of, "Negro Killers," and of the attempt made to lynch them by a crowd of infuriated whites in Evanston, Ill.

This lie sheet also states how one of the slayers stated that he and his girl needed money to make the rounds of the Black and Tan joints on the South Side. The lecherous Chicago Tribune has a hatred too awful to contemplate, for any amusement or recreational place frequented by both Negroes and whites and sneeringly refers to them as Black and Tan.

No doubt most of the slush contained in this prejudice breeding news story was concocted in the distorted and twisted brain of one of the paid morons on the Tribune staff, who are experts at putting over anti-Negro articles and stories. Other races in Chicago constantly commit unheard-of and unbelievable crimes, but never does the Tribune refer to their racial identity as Jewish Killers, Irish Killers, German Killers like they always do in the case of a Negro.

The Chicago Tribune, owned and controlled by the employers of Chicago, does everything in its power to keep alive prejudice against Negroes, and to keep the Negro and white workers separate and divided and from mingling or coming in contact with each other. The Tribune always associates the word Negro with crime in order to create in the minds of white workers that Negroes are criminals and the inferiors of whites, and unfit to associate with or mix with the whites. This is the capitalist's trick to keep Negro and white workers divided and apart in order that they, the capitalists and employers, may rob and exploit them both.

The one and only way to destroy this Anti-Negro propaganda is to destroy the system which thrives on same, the present iniquitous and robber system of capitalist wage slavery. The Communists, the people whom this Negro baiting sheet also prints vicious lies about, are the ones who advocate this remedy. Negro workers should unite and join forces with the Communists and aid them to carry out their program and thereby destroy this vicious system under which they, the Negroes, are the worst sufferers. —Gordon W. Owens, Chicago.

They Don't Do It in Russia.

To the DAILY WORKER:—As we are aware that slogans are being used to good advantage by the capitalist class, I herewith suggest to the membership of the Workers Party and the DAILY WORKER to use the following slogan every time they come in contact with the iniquities of the capitalist system—They don't do that in Russia.

I thot up the slogan today, using it during the course of conversations. In each case the question was asked, "What do you mean?" thus giving me a chance to give out some Communist propaganda.

The fact that the words (slogan)—They don't do that in Russia—at once raised the ear of each one I conversed with struck me as a good slogan for the use of the party.—Louis Reguera.

All Illinois to Hear Communist Message

GOVERNOR SMALL COMES OUT FOR COOLIDGE AND DAWES AND THE WHOLE WALL ST. TICKET

By ARNE SWABECK.
(District Organizer, Workers Party.)

Governor Small, the "good roads governor" of Illinois, who employs workers for road building at 40 cents an hour, ten hours a day, has repanted. His hobnobbing with the LaFollette supporters after all had only one object, that of making sure that they would not file nominations for any candidate for the office of governor.

He has now declared himself a regular republican, a supporter of Coolidge, Dawes, the Minute Men of the Constitution and Wall Street.

Just after the zero hour for filing nomination petitions had struck at a republican rally in Harrisburg, Ill., Governor Small made the statement: "I have been a republican and always expect to be. . . . I approve everything that has been said by those who spoke before me."

All's Now O. K.

Those who spoke before had delivered impassioned, old style campaign speeches for the republican party and its standard bearers. It is said that the governor's statement relieved much of the uneasiness of his running mates on the state ticket with whom he is on tour.

Governor Small has played a safe game, catering to the LaFollette force until after the time for filing of nominations had passed. He succeeded in obtaining the endorsement of numerous labor bodies, engineered thru the labor leaders in close touch with Springfield, an endorsement which now carries with it an endorsement of all that the republican party stands for.

An endorsement of the party which utterly ignored labor's demands, the party of anti-labor injunctions which forms the essential part of the capitalist dictatorship in the United States. An endorsement of Coolidge the strikebreaker and of the father of the minute men of the constitution.

To the supporters of the LaFollette ticket who really believe that that is the present expression of progressivism, this statement of Governor Small will undoubtedly come as a severe jolt. To the unscrupulous trade union fakers, however, who engineered the endorsement of the combination LaFollette, Wheeler and Small there is nothing shocking about it. This is just their way of playing the game of "non-partisan" politics which in all instances means politics in support of capitalism.

Undoubtedly the coal miners of Illinois, who have been forced by unemployment to seek jobs at 40 cents an hour and 16 hours a day on hard road building, and very soon found out why these roads were called "hard roads," have never been fooled by the efforts to line them up for this particular kind of non-partisan politics.

All in the Same Boat.

To them the ticket presented by the Workers Party, William Z. Foster, for president; Benjamin Gitlow for vice-president, and William F. Dunne, for governor, will have particular significance. They are working class candidates running on a working class program. The LaFollette, Wheeler, Small forces are now appearing in their true light, a combination of republicans and democrats; of big and small capitalists.

THE CAMPAIGN FUND CAMPAIGN! One hundred thousand dollars and not a penny less.

Firemen Brotherhood in Open Defiance of Railway Labor Board

CLEVELAND, Oct. 9.—Openly defying the railway labor board, D. B. Robertson, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, has invited managers of western railway systems to negotiate directly with the brotherhood on revising the wage scale.

The labor board recently assumed charge of the negotiation of the new contract and haled the brotherhood men to appear in Chicago. The issue is now in federal district court in Chicago.

The Brotherhood officials have ignored the labor board's summons and their latest step is a polite invitation to the corporation-controlled board to keep its hands off the railwaymen's disputes. The firemen are asking increases of 24 to 36 cents a day, which have already been granted by the eastern roads.

Communist Election Program

IN the state of Illinois the industries are owned and controlled by powerful capitalist corporations who exploit the workers engaged in these industries for the purpose of amassing ever greater fortunes for themselves.

Most of these industries are operated on an "open shop" or company union basis, the workers being subjected to low wages and long working hours and periodically long term unemployment. Moreover, the owners of these industries have combined their forces and used all the weapons at their command to wipe out every vestige of labor organization. For such purpose the "Citizens' Committee" in Chicago, the Minute Men of the Constitution in Evanston and other places were created.

The Ku Klux Klan is being secretly and openly supported and financed by these big corporations to terrorize the workers, instill racial hatred and in this manner to break down their solidarity and destroy their organizations. The Ku Klux Klan is a fascist organization pure an simple; it is a menace to the working class.

These corporations control the state and local governments and utilize them to maintain their grip on the industries and their power to rob the industrial workers, agricultural workers and farmers. The pages of the history of this state are littered with injunctions issued against workers; with police and soldiers being used against striking workers for the protection of scabs and with anti-labor legislation. This government refused to enact a proposed women's eight hour law.

In this election the old reactionary parties, the

FOR GOVERNOR

WILLIAM F. DUNNE.
Workers Party candidate for Governor.

DUNNE OPENS THE WORKERS PARTY'S STATE CAMPAIGN AT WEST FRANKFORT ON OCT. 16

William F. Dunne, candidate of the Workers Party for the governorship of Illinois, begins his tour of the state Oct. 16, with a mass meeting in West Frankfort.

Comrade Ella Reeve (Mother) Bloor has already covered the towns at which Dunne will speak, and has been given enthusiastic receptions from the workers, especially in the mining sections, despite the efforts of the Ku Klux Klan to stop her from holding meetigns.

Much interest is being displayed in the campaign, in view of the fact that Dunne is the only working class candidate in the field. This has been made absolutely definite by the recent declaration of Len Small, the present incumbent who was enforsed by the labor fakers, in favor of the candidacy of the strike-breaking president, Coolidge.

Dunne is very well known for his activities in the labor movement and in the Communist movement. For years he was identified with the militant struggles of the workers of the northwest, having been editor of their paper, the Butte Bulletin. He is at present the editor of the DAILY WORKER.

He has just returned from a trip to the first working-class republic, Soviet Russia, which he visited as a delegate to the congresses of the Communist International and the Red International of Labor Unions, in the discussions of both of which he took a prominent part.

"Bill" Dunne is a powerful speaker, and will deal with the problems of the workers in Illinois from the Communist viewpoint. He will deal especially with the scourge of unemployment which is so seriously affecting the lives of thousands of coal miners in the state.

The following dates have been arranged:

NEW TASKS IN WOOLEN MILLS FORCE STRIKE

Workers Walk Out Under Heavier Burdens

(By The Federated Press)

MIDLEBORO, Mass., Oct. 8.—Two hundred and fifty woolen workers in the Nemasket Mills are on strike against additional tasks. The company ordered each of the two-loom weavers to do additional tasks connected with the fancy fabrics.

The strike is partially under the control of the Amalgamated Textile Workers' Council, an independent organization restricted to the woolen industry.

This union claims 1,500 to 2,000 members. It sprang up after the 1922 strike. Its program calls for industrial organization with departmental features and it declares its readiness to recognize the card of any other union without insisting on affiliation with its own organization.

Develop Open Shop Policy.

CROMPTON, R. I., Oct. 8.—John Swanson, superintendent of the Crompton mills, who worked himself up from weaver, has been on a prolonged vacation, which seems likely to be permanent. His place has been taken by a Crompton company salesman named Moran.

The latter is now trying to "sell" a company union to the workers. Moran used his sales car during the big strike of 1922 to transport strike-breakers. Recently he fired five members of the Amalgamated Textile Workers' organization. The theory of union workers is that the change in superintendents is in line with the developing open shop policy of the company.

Investigate Conciliator.

BOSTON, Mass., Oct. 8.—United States conciliator Charles G. Wood is under investigation by the joint committee of the Boston Central Labor Union and the Waltham Central Labor Union for misuse of his office in connection with the Waltham watch makers' strike.

The charges are that Wood wrote a letter to Ernest Faulkner, president of the Waltham Employers' Protective Association, strongly urging acceptance of the company's "shop plan of settlement" and the acceptance of a wage cut.

At a meeting of the Boston Central Labor Union it was decided to proceed judicially in the matter—the facts, as borne out by a copy of the commissioner's letter, seem perfectly clear. Should Wood be formally declared guilty of the charges, a strong protest to the U. S. department of labor, based on his unfitness, will be made.

Standard Oil Trust Protests That It Is Serving Public

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Oct. 8.—An answer to ouster proceedings seeking to bar it from further operation in this state on grounds that it was guilty of violating the anti-trust laws, was filed in the supreme court here today by the Standard Oil company of Indiana.

The answer makes specific denial of all charges in the petition for ouster and declares that "the corporation has served the public and has voluntarily enlarged its trade opportunities of its competitors, instead of reserving all the benefits of its patents for itself as it might lawfully have done.

PAYROLLS IN NEW YORK STATE ARE SLIPPING BACK TO 1921 LEVEL

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

A gain of 1 per cent in total wage payments by the manufacturers of New York state between July and August indicates to state industrial commissioner Shientag that the low point in the industrial depression has been reached. His report, however, shows that the depression is still general and that the change in total wage disbursements is small.

It is estimated, says Shientag, that weekly payrolls are about $4,500,000 less this August than August, 1923. This is not a measure of the full difference for payrolls for August, 1923, were slightly reduced on account of the closing of many places for president Harding's funeral.

Shientag goes on to make a comparison between the low point of the present depression and the low point of approximately $4,000,000 or 8 per cent higher than the lowest point of that depression which came in August, 1921.

Industry Irregular.

The comparison shows that the industrial situation is very irregular. On the one hand are the building supply industries with payrolls half again as high as in 1921 and actually higher than in previous periods of prosperity. On the other are the textile and clothing industries where payrolls are today lower than in the middle of 1921. Between the two come the metal and wood industries with payrolls one-third higher than in August, 1921, and the chemical, paper, paper goods and food industries which are to a smaller degree above the 1921 level.

The most significant thing about the clothing and textile industries, according to Shinetag, is not the reduction in employment so much as the slowness of recovery, in contrast with the way in which they led the movement of 1921. This is part of a downward trend for these industries in New York state which shows in good and bad times alike.

Shinetag's comparison with 1921 should be carried further. Factory payrolls 8 per cent above August 1921 are still about 13 per cent below August, 1923 showing that they have fallen nearly two-thirds of the way back in the direction of the worst depression the country had known in years.

Getting Close to 1924.

If we take the employment figures instead of the wage disbursements it appears that the number on factory payrolls in August was less than 6 per cent above the level of August, 1921, indicating that industrial employment has fallen more than three-quarters of the way back into that depression.

The outstanding fact about the present depression down to most recent reports is that it has resulted in less severe wage cutting than in the 1920-21 period. This accounts for the fact that total factory payrolls present a somewhat more favorable picture than actual employment figures.

Streetcar Men's Gains.

MONTREAL.—Great improvement in conditions among Montreal street railway workers in the last 15 years, owing to the operations of the union, are called attention to by W. B. Fitzgerald, first vice-president Amalgamated Assn. of Street & Electric Railway employes. Fifteen years ago, he said, wages were 12 to 15 cents an hour as compared with 40 cents now. Nine hours is the average today with some runs involving 14 to 15 hours, while 15 years ago the working day ran 17, 18 and 19 hours. Fitzgerald is here to prepare for the biennial convention of his organization next September. A thousand delegates are expected to represent the 135,000 members of the union.

WOOLEN TRUST FOR METCALF IN RHODE ISLAND

Backs Millionaire for the U. S. Senate

(By The Federated Press)

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Oct. 8.—Nomination of Jesse H. Metcalf, millionaire woolen manufacturer, strikebreaker and father of the two-loom, speed-up system in the woolen mills of Rhode Island, for United States senator by the republican convention, surprised few persons in the state.

The Rhode Island textile manufacturers control the political machine of the high tariff party and it is considered logical that a woolen manufacturer should take the field in person instead of leaving the job to a political satellite. Metcalf was named for the unexpired term of another open shop manufacturer, the late senator Le Baron B. Colt.

Wars on the Workers.

Jesse H. Metcalf is remembered by woolen operatives for the long drawn out strike in his Providence mill thirty years ago when a movement for better living conditions led by the American Federation of Labor was crushed.

Several years after the strike Metcalf inaugurated the two-loom system, by which each weaver ran twice the machinery he had run before. Other manufacturers followed; the two-loom system became universal and its author today is backed by his fellow manufacturers for the highest legislative office in the land.

Build United Front of Native and Foreign Born to Aid Communist Press

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, on the editorial page, we publish an appeal of our Lithuanian Communist daily, Laisve, calling upon its readers to support the subscription getting drive of the DAILY WORKER.

Similar appeals have already been published in the Italian Communist Daily, IL LAVORATORE, and our Russian Communist daily, NOVY MIR. We shall gladly publish these in early issues. All of our foreign language publications, daily, as well as weekly and monthly, will join hands in this campaign of the DAILY WORKER, because they realize that the triumph of the American Communist movement will only be assured when it has enlisted the workers of all nationalities under its crimson standards.

• • • • •

The DAILY WORKER is just as much the weapon of the foreign-born as of the native-born worker. It is the champion alike of all oppressed labor. It speaks the common language of the universal fight against the enemy, capitalist class.

The foreign-born worker, intelligent and aggressive in his own language, must not dodge support of the English-language Communist press by the excuse so often heard, "I cannot read the English language." That is the excuse of a shirker.

That the Communist foreign-language press does not intend to shirk any responsibilities in the present campaign of the DAILY WORKER for a greater army of readers, is shown by the enthusiasm with which it is taking up its share of this task of today.

• • • • •

Every foreign-language worker is in close touch, in his neighborhood, and on his job, with English speaking workers.

This present drive is a good time to introduce the DAILY WORKER to native-born toilers, many of whom are dropping much of the 100% pay-triotism with which they were supersaturated during the war. The growing unemployment, the continued high cost of living, the efforts of the bosses to cut wages, are all contributing to the complete awakening of "The Great, Free-Born American Citizen." He is beginnnig to realize which side of the class struggle he ought to be fighting on. He will welcome the Communist message that the DAILY WORKER will bring to him.

• • • • •

That is a very good suggestion that the editor of the Lithuanian Daily, Laisve, has to offer to the foreign-language speaking fathers of native-born children. He urges that the fathers subscribe for the DAILY WORKER for their children. It is pointed out that in this way the children will develop a desire for Communist literature. They will be won away from the capitalist press.

Winning the children for Communism is probably the greatest task of the American Communist movement. It is the same in other countries. Unless the children turn against the Moloch social order of capitalism; the social revolution is impossible. For the children of today are the grown workers of tomorrow. Public school education, the contents of the whole capitalist press, the movie, the radio and every other avenue of communication and propaganda are all used to hold the children as staunch supporters of the established social order, which clutches them frantically in its profit grip.

• • • • •

The slogan of the Laisve should be raised by every other foreign-language Communist publication. Every reader of our foreign-language press should get a young worker to read the DAILY WORKER. Bring the DAILY WORKER into the home of every foreign-born worker.

• • • • •

But there is a way for the English-language speaking workers, who have already been won for Communism, or who sympathize with its message, to reciprocate. They also have a task to perform. Their duty is also clear.

Let every English-language speaking worker, who reads this appeal, interest some foreign-born worker, not yet reached, in the foreign-language Communist publication issued in his language.

• • • • •

The foreign-born toiler constitutes the majority of those who labor in the nation's great basic industries; in the mines, and in the steel mills. This is also true of the great textile and other industries. Criminally long hours give them little time to learn the English language. The cruel exploitation of the body numbs the brain and leaves it incapable of study. Leisure moments are rare. The days of unemployment are worse than those on the job, because they carry with them the nerve-wrecking hunt for another place to toil. But the foreign-born worker will read literature in his own language. The Communist message will come to him like a welcome deliverer.

It is the duty of every English-language worker, while the DAILY WORKER is carrying on its subscription campaign, to get as many new readers as possible for our foreign-language Communist press. In order to acquaint our readers with our press published in the various foreign languages, a list of these publications is published herewith:

RECOGNIZE THE WORKERS' RULE, LABOR DEMANDS

N. Y. Toilers Also Urge Prisoners Be Freed

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—Resolutions demanding the full recognition of Soviet Russia by the United States and calling upon the governors of the states, and upon the president of the United States to release working class men and women sent to prison under laws which limit and curtail the right of free speech, were adopted and sent to Calvin Coolidge by a conference of representatives from trade unions, fraternal and political organizations held at the Labor Temple, 243 E. 84th St., here recently.

The resolutions, which have been sent to "Silent Cal," are as follows:

For Recognition of Soviet Russia

Whereas, the nations of the world are one by one extending recognition to the Union of Soviet Republics, the union of workers' republics; and

Whereas, such recognition has not only been of material assistance in promoting employment for the workers, but also has been a step toward the establishment of friendly relations between the workers of all nations and those of the Union of Soviet Republics and therefore a step toward real world peace;

Be it therefore resolved, that we call upon the president of the United States to immediately enter upon negotiations with the Union of Soviet Republics to the end that full recognition may be speedily accorded to them; and

Be it further resolved, that we call upon the workers of the United States to use their organized power in order that such recognition may be speedily extended to the government of their fellow workers in the Union of Soviet Republics.

For Release of Political Prisoners.

Whereas, the prisons of various states in the Union are today occupied by the members of the working class, men and women convicted under laws which limit and curtail the right to free speech and free expression of opinion;

Be it resolved, that we send greetings to these men and women and pledge them our whole-hearted support in order to secure their early release; and

Be it further resolved, that we call upon the governors of the various states in which these workers are imprisoned and upon the president of the United States, to immediately free these men and women, who have been guilty of no crime but that of freely expressing their opinion, as guaranteed them by the constitution of the United States; and

Be it further resolved, that we call upon the workers thruout the nation to use their organized effort to free those who have been imprisoned in their behalf, and to use every effort to have removed from the statute books those laws which in any way limit or prevent the free exercise of freedom of speech, press or assemblage.

Greek Government Ousted for Failure To Crush Strikes

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ATHENS, Oct. 8.—The democratic party headed by Michalacopoulos, has come into power in Greece following the fall of the Sotoulis government.

A vote of lack of confidence in the present cabinet is understood to have been due to the failure of Sotoulis to crush the recent strikes among the workers in the printing trades and on the railroads. Members of the new cabinet are pledged to crush these measures against the General Confederation of Labor, which has stood solidly behind the strikers.

The ministry of the interior is now in the hands of General Kondylis, leader of the fascist forces of Greece. Kondylis recently toured the southern part of the country, denouncing the World War Veterans, a revolutionary organization.

The democratic party is popularly known as the Venizelos party. Venzelos who is now in London is openly the agent of Paris allies, pledging Greece to make use of the Greek army in the event of Communist uprisings in the Balkan states.

Need the Law's Consent.

Mrs. Shirley Iva Knox Hall-Quest and the unidentified man for whom a "perfect, passionate love" drove her to violate conventions, leave the home of her husband, Prof. Alfred Lawrence Hall-Quest, noted educator, and seek a "love nest" in exclusive Evanston today were free to put the stamp of legal sanction upon their relations.

THE THREAT OF SOVIET RULE

When the Workers Seize Power.

Shoe Strike in Sixth Week.

CHELSEA, Mass., Oct. 8.—The Amalgamated Shoe Workers' local union No. 1, is in its sixth week of strike against the James Miller company. The workers went out when a 11½ per cent wage cut was given after a 25 per cent cut had been in effect only a month. The Chelsea aldermen offered to select a committee to arbitrate the matter. The Amalgamated is really a part of the old United Shoe Workers' organization and may join the Protective which grew out of the United.

It's your paper—Build on it! Building Bolsheviks—the D. W. B. U.

HARD TIMES HIT THE MOVIES

An army of seven million men out of work looks bad to the owner of a small "picture show." The movies are the theatre of the working class, and when workers cannot go to work they cannot go to the show either. In the largest houses in New York and Chicago the pinch is not felt so quickly, but it has hit the smalled houses so hard that many of them have had to close up.

Wide-awake sections of the labor movement have taken advantage of the little movie-owner's plight to persuade him to run working class films which otherwise he would never touch. If a local committee representing trade unions, fraternal societies, or even the Workers Party alone, approaches one of these managers with a proposal of organized support for a certain picture they are interested in, he will be found, these days, to be theroly interested. He needs crowds in his theatre if he is to make money, and our crowds look good to him.

In several Minnesota and Michigan towns the Finnish workers have done this. In a single day three dates were made in small communities for "The Fifth Year," one of the older pictures released by the International Workers' Aid. The showings are at Rock, Mich., on Oct. 12; at Sebeka, Minn., Oct 14; and at Lawler, Minn., on Oct. 15. What the Finns did in these three instances can be done by workers of other nationalities elsewhere.

The pictures are furnished by the International Workers' Aid, 19 S. Lincoln St., Chicago, Ill. Two dramas, one comedy, two full-length educational features, and several short subjects are on the call of their made in and dealing with Soviet Russia. The proceeds go to the workers' relief funds, but in special instances, where labor organizations or newspapers thru their work alone make a show possible, a share of the proceeds goes to the co-operating organization. This is an ideal method of raising funds locally for press and other purposes.

Sometimes the theatre manager pays a direct rental, sometimes he pays a percentage of his ticket sales, sometimes he takes the film free and allows our committee to keep all proceeds from the admission tickets he sells. If there is a chance to run our films on any of these methods in your locality, get in touch with the International Workers' Aid, 19 S. Lincoln St., Chicago, Ill.

Sure to Show "The Beauty and Bolshevik" In Philadelphia, Penn.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Oct. 8.—In spite of the fact that the Pennsylvania board of censors fears that this new film will start a revolution in America, and on that ground refused to grant a license to show it, Philadelphia is going to experience the rare thrill of seeing the first Soviet film that has yet come to America. This is made possible only after legal pressure was used to convince the board that it had no authority whatever to hold up a film on grounds of differences of political or social theories.

"The Beauty and the Bolshevik," the fascinating Red Army romance, tells the story of the young commandant of the Red Army and the daughter of the reactionary landowner and priest of the village in which the army settles after four years of severe warfare. It is very humorous to follow all the incidents that lead finally to the marriage of Kombrig, the commandant, and the girl, daughter of Kulak, the priest, and the final stirring scene of the Red Army marching out of the village led by Kombrig and his bride, and followed by the curious population of the village.

This picture has been postponed for this Saturday night, Oct. 11, at Lulu Temple, Broad and Spring Streets, Philadelphia. There will be two performances starting at 6:30 and 8:30 p. m. Those who have already bought tickets, may use them for this week's showing. There will be additional programs consisting of special music and a three reel picture "Russia in Overalls," a graphic picture showing the industrial development of Russia since the revolution.

Australian "Big Biz" Has Few Stunts of Its Own to Put Over

ADELAIDE, South Australia.—Sensational evidence showing how the recent anti-labor government of the state of South Australia tried to drive state-owned trading concerns established by a previous labor government out of action, in order to prevent competition with private enterprise, was given by the manager of the South Australian state shipping service before a commission appointed by the present Labor government.

By order of the recent anti-labor government profits from the state concerns were paid into the general fund of the state, and if subsequently a concern showed a loss, instead of subtracting the loss from the previous profit, the loss was set down against the concern. In this way, some were pronounced as losses and closed down.

Compulsory Labor In Bulgaria.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—A report from Bulgaria, issued thru the international labor office, Washington branch, shows that the compulsory labor law in that country is now in operation. Any municipality which needs labor for its local work may obtain a minimum of 50 persons from the compulsory labor office. The maximum who may be so compelled to labor for the city or town must not exceed the number already at work. Payment of wages must be made, half of it in advance, to the office furnishing the conscripts. The municipalities must see to the feeding, clothing and other care of the laborers, according to a fixed scale by the office, and must employ the labor not less than two months nor more than six months per annum.

RUSS EMIGRES IN WASHINGTON HEAR AN ECHO

Story Is Retold About Port Arthur Deal

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—Russian emigres who have found fashionable refuge in Washington, are reminded of the "good old days" by the publication of a detailed account of the agreement of the Japanese imperial government to pay to the late General Stoessel, who surrendered Port Arthur to Japan and thereby made Japan a world power, the sum of 10,000,000 pounds sterling ($50,000,000.)

A copyrighted story from the Paris bureau of the Chicago Daily News, printed in the Washington Star, gives them the savory morsels of this affair as set forth by a millionaire associate of J. Pierpont Morgan, who was asked by an Englishman to buy a share in the claim of General Stoessel's widow against the Japanese government.

For Tokyo did not pay for the "act to be performed by Gen. Stoessel," mentioned in the agreement which turned up in London after the world war. It is explained that the Japanese embassy officials in London agreed that the document was genuine, but inasmuch as Stoessel had died, and no promise to pay his heirs was found in the bargain, and no proof as to the character of "act" was found, the whole incident was closed.

Diplomatic Washington sees a nice point in this deal. If only the Soviet Union can be overturned, and Grand Duke Cyril be restored to the throne of the czars, then Mme. Stoessel's claim can be put up to Japan as an issue on which the diplomats and soldiers can find new credit. And it gives new cause for their anxiety lest Moscow and Tokyo make a treaty which will wipe out all past claims, including those based on treachery such as this story seems to prove.

World Co-operative Guild Is Organized with London Offices

LONDON, Oct. 8.—Women with the power of the market basket are now organised into the International Co-operative Women's guild with headquarters in London. This new international of housewives and mothers consists of the national women's co-operative guilds of Austria, Belgium, England, France, Holland, Ireland, Norway, Scotland, Sweden and Switzerland.

At its first conference held in Ghent the end of August the guild came out for a co-operative form of society, demanded world organization for peace and urged the learning by co-operators of a common international language, preferably, Esperanto.

A. Honora Enfield is secretary with headquarters at 29 Winchester Rd., London NW3.

Fight City Workers' Wage Cut.

TOLEDO, O., Oct. 8.—This city's practical bankruptcy has called the Toledo Central Labor union into active service for wage workers. Their pay sliced 30 per cent by the city council because of an acute shortage of funds, city water works employes appealed to organized labor for relief.

Attorneys for the Central Labor union were immediately detailed. Suit will be instituted if the city refuses to restore the normal wage.

In With the Dollars!

By ALFRED WAGENKNECHT.

THE trinity of ADVANTAGES ENJOYED by Standard Oil Company employes has been completed.

The Republic of Labor, invented by John D., Jr., is advantage number one. Under its beneficent rule, labor and capital are to be married, never to part. Labor disputes are to be settled by a joint committee upon which, say, a thousand workers elected six representatives and a couple of representatives of Standard Oil elected the other six. The superintendent of the works has the veto power. This was called a Republic of Labor.

The opportunity to purchase stock at $60 a share was advantage number two. The dividends of shares purchased by the workers are to accumulate and are to be used to buy more shares. Workers would never strike against the Standard Oil if they were in the company upon an equal footing with John D.—all shareholders together!

And now the Standard Oil Company of Indiana has established a DEATH BENEFIT plan for its 25,000 employes. The insurance costs the employes nothing.

The Standard Oil Company understands the importance of a RIGHT labor policy. Did not Walter C. Teagle, chief of the New Jersey wing of Standard, rob a developing strike of his workers both of its first and second wind by adroitly using the Republic of Labor to throw oil on the troubled waters? Teagle said to his workers at the time that he sincerely wished they would not strike because he needed their co-operation to tide the company over a "very critical situation."

This "critical situation" afterwards was discovered to be the fleching from the workers of the largest first quarterly dividend since 1913.

Standard Oil proclaims that it does not work upon the lemon-squeezer principle. It is not one of those industries which are iron-heeled despotism squeezing blood profits out of the poor, down-trodden worker.

Having read O'Sullivan's advertisements, it no doubt uses rubber heels.

But heels are used nevertheless, and very effectively. Each of the trinity of advantages, wherever they obtain, is a heel pressed squarely upon the Adam's apple of every worker.

Republic of Labor, Join the Company, Death Benefit —all three of them are melodies sung to put the workers to sleep. They all proclaim the "behave now and you'll get your reward in heaven" policy of capitalism.

BE NICE TODAY AND AFTER DEATH YOU'LL HEAR THE ANGELS SING! Either this or you will join the awakened advance guard of the working class in its forward surge for ownership of the world.

The mobilization of all Workers Party members and sympathizers for a three million distribution of literature during the week of October 28 to November 2 is on.

Every party branch will meet October 12 to receive contributions from its members for this literature. Every member is to contribute fifty cents.

COOLIDGE PICTURE ADORNS WALLS OF COTTON MILLS AND SPEAKEASIES IN RHODE ISLAND FACTORY DISTRICT

By ART SHIELDS
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Oct. 8.—Eight to sixteen families drinking water out of the same well; wells taking water that drains by earthen cesspools; the smell of out-houses and garbage in the air.

These are some features of the B. B. & R. Knight company town of Natick in the Pawtuxet Valley. Another is the Coolidge photo, hung from the walls of mills and speakeasies to encourage cotton mill workers to keep things as they are.

The Natick mills have not operated since April. They are part of the Knight string that has more than a half-million spindles in Rhode Island and Massachusetts and is controlled by the Consolidated Textile Corporation, which runs mills in North and South Carolina, Georgia, Virginia, Kentucky and Texas.

William M. Wood, chairman of the board of directors of both concerns, is also president of the American Woolen company and one of the links binding them to larger textile aggregations.

Productivity Is Doubled.

Textile work in Pawtuxet Valley began in the eighteenth century. Remarkable development of manufacturing technique has taken place since then. Even in the last twenty years productivity per operative has nearly doubled. But eighteenth century conditions continue so far as housing and village sanitation are concerned. Especially in Natick. Company tenements here—all but a few—lack those fundamentals of modern sanitation, indoor plumbing and sewage.

Pawtuxet Valley is beautiful at this season. The hills that slope to the winding river that furnishes the power to the mills are glorious in the rosy hues of autumn. But the company tenements have no picturesqueness. They are oblong, shabby, two-story frame buildings, of tarnished white, housing each from two to six families. Sometimes there is space for a vegetable garden and grape arbor but frequently there is room for nothing more than the uniform outhouses and community pumps that are set amidst each set of four tenements. Health officers do little to correct the noisome conditions that prevail. In Rhode Island there is a $134 property qualification for voters in local elections and company towns have few eligible. It must also be said that health officers' efforts are limited so long as sewage facilities are lacking and workers, on low wages, or unemployed, as at Natick, lack funds for good food. So this mill town goes on as it has for years, with a high record of epidemic diseases.

Young Italians Restless.

Natick is occupied by Italian workers almost exclusively. The younger generation, particularly, is becoming restless. During the 1922 strike Natick mills were among the first to be closed by the movement, which locally was under the control of the Amalgamated Textile Workers. There is a spirit of resistance in the air and it is doubtful if the company will follow the example of the Manville-Jencken company in the Blackstone Valley and attempt a wage cut when the mills open again.

Machine Guns on Roofs.

Workers pointed out to the writer the places on the mill roofs where machine guns were placed during the three-month struggle. The town was patrolled by national guardsmen and deputy sheriffs. These deputies were appointed by the county sheriff, who in turn was chosen by the legislature "to realize how far removed these peace officers are from popular control it must be understood that the upper house of the legislature is elected under a rotten borough system that grossly discriminates against the industrial districts.

Postpone Deportation of Ben Legere from Canadian Coal Country

By BARBARA FENINGSTON.
(For The Federated Press.)

SYDNEY, Nova Scotia, Oct. 8.—Deportation proceedings against Ben Legere, One Big Union organizer, of Lawrence, Mass., who has been active in the Nova Scotia coal fields, are postponed by the Canadian authorities.

Legere's activity was in Pictou county and on Cape Breton island among the miners and steel workers, where he has been unsuccessfully attempting to get the miners to join his dual union — the One Big Union. Legere was taken into custody by the Canadian immigration officer at Sydney. A complaint had been made to Ottawa that he had entered the country in violation of the immigration law. The charge was that he had served time in the United States. He admitted having served a year for participation in a textile strike in Little Falls, N. Y., in 1913, but held that this section of the immigration law applied only to offenses involving moral turpiture. The officer, ignorant of the meaning of the term and instructed to get Legere decided to hold him on that charge notwithstanding. An appeal was entered, bond of $1,000 presented and hearing set.

Miners and steel workers in Nova Scotia and other parts of Canada held protest meetings. The case was postponed. The miners in Nova Scotia and the workers thruout Canada are determined to continue the protest until the case is dropped.

RICH PALMER ESTATE STEALS $514,000 FROM CITY'S PUBLIC SCHOOLS

The Board of Education says: "Cut the teachers' salaries, increase the size of the classes, cut the teaching staff to the minimum."

The teachers say: "Stop tax-fixing and tax-dodging."

Both the teachers and the business men and manufacturers on the board of education admit that there is an alarming shortage of funds with which to run the public schools. The business men want to make up the deficit by cutting salary rates, firing 1,500 of the teachers, platooning the schools to avoid having to get more class rooms.

The teachers know that the trouble lies with graft among the ranks of the school officialdom, with the failure of rich corporations to pay their taxes, with the willingness of Chicago's city administration to let the tax-fixing go on.

The Chicago Teachers' Federation has issued a circular showing a typical example of tax-dodging by under-assessment. The valuation of land comprising the Palmer House site, as fixed by the real estate appraisers for the purpose of a loan, was $20,000,000. The valuation of the same land, as fixed by the board of assessors for the purpose of taxation, is only $7,425,000.

"In other words, at the present rate of taxation, $514,000 is in this one instance being withheld from the public schools thru illegal under-assessment.

Railways in Canada Fire Large Numbers of Workers in Shops

MONTREAL.—The Canadian unemployment problem is being seriously increased by the large number of men now being laid off by the railways. Four hundred shopmen have been laid off here by the Canadian National, while thruout central Canada the number laid off by that railway is stated to be nearly 1,000. Several thousand are also to be laid off by the Canadian Pacific, the employes having voted for reduction in staff rather than in working time.

A new phase of the problem has arisen by the appeal to the minister of railways by the secretary of the Canadian National federation of railway employes asking him to take up the question of employment. The federation has suggested that the reconditioning of engines and cars for future use would provide more work.

Clerks Strike for Raise.

PERTH, Western Australia, Oct. 8.—Clerks and stenographers employed in business shops and offices in the city of Fremantle and suburbs, on strike for increased wages, won a big victory. The minimum wage for adult clerks was raised by $2.50 per week with proportionate increases for juniors. The new minimum rate for adult male clerks is $22.50 and $15 for adult females. Where females are employed in the same capacity as males they will be paid the same wage. A 38-hour week was conceded, with overtime at time and a half.

STRIKE TALK HEARD AGAIN IN LAWRENCE

Multiple-Loom System Recruits Jobless Army

By ESTHER LOWELL
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent.)

LAWRENCE, Mass., Oct. 8.—Weavers employed by the Pacific Mills, largest cotton mills in the city, are debating whether or not to strike against the introduction of the multiple-loom system, which is hanging over their heads ready to shove three out of every four of them into the ranks of unskilled workers.

All summer long the weavers in Dover, N. H., fought against the destruction of the weavers' craft and their lack of success makes the Lawrence weavers hesitate.

Already the Pacific mills have had a picked weaver trying out the new plan by which the weaver acts as petty boss tending 72 looms instead of his accustomed 18. Three unskilled workers are allotted to each weaver under the multiple-loom system.

Will Scrap Veterans.

An old German weaver who has worked in the mills more than 30 years predicts that the new system will throw him and his fellow skilled craftsmen, who have grown old in service into the class of boys. He says: "The younger men will be the petty boss weavers and we will be left to compete with unskilled workers and accept their wages in order to work at all."

Strike sentiment is weakened by the long slack period of the past year during which the mills, excepting the American Woolen company's great factories, have been running only six to sixteen days a month. Workers who had jobs at all found that there was work on only three or four days every two weeks. The cotton mill workers have been hardest hit, although work is increasing slightly now. Woolen workers in the Selden, International, United States wool and worsted, and other Lawrence woolen mills have had work four days a week every week most of time.

Accept Low Wages.

Normally there are 35,000 textile workers in Lawrence. Less than a third of that number are now employed, workers estimate. Few of the jobless have succeeded in getting any other kind of work. After 14 months of part-time work all the workers whom I asked agreed that there was no possibility of a general strike in Lawrence, not until all the mills are working full time. Even the low wages—the weaver who tends 72 looms gets a paltry $30 a week for 48 hours work—are accepted for the present.

Lawrence has had three big strikes in 12 years and each time been well organized during the fight. Today there is only a trace of any organization functioning among the textile workers. The same fate of neglect befell the One Big Union which controlled the city during the 1922 strike as befell the I. W. W. and the Amalgamated Textile Workers after 1912 and 1919 respectively. Pacific mills workers are in the American Federation of Textile Operatives if they are in any union. The O. B. U. has closed its office and the United Textile Workers has practically no organization in the city, except among the loomfixers. The Amalgamated still claims a few members, but there is actually no actively functioning union of textile workers left in Lawrence. Judging from the statements of the many workers who talked to me and told of their former activities.

Seeks Cheap Labor.

William M. Wood, of the American Woolen company, "scoured Europe for cheap labor. As one supply was exhausted he tried another; Turks, Greeks, Syrians, Arabs, etc., until it is a babel here and in time of a wage cut anyone can come in and organize the workers. The United Textile Workers is a conservative craft organization, originally built of the Irish, British and French workers who were first in the mills. The U. T. W. resented the influx of other aliens and did not attempt to organize them. Whenever anyone comes in during a crisis and appeals to these unorganized workers, by blacking all officials who have gone before, he gets the response of these workers who do not understand organizations well."

Stir the Shops!

The very best place to carry on a working class campaign is in the shops and factories where the workers gather to earn their living. It is there that minds are open to the measures, parties and candidates that stand for concrete solutions of the problems of bread and butter facing the working class. It is in the shops that the workers will see most clearly, for example, the difference between Foster, the union organizer and fighter for the workers, and LaFollette, the lawyer and fighter for the middle class. SMALL IS HIT BY DECISION AGAINST I. C.

But There's Still Chance to Protect Friends

By KARL REEVE.

The Illinois Central railroad company has at last heard a decision rendered against it, after successfully stalling off the attorney-general of Illinois state for sixteen years.

Len Small, governor of Illinois, will be sorry at the news that Judge Samuel C. Stough of the Circuit Court of Grundy County has decided the suit instituted by governor Denecn in 1908 in favor of the state.

For governor Small is a director of the Illinois Central railroad, and stands to lose much money thru the judge's decision.

Still Chance to Cheat.

But a decision against such a powerful railroad combine as the one which owns the Illinois Central does not always mean that the money is collected. Governor Small can be of good cheer. After election, when the political capital of winning a big suit has done its work in putting attorney general Brundage in a good light before the voters of the state, perhaps Len Small's railroad will find a means of cheating the state of Illinois out of its taxes after all.

Small's railroad was able to clog the wheels of justice for 16 long years. Even then several of the findings of Judge Stough were favorable to the railroad in which the governor is interested. However, the decision that the Illinois Central has for many years been dodging millions of dollars tax payments which were due the state, if carried into effect, means that the Illinois Central must pay seven per cent of the receipts from their charter lines to the state. The Illinois Central has managed to escape this payment for many years.

Backed by Labor Officialdom.

Len Small, who is "ex-officio" director of the Illinois Central, which means that during his term of office he does not officially vote, but takes part in all deliberations and decisions fo the road as director, is running for re-election this year. Small's most valuable support is coming from the reactionary officers of the Illinois State Federation of Labor, and from Frank Farrington, president of the Illinois miners. If Small, with the aid of his labor faker backers, can get himself re-elected, he may yet be able to save his colleagues on the Illinois Central their money.

And Small is associated with a very powerful group of capitalists. The board of directors of the Illinois Central railroad include, in addition to Small, William Vincent Astor, Cornelius Vanderbilt, R. S. Lovett, H. W. De Forest, Stanley Field, R. W. Goelet, and C. A. Peabody.

The Illinois Central railroad is controlled by the Union Pacific railroad, which also owns much of the stock of the New York Central, the Baltimore and Ohio, the Chicago and Northwestern and the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroads. R. S. Lovett, serving on the Illinois Central board of directors with governor Small, is also a director of the Union Pacific railroad, which has as another of its directors Frank Vanderlip, New York banker, who is backing LaFollette, and Lovett is also a director of the New York Central railroad. Goelet, a fellow director with Small on the Illinois Central, is also a director of the New York Central, and Peabody, another associate of Small, is also a director of the New York Central. George Baker, of steel trust fame, and three of the Vanderbilts as well as Chauncey Depew are also directors on the New York Central railroad.

May Still Reward Friends.

Small has recently thrown over the LaFollette crowd and come out openly, along with his fellow financiers, including Elbert H. Gary, as a backer of Coolidge and Dawes. Small, who established the most corrupt record in modern political history as governor of Illinois, is however, indorsed by the Illinois Federation of Labor officials, who at the last convention of the Illinois Federation of Labor pushed thru resolutions indorsing his record, and Small has the indorsement of John Fitzpatrick, Oscar Nelson, Ed Nockels, and the Chicago Federation of Labor.

The state has won the victory in exposing, after 16 years' delay, the tax-dodging practices of the Illinois Central railroad. But it is doubtful, with governor Small retaining his position as governor, whether it will be easy or expedient for the state of Illinois to collect the millions of dollars due to it.

Building Bolsheviks—the D. W. B. U.

THE COMMUNIST ELECTION PROGRAM

republican and democratic parties, are appealing for the votes of the workers on a program for the maintaining and strengthening of capitalism with all the vital issues facing the workers completely ignored. The trade union officials, the small merchants and bankers, the independent manufacturers and the defunct socialist party have united their forces to deliver the working class vote to the combination LaFollette, Wheeler and Governor Small. None of these three have severed their connections with the old parties of anti-labor injunctions; of anti-labor legislation; of fascist terror and exploitation of the workers and with a record reeking with filthy oil politics, the two parties which at present form the dictatorship of capitalism in the United States.

Support for LaFollette, Wheeler and Small is support of small and big capitalism. Although LaFollette and Wheeler appear as liberal progressive candidates they have unequivocally declared against independent political action by the workers as a class. They have declared for the formation of a third capitalist party and they have no program for the emancipation of the workers from wage slavery and misery.

Only the Workers Party represents the working class in this election. It is the only political force struggling militantly for the immediate needs of the workers and for their ultimate emancipation from wage slavery. Our goal is the working class rule which will build in the place of the capitalist system of production a Communist system of production.

With an industrial depression descending upon the country as a whole the prospective conditions of the many unemployed workers in this state becomes serious. There are at present 43,000 unemployed coal miners in the state while the rest are working an average of two days a week. Thousands of factory workers have been laid off while tenant farming today amounts to 43 per cent of all farming.

The Workers Party calls upon the workers and exploited farmers of the state of Illinois to join it in the struggle for the realization of the following immediate program:

Unemployment Relief.

Industry must support the unemployed to whom it cannot give work. Hours should be reduced so as to give an opportunity for everybody to earn a living. Those for whom work cannot be found to be maintained by the state government at full union wages. The fund for this purpose to be created thru confiscation by the government of accumulated profits and placing a tax on inherited wealth and to be administered by the workers thru their organizations. There shall be no eviction of unemployed for non-payment of rents. The Workers Party will initiate the organization of unemployment councils to fight for these demands.

Nationalization of Industry and Workers' Control.

All large scale industries such as mines, railroads, and means of communication and transportation should be nationalized with no compensation to the owners, and control of the management to be placed in the hands of the workers thru their elected control committees, with the necessary centralization of the control to protect the interest of the producers as a whole. The Workers Party declares that the only immediate solution to the Chicago traction problem is the municipal ownership of the system with workers' control and management.

Child Labor and Children's Education.

The Workers Party declares itself ready to fight for the unqualified abolition of child labor in the state and demands a system of compulsory education for all children under the age of 16. The platoon system and the mental efficiency practiced by capitalism can be nothing but harmful to the education of the child and must be abolished; in place of that the teachers' and students' councils must be developed to supersede the present school boards and take complete charge of the management of education in the schools.

Public Works.

The Workers Party is in favor of the inauguration of public work such as road building, etc. to help relieve the unemployment situation, but it declares unequivocally for the abolition of the contract system. Construction must be undertaken directly by the state and control of the management put into the hands of the workers employed on such work thru their elected control committees; the work to be done under union conditions and at union rates of wages.

Land to the Users and Nationalization of the Farmers' Marketing Facilities.

We demand the elimination of landlordism and tenancy and the securing of the land to the users of the land; nationalization of the farmers' marketing facilities.

Social, Economic and Racial Equality for Negro Workers.

Abolition of all Jim Crow laws, equal housing conditions and equal wages for Negro workers in industries.

Abolition of the Use of Injunctions and Police and Soldiers Against Workers.

The Workers Party calls upon the workers to fight with it against the use of injunctions in labor disputes, intimidation of strikers thru police and soldiers, and the use of criminal syndicalist laws to suppress the demands of the revolutionary workers, as well as other infringements of the rights of the workers.

United Front.

The establishment of a United Front of the workers and exploited farmers for a united struggle against capitalism has been one of the objects for which the Workers Party has consistently fought. We declare it our purpose to continue this fight to mobilize the workers and exploited farmers for political action against capitalism and capitalist government.

The measures outlined here are measures for immediate struggle and mobilization of the workers against the capitalist class and capitalist dictatorship in the United States. The end of the glaring evils of capitalist society can only come with the victory of the workers and the establishment of the Workers' and Farmers' Government thru which capitalism will be abolished and the Communist society created. The Workers Party will carry on the struggle until this goal is achieved.

A WORKER FOR PRESIDENT

THE presidential candidate of the Workers Party has a social origin quite opposite to those on the capitalist party tickets. The usual campaign over-supply of "friends of labor" are a rotten lot compared to Bill Foster, the worker.

Here comes "Cal" Coolidge, who got his fame from breaking a strike in Boston, now having his picture taken with a pitchfork to catch the farmer vote and again with an easy-money $10,000 a year labor faker to catch the labor vote. But "Silent Cal" never worked a day as a common or skilled wage worker. He's been a lawyer all his silent life.

Then there's John W. Davis, a multi-millionaire attorney of the House of Morgan, gets his picture taken shaking hands with an engineer who didn't know any better, all to catch the labor vote. But Davis is another lawyer.

But here comes a "real friend of labor," LaFollette, who began public life as a prosecuting attorney, the kind of animal whom workers get acquainted with after an occurrence on the picket line. Bob was a lawyer in 1883 and is still at it. Never did a useful day's work for 41 years. A hell of a "workers' candidate," isn't he? But he asks for the labor vote because a toothless old fossil called Gompers indorses him. But his whole machine is run by little bankers and bosses, and LaFollette, he's a lawyer, too.

If you're not looking for "friends" of workers, but for a worker to support in the election, you might look over the work record of William Z. Foster. He isn't a lawyer like the rest, just a worker. The capitalists don't like workingmen for presidential candidates, they prefer lawyers, even LaFollette, to Bill Foster, the worker. But just look over Foster's life and compare it with the lawyers.

Born in Massachusetts.

William Z. Foster was born at Taunton, Massachusetts, Feb. 25, 1881. Father, Irish. Mother, English. One of 23 children.

Went to work at 10 years of age, after only three years of schooling. Has been successively a sculptor's apprentice, type founder, factory worker, steam engineer, steam fitter, railroad brakeman, railroad fireman, logger, salesman, street car motorman, longshoreman, farmer, laborer, deep water sailor, and many other occupations. Principal trade at present is railroad car inspector. Is a member of the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen of America, affiliated to the American Federation of Labor.

Joined the socialist movement in 1900. Remained in the right wing for a few years, then began moving toward the left. In 1909 was expelled with the left wing of the socialist party by reactionary national socialist bureaucracy in the state of Washington. Refused to join that organization again. Instead, he joined the Industrial Workers of the World, and took an active part in the Spokane free speech fight, being arrested in connection therewith. In 1910, went to Europe, spending 13 months there studying the labor movement in France, Germany, Austria and other countries. Was a delegate from the I. W. W. to the Budapest meeting, 1910, of the International Trade Union Secretariat, and contested the seat of the A. F. of L. delegate to that body, but unsuccessfully.

During the European trip Foster became a convinced syndicalist. Also came to the conclusion that the I. W. W. policy of dual unionism was wrong. Came back to America and travelled over the country trying to induce the I. W. W. and other revolutionaries to rejoin the trade union movement. Took part in the formation of the Syndicalist League of North America in 1911, an organization to organize the militant minority in the trade unions. This organization carried on considerable activity, but died in 1914 because the revolutionary movement was entirely taken up with the dual union idea. Helped, also, to organize the International Trade Union Educational League in 1916. This died for the same reason as its predecessor.

During the war period was active in the trade unions, being secretary of the committee that organized 200,000 packing house workers in 1917. After this, in 1918, was secretary of the committee that organized 250,000 steel workers and conducted the great 1919 strike of 400,000 steel workers.

In the spring of 1921, made a trip to Russia, attending the conferences of the Communist International and the Red International of Labor Unions. Upon return, declared himself a Communist and has since been active in the Communist movement. Is now secretary of the Trade Union Educational League, which was organized in the Fall of 1920, before he went to Russia and the official organ of which, the Labor Herald, is the leading magazine directing the work of the Communists and left wing generally in the unions and thruout industry.

Author of Book and Pamphlets.

Foster has written a number of pamphlets and books, having acquired an education by self-effort, including the principal European languages. Among his works are "Syndicalism," "Trade Unionism, the Road to Freedom," "The Great Steel Strike," "The Russian Revolution," "The Revolutionary Crisis of 1918-1921 in Germany, England, Italy and France," "The Railroaders' Next Step," "Amalgamation," "The Bankruptcy of the American Labor Movement." In respect to Foster's literary ability, H. L. Mencken, the leading figure among America's literary intelligentsia, has said that "Foster is the only labor leader in America who is able to write good English."

In January 1924, Foster was elected to the position of chairman of the Workers Party. He is still occupying that office.

COMMUNIST CANDIDATES COME FROM THE RANKS OF ORGANIZED WORKERS

CAPITALIST politicians from the Coolidge, LaFollette and Davis camps are all appealing these days to the workers to vote for them. All of these capitalist candidates have about as much interest in the needs of the workers as the tiger has for his prey. They are ready to rob and exploit the workers to the last drop of blood. Thus is their regard expressed.

The Workers Party candidates are close to the needs of the workers. They understand what the workers must have, because they are workingmen themselves, men in the thick of labor's battles. They belong to the organized labor movement; they aren't just for organized labor. They ARE organized labor, and they are, furthermore, trying to organize the masses of unorganized workers into the unions and into the political party of the working class, the Workers (Communist) Party in order to carry on a battle for the abolition of the robber system of capitalism and its replacement by a workers' and farmers' government. Here are the unions of some of the Workers Party candidates:

William Z. Foster, presidential candidate, Brotherhood of Railway Carmen; Benjamin Gitlow, vice-presidential candidate, Amalgamated Clothing Workers; Joseph Podkulski, congressional candidate, International Ladies' Garment Workers, William F. Dunne, candidate for governor, Electrical Workers' Union; Samuel T. Hammersmark, congressional candidate, Railway Clerks' Union; George Maurer, congressional candidate, Office Employes' Union, 12755; John W. Johnstone, congressional candidate, Painters' Union No. 147; John J. Watt, candidate lieutenant-governor, United Mine Workers of America; E. B. Hewlett, candidate for congressman-at-large, United Mine Workers.

In the straw vote conducted by the DAILY WORKER and the Workers Party, Local Chicago, in the following factories and plants: Hart, Schaffner and Marx, Kuppenheimer, Royal Tailors, Western Electric Co., Stockyards, Pullman Palace Car Co., Sears-Roebuck, Chicago & Northwestern Railroad Shops, the Street Car Barns at Kedzie and Van Buren, Elston and Addison, Devon Ave., Crane Co., Cuneo-Henneberry Printing Co., the votes cast by the workers in these industries were most significant. A total of 6,003 votes were cast. Of these 629 were for William Z. Foster, Workers (Communist) Party candidate for president of the United States, 2,361 for LaFollette, the middle class capitalist politician, 2,555 for Coolidge, the oil-can, and 458 for Davis, Morgan's valet.

The large vote for the Communist candidate, William Z. Foster, is an indication that the number of workers in the United States who want a fundamental change in society, the abolition of capitalism and its replacement by a workers' and farmers' government, is growing very swiftly.

PAY ENVELOPE NOT HELPED BY 'B. & O.' PLAN

Toiler on Big Railroad Calls It "The Bank"

Editor's Note: The following is the first of a series of articles sent out by the Federated Press on the "B. & O. Plan," which the machine of President William H. Johnstone foisted on the membership of the machinists' union at the recent convention in Detroit. The "B. & O. Plan," which must now be put to a referendum vote of the members of the machinists' union, has been installed by the machinists' reactionary officialdom in the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad shops in Glenwood, Pa.

Tom Tippett, in the first of the articles, tells how the "class collaboration" plan has been working in Glenwood. The "B. & O. Plan" of Johnston, the LaFollette follower, is the most brazen attempt up to date of the reactionary trade union officials to sell out their union membership to the employers.

So far, most of the trade union officials have flopped to the camp of the capitalists on only one field—be it either industrial or political. But Johnston, president of the machinists, has been active in attempting to sell the workers on both fields of struggle. In politics, Johnston has sabotaged all attempts for independent working class political action. On the industrial field he has tried to sell out the membership of his union by means of the "B. & O. scheme."

By TOM TIPPETT.
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent.)

GLENWOOD, Pa., Oct. 8.—After experimenting one year with the Glenwood co-operative plan the men at work in the Baltimore and Ohio railroad shops are beginning to wonder where their share of the results is coming from. So far the plan has succeeded beyond expectations, but the benefactor is the B. & O. and unless it shows signs of including the workers in the division of returns the bottom will fall out of this new panacea.

At least that is the opinion of the rank and file members of the federated shop craft unions that comprise the road's working force and are doing the co-operating. The shops employ about 400 men, most of whom are union members.

The co-operative plan was installed here a year ago after the strike that almost destroyed the railroad organization. O. S. Beyer, jr., with Wm. H. Johnston, head of the machinists' union, induced president Daniel Willard of the B. & O. to try it out on that system. Beyer is now employed by the union. He installed the proposition here and supervise it.

The plan has been extended all over the B. & O. system with the heads of the shopmen's unions eager to expand it to other roads. The Glenwood plan is intended to "help the stabilization of employment on the B. & O. railroad, thereby producing a situation of satisfaction and a contented personnel, with improved morale and consequently improvement in service and production by greater efficiency and better quality of work."

A biweekly co-operative meeting is held in the shop. The workers are represented by eight men. Across the table are eight bosses from the company side of the house. The business of the joint committee is:

"To meet for frank discussion of questions relating to the planning and carrying on of work and having in mind that the specific purpose of these meetings is mutual helpfulness and not one of criticism or fault finding. It is understood that these meetings are not for the purpose of discussing or adjusting grievances."

A perusal of the minutes of such a meeting on March 19 showed that 76 separate suggestions were entertained and acted upon at this one meeting. The character of the questions and action taken may be seen in the following items chosen at random:

1. Installation of furnace in the blacksmith shop for use of boiler force.—Referred for attention of general committee, Baltimore.

2. Opening of apprentice school—Referred to Dist. Master Mechanic but no advice rec'd.

3. Installation of separate drinking fountains for colored and white employes.—Ten white and four colored signs painted.

4. Condition of toilets.—Referred to division engineer for handling and is taken up with Gen. Supt.

5. Suggestions that ladders be built for use of employes when performing work on locomotives to avoid loss of time by climbing up thru cabs, etc.—Referred to care foreman to have these built.

So far as the local committee can remember the company has offered but one suggestion in the co-operative meetings and that was an unimportant item regarding work checks.

The co-operative machinery does not in any way interfere with that of the trade unions. They carry on their business as before or as they do on roads where the plan is unknown. If a worker has a grievance against the boss over some question covered by union agreement he applies to the union for redress.

The men have diligently carried out the co-operation. Before the plan was established the material shop expense per man was $15.08 a month. Now it is $7.43. Repair work on locomotives that used to take 60 days is now done in 21. Engines that were formerly overhauled in contract shops are now repaired at home at a saving of $4,000 per engine to the company. Men who would not go along with the efficiency stunts were gotten rid of, according to the men in the shops.

Continuity of work, the only definitely stated benefit to the workers stated in the plan has not been fully realized. There are still furloughs here as in other shops. The wages paid are mechanics, 73 cents per hour helpers, 50 cents, laborers, 40 cents.

If the company doesn't want to carry out a proposal it doesn't.

My interview with the workers' co-operative committee and the local union heads brot out the following:

The meeting is in the washroom of the shop at noon. There are 18 workers in overalls present. The question each answered in turn was: "What is your honest opinion of the co-operative plan, speaking for publication."

The replies were:

"The plan is all right. It gets production but we haven't got anything out of it. This is one sided co-operation."

"I'd be for this thing strong if we had a man on the company board of directors so that we could have something to say in the actual management of the road. We have a right to benefits for all the extra work we've done. As it is I'm not for it."

Five others—ditto.

"I'm for it strong. It isn't working as it should but that's because it's new. It will take time. The company isn't coming across now but it will."

"It's the bunk. We got rid of the agitators. But the company didn't get rid of the men we didn't like. As an efficiency plan, this is it but we want to see the results in our pay envelope."

"This plan has brot us nearer to the company. We're here talking to you and we really ought to be working, that is an improvement—(it was a few minutes past whistle time)—and we have a promise of steady work."

Dawes Plan Next Logical Step for U. S. Imperialism

in the London negotiations it may have been the voices of Hughes and Mellon that were heard but the hands of Morgan and Lamont guided the decisions.

Three Imperialist Doctrines.

The Monroe, the Hay and the Dawes doctrines forge a powerful chain—link by link—bounding and limiting the spheres of influence, the vassal countries of the expanding American imperialist domain. The three doctrines reflect three epochs, three stages in the development of capitalist imperialism in the United States.

The Monroe doctrine ordained the closed door in Latin America for all other capitalist national groups. It served notice on these capitalist powers that the political domination of the weak, industrially underdeveloped Latin American countries was the sole privilege of American imperialism.

Then came the Hay doctrine which decreed the so-called Open Door policy in the Far East, the guarantee of "equal and impartial trade with all parts of the Chinese Empire" ostensibly for all powers, but in reality and primarily for the Yankee imperialists. Soon the Hay doctrine superseded in importance and urgency the Monroe flat, tho it did not displace the first commandment of American capitalist aggression. The Hay doctrine, it will be remembered, was the foundation for the Washington conference.

Dawes Plan Logical Step.

Today the Dawes doctrine is the composite expression of the aims and plans of American imperialism. The Dawes doctrine, which is the last word in the attempt of our ruling class to establish their financial and commercial world hegemony, does not do away with the Monroe and Hay policies but is only the logical next step of these policies.

The Monroe, Hay, and Dawes doctrines are characterized by the same underlying principles. The three doctrines have been formulated to avert "dangers" to American political institutions and economic aggrandizement. In the three doctrines the American employing class government reserves to itself the right of final definition, interpretation and application. The three doctrines were conceived as war plans—brewing a hell-brew that could only explode.

Why the Present European Policy.

If one will analyze the conditions in which the Dawes plan took root in the United States, he will find that there were four outstanding, impelling forces making for large-scale, intense American participation in and domination of European political and economic affairs. These forces, underlying the politico-economic situation in the United States and in Europe, have been at work simultaneously and jointly.

The causes of America's adoption of an out-and-out aggressive, active European policy may be enumerated as follows: (1) The pressing need for a foreign outlet for the superfluous capital, particularly gold, which has been accumulating in the United States. (2) The imperialist plans of American capitalism to secure a firmer hold on the industries and markets of the world in order to minimize the detrimental economic effects of its productive system which became highly overdeveloped as a result of the artificial stimulus of the war needs. (3) The Yankee imperialists' growing consciousness of the menace to its own economic structure in the sharp challenge of the International Communist, the revolutionary movement to the war-weakened capitalism of the European countries.

Rapid Course of Industrial Development.

America is today not only the workshop but the pantry of the world. As a result of the war it has become the mightiest reservoir of capital. The war dealt the death-blow to the period of financial isolation for the United States. Mr. Harvey E. Fisk in his volume, "The Inter-Ally Debts," published, by the Bankers Trust Company, has estimated that on June 30, 1923 there were invested abroad 7,650 million dollars. This sum is exclusive of the eleven billion dolars that is due to the United States government by foreign government debtors. In 1913 the total foreign investment of the United States was only 2,605 million dollars. Allowing for the depreciation of the value of the dollar in this decade, we find that the American foreign investment is today at least 5,000 million 1913 gold dollars, or an increase of nearly one hundred per cent.

Before 1850 the United States was primarily an underdeveloped agricultural country. From 1850 to 1920 America's population increased 3.6 times. In this same period, however, the physical production of agricultural crops rose 5.2 times; manufacturing increased 28 times; and mining more than 77 times. Between the years of 1900 and 1920 the volume product—not the value—of American industries increased 95 per cent, while the population increased only 40 per cent.

Within the boundaries of the United States we find 40 per cent of all the installed water-power of the world; 35 per cent of the railroad mileage; 57 per cent of all telegraph and telephone lines; the production of 41 per cent of the world's cereals; 71 per cent of the cotton; 50 per cent coal; 54 per cent iron; 64 per cent steel and petroleum; and 52 per cent of its timber.

American Industries Top-Heavy.

Discussing the economic effects of the surplus producing capacity of the United States as a consequence of the world war, Prof. Walter R. Ingalls declared in the Annalist of June 2, 1924: "First class producing and manufacturing capacity in this country was abnormally expanded to meet wartime demands. We know that the excess ought to have been written off and amortized at once. But we have tried to eat our cake and keep it too. The result today is that many industries are carrying dangerous burdens of inflated overhead and personnel—perhaps in some cases even inflated financing."

And at the last convention of the National Purchasing Agents' association held in Boston it was authoritatively stated that American manufacturers can produce in seven months all the commodities needed for national consumption during the whole year. What the speaker really meant and should have said is: all that the working and exploited farming masses can buy back from the bosses on the basis of their wages and meager income gotten in twelve months in addition to the amount consumed by the owning class.

According to an analysis made by the Federal Reserve Bank of New York and the Standard Statistics Co. on the basis of the peak of activity reached in any month in 1923 by twenty leading industries, we learn that the excess industrial capacity compared with normal requirements was 82 per cent in the motor industry; 52 per cent in sugar; 37 per cent in the meat industry; 30 per cent in oil; 29 per cent in shoes; 28 per cent in steel; 26 per cent in flour; 24 per cent in iron and 16 per cent in coal. In fact, many of these industries could have been operated to produce at an even higher rate than in the peak months.

Seek Foreign Outlet.

It is plain to the most purblind that there is getting to be less and less room for profitable re-investment in the United States for the surplus capital with which the American capitalist class is gorged. More and more foreign loans have been serving as an outlet. From January to July 1, 1924, flotations in America for interests outside of the country have totalled about four hundred million dollars. Foreign flotations are today running on a larger scale in New York than in London. Many expect the sum to reach a billion dollars by the end of the year. The overbuilt, topheavy condition of American industrial plant equipment is driving an increasing portion of the capital investment fund elsewhere. The companies taking out charters in the first five months of 1924 showed a decrease of eleven per cent in number and thirteen per cent in authorized capital as compared with the same period for 1923. One of the primary causes of the present wave of unemployment is this topheaviness.

Great Inflow of Gold.

Since the world war there has also been a great flow of gold from the other countries to the United States. The director of the mint has officially declared that on August 1, 1924 the United States held about fifty per cent of the world's monetary gold, more than four and a half billion dollars worth. Since 1910 the gold stock of the United States increased 175 per cent. In the four years before the world war the American gold stock showed an average annual increase of seventy million dollars. Since the war the inflow of yellow metal has been terrific. In 1921 alone the increase in gold bullion was more than 800 million dollars.

While America is facing this plethora of surplus capital, a shortage of capital is manifesting itself in many parts of the world. Germany and Poland, for example, are forced to pay terrifically high interest rates. Simultaneously, money is available for a song to the American capitalists. The present rate for call money is 2 per cent. Bankers' acceptances can be had on a 1⅞ and 2 per cent basis for thirty days. Ninety-day money can be had at 2 per cent. Four years ago the rediscount rate of the New York Federal Reserve Bank was seven per cent. At present after a third reduction in one year, it is the lowest anywhere in the world and in the history of the Federal Reserve System. Thus has America's surplus gold wealth swelled its bank credit.

This credit structure has been further dangerously broadened by the Federal Reserve Banks' continued purchase of government securities at a time when rediscount rates were low. From November, 1923, to July, 1924, the Federal Reserve Banks have increased their holdings of government securities from seventy-three to four hundred and seventy-seven million dollars in an effort to be able to put the brake on in case the country is again confronted with the danger of inflation.

Fear Danger to American Financial Power.

The danger of this glut of the money markets due to the unprecedented flow of gold to American shores has been clearly seen by the solons of Yankee big finance. On May 12, 1924, the advisory council of the federal reserve board, consisting of the most eminent bankers of the different sections of the country, held a meeting in Washington to consider the seriousness of the situation and to indorse strongly the Dawes plan as a means of relieving this super-saturated credit condition. We quote in part from its significant statement:

"It is obvious that our credit power cannot continue to grow indefinitely without the danger of oversaturation. If the stream of gold that floods our shores is not stemmed in time, it is to be feared that, ultimately, we will not be able to ward off its inflationary effects. And inflation would only aggravate the economic maladjustment already existing within our own boundaries; a maladjustment which not only disturbs and endangers our trade with other countries, but which makes our agricultural situation particularly difficult and distressing."

Then the report goes on to urge the re-establishment of the universal gold standard as the best way out of the difficulties facing the capitalist world. It continues to argue strongly for the adoption of the gold standard by the Dawes plan bank issue in Germany in order to hasten the other countries' adoption of the gold basis, which is today the dollar basis. Tho this proposal is made as a solution for the world's ills, it is fundamentally and foremost an effort by the American capitalist class to save itself

Altruism Threadbare.

In the light of these facts, the lofty and altruistic motives that are so much emphasized in the plans of the American capitalists to aid European reconstruction become threadbare. The economic why and wherefore of American imperialism initiating and being for the Dawes scheme becomes plain—ugly—starkly naked. These are the economic conditions giving rise to the development of the latest stage in American imperialism — the Dawes doctrine.

ARRANGE TOUR FOR SALZMAN IN MINNESOTA

Will Visit Y. W. L. Units in Minnesota

Max Salzman, organizer for the Young Workers League, will tour the Minnesota district for the organization.

In this tour he will cover the important industrial centers in addition to the small mining towns, where in the past the workers have gone thru bitter struggles.

This trip is being made to strengthen the units of the organization, and also to acquaint the members with the plan of work adopted by the National Executive Committee of the Y. W. L.

On this trip special attention will be paid to the work in the industrial centers, where thousands of young workers are employed.

The dates are as follows:

British Imperialism and MacDonald

It is the irony of fate that the two acts of the Macdonald government which the masses forced it to perform against its will are the issues on which the liberals and tories are challenging it and on which the resulting election will be fought.

The recognition of and the treaty with Soviet Russia and the quashing of the indictment returned against the editor of the Workers Weekly for telling soldiers and sailors not to shoot their fellow-workers are the only two acts of the MacDonald government that have had any working class character. The treaty was signed because the left wing laborites in the House of Commons threatened to go before their working class constituents if there was further delay.

The indictment against Comrade Campbell was dropped because the Communists had the support of the majority of the organized workers when they pointed out that certain members of the MacDonald government, among them MacDonald himself, had said just about the same thing during the war before power and association with imperialists had squelched their pacifism.

It was the organized might of the British workers that was responsible for these two measures and not the MacDonald government. It has allowed the imperialists a free hand in India, Irak, Persia, the Sudan and China. It has built battleships for the financiers and the industrial capitalists. It is for the League of Nations with Britain holding the power. It has taken up the hue and cry against Soviet Georgia and gave moral support, at least, to the abortive and hopeless attempt of the Georgian mensheviks to overthrow the power of the Georgian workers and peasants.

It is for the Dawes plan and the slavery and exploitation of European workers that is the intent of the plan.

It has traded its heritage for a series of compromises and betrayals of labor that rank with the worst exploits of the German social-democracy.

It has not tried to weaken the hold of British capitalism upon the working class in any way. It discarded, immediately on taking office, the capital levy and nationalization of the mines.

It threatened the British workers, when they went on strike, with the application of the Emergency Powers Act, the equivalent of martial law.

Since the signing of the Russian treaty the British imperialists have conducted a systematic campaign against Soviet Russia on all fronts with the unexpected result that not only did China sign the Russian treaty in spite of them but also turned over the operation of the Chinese Eastern Railway to Soviet Russia. Meantime the Hull conference of the British Trade Union Congress showed that the British labor movement was developing a new militancy.

The function that the imperialists expected the MacDonald government to perform, that of toning down and emasculating the labor movement, it has not, in spite of its studied efforts, been able to carry out and its usefulness to British imperialism is almost at an end. It might indeed, under growing pressure from the rank and file of labor, cause the imperialists much embarrassment.

There are many conflicting interests within British capitalism itself and the capitalists are not a unit in the struggle to rid themselves of a government that came to power largely thru their sufferance but we think that this is about the process of reasoning by which the tories and liberals arrive at the conclusion that MacDonald has outlived his usefulness.

This policy is a dangerous one for British capitalism because it is possible that the labor party may be returned to power and even tho it losses the election in will have a powerful minority in the House of Commons that swept in on wave of working class protest, may prove much harder to handle than the present Macdonald government.

A New Epoch in China

From the standpoint of world politics the agreement between the Soviet Russia and China by which the control and operation of the Chinese Eastern Railway is turned over to the Soviet government is of far more importance than even the Dawes plan. To secure control for themselves has been the objective of imperialist strategy in China.

The striking part of this new developments is that, in spite of their differences over domestic affairs, the most powerful groups in China are satisfied with the arrangement. Sun Yan Sen, the leader of the influential revolutionary Kuomingtang, approves of it. So does the Peking government and Chang Tso-Lin, nominally the instrument of Japanese, French and English capital (depending on which power bids the highest) has signed a similar agreement.

This shows just one thing and shows it conclusively i. e. that Soviet Russia is looked upon by the Chinese as a real friend and ally whose desire is just the reverse of the western powers, a desire not to divide but to assist China to become a strong and united nation.

News of the negotiations have been carried by the capitalist press for months but the actual consummation of the agreement has created a panic in imperialistic circles. Coincident with the singing of the agreement the Soviet government has opened its embassy in Peking and established consulates in the principle cities of China. Over all the consulates flies the crimson banner of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

The Chinese people will have no difficulty in understanding the Soviet diplomats. M. Ellender, Soviet Consul general in Shanghai, in the course of his speech at the reception accorded him when the consulate was opened, called attention to the fact that Soviet Russia came to China peacefully and as an equal while the imperialist powers were present with warships and guns to protect foreign financial interests exploiting the Chinese people. Such a statement is unanswerable and such revolutionary diplomacy more dangerous than dynamite to the profit-making projects of the imperialist nations.

The news from Peking, read in connection with the events in Shanghai, is comedy of a high order. It seems that the hopes of the allied powers are now pinned on General Wu. The British minister presented him with a set of binoculars and the Japanese minister gave him several cases of Japanese wines. The Asiatic Petroleum Company, an American concern, has presented him with two carloads of oil. The spectacle of these dignitaries conducting themselves like a bartender in a water front joint when a drunken sailor rolls in will not escape the Chinese people who are a silent but an observant race.

But General Wu is not going to get back the Chinese Eastern Railway for the imperialists. They have been presented with an accomplished fact which tends more than any one thing to unite the Chinese factions. The Russian ambassador in Peking, M. Karakhan, has described accurately this new development as "a crushing blow to the imperialist states, destroying their last chance to grasp the eastern railway." It binds Soviet Russia and China close together with a common bond that is strengthened by the efforts of the imperialists to break it.

A new epoch is beginning in China—an epoch in which the power of the western imperialists is waning and which marks the rise of Soviet Russia to a position of leadership and comradeship with the toiling millions of the Orient.

In every nation whose ruling class is meddling in Chinese affairs there must be carried on a campaign that will divorce the working class from the aims of their rulers, that will make it impossible for the imperialist nations to mobilize armies for the subjugation of the Chinese masses or for a war on the workers' and peasants' government of Russia, which they no longer ridicule but fear.

Hands Off the World!

President Coolidge has added another chapter to the "Hands Off" diplomacy of American imperialism. On the occasion of the dedication of a monument to the memory of the dead of the First Division, the president declared: "We do not propose to intrust to any other power, or combination of powers, any authority to make up our mind for us.

The "silent" Chief Executive then went on to thunder about the United States government being the best in the world today; with Coolidge at its head, of course. The Dawes Plan was hailed as the one panacea which will lay "a firmer foundation for industrial prosperity and a more secure peace."

The pith of the president's address is this: Hands off America! It is a warning to the League of Nations that the United States will not brook even the faintest notions aimed at influencing the course of American policy. The speech is a direct reply to the League of Nations' deliberation on the protest of Japan against the American exclusion policy. The president has simply served notice on the other capitalist cliques that his bosses, the American imperialists, are strongly dissatisfied with a good deal of the talk that has been going on in Geneva.

When the president talks of the Dawes plan in this speech he reminds the European capitalist classes that America is saving their economic system. But the president, in his plea for the world's putting faith in the altruistic purposes of American capitalism, does not say a word about the fact that the United States is compelled by its own economic conditions and by the challenge of the revolutionary working class movement, the communist movement, to international capitalism, to embark upon the Dawes course.

All in all, the Coolidge speech is a war speech. The president, in the toga of the spokesman of our imperialist aristocracy, has decreed that it is proper and necessary for the United States, for its ruling class, to extend sway over the world, to interfere in and determine the internal affairs of Europe and the rest of the world. Yet, the economic class interests of Yankee capitalism, all its resources, its military and naval prowess forbid any other capitalist group attempting such a policy and practice against the United States.

There is but one answer to this defiance hurled at the world by Mr. Coolidge. The workers of the United States and the other countries should reply in a forceful chorus to the American imperialists: Hands Off The World!

Send in that new "sub" today!

Mr. Davis and Don Chafin

By MAX SHACHTMAN.

DON CHAFIN, notorious tool of the coal companies of Logan County, West Virginia, has been indicted by the grand jury for partnership in a "speakeasy" together with Tennis Hatfield, one of the sons of the late "Devil Anse" Hatfield.

Don Chafin is the democratic leader of Logan County. He is the man who, at the national democratic nominating convention in July, was the foremost advocate of the nomination being given to John W. Davis, West Virginian native son. When others laughed at the possibility of Davis being named, Chafin, his two guns hanging from under his armpits in the regular manner, continued to lobby for the candidate of Wall Street and the non-union coal interests of West Virginia. He is generally credited with having had one of the major parts and being the most active politician in the scheme to put Davis across.

A Booze Artist.

Chafin is now under charges, in the United States district court at Huntington, for conspiracy to violate the law of the land, the Volstead act, and for engaging, unlawfully in the retail liquor business. The indictment sets out as the basis for the charges the assertion that:

"The said Tennis Hatfield paid to the said Don Chafin divers and different large sums of money, among other sums, that of eleven hundred and twelve dollars, which was paid by the said Tennis Hatfield in the said Logan County on or about the ... day of August A. D., 1922 ... which ... was derived from the unlawful sale of intoxicating liquors sold pursuant to said unlawful conspiracy, confederation, combination and agreement."

It is interesting to see what sort of man this is who put Davis across. It would also be interesting to hear what Mr. John W. Davis, who has just made a grand splurge about our dear and non-existent liberties in this country would say about this latest act of his lieutenant. It would be still more interesting to hear what this same Mr. Davis, the presidential nominee of the democratic party, this friend of labor and liberty, would say about the infamous record of his political backers.

Who Is Don Chafin?

The question: "Who is Don Chafin?" can be asked only outside of the state of West Virginia. In that thug-ruled state, there is not a youngster that could not tell you of Don Chafin. And if he were the son of a worker, he would speak of "Ol Don" in no polite terms. Very few workers can speak of Chafin in friendly terms in that state and maintain the respect of his friends and mates.

When the United States entered the war, unionism among the coal diggers of District 17 grew swiftly, from five to forty-two thousand. Only one county was closed to union organization: Logan County, ruled by Don Chafin and his picked crew of "deputies," thugs—every mother's son of them. The story goes that when a man would come into town who was suspected by Chafin to be a union organizer, he was told to leave on the next train or have his head blown off. Usually, the man left town, for Chafin is a good gunman and has a score of notches to his gun despite his forty years.

When the union finally managed to filter into Logan county, Don Chafin, officially the county clerk, got busy. The well-founded rumors of beatings, evictions and brutal murders of miners who exercised their "constitutional rights," Mr. John W. Davis, soon reached the organized portions of the state. And the miners of the other counties, Mr. Davis, did not permit any law to stand in the way of their fundamental liberties; they took their rifles and shotguns and revolvers and began the famous Armed March of September, 1919. And your Mr. Chafin might not be alive today had it not been for the presence of the governor of the state and the president of the Miners' district union, who intercepted the indignant marchers just over the border of Logan county, and persuaded with false promises to turn back.

And in August, 1921, when thousands of miners marched on Logan county, incensed at the cold-blooded murder of Sid Hatfield on the court-house steps in Welch where he had been tricked into a trap, who was it that met them? When these thousands of angry workers attempted to assert the rights they were told they possessed, who was it that led an army of thugs and gunmen to defeat this noble attempt? Don Chafin.

Not a Word from Davis.

And do we remember you as having said a single word, Mr. John W. Davis, when Don Chafin, your man, and your good friend the governor, Mr. Morgan, contrived to send hundreds of state troopers to the defense of the coal companies in their fight against the union? Where were you then with your speech? Where are you now when Don Chafin is in the hole?

And if memory serves us well you didn't say a word either, when your man, Chafin, now indicted for bootlegging, fitted out his two airplanes so that they could drop bombs of Christian civilization and democratic persuasion on the grouped miners who had come to "defend the constitution." In fact, tho we wrack our mind, we cannot even recall that you uttered a word of protest against the first bomb that was dropped and fell between two women, Sallie Polly and Lizzie Oxley, who would have been blown to bits but for the stupidity of your friend Chafin who was unable to construct a bomb that would not be so clumsily manufactured that it failed to explode. Not a syllable passed your lips when another bomb sent Dula Chambers to the hospital, gassed with the chlorine wafted by your ingenious Mr. Chafin.

Don Chafin is now under indictment for conscious violation of the law of the land, together with a number of his appointed deputy sheriffs. Don Chafin has an unenviable record of militant anti-unionism. Don Chafin was the gunman who helped to put Davis on the democratic ticket last July.

We have already exposed in the DAILY WORKER the false pretentions of Davis who claims to have defended the miners of West Virginia in a strike action, by showing that Davis was the attorney for the coal companies which were instrumental in prosecuting the miners, amongst whom was Mother Jones.

Wes are glad to give here a glimpse of the record of the outstanding supporter of Davis. It is a significant sign of the interests behind Davis, behind the democratic party.

A New 2½ International

By John Pepper

A NEW host of Vikings are setting out from Norway and Sweden to conquer the big, wide world: Tranmael and Hoeglund plan the formation of a "Scandinavian International" which they hope to transform presently into a real "international International". Tranmael proudly declares that this new International will neither bow to Moscow nor to Amsterdam. The Craewinkle-Congress of the Hoeglund group declared that this new International is to unite all Communist and other revolutionary parties which are outside of the Communist International. Hence we have to deal with a new edition of the 2½ International. The first appearance of the 2½ International in the labor movement could, with some good will, be called a tragedy. The second, however, is unquestionably a farce.

The initiative for the formation of this new 2½ International originated with the Norwegian labor party. On Aug. 28th its Christiania organ "Arbeiderbladet" published an article under the heading "The International". Tranmael rings the death-knell for the Communist International in this article. "It is clear now that the Communist movement cannot be saved by the Third International. It must remain without that organization. The independent communist parties have a great task ahead of them." The Communist International had to go bankrupt because "the organizational practice of centralism, Jesuitism and the disease of prejudice had gotten too much elbow room in the international and had killed its life-inspiring and uniting ideas." Even the Soviet system in Russia had to fall into ruins and became an "empty institution." Old capitalism again raises its head in Russia and "by all appearances a new revolution is necessary even there." The executive of the Comintern pushes the best comrades like Trotzky and Radek into the background; it works with putches and party splits; it pulverizes all mass organizations of the Comintern and transforms them into insignificant sects. Only the "independent" Communist parties outside the Communist International can save the situation: "they must now get into contact with each other, must work together and must create the foundation for the unity of all workers of the world on a broad, Communist basis."

The Norwegian labor party has already taken the initiative for the formation of the new International. "Our party shall now get into contact with the Communist party of Sweden. There are chances for connections with similar-minded comrades in Denmark as well as in Finland. During the autumn we surely can succeed in organizing an international conference. Step by step parties and groups will participate. And our numbers are growing. These parties and groups have to create organizational unity and an international bureau."

Thus we have the great plan all fixed up and ready. Why should the saviors of the international labor movement not start their march from Christiania? Skeptics, of course, may doubt — but then, skeptics, even one thousand nine hundred and twenty-four years ago, have already asked the ironical question—"What good can come from Nazareth?"

The co-operation between Tranmael and Hoeglund is an accomplished fact. Tranmael appeared at the congress of the Hoeglund group in Stockholm as a representative of the Norwegian labor party. He even had the good fortune to be prevented from speaking by the Stockholm police. The embryo of the 2½ International, therefore, was conceived by the petty bourgeois congress of the Hoeglund group, with Norwegian fertilization. But from conception to birth is a long way, for the new Vikings of Stockholm and Christiania there is still a long march to the metropolis of the international proletariat of Berlin, Paris, London, and so forth. One need not be a great prophet to foresee that even the weak infant of this new 2½ International will see the light of this wicked world it will quickly enough return into the social-democratic womb—just as did its illustrious ancestor, the first 2½ International.

Upon what do these hairdressers of the new 2½ International really build? First of all, upon the refuse of the Communist movement of all countries. The left-wing thrown out of the Communist International are to be the center for the crystallization of the new International. Tranmael in Norway and Hoeglund in Sweden; the small student group "Proletar" in Denmark; Frossard in France; Ledebour's socialist federation and the scanty independent socialist party around the puny Theodore Liebknecht in Germany; Edvard Huttunen and the other renegades of the former socialist labor party of Finland; the Bulgarian "Communist deputies" who shamefully disowned the heroic rebellion of the workers and peasants; and probably also the latest refuse of the communist world movement—the Messrs. Newbold in England and Toman in Austria. Tranmael must really be a very skilfull matron if he wants to succeed in weaving a pretty and useful shawl out of this hodge-podge of refuse.

How do these heroes of this International of thrown-outs really look upon close inspection? It is really a very peculiar salon de refuses. It is really a remarkable gallery of refused: Tranmael, the labor leader who in the name of the trade union traditions of Norway has betrayed the Comintern, and who, after his breach with the Comintern felt his hands free enough to shamefully betray the mental workers of Norway in their struggle against the bourgeoisie—Tranmael, who still calls himself Communist but who, on the day of his breach with the Third International threw away the fundamental slogan of the arming of the proletariat and went back to the stale pacifism and refusal of military service: Falk, who is constantly suspended in the air between Communism and Fascism, like Mohammed's coffin between heaven and earth: Haakon Meyer, who in his consequent Marxism succeeds in uniting anti-semitism and Communism into a perfect synthesis: the three dozen "clear heads" of Danish students who sympathize with the Fascist Falk but who at the same time approve the expulsion of Hoeglund from the Communist International with correct commentaries: Edvard Huttunen who could not submit to the discipline of the socialist labor party parliamentary group in Finland because it was too narrow for his unbounded social-democratic policies, and because it tended to hold him to real, revolutionary action as the chairman of the federation of labor of Finland: Frederick Stroem, the Swedish Tacitus of the Russian revolution who, as a Bolshevik and the secretary of the Communist Party of Sweden could not exactly detect the difference between the Russian Mensheviks and Bolsheviks, and who fought the centralism of the Communist International in the name of the specific Scandinavian workers' psychology: Ledebour, the most confused of all the harebrained of Europe: Scheidemann, the trade union reactionary, the former member of the Russian Soviet government, later organizer of attempts against the lives of the leaders of the Russian revolution and at present secretary of the Berlin committee for the formation of a new international, Zeth Hoeglund, who as a pacifist, once joined the Communist International and who now, again as a pacifist, ends in the camp of counter-revolution; Zeth Hoeglund, who last May still approved of all the decisions of the Communist International for the Bolshevization of the Communist parties and who now has become the foremost Bolshevik killer of Sweden; Hoeglund, who once fought against Trotzky in the name of the dictatorship of the proletariat and who now with open shamelessness takes out of his election program the idea of the dictatorship of the working class and of the criticism of parliamentarism.

These are the leaders and heroes of the future 2½ International. A motley crew that has nothing in common except its variegated deviations from the idea of Communism; a ragtag whose only title to the formation of a new international is their uniform clinging to their respective national prejudices and traditions. Tranmael broke with the Comintern because he was "Norwegian." Hoeglund broke with the executive because the executive was not "Swedish enough." And now they want to form a common international, the sole purpose of which shall be not to be too international. And with a sentence the whole history of this new International is told. The first 2½ International was at least a mass organization of great proletariat strata who were scared by civil war; but this second 2½ International will be, at best, as sect of petty shopkeepers who are not only scared of civil war, but also of the most elementary duties of the class struggle.

LITHUANIAN EDITOR ASKS FOREIGN LANGUAGE SPEAKING WORKERS URGE CHILDREN TO READ "DAILY WORKER"

EDITOR'S NOTE—This is the first of a series of articles that we hope to publish from the editors of the foreign-language Communist press. These articles are appearing as editorials in their respective foreign-language publications. The accompanying article by A. Bimba, editor of Laisve, the Lithuanian daily, appeared as an editorial in the Oct. 3 issue of that publication. It is as follows:

By A. BIMBA
Editor, Laisve, Lithuanian Daily.

The Workers Party has made a great step forward in the class struggle of this country by establishing an English Communist daily, the DAILY WORKER. Especially in the presidential campaign, the English daily plays a most important role. Without such an instrument as the English daily the voice of the revolutionary proletariat of America would hardly be heard among the citizen-workers.

The foreign-speaking Communist press plays a very important role in the class struggle, but it cannot reach the English-speaking workers. As long as we did not have the DAILY WORKER there was a very great lack in the Communist movement. Now that we have the DAILY WORKER we must circulate it so that it will be read not merely by tens of thousands of wage slaves, but by hundreds of thousands of them. The DAILY WORKER is their organ, the untiring and faithful guardian and defender of their interests. They will read it and like it, but we must reach them and explain to them the ideas and ideals proclaimed by the DAILY WORKER.

This is the job of the militant workers. We cannot say that the English-speaking Communists alone should worry about their DAILY. Their group as yet is not very numerous and therefore all class conscious workers must do their bit for the DAILY WORKER, even tho they are foreigners. True, the work is not easy, but all Communist activities require energy and sacrifice. Besides, thousands of Lithuanian workers can read English and they often buy the English bourgeois papers. Why not subscribe for and read your own class paper, The DAILY WORKER? Or why not subscribe for the DAILY WORKER for our growing children who read the English papers? It is our duty to enlighten our youth so that they will understand their class interests and fight shoulder to shoulder with their older comrades for the abolition of the capitalist system. Thru the DAILY WORKER we can reach this aim.

Sends Poem to Our Readers.

To the DAILY WORKER:—About four years ago, when I was in the paper makers' union, I learned a poem which I think, should be published in the DAILY WORKER. I am sending it to you herewith:

The Open Shopper.

The open shop is the place, alas,
You will find employed the working ass.

His mind is weak, his back is strong,
His pay is short and his hours long,
He is satisfied and well content,
If he can barely pay his rent,
And just exist from day to day,
That is good enough for such a jay.

"No unionism goes for me,
For I am independent see."
So says the meak dumb driven horse.
The master pats him on the back,
To urge along the braying jack.

BIG COMMUNIST RALLY SUNDAY

500 CANDIDATES OF LABOR PARTY GOING TO POLLS

British Parties Prepare for Election Clash

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Oct. 10.—While the labor party headquarters announced this afternoon that only 370 laborite candidates were in the field working for election to Commons, it is believed this number will have been increased to 500 by election day, Oct. 29.

Premier MacDonald will make a tour of the country, but will not campaign in London.

Labor Cabinet Still Holds Power.

The laborite cabinet, headed by MacDonald, will remain in power temporarily.

Malcolm MacDonald, son of the premier, who is now in the United States, will stand for parliament in the Basseltaw district. He will be unable to return in time for the campaign.

The labor premier leading one of the shortest and speediest exits of a cabinet in England's history, was winner of the first strategic move in the setting of the election day at the expiration of the twenty-day period required by statute.

500 Tory Candidates.

Liberal leaders were caught unprepared. Tories are not in as good a shape to go to the polls as the laborites. The tories expect to put up 500 candidates and the liberals 200.

Malcolm MacDonald's sister, Ishbel MacDonald, will conduct his campaign for him.

Oliver Baldwin, son of former premier Stanley Baldwin, will run for commons on the laborite ticket despite the fact that his father is a tory. A son of John Robert Clynes and two sons of Arthur Henderson will be candidates also.

GARY, STEEL TRUST HEAD, IS COOLIDGE AID

By KARL REEVE.
(Staff Writer, Daily Worker)

GARY, Ind., Oct. 10.—Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the United States Steel corporation, is in the very center of the ring of financiers that is backing Coolidge for president of the United States.

At latest accounts, Coolidge owned 50 shares of common stock in the United States Steel corporation, altho there is no record of how Coolidge came into possession of this valuable interest in the steel trust.

Gary Out For Coolidge.

According to numerous statements of Gary, Coolidge is admittedly the candidate of the big business interests. These interests include J. P. Morgan, who together with Gary, aided in establishing not only the steel trust, but also the International Harvester company which holds an air-tight [illegible] on all agricultural ma-

...S SUDDENLY DISCOVER THAT ...ENDMENTS TO THE CONSTITUTION LACK BACKING OF SUPREME COURT

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—"Fantastic," is the comment of James Weldon Johnson, secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, on the suit brought against Walter Cohen, colored U. S. comptroller of customs in New Orleans, which would annul the 14th amendment and declare Negroes ineligible to American citizenship.

"Those bringing this suit," said Johnson "make the statements that the War Amendments have never been regularly adopted and passed upon by the Supreme Court and by this case hope to have those amendments annulled. The fact is, the Supreme Court in innummerable decisions has recognized the 13th, 14th and 15th amendments as part of the constitution and furthermore, these amendments have been recognized by congress, by the executive branch and all other departments of government, as part of the organic law of the country. Congress by statute in 1870 enlarged the right to naturalization so as to embrace not only an alien being a free white person but also Africans and descendants of Africans."

MAKE THREATS OF DEPORTATION IN SILK STRIKE

Plan to Force Workers to Kiss Flag

(By The Federated Press)

PATERSON, N. J., Oct. 10.—Threats to order the deportation of all non-citizen strikers arrested is the latest development in the Paterson silk strike situation.

Mayor Colin McLean and president George Christie of the police and fire commission have given full support to chief of police John M. Tracey in his fight against the striking silk workers.

They have instructed Tracey to prepare a list of all those non-citizens arrested in the strike and to present it to the department of justice to start proceedings leading to the deportation of these people.

Chief Tracey insists that "out-of-town agitators from now on may be dragged to the plaza of the city hall and made to kiss the American flag and swear an oath of allegiance to the constitution of the United States." Roger N. Baldwin, director of the American Civil Liberties Union, answered when the chief arrested him that the fight for free speech in Paterson would go on in spite of the chief's threats.

Unemployment in Cuba

Due to the release of a large amount of labor by the sugar industry, and the large influx of southern Europeans, the supply of labor in Cuba continues to exceed the demand, according to the official statements of the department of labor at Washington.

INTERNATIONAL BANKERS, MEETING IN LONDON, ARRANGE DETAILS OF $200,000,000 LOAN TO GERMANY

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Oct. 10.—An agreement for a $200,000,000 loan for Germany under the Dawes reparation plan was signed by the international bankers here today.

The ceremony took place at the Bank of England.

The agreement calls for the floatation of the loan on condition the terms are approved by the inter-allied reparation commission at Paris. Such approval is expected at once.

UNITY IS CALL OF R. I. L. U. TO I. W. W. ON THE EVE OF THEIR SPECIAL CONVENTION

To the Delegates Assembled at the Sixteenth General Convention of the I. W. W.
(Statement by the Red International Affiliation Committee.)

When, on Aug. 13, the Red International Affiliation Committee, knowing the necessity of such action, issued its call, "Stop the Split in the I. W. W.," we said:

"We urge that the rank and file everywhere demand a special convention, and that every shred of red tape be brushed aside and delegates representative of the entire membership be called into convention at once to give the I. W. W. a set of officers that cannot be the subject of dispute."

It was exactly one month before the Doyle-Fisher group gave way to pressure and issued to convention call, and the Rowan-Bowerman group came shortly afterward with their call for the same date, as issued in the "Industrial Worker" of Sept. 27, 1924. You are met in response to the necessity of unity, whatever side you may take in the dispute.

But the Red International Affiliation Committee, seriously concerned in maintaining complete unity in the I. W. W., warns you that elements on both sides are opposed to unity and will force a split or a secession movement if their side is not upheld and their personal control is not assured.

While Doyle and Fisher in their letter issuing the call for convention say that "The time has come for the rank and file to take charge, to express its decision without delay and to save the I. W. W. from the disaster which threatens it," yet their actions, in the face of the crisis and the point the R. I. A. C. has insisted upon from the beginning in behalf of a brushing aside of red tape and admission of delegates "representative

UTAH WORKERS IN CONVENTION HIT DAWES PLAN

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Oct. 10.—The Utah State Federation of Labor has gone on record as unqualifiedly opposed to the operation of the Dawes plan, and also to the holding of such militarist demonstrations as Defense Day.

The resolution condemning the Dawes plan, which was introduced by Barbers' Union Local 377, reads as follows:

"WHEREAS, the valiant General Dawes, commander of the anti-union Minute Men of the Constitution, is credited with the authorship of the so-called Dawes plan for the enslavement of the workers of Germany and of Europe, and

"WHEREAS, this is obviously the plan of Morgan and American finance capitalists to extend American imperialism and to subjugate the workers of other countries as well as those of the United States, therefore be it

"RESOLVED, that the Utah State Federation of Labor condemn the Dawes plan."

Vote Communist This Time.

SHACHTMAN RILES BUSINESS MEN OF ENGLEWOOD AND LANDS IN COURT

Max Shachtman was haled into Judge Joseph La Buy's court yesterday morning after having been arrested for speaking under the nose of the Englewood Business Men's Association at 62nd and Halsted Streets. The case has been laid over for a jury trial.

The Workers Party will fight for a clear decision on the right of free speech—for Communists, as against the confusion introduced by the authorities in charging our speakers with "obstructing the traffic and disorderly conduct." Those two latter charges are of course ridiculous.

Paul Cline, chairman, did not discontinue the meeting when ordered to do so by the police. Schachtman made a statement on constitutional rights supposed to be guaranteed to the workers, and spoke half an hour before his arrest. Copies of the special campaign edition of the Daily Worker were distributed to a crowd of over 200.

Sam Hammersmark and George Maurer, communist candidates for congress, spoke at North Ave. and Orchard, where 200 DAILY WORKERS announcing the Foster-Gitlow mass meeting were given out. Keen interest was shown in the revelations regarding the Dawes' plan, Wall Street plans for world domination and exploitation of Europe and Asia, and the unemployment problem. Indications were that many bamboozled La Folletteites are turning to Foster because of the Communists' exposure of LaFollette as responsible for the anti-labor administration in Wisconsin as a politically ambitious bourgeois, republican lawyer and candidate of "class conscious capitalists" who want Wall Street power curbed so that the smaller and independent profit-seeking fry can have a greater share in the gain from exploitation of the workers.

FOSTER ON THE HOME STRETCH OF HIS TOUR

Opens Eastern Swing at Detroit, Mich.

By JOSEPH MANLEY
Campaign Manager, Workers Party.

William Z. Foster, presidential candidate of the Workers Party will start out on the last stretch of his seventeen thousand-mile campaign itinerary.

Foster, in the home stretch of the Communist election campaign will cover the large and most thickly populated states of the east. A series of meetings in the principal cities and large industrial centers have been arranged.

Speaks in Detroit Tuesday.

The opening meeting of this eastern swing will be at Detroit, Mich., on the night of Oct. 14. Great preparations are being made for this Foster meeting, at the House of Masses in Detroit.

Much indignation and resentment has been aroused in Michigan and especially in Detroit, because of the action of the Michigan attorney general in ruling off the Foster-Gitlow electors and leaving those of LaFollette and Wheeler on.

The amount of interest amongst the workers of this typical proletarianized state can be gauged by the masses of workers who turned out to hear Foster's running mate, Benjamin Gitlow, at a meeting recently held in Detroit. Judging by all these indications the Foster meeting will be the biggest and most enthusiastic Communist rally ever held in Detroit.

Returns From Pacific Coast.

Foster has just completed a speaking trip to the Pacific coast and back. Addressing large audiences of workers in the various western and Pacific coast states. Foster met with a particularly enthusiastic reception from militant workers in Seattle, Tacoma, Portland, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Salt Lake City and Denver.

He reports that in spite of the La-Follette movement with its glib progressive and vote-catching phraseology, there is a tremendous undercurrent of discontent and resentment against capitalism which cannot be sidetracked by LaFollette or his movement.

It is from this thorely working class undercurrent that the Workers Party is drawing its support in the present election campaign.

In this historic period of the American working class movement, the Workers Party and its candidates are crystallizing what will be one of the world's great Communist movements. Despite the confusion created by LaFollette's "progressivism" the Workers Party and its candidates are rallying the support of masses of workers. The Communist program is being carried into sections hitherto inaccessible, and the general result of the present campaign will be the building of a greater and more powerful Workers (Communist) Party

Final Meeting in Chicago

Foster in this closing stretch of his presidential campaign itinerary will have completed a series of tours covering the entire country from coast to coast. He will wind up at Chicago on November 3., the day before election.

Widely as Foster has been known in the past to the masses of American workers for his leadership in industrial struggles, he will be known in the future to even greater masses as a result of this political struggle.

The Workers Party has established itself in the minds of millions of American workers both for its industrial and political leadership. In spite of

O'FLAHERTY TO BARE FARRINGTON ANTI-LABOR RECORD IN NEW SERIES

Compiled from documents and data furnished by the rank and file of the Illinois district of the United Mine Workers of America, which Farrington exploits, the series of articles which the DAILY WORKER begins to publish Monday, contains what is probably the most extraordinary story of corruption and betrayal in the history of the American labor movement.

Written by T. J. O'Flaherty in the pungent style that has made his "As We See It" column the subject of favorable comment wherever the DAILY WORKER is read, these articles will throw the searchlight into many dark holes and corners of the Illinois labor movement and become part of the evidence on which the American working class is building its indictment of the tools of capitalism in the American labor movement.

If you want to be certain of getting all these articles subscribe to the DAILY WORKER now.

GIANT THRONG OF WORKERS TO FILL LABOR'S BIGGEST HALL TO HEAR FOSTER AND GITLOW

A giant hall filled to overflowing with eager working men and working women; orchestras crashing out the rallying songs of the revolutionists of the world; railroad workers, steel workers, workers in the packing industries and in the mines, listening for the message of Communism which the best fighters in the labor movement of the United States will bring.

In the Carmen's (Ashland) Auditorium—the largest labor hall in Chicago, at Ashland Boulevard and W. Van Buren Street, the first great Communist rally of this city is to be held Sunday afternoon.

The workers of Chicago have heard of this gathering thru messages given them from a hundred open air gatherings, thru the tens of thousands of copies of the DAILY WORKER distributed to the men and women who pour from the gates of factories every noon and evening.

Foster and Gitlow Here.

William Z. Foster, who, as candidate for president, is leading the Communist forces in the election fight this fall, has come from a long trip thru the west to attend this rally.

Benjamin Gitlow, fighting side by side with Foster as candidate for vice-president, has come from the northwest.

William F. Dunne, who heads the state ticket of the Workers Party as candidate for governor of Illinois, and has just returned from the sessions of the Communist International at Moscow, will direct the rally.

All three of these men will lay before the workers the Communist message and program of the Workers Party.

Masses Hear Communist.

Workers who have been following the course of the tour of Comrade Foster and Comrade Gitlow know with what enthusiasm these two revolutionists were received thruout the country.

They have heard how in every city which Comrade Foster visited—Seattle, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland, Denver, Salt Lake City, and dozens of others, the workers poured out by the thousands to hear the man with one of the best fighting records in the country—the man who organized the Carmen's Union, the man who organized and fought for the workers in the packing industries, the man who led the great steel strike of 1919.

Winning Farmers, Too.

And not only the workers, but the farmers—hundreds of them—knowing that the program of the Workers Party offers the only solution to the problems of the farmers—came into the cities to hear what Foster had to say.

Comrade Gitlow, too, met with enthusiastic groups wherever he traveled in the east. Even the decree of the police in Washington, D. C., that he must not speak in the city was ignored by the workers who had come to hear him. And among the men in the textile mills, in the steel mills and in the coal fields, where the growing unemployment has laid a heavy hand on the workers there was tremendous enthusiasm for the Communist candidate.

Besides Foster, Gitlow and Dunne, Gordon Owens, a colored comrade who has been placed on the ballot for congressman from the first congressional district, will address the gathering.

Ashland Auditorium holds over 6,000 people. Arrangements are now being made to take care of the overflow, for it is believed that every seat will be ocupied and more.

Tito Schipa Here on 19.

Tito Schipa, will give his first and only concert of the season, Sunday night, October 19, at the Auditorium theatre. He will appear under the auspices of the Chicago Civic Opera company, of which he is one of the most famous artists.

Lay-Off in Montana.

MILES CITY, Mont., Oct. 10.—The Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad has posted a bulletin in the local shops announcing a lay-off of approximately 15 per cent of the force of machinists, boilermakers, and helpers.

CLEVELAND HAS FULL TICKET IN ELECTION FIGHT

Ruthenberg, Severino, Brahtin for Congress

(Special to THE DAILY WORKER.)

CLEVELAND, Ohio., Oct. 10.—The Workers Party has a full ticket on the ballot this year in Cleveland and in Cuyahoga County, of which Cleveland forms the biggest section.

Both county and congressional candidates have been nominated and will appear on the ballot, the full quota of required signatures having been gotten for each.

The candidates for state senators and representatives from the county have also been nominated and will appear on the ballot.

The three candidates for congress in Cleveland are C. E. Ruthenberg, in the 20th district, John Brahtin, in the 21st District, A. V. Severino in the 22nd District.

Ruthenberg, national executive secretary of the Workers Party does not need to be introduced to Clevelanders. There are few who do not know of his activity in the working class movement for many years in this city. And there are few that are more hated by the powers that be.

Brahtin in Roofers' Union.

John Brantin running in the 21st district is a member of the Slate and Tile Roofers' Union, formerly its president. Brahtin's record in the working class movement runs many years back thru membership in the socialist party, the left wing which grew out of the bankruptcy of the socialist party, and the Workers Party from its inception.

A. V. Severino, running in the 22nd district against one of the worst reactionaries in congress, T. Burton (who in a recent speech spoke in favor of the leasing of the Teapot Dome oil area) is an active member of the Bricklayers' Union, and known, by most active trade unionists in Cleveland for his activities as a Communist. Severino's activity has aroused the ire of the powers that be. For

15,000 CIGAR MAKERS MAINTAIN SOLID FRONT AFTER MONTH'S STRIKE

TAMPA, Fla., Oct. 10.—For four weeks the 15,000 cigarmakers that walked out of Tampa factories have maintained a solid front and they are prepared to fight a long time for their demands. These include the company checkoff on wages to pay for the time lost by worker representatives serving on the joint equalization committee, 25 per cent wage increase and re-introduction of readers at employe expense in in the factories.

The strike, altho not authorized by the Cigarmakers' International Union, pulled out almost every worker, union and non-union. Orders for the Christmas trade are piling up.

MAYOR DODGES PARENTS' WAR ON M'ANDREW

Dever Says He Has No Influence on Board

Two hundred mothers and fathers accompanied by their little children waited on Mayor Dever yesterday morning to lay before him their side of the fight between 700 parents of Englewood and the Chicago board of education.

And in answer to their plea thru Alderman Byrnes, "Mr. Mayor will you help us," the mayor replied, "I have no club over the school board. In fact I have not a particle of influence."

He'll Speak to Moderwell.

However, he offered to speak to president Charles Moderwell, who, he said, is "friendly" and always willing to "listen."

But tho Mr. Moderwell is outwardly "friendly" and a good listener, the parents of Englewood are getting a taste of his greatest accomplishments. They now feel his autocratic club which he lets descent upon his victims.

The parents of the Englewood have been negotiating with the board of education, in the persons of Moderwell and McAndrew, for the last six weeks over the changing of the Harper school, at 6520 S. Wood St., into a Junior high school.

Children Promised Portables.

The board of education promised them that portables would be put in the school yards to take care of the surplus room needed and that the children would not have to be transferred to other schools at long distances from their home which was the objection raised by the parents. After six weeks of waiting a notice was sent to the parents by the board that the portables are now completed. On Monday of this week the children returned to school they received their new books and homework and were about to leave school at 3 o'clock when the teachers were called out of the room. When they returned they collected the children's books and told them that they must never come into that school. "Stay away from this school and go to the school you were transferred to." With these words they dismissed the class.

Calls It "Not Political."

Alderman Byrne was the first speaker for the committee and opened his remarks with, "This is not a political movement, Mr. Mayor, but a movement started by the parents of Englewood in the vicinity of the Harper school. The parents have been meeting with Mr. Moderwell and Mr. McAndrews. But they broke their word to them and as you're the only man who has any power in the city of Chicago we come to you to ask you to find a way to rectify this matter."

Delving into the cause of the trouble with the board of education, Mr. McCarr, president of the West Englewood Business Men's Association said the school accommodated 1300 children and they were small children in the elementary grades.

"For six years we have waited for the board of education to put in the 8 portable buildings which would do away with the necessity of transferring the children to schools one mile and a half away from their home and with many dangerous boulevard and car crossings. Monday we sent the children to school and they were turned out."

Keep Children at Home.

Mrs. Edna Seaborg spoke next. She said she is compelled to keep her nine year old boy at home because she couldn't think of sending him a mile and a half to school. She informed the mayor that all the other parents were keeping their children at home for the same reason. "One day I stood on the corner of the 69th street crossing and counted as many as 700 automobiles passing in one hour. The portables promised were put up but will be used only for the 1st, 2nd and 3rd grades. The 4th, 5th and 6th grades, children 9 to 11 years of age, have been thrown out."

Warns Against Strike.

The mayor did not offer much hope to the committee in his promise to do "the best he can" and adding that he did not know whether there was much he could do.

Unity Call of R. I. L. U. to I. W. W.

of the entire membership," slap the membership in the face so far as representation is concerned. The R. I. A. C. asserts that their latest qualification of a representative convention by insisting that delegations must comply with Article Five, Section Four, Paragraph "A," is flat contradiction of their nice words about the rank and file taking charge, and constitutes not only a piece of "constitutional" evasion and hypocrisy, but is an ominous danger to unity as it affords the Rowan-Bowerman group, searching high and low for an excuse to split or seceed, with a color, however false, of justification.

It is time the I. W. W. did away with "constitutional safeguards" as a substitute for sincere, revolutionary and experienced leadership.

The R. I. A. C. urges all delegates to meet in a pre-convention meeting and overcome the resistance of Doyle and Fisher or any other elements which bar delegates really representative of membership from full voice and vote. At the same time, it will denounce any delegates as disrupters of the I. W. W. if they withdraw in any split or secession should the majority of the delegates uphold the contentions of Doyle and Fisher. There must be unity whoever is sustained.

The Red International Affiliation Committee endorses 100 per cent the sentiment expressed by J. A. Griffith, speaking for the five ejected G. E. B. members, when he says (Industrial Worker, Sept 27, 1924), that "One and all must admit that the membership should have full representation in the coming general convention." But the R. I. A. C. points out that this comes from those who themselves flouted the membership by rushing into the capitalist courts for an injunction to give them complete control, without other than "constitutional" justification for their original demands, and flatly opposed to every interest of the organization. Any man or men who, however "constitutional" the pretext, drags his fellow workers and a working class organization before the capitalist courts forfeit every confidence and should be instantly removed as leaders whose incompetence or worse is proven by such an act.

More, it is clear from the tone and tendency shown in such articles as Wm. Buchwald's in the General Construction Workers' Bulletin No. 17, and the "report" of Adolph Vangsness and Tom Moore in Lumber Workers' Bulletin No. 43, on July 1 that a disruptive secession movement was being agitated before any ejection from headquarters took place. Granted that Tom Doyle was protecting the unspeakable mental prostitute or worse, John Lebensey; granted that Joe Fisher was arbitrary and incompetent, those who point the way toward secession from the I. W. W. upon such grounds are enemies of working class solidarity unfitted for office.

And still more. Just prior to this convention the Rowan-Bowerman controlled paper, the Industrial Worker, sets out, upon the basis that "90 per cent of the enrollment of the I. W. W. is not informed" as to the issues of the convention, not to inform but to alarm them with fantastic yarns of Communist bogey-men, upon the thin foundation of the fact that there are members of the I. W. W., some Communists and some not Communists, who believe as they have a right to believe, and agitate, as they have a right to agitate, for affiliation of the I. W. W. to the Red International of Labor Unions.

In an exceptional burst of nonsense the Industrial Worker paraded a nameless terror before the same 90 per cent of uninformed members, and then threatens that if these same voiceless and uninformed rank and file, already admitted to be counted out of the convention, are "still possessed of completeness of the I. W. W., all will be well." But, "If an outside agency gains any of its ends, then the cause of proletarian progress has been halted." What does this mean, if not that the Industrial Worker, organ of the Rowan-Griffith-Bowerman group, propagandizes in advance of the convention their intention to split or secede if their contentions are not sustained by the convention? Such incitement is downright treachery and this and all other manifestations of splits and secession must be vigilantly fought. Whoever wins, there must be unity.

It is silly as well as criminal to agitate against Doyle and Fisher, as the five G. E. B. members have done upon the ridiculous claim that they are "followers of the Communists." We suppose such anti-Communists as George Williams supports Doyle and Fisher for that reason. And on the other hand, we recall that one of the same five which signs this allegation, Harry Trotter, on December 5, 1921, was removed from control of the Railroad Workers' I. U. 520, by the then as now anti-Communist G. E. B., because Trotter was supposed to be a Communist. The silly rot of raising a Communist bugaboo should stop, particularly as it has never been proven by fact or document that the purpose of the Communists is at all unfriendly to revolutionary industrial unionism and its goal as set forth in the preamble of the I. W. W.

Fellow workers! There must be unity. While the M. T. W. may greatly need the $1.00 dues, the talk of secession we hear, if it does not get this demand, should be met with vigorous condemnation. Similarly, if the Lumber Workers see their demands defeated by this convention, there must be no talk of secession or of splits. Unity of the whole I. W. W. comes first.

Fellow workers! The fact admitted by both sides that 90 per cent of the membership is uninformed is a symptom of disease. There must be better contact between the membership and headquarters than is afforded by the General Office Bulletins and those of the I. U.'s. However plausible the argument which leads to the 1921 convention barring controversies from the papers of general circulation, it is a remedy worse than the disease. Every member needs to and expects to find all vital news and discussions in the paper he subscribes to under that understanding. Stop treating the membership or even the unorganized as children unable or unfit to read and discuss every policy, principle and tactic. The press must be free and open. Personal censorship, as now practiced, must be ended. Both sides in this dispute have covertly used the papers under their control. Whoever wins, unity must be had, and a healthy unity comes only with freedom of the press for the workers.

Stand for full representation, against splits, against secession, and for affiliation with the R. I. L. U.

For unity and revolution,
Red Internat'l Affiliation Committee.

HOLD EPSTEIN FOR LYNCHING WILLIAM BELL

Two Men Identify Him as Slayer

Otto Epstein, 1011 14th St., was held to the grand jury for killing of William Bell, the Negro who was brutally murdered with a baseball bat on the corner of Maxwell and 14th St., Wednesday night, and Irving Rockowitz, 1045 Newberry Ave., was held as an accessory to the murder, by the coroner's jury, sitting in the county morgue yesterday.

Both men will go before the grand jury in the criminal court building.

Two men, Albert Harper, 1045 13th St., and Thomas Clark, 1043 13th St., positively identified Epstein as the man who struck down Bell with a baseball bat Wednesday night. Harry Crawford, owner of a pool hall at 1339 Miller St., repeated to coroner Samuel Davis the testimony printed exclusively in yesterday's DAILY WORKER that it was two white men in a Ford car who accosted Betty Goldblatt and Bertha Deutsch, who gave the alarm that led to the lynching of Bell, and not a Negro.

Bertha Deutsch, in her testimony, withheld the incident of the Ford car stopping to chat with her until George C. Adams, attorney for George Bell, brother of the murdered man, brot out the facts in his cross examination.

"I forgot to mention that," said Bertha Deutsch, who was the first witness. "A man in an auto was driving by and he called out, 'Going our way girls?' But we paid no attention." Miss Deutsch, who is decidedly the "flapper" type, with cheap artificial flowers decorating her hat, and paint on her face, admitted to Mr. Adams that her mother had opened the door for her and asked her what had happened, after she and Betty Goldblatt ran upstairs, but said she "didn't remember" whether or not she told her mother what had occurred.

Bell Never Before in Trouble.

Ernest Bell, brother of the Negro who was lynched, testified that his brother never spent his time in poolrooms of the neighborhood, that he was a laborer in a starch factory, that he roomed with his brother, and that he last saw him alive at eight thirty that night. He declared that his brother had never before been in any trouble, and "never had a cross word in him," that he never drank and was perfectly sober when he left the house.

Betty Goldblatt declared she could not identify Bell as the man who had accosted her. "We couldn't imagine that anyone had been killed over that" she declared. Miss Goldblatt said she did not visit the pool shop until after Bell had been killed. She testified that "Jack," Ida and Epstein and a whole bunch came back from Bell's body while we were there, and that Epstein went to call the police.

Albert Harper declared, "I was with William Bell when he was killed. Epstein came up to us as we were walking south on Miller St., near 14th, followed by two men. Epstein had a baseball bat in his left hand. He asked us, 'What are you looking for,' and before we had time to answer he hit me on the nose, making it bleed. Epstein then transferred the bat to his right hand and hit Bell a death blow on the head. I turned and fled." All efforts of Epstein's lawyer to shake Harper's identification failed. "Epstein is the man," Harper repeated, "I am positive of it.'

Bell Killed by First Blow.

Thomas Clark declared while he was standing on the corner of Miller and 14th Sts., he saw the two girls talking to a white man. "Then the man walked away from them and they ran direcly across the street to the wine shop. I saw a white man strike Bell with a bat. I think the first blow killed Bell. As he started to run he was struck down.

"I came back and walked over and found him dead, and then went and summoned his brother. I believe Epstein was the man who killed him."

LaFollette Here Today But Labor Will Hear Its Fighters on Sunday

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, LaFollette comes to Chicago.

The big cry of the Wisconsin senator, as he comes west, is that Coolidge's "Pennsylvania gang" is raising a huge slush fund to defeat him.

LaFollette wants this investigated.

But LaFollette will not demand an investigation of the "black jack" efforts of his "labor lieutenants" to pick the pockets of the workers in the shops in order to boost his own campaign fund.

The Borah committee, soon to meet in Chicago, to investigate campaign expenditures will not trouble itself about the information already published in the DAILY WORKER, telling of the threats against members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, by the officials of this union championing the LaFollette candidacy. The Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, repeatedly, in conventions, has voted for the class party of labor. This is one of the most militant organizations of America's workers. Large masses of its membership repudiate the idea that LaFollette has anything to offer the working class. They refuse to contribute to his campaign. But they must do it in the face of threatened discrimination and perhaps the loss of their jobs. The "black list" methods of the worst bosses are used to raised LaFollettes' campaign fund.

• • • •

LaFollette says he does not believe in the Dictatorship of the Proletariat, as it exists in Soviet Russia, to protect the Workers' Republic and build for a Communist Society, where all class distinctions will gradually fall by the wayside. But he does not raise a finger against the dictatorship of petty officials in the labor unions, created to advance his own candidacy for the White House.

LaFollette will complain that he has been ruled off the ballot in California. The Coolidge dictatorship, at Washington, wants to win on November 4, and it is using every conceivable political trick to put the victory over.

• • • •

LaFollette is doing exactly the same thing. It is his "Wisconsin gang" that rules at Madison, in the Badger state. H. L. Ekern is LaFollette's attorney general in Wisconsin. Ekern has been spending his time, during the last few months, planning to get the LaFollette electors on the ballot in every state in the nation.

But he has also been trying to keep the Communist electors off the Wisconsin ballot. He discovered the customary "technicality." The last minute ruling was invoked against the Workers Party. But the wave of protest that began to rise proved too overwhelming. Latest advices are that Ekern has changed his mind. LaFollette's attorney general was afraid of the fight that the DAILY WORKER would stir up over the nation, on this issue. He got cold feet, displaying the customary timidity of his class.

• • • •

The Wisconsin socialists, especially Victor L. Berger, like the LaFollittes, are opposed to the Dictatorship of the Proletariat. But the Milwaukee Leader, democracy-loving, apostle of "honesty in government," did not raise its voice against the threat of LaFollette's "Wisconsin gang" to deny the workers and poor farmers of the state the right to vote Communist on Tuesday, Nov. 4. The fight against LaFollette's "Little Business" dictatorship in Wisconsin had to be made without socialist aid.

In this respect the class struggle in Wisconsin, the "model commonwealth" of LaFollette, merely duplicates, on a very small scale to be sure, the revolutionary class struggle of the workers in Germany.

In the hour of its death agonies, not only the social-democratic Bergers, but also the middle class LaFollettes, rallied to the aid of German capitalism and helped bring it back to life, and to sustain its precarious existence. In the revolutionary battles of labor in Germany, the whole social-democratic and middle class veneer has been stripped away, and the Communist stand forth alone as the champions of labor's class interests.

• • • •

In Michigan the capitalist politicians rule the Communist candidates off the ballot on a "technicality," but the same politicians are stone blind to the same "technicality" as it applies to the LaFollette candidates.

The capitalists need LaFollette to fool the workers and poor farmers, a little longer; to prevent the workers and poor farmers, a little longer, from going over to the Communist ranks.

Thousands of workers in Chicago, trying to find a way to free themselves from the capitalist chains that bind them, will attend the LaFollette meeting in Chicago today. They will listen. Thousands of them will not be convinced. LaFollette cannot convince them, that he stands for their interests, because he offers no solution for their problems.

• • • •

Let every worker who attends the LaFollette meeting today, also join the multitudes who will make their way tomorrow, Sunday afternoon, to the great demonstration of the Communist Campaign, at the Carmen's (Ashland) Auditorium.

Only from the lips of the Communist speakers, Sunday, from the lips of Foster, Gitlow, Dunne, and others, will the workers hear the message of dellverance from capitalist misrule.

Against the enslaving dictatorship of Wall Street, with its middle-class LaFollette allies, the liberating Dictatorship of the Workers.

Against Wall Street's government the Soviet Republic. Thru capitalism's defeat the Workers' Victory.

YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE ACTIVE IN CLEVELAND

Start Organizing Campaign Among the Youth

By GEO. PAPCUN
(Special to The Daily Worker)

CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 10.—As is the case thruout the country, thousands of young people who ought to be in school, are compelled to work in Cleveland in order to make up for the inadequacy of the wages received by the family bread-winner.

The "Young Worker," official organ of the Young Workers League (organization of Communist working class youth), recently published an expose of the deplorable conditions of the young workers in the National Biscuit company plant in Cleveland. The article states:

Young Workers Toil Hardest.

"The young workers employed by the National Biscuit company do the dirtiest and hardest work on the place. Wrapping red-hot cakes that make your hands bleed, washing chocolate pans, loading trucks and conveyors."

Children as young as fourteen years are said to toil in this sweat-shop, under pretense of being sixteen, for nine or nine and one-half hours per day, and for wages which start as low as fourteen dollars a week and never get much higher.

The Cleveland Woolen Mills, the National Meda Lamp works, the steel mills are other places where young workers slave and toil to turn out profits for the bosses.

Educate Young Workers.

The Cleveland local of the Young Workers League is endeavoring to educate and organize the young workers to fight for their rights against the bosses and to help build up the Communist movement in order to finally abolish the capitalist system of exploitation of young and old workers. The local office is Room 312, Labor Temple, 2536 Euclid Ave., and local organizer is George Papcun. The West Side Branch meets every Tuesday at the Finnish Hall, 1303 West 58th St.

The branch is studying "Shop Talks in Economics." The East Side Branch meets every Friday, at Grdina's Hall, 6025 St. Clair Ave., and is studying "A. B. C. of Communism."

The student's branch meets every Sunday at 3:30 at the Freiheit Hall, 5311 Woodland Ave., and is also studying the "A. B. C. of Communism." Any young worker who wishes to take part in the revolutionary labor movement is invited to visit and join the league.

MANY INDICATIONS THAT NEW YORK SOCIALISTS ARE DESERTING THOMAS FOR CANDIDATE OF TAMMANY HALL

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 10.—In an authorized statement issued today, James P. Cannon, Workers Party candidate for governor, makes the following interesting comment:

"The announcement, published recently in the New York Times, that the socialist party has decided to abandon its campaign for Norman Thomas in favor of Al Smith is apparently the culmination of a series of efforts made by the LaFollette forces to secure the support of the industrial cities of the state, which are solid Smith territory.

Gets Orders from LaFollette.

"If the Times report be true, then there is no doubt that the socialist party is acting under the orders of LaFollette.

"There are many reasons to believe that LaFollette is finding the support of the socialist party a very doubtful asset, and that he is very willing to hasten its elimination from his ranks in return for something he considers much more substantial and desirable, i. e., the support of Smith and the Progressive" democrats.

"The support of the socialist party has laid LaFollette open to the virulent attacks of 'Hell-and-Maria' Dawes without the compensating assurance of support from any but a small and dwindling body of so-called socialist voters. 'Fighting Bob' has apparently become convinced of the weakness and ineffectiveness of the socialist party and has therefore been revising his tactics recently with a view of securing Smith's support.

Socialists Agree to Anything.

"Some weeks ago, the New York Trades and Labor Council indorsed LaFollette and Wheeler with the expressed understanding that this did not by any means imply an indorsement of any of the local Conference for Progressive Political Action candidates. This stand was approved by the LaFollette and socialist delegates in the council, thus leaving the door open for an indorsement of Smith by that body.

"Since then both the Central Trades and Labor Council and the New York State Federation, supported strongly by Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, have indorsed Smith for governor, without a word of protest or disapproval from the LaFollette or socialist delegates at these gatherings.

"The increasing dissatisfaction of the LaFollette forces with its socialist hangers-on, has been very plainly shown on a number of recent occasions. At a LaFollette meeting in the Town Hall, last week, Frank P. Walsh the chairman, openly praised the record of Smith, while Norman Thomas, the socialist candidate for governor, sat on the platform. Wheeler sounded the praises of Smith in his speech at Schenectady.

"In his speech, at Madison Square Garden, LaFollette carefully avoided all mention of the socialist party. However, he praised very highly the Smith housing program. The fact seems to be that the socialist party has been told to 'behave' if it would remain in 'respectable' LaFollette company. In line with this conclusion is the fact that Thomas himself has publicly approved of many things for which Smith stands, altho he differed very amiably on a few minor points. If the socialist party has abandoned the Thomas campaign in favor of Smith, it is throwing its machinery, or what is left of it, behind a man whom it has consistently criticised as the candidate of Tammany Hall, and of the capitalist democratic party.

Completely Compromises Principles.

"The socialist party, thru its support of LaFollette and now, apparently, of Smith, has confirmed my previous contention that it has completely compromised its principles and has therefore lost the right to call itself a party representing the workers. In New York, which was the center of its former strength, it has been forced to join with LaFolette and now, it seems, with Smith, in a final effort to regain its lost prestige. Instead it is being driven daily to further compromises and further retreats by the rapid desertion of its former followers and by the increasing pressure of the unsympathetic, anti-socialist elements with whom it has allied itself, thus leaving the field clear for the only party which has retained its working class character—the Workers Party.

"J. P. Cannon, Workers Party Candidate for Governor of New York State."

NEW PATRIOTIC SOCIETY TO BREW TOLERANT SPIRIT

Elihu Root is Already Well Pickled

UTICA, N. Y., Oct. 10.—Elihu Root who talked fiercely of [illegible] lings and sunrise shootings during the war, is the discoverer of the reason why most of the superpatriotic movements are barely able to scratch for a living in America. Having been a member of almost every refunct snooping and hanging patriotic society in his long life, Elihu Root is determined to take one more chance. He has joined the Hamilton-Jefferson Assn., confident that it has the germs of sturdy life.

Was Hard Hit.

"We have hit upon the life-giving properties," Root declares in well-known patent medicine trade terms "the lack of which killed other great patriotic movements."

The great discovery is the giving of membership in equal numbers to Roman catholics and prostetants. The society is to brew patriotic spirit and tolerance.

Always Active Fighters.

The candidates for the county offices and the state legislature have for years been active fighters in the working class movement. Cleveland workers will see in the list many names of those long and well-known for their revolutionary spirit and devotion to the working class.

The Workers Party is the only party besides the capitalist republican and the democratic parties to have candidates in the field in this country. Despite all the noise of the would-be progressives and have-been socialists, they have left the field entirely clear to the old parties except for one candidate for congress.

There is only one course left for the worker who wishes to express his working class solidarity and his opposition to the present system, and that is to vote the Workers Party (Communist) ticket. Of course the Workers Party won't win, but let those who are anxious to be on the winning side, answer the question who wins when the old parties win? Better be a rebel and in the minority than to vote for your oppression and exploitation.

Barbers Want Woman Customers.

MILWAUKEE, Oct. 10.—A trade war between Wisconsin barbers and owners of womens' hairdressing shops will be taken to the state legislators at Madison next session. The barbers backed by the Journeymen Barbers' union will fight a proposal that would prohibit them by law from doing any haircutting or trimming for women customers. Since the barbers' union voted to admit woman members at its international convention in Indianapolis in September, union shops in Wisconsin will be particularly qualified to perform all tonsorial work on women.

JUDGE GARY IS COOLIDGE AID

chinery. Gary and Morgan are also the most influential directors of the Pullman Palace Car company and the First National Bank of New York.

"Coolidge is not trying to play politics," said Gary recently in eloquently praising his personally-owned candidate. "But Coolidge is trying to promote and protect business and business prosperity."

It is worthy of note that the firms which the Gary-Morgan interests are backing are the most notorious labor-smashing corporations in the country. The Pullman company, of which J. P. Morgan, George F. Baker, his partner, and Harold S. Vanderbilt, are directors, in the latest strike in the Pullman car works, imported scabs from all over the United States, enlisted dozens of Chicago policemen to arrest and molest the strikers, in order to perpetuate a neck-breaking speed up and wage reduction system. Florence Pullman has long used her millions wrung out of the steel car builders, to promote the interests of her husband Frank Lowden and other crooked republican politicians.

The International Harvester company, which is now practically shut down, throwing thousands of workers on the streets of Chicago, starving and penniless, has also ruthlessly broken strikes and fired men who talked unionism. Thomas W. Lamont, the partner of J. P. Morgan, who is also a director of the Crowell Publishing company, which has been placed on the unfair list by organized labor, represents the Morgan interests on the board of directors of the Harvester trust.

All Typical Coolidge Backers.

These men, Gary, Morgan, Lamont, Baker and their fellow Wall Street capitalists, are typical Coolidge backers. And while yesterday it was disclosed that John Davis, democratic candidate, had been forced to spend 15,000.00 of his own money before getting some rich "angel" to back his campaign, Coolidge has from the start of the campaign been well supplied with Wall Street money.

The workers in the Gary steel mills, in the Pullman Car shops and the Harvester trust factories are well acquainted with the labor baiting "company unions" which the heads of the steel trust have instituted. The industrial councils of the International Harvester company, the company unions in Pullman and Gary are well known by the workers to be nothing more than a net work of spies which root out union men who preach real working class organization and fire and blacklist them.

It would take too long to write down the numerous interests represented by the directors of the United States Steel corporation. Suffice it to say that the above mentioned companies run numerous scab coal mines in Kentucky, exploit Negro labor in the south, and Mexican labor on the sissal fibre fields of Mexico. Thru George F. Baker, the steel trust is interlocked with numerous railroads and gas and electric companies. The Western [illegible] company, which hires the cheapest obtainable labor and crushes unionism with an iron hand, is also interlocked with the steel trust. Morgan is on the executive committee of the Chamber of Commerce of New York State, an organization which devotes its energies to cheapening the wages and crushing unionism.

Gary Made Doctor of Laws.

Not only does Judge Gary control the workers in the steel mills and his other trusts, but Gary goes after the ideas of the children of the workers by his meddling in the educational system. Gary's platoon school activities are well known. Gary is also watching closely the teachings in the colleges of the United States.

"We saw Judge Gary being made a learned Doctor of Laws at Northwestern University," Upton Sinclair Sinclair tells us in his "Goose Step." "But at the university of Pittsburgh they made him a doctor of science, which is supposed to be a real degree.

If you could plumb the depths of Gary's ignorance on every subject except making money and killing men, you would appreciate the absurdity of this academic performance."

Sinclair tells how Judge Gary was brot to the University of Syracuse to "preach his piety to the students who have chapel every morning, and gave the newspapers his speech in advance, after feeding pious poison to the graduating class." Gary, who obtained his Northwestern University degree on the strength of being a trustee and heavy contributor to that university, also controls the Carnegie Institute of Technology at Pittsburgh.

Sinclair tells how an instructor was fired from Carnegie Tech for permitting the secretary of the Pennsylvania State Federation of Labor to speak to a group of the students. The order for the dismissal of this professor came from the United States Steel corporation, and the Carnegie faculty had to obey their owners and fire the instructor.

Then There is Foster.

Against this record of the Wall Street backers of Coolidge—union breaking monopolists, gougers of the workers, controllers of their education; is the record of William Z. Foster, as the best organizer of the steel workers known to the trade union movement.

The town of Gary is just one of the steel trusts' numerous properties, and the steel trust backs Coolidge in "keep down the reds," and prevent the workers from organizing to better their conditions.

Communist Issues in Britain

The MacDonald government has fallen on an issue raised by the Communist Party of Great Britain—an issue that is close to the life of the labor movement and every British worker, an issue growing out of the Communist campaign against imperialist war—quashing of an indictment of sedition against the editor of the Workers' Weekly, official organ of the Communist Party.

Closely linked up with this issue is the question of the recognition of and treaty with Soviet Russia—another matter brought forward by the Communists which the great mass of organized British workers supported.

Harold J. Laski, writing in The Nation of October 1, on the British Trades Union Congress says: "The hostility of the Congress to the Communists was marked. All their resolutions were voted down. . . ." We published yesterday an article on the British Trades Union Congress by Harry Pollitt—one of the acknowledged leaders of the boilermakers' union—which does not coincide with the liberal Laski's statements, but more of this later. The fact remains that the British labor movement, which is not Communist, and the British labor party, which is not Communist, must now fight British capitalism on clear cut demands which the Communists have made the center of the struggle.

The social-democratic idea that a party must have a parliamentary bloc to achieve leadership in the struggles of the workers has been badly shattered by the recent events in Britain and the Communist policy of a correct revolutionary theory, immediate demands that fit the needs of the workers coupled with constant activity in the daily struggles of the workers, has been vindicated again.

Another result of Communist activity in the trade unions was the granting of extended powers to the Trade Union Council making it possible for this central directing agency of the labor movement to call the unions into action without delay when it becomes necessary.

The immediate aims that the Communist Party of Great Britain has achieved then are to give a clear working class character to the coming election campaign and to place the Trade Union Council in a position to solidify the entire labor movement in the fight against British imperialism.

All this has been done altho, as Mr. Laski says, "the hostility of the congress to the Communists was marked."

May we be allowed to say that when the congress greets the Communist delegates with marked cordiality the revolution will not be very far away but—the liberals will.

Speeding Up Textile Workers

The Lawrence textile capitalists are installing a new system which forces each weaver to attend to 72 looms instead of 18. He is given three unskilled helpers and the companies get a neat increase in profits. Three-quarters of the weavers become unskilled laborers or join the ranks of the unemployed.

Here is a perfectly plain and easily understood example of standardization and specialization in industry that is typical of a whole process by which individual skill becomes a drug on the market.

The textile industry can be made to pay its workers a good wage and abandon its man-killing speed-up system by an industrial union taking in every man and woman in its employ. The weavers may cling to their craft union but what good will it do them when three-fourths of them cannot get jobs as weavers? The situation today is that, far from having an industrial union the workers are split up in any number of small and ineffective unions with less than ten per cent of the workers in the industry organized.

The employers have taken advantage of this to organize company unions which they promptly present with wage cuts, reckoning rightly that not much resistance is to be expected from workers who have not enough spirit to own their own union.

The textile industry presents perhaps the finest specimen of the fate of workers who continue to believe that the capitalists invest their money in industry for charitable reasons. Its immense profits are in direct proportion to the helplessness of the workers and its open terrorism in the strikes into which the workers are forced has so far gone unpunished.

The spirit displayed by the more militant workers in these strikes shows that they want organization and will fight for it if given the proper lead. There should be started in the textile industry a system of shop committees linking up the workers in the various centers that will give a basis for industrial unionism and that will end for all time the suicidal policy of dual unionism with its warring officials.

Our Program for the Teachers

Superintendent McAndrew came here from New York behind a barrage of newspaper publicity in which the "strong, silent man" note was plainly discernible.

His attitude since his arrival has been one neither of strength nor silence. A vociferous and peevish autocrat who takes his orders from the silk stocking element (we pause here. Do teachers wear silk stockings?) he has from his first day in office tried his feeble best to break up the teachers' union, reduce the teachers to the status of a kitchen girl in an aristocratic English family and conduct the public school system as a private business institution owned by the Chicago Tribune and the packing trust.

The teachers are in fighting mood and in line with the best procedure of allaying open discontent in use by all to-getter business concerns the school board gets behind McAndrew by considering a plan to reduce the teaching staff by 1500. It is expected that this will cause some hesitancy on the part of more militant advocates of teachers' councils and other evidences of the vestigial remains of freedom to which McAndrew is opposed.

The teachers have displayed some considerable willingness to fight and it is likely that on an issue of this kind they can get the support of organized labors. We suggest that they perfect their organization and make McAndrew and the lay-off major issues in an ultimatum to the school board or whatever body is responsible for McAndrew.

They should demand the ousting of McAndrew and no reduction of forces. The alternative should be a strike of the 11,000 Chicago teachers.

This is our program for the teachers. It is simple but like most simple measures it requires something more than speeches of protest to become effective. It requires organization and intelligent action—the only two things that will win for the teachers or any other section of the working class.

Waltham Watch Workers Revolt

The strike of 3,000 employes of the Waltham Watch Company in the Massachusetts city named after and owned by this concern is an encouraging incident in the American struggle. These workers have been out for eight weeks against a reduction in wages, they have organized in the Jewelry Workers' International Union and are maintaining a picket line in which men, women and girls have equal rights in preventing scabs going to work.

This is the first experience of these workers with a labor organization and it is more evidence that even where company welfare systems are in operation, these do not do away away with wage cuts, the need for unions and the possibility of organization when the unions are on the job. It is noticeable, in the stories of the strike, however, that the organization which has been formed is the result of the activity of local militants. It is very probable that the officialdom of the union to which the workers now belong considered organization work impossible. Many of these strikers have been employed in the Waltham factory since it was established. They are typical American workers yet they have organized and challenged the right of their bosses to control their destinies.

The organization of the Workers (Communist) Party in Boston, near which Waldham is located should be active in this strike. If they are not they are remiss in their Communist duty.

The DAILY WORKER stands ready to give what support it can to the Waltham strikers and it wishes them every success in their splendid fight.

Of Interest to Steel Workers

One of the most important campaigns conducted by the militants in the trade union movement is now under way in the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers. This union is small, its officialdom is hopelessly reactionary but it occupies a strategic position in the steel industry.

Its membership, in strikes like those which took place in Newport and Yorkville has demonstrated its will and its ability to fight. It is this union that should be made the center of organization in the steel industry and if the militants get power it will be made a rallying ground for the steel workers.

For these reasons the campaign of the militants in the A. A. I. S. T. W. is of primary importance. Their program is a document of genuine interest to every steel worker, organized or unorganized, because it breathes in every line the new spirit of revolt against reformism and reaction and in addition proposes a concrete, workable plan of action for the steel industry.

Curing Communism

Foodstuffs, cereals, meat and dairy products have advanced in price about 12½ per cent since April 1 according to the latest reports. On the theory that this advance has gone into the pockets of the farmers the capitalist press posits a return to rural prosperity and the routing of the reds to whom the farmer listened when he was in the throes of deflation.

Without in any way deprecating the influence upon farmers of higher prices we wish to point out that a rise in the price of foodstuffs is about the poorest way we know of to counteract Communism. The high price of bread has been a major factor in all the revolutionary uprisings in Europe beginning with the French revolution and down to the Russian revolution and it is the industrial population, affected chiefly by the rise of foodstuff prices, that makes revolutions.

We will not be at all displeased if American capitalism continues to have faith in raising the price of foodstuffs as a cure for Communist propaganda.

Germany Is "The Sick Man of Europe"

By JAY LOVESTONE.
(Eighth Article.)

STRIPPED of all its technical verbiage and over-advertised "altruism," the Dawes' plan means that Germany is to be "the sick man of Europe" for an indefinite number of years.

The Bismarcks of German finance, in league with and under the guidance of the overlords of American and Entente imperialism, will bind the German working masses hand and foot. Unless the working class rises in revolt or presently unforeseen circumstances intervene, the dawn of the Dawes' day in Germany will mark the loss of the country's economic freedom for a least half a century.

Dawes' Plan Enslaves Germany.

The Dawes' plan is hailed by the American capitalist class as a program of liberation. In fact, it is the most gigantic system of enslavement that has yet been framed. Sixty million people have been sentenced to the fate of a vassal nation, a colony of international high finance.

When we say a colony we do not mean merely that the American or any other group of capitalists will have undisputed control of the German market or trade. When we speak of Germany becoming a colony of international capitalism under the leadership of American imperialism, we mean that the German industries, the German resources, the German customs, the German taxes, the German currency, the whole German economic life in its widest ramifications will be dominated by a foreign imperialist junta. When we speak of the aim of the Dawes' plan to turn Germany into a colony of international capitalism whose mainspring today is the American employing class, we speak of a program aiming to reduce Germany to the politico-economic status of Haiti, Santo Domingo, or any other crushed colonial peoples subject to the dictates of an American receivership.

Thus the railroads, the banks, the currency, the customs revenues, the taxes, will be controlled by and the basic industries mortgaged to a group of international financial pirates whose plundersome ventures will be piloted by the Wall Street band. Thirty per cent of Germany's national income is to be surrendered annually to bulge the coffers of the American and Allied capitalists.

This is the most notorious pawnbroking affair in the history of the world. Sixty million people have been condemned to be pawns. The very export surplus on which the whole vicious scheme rests translates itself, in practice, only into long hours, low wages and degrading standards of life and employment for the working masses of Germany. The only stability the American and other capitalist interests are seeking in Germany is the stability of harrowing poverty—the stability of fodder-wages to perpetuate the rule of the employing class.

Workers to Pay for War.

The steel rod of the opposition by the German capitalists to the allied imperialists being paid for the costs of the last war has been the desire of the Stinnesses, the Thyssens, and the Schachts to make the German working masses pay all of the money as well as all of the blood cost of the infernal carnage. Consequently, it is clear that the success of the Dawes program rests on the decisive defeat and subjugation of the German working class. In this light it is not difficult to understand why the German capitalist class has, on the whole, found the Dawes plan so acceptable! We cite the fact that at the last joint session of the industrialists' and employers' federations of Germany, held in Berlin on March 27, 1294, two weeks before the details of the Dawes scheme were made public, the following opinion of its chairman, Dr. Kurt Sorge of the Krupp corporation, prevailed:

"In principle the fulfilment policy of Wirth was correct. But Wirth's home policy was wrong. We, too, must stand for the fulfilment policy, but only under certain conditions. These conditions are the following: The political influence of the workers' trade unions must disappear entirely. The federal government must under no condition deal henceforth with the unions. The eight-hour day must be struck off the statute books. Collective bargaining on the part of different unions must be prevented and the government's right to arbitrate in labor disputes diminished.

"All undertakings of the state, especially the federal railways, must be turned over to private capital. German industry is ready to make sacrifices only then, if these conditions are absolutely accepted. It can turn its attention to foreign questions only if it is certain that the domestic policy is absolutely clear."

Certainly the Dawes plan suits the German employing class interests.

Intolerably Long Hours Planned.

Because of the close alliance between the saffron social democratic party and the Stinnes class in Germany, the eight-hour day which was won by the workers thru the blood of the first post-war revolutionary struggle is fast disappearing. According to a survey made by the German Federation of Trade Unions more than one-third of the undertakings in Germany are already working on a longer basis than the forty-eight hour week. More than eighty per cent of the textile workers, 45 per cent of the metal workers, and 44 per cent of the chemical workers are, as a result of this treachery, operating today more than forty-eight hours a week.

Let us call upon the National City Bank Bulletin of September, 1924 to tell us how the American capitalist receivers view the future of the German working day under the Dawes regime. We read:

"Considering first the ability of Germany to pay, it is evident that this will depend upon high production by the German industries coupled with low consumption by the German people, thus enabling a great industrial product to be exported. Following the analysis farther, it probably means long hours in the industries, or at least the working day which will yield the largest product. The late Hugo Stinnes insisted that Germany must go back to the ten-hour day in order to pay reparations. The ten-hour day was the rule in Germany before the war, and the country had no excess of merchandise exports over imports then. Its problem now is to create a very large excess, hence it must produce more and consume less. In order to produce more and begin at once, longer hours would seem to be the only sure resort."

Wages Slashed to Bone.

The well-known European correspondent, Robert Dell, has recently described the condition of the German working class in this fashion in one of his dispatches to the Baltimore Sun: "Meanwhile the conditions of the German workmen, when they have work, are little better, as a rule, than those of Chinese coolies."

But the Dawes plan will tend to lower even this despicable condition. Hugo Stinnes, Jr., the wealthiest man in Germany, plainly told the Berlin Associated Press correspondent on August 31, 1924; in speaking of the Dawes plan: "Applied to the life of this nation, this means that the standard of living for every German must be lowered to a degree fixed by the assessment exacted from us under the treaty of peace." Let no one have any misgivings as to the democratic notions of Stinnes when he talks of the question of every German's standard of living. Herr Stinnes means [illegible] workingman's standard.

Standard of Living Lowered.

Turning once more to the frank view of the whole Dawes matter by the Rockefeller-Morgan National City Bank, America's biggest bank, we are treated to a more specific dose of the truth about the case. We are told: "In order to hold down consumption it will be necessary that wages shall be low as compared with the cost of living, which may be accomplished either by means of low money-wages or by taxation which raises the prices of everything the people have to buy. Taxation is the method by which the government takes over the share of production which must go for reparations."

Benjamin M. Anderson, economist of the Chase National Bank, also admits that "the standard of living in Germany during the earlier years, at least while reparations payments are being made, must necessarily be lower than it was before the war. . . ."

"That this lowered standard of living will tend to drive the German workingman out of the country" is the opinion of Rufus S. Tucker of the United States department of commerce. Says Mr. Tucker: "The low wages and high costs of living that must result from the imposition of taxes high enuf not only to run the government but also to pay reparations will make Germans all the more anxious to migrate, or at least to obtain temporary employment outside of Germany."

Worse Than Versailles.

Truly, then, who can question the estimate of the Dawes plan made by Comrade Karl Radek when he declared: "The experts' report is a more definite and a more correct instrument for crushing the German people than the Versailles treaty, because it subjugates the whole economic life of Germany to allied capital."

FARRINGTON FAMILY RAIDS TREASURY WHILE JOBLESS MINERS FACE STARVATION

(Special to The Daily Worker)

Springfield, Illinois, October 10, 1924.

While bank burglars are busy making rich hauls in the various banks thruout the state, certain of the official family in the miners' union of Illinois are seeing to it that nothing of this sort is going to happen to the miners' treasury. They are busy beating the burglars to it by getting there first. The latest quarterly report just issued covering the period for April, May and June shows the treasury to be in the worst condition it has ever been for many years.

Some Swindle Sheet.

It is apparently the purpose of those in charge to loot the treasury so that in the event of their failure to get re-elected they will leave nothing but a wrecked organization and a bad memory of what was once the most militant labor organization in America.

While members who have paid in the money have been out of work all summer and some of them all last winter, starve and get put out of their miserable homes for failure to pay rent, Farrington charges up an average of over seven dollars a day for hotel bills including the time he stays at home. He charged up for hotels for the three months' period $642.60 and for train fare $901.70, and for livery (he rides in the Yellow taxis) $105.00 in addition to charging up $414.91 for alleged "telegrams while travelling."

Expensive Bric-a-Brac.

This latter item is smaller than he sometimes charges up as during the strike of 1922, when he was supposed to be working without salary, he charged up over $1,500 for alleged telegrams while travelling, but nobody got the telegrams nor does the Western Union have any record of their being sent. This was an average of over five hundred dollars a month in addition to the amount charged up to the office for telegrams. Farrington is the most expensive ornament the miners have ever had in the position of president. It is common talk that he makes more out of his expense account than his salary which is almost five hundred a month.

Treasury Thins—Farrington Fattens.

For many years the miners carried a strike balance amounting to from one to two million on hand all the time. This has now been reduced to less than five hundred thousand dollars or less than five dollars apiece for the hundred thousand members, while the expense account has mounted until it is four hundred per cent higher than it was before Farrington got at the pie counter in this state and began to accumulate wealth. It is generally said now that as the miners' treasury began to fade Farrington's wealth began to increase and if this is so, as seems likely, there has simply been a transfer of the funds supplemented by what the operators contributed to the worthy cause of helping out a very capable agent in return for favors granted.

The report shows that the income for the three-month period was $255,699.09 and the expenditure $345,074.19 or a loss for the three months of $89,375.10. At this rate the treasury will be empty soon and, no doubt, assessments will be put on to keep up the official family if the present rate continues. Of the alleged amount of $869,993.85 on hand more than half of this is not available and much of it will never be collected. Among the items listed as assets we find $275,000.00 for the building in which the headquarters are located, $56,310.12 as invested in the defunct Central States Co-operative Society, in which they have sunk a million or more dollars and of which John H. Walker was president.

$5,000.00 was loaned to District 10 (state of Washington) and it is well known this will never be collected but was loaned at a time when it was supposed to help beat Lewis in the fight with Farrington. Walker et al: $46,000.00 is a loan to The Oklahoma Leader in addition to $20,393.10 paid the same publication for printing the "Illinois Miner" for three months, and $3,537.55 paid to the same paper for job printing.

"Family" Expense.

To pay the official family for three months and keep them in expense money, padded hotel bills, trips made on paper, family expenses, lawyers, stool pigeons, flunkeys, dollar tips, and graft it took $104,114.05. Farrington takes trips to the Pacific coast occasionally and these trips cost money. His honeymoon trip alone is said to have taken $932.65 out of the treasury to say nothing of the numerous other trips to California and elsewhere to recuperate from his strenuous labors.

"My God, How Money Rolls In."

Then new cars are required every once in a while. Scab painters must be employed to paint the homes of officials. Members of the family are employed and listed under "stenographic work" usually running from $80.00 to $150.00 per quarter depending on the amount of pin money needed for household expense. The miners' treasury must also take care of the son of the secretary-treasurer and while a rubber stamp has supplanted the secretary-treasurer it comes in handy to be able to put the family on the payroll.

Aid Non-Union Power Plant.

Again it requires quite a lot of money to pay for light, heat and gas for the non-union light and power company while the city of Springfield has a city owned plant that employs union men and has forced a reduction in rates to the city of Springfield amounting to fifty per cent, but the miners' officials still patronize the non-union unfair concern like they do the yellow cabs.

If ever a proper check up is made it may be possible that the treasury could be built up out of the money refunded and taken illegally in padded expense accounts. It is apparent now that the organization is on the downward trend and when the treasury is gone the files that have been attracted like those attacking a molasses barrel will be leaving for other pastures. "After me, the deluge" seems to be the motto now.

ALL POWER TO WORKERS!

Foster Brings Communist Message to Detroit

DETROIT LABOR GREETS FOSTER TUESDAY, OCT. 14

Plan Demonstration for House of the Masses

By OWEN STIRLING.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Oct. 9.—William Z. Foster, candidate of the Workers Party of America for president, will carry the Communist message in this campaign to the working men and women at a mass meeting in the House of the Masses, the Detroit Communist center, Tuesday, Oct. 14, following two weeks after Ben Gitlow's effective opening of the campaign in Michigan and one week after Robert Minor's meeting here.

In Midst of Court Fight

Foster will find the Workers Party in the midst of a court fight to compel the election commissions in the counties of Michigan to place the Foster-Gitlow electors and four candidates for state offices on the ballots Nov. 4.

The presidential electors and state candidates were certified to all the county election commissions and the secretary of state at Lansing, after a state convention had been held and a state central committee chosen in conformity to the primary election law. But the officials are hiding behind a curtain of election law phraseology in an effort to outlaw the Communist campaign.

Foster's message, however, in the form of the automotive industrial center, will be heard by all who can find sitting or standing room in the Workers' House of the Masses auditorium. The district will use every possible means to enter the election. But Foster's meeting is expected to show up the bureaucrats of the present regime, with their bans and books of tricks, cannot keep the Communists and Workers from the workers even if the polls are closed to Communists. The DAILY WORKER is growing more and more popular. With the stimulus of the campaign, thousands of working people in Detroit are reading and circulating the Workers Party leaflets. After the Gitlow and Minor meetings hundreds went to their homes to talk and think earnestly of what they said about Calvin Coolidge, Charles G. Dawes, John W. Davis, "Brother" Charles Bryan, Senators Robert M. LaFollette and Burton K. Wheeler, on the one side, and the Workers Party, the party's candidates and the Third International, on the other side.

Recall Communist Trial

Foster in carrying his campaign to Michigan, also, enters a state in which two years ago he was tried for the alleged violation of the state anti-syndicalism law, following the raid on Bridgeman. One of the clauses of the Workers Party state platform calls for the blotting out of this anti-working class law, the weapon of millionaires and stool pigeons who fear the Communists are endangering their jobs and privileges.

Foster led the great steel strike of 1919 and has since visited Soviet Russia twice.

He was born at Taunton, Massachusetts, Feb. 25, 1881. His father was Irish and his mother English. He is one of a family of 23 children.

Foster has had a stormy and adventurous career, having worked at many trades and traveled all over the world. From his earliest youth he has been an avowed revolutionalist, first becoming a socialist, then a syndicalist and now a Communist.

Foster has written many books and pamphlets, understands several languages and in this election campaign is presenting the program of the Workers Party, as its candidate for president.

Foster's speeches are full of interest to the worker and deal in a revolutionary manner with the issues of the present election. His denunciation of the old parties and LaFollette is uncompromising.

Foster will advocate, in addition to the immediate steps of the Workers Party program, the ultimate necessity for the dictatorship of the proletariat and the organization of Soviets.

Dawes Plan Has Backing of Washington

By JAY LOVESTONE.
(Seventh Article.)

From the very moment that the Best Minds of the American employing class saw that conditions were ripening for their open, large-scale participation in and domination of the European politico-economic affairs, the United States government put all of its powers and resources at the disposal of these rulers of finance and industry to help them establish and make secure their receivership of Germany.

Government Backs Bankers.

Within two weeks after the "unofficial" American members of the experts' committee, the Banker-Generals Dawes, Young and Robinson signed their names to the reparations report, President Coolidge spoke of the proposed German loan before the Associated Press in New in these words: "Sound business reasons exist why we should participate in the financing of works of peace in Europe."

Shortly afterward the Federal Reserve Board advisory council declared: "The council recommends that when the new German note-issuing bank, provided in the Dawes plan, is organized, the federal reserve banks take the steps necessary in order to facilitate the rediscounting in this country of properly protected German gold bills. . . ."

On August 14, 1924, Coolidge reaffirmed his indorsement when he stated in his speech of acceptance: "I shall do what I can to encourage American citizens and resources to assist

"AT THE FACTORY GATES," IS SLOGAN OF DETROIT YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE

By BARNEY MASS.

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 10.—"At the Factory Gates" has become the popular slogan of the local Young Workers League. With the beginning of the campaign against the local plant of the National Biscuit Company, the Detroit league membership has taken a keen interest in this work, resulting in the focusing of all attention of the organization on external activity.

This particular campaign is only an example and the initial effort of the local organization in the right direction. The city executive committee of the local league, laid plans at the last meeting of that unit, to extend and intensify the factory campaign activity.

The Detroit league is not going to be outdone by any other league in the country, in concentrating on this essential and very important work.

The only means thru which the Young Workers League will be come a mass organization are the practical application of the youth demands and their popularization to the thousands of young industrial workers. The Detroit Young Workers' League is mobilizing its membership for this work and any league unit in the country will have to step lively if they want to play prominently in this work and build up their organizations within their vicinities. All together in "Bringing Communism to the factory youth."

WORKERS PARTY IS ALONE IN MAKING THE CLASS FIGHT FOR LABOR IN STATE OF MICHIGAN

By CYRIL LAMBKIN.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 10.—The population of Michigan is approximately four millions, about 40 per cent urban and 60 per cent rural. For election purposes the rural percentage is still greater because of the great number of alien workers that make up the populations of the large industrial centers, particularly Detroit with its million inhabitants.

Michigan is a republican state. But it has a progressive tradition. The first settlers of Michigan were the poor farmers and townspeople of the New England states who left to escape their debts.

A progressive professor of law in one of the Michigan colleges always pointed with pride to the fact that in the days when men were imprisoned for debt Michigan had the most liberal debt laws. The progressive tradition continued down to 1920. Since 1920 a definite trend to reaction is clearly discernible.

Rise of the Auto Industry.

The social and economic background of "progressivism" is to be found in the rise and development of a new great industry, the automobile industry. This industry, peculiarly concentrated in Michigan, grew under conditions of "free" competition. The demand for this new product was so great and the profit so enormous that most of these enterprises were self sufficient financially. Ford, the outstanding man of the industry, still is. The aggressive leadership of this young industry, the pioneers, were "progressive" politically because in their quest for ever greater profits they were opposed to the old machine which protected the older and vested interests. This group dominated the political minds of the population.

Today, however, there are no pioneers in the automobile industry. The pioneers of yesterday are the aristocrats of today. The marvelously rapid development of this industry can be seen from the fact that the short space of 25 years has seen the birth and complete development of this great industry. The industry now has its own vested interests.

Prominent Agricultural State.

Next to the northwest states, Michigan ranks perhaps first as an agricultural state. But because its agriculture is more diversified than that of the northwest states and also because it had an expanding market in the nearby industrial cities growing with unparalelled rapidity as a result of the growth of the automobile industry Michigan farmers did not suffer to the extent their brothers in Minnesota, the Dakotas and the other states did.

Consequently the non-partisan league made no inroads here. But there are thousands of abandoned farms here to testify to the fact that the lot of the Michigan farmer is far from enviable. Recently also we have heard the loud cry from the farmers of this state that the taxes have been eating up their income, the taxes ranging from 25 to 42 per cent in many counties.

There can be no question that the Michigan farmer will soon begin to seek political expressinoon either alone or jointly with labor. At present aparently he is still in the ranks of the regular republicans. To what extent he will be shaken by the La Follette movement it is difficult to state. There are no signs of a drift to LaFollette, if the stand of the farmer leaders is to be taken into consideration.

No leader of the farmers has come out for LaFollette.

Labor Weak in Michigan.

Labor is woefully weak in Michigan. There is hardly another industrial state that is as notoriously open shop as is Michigan. Detroit is particularly so. And it will remain so until a genuine effort is made to organize the chief industry of the state, the automobile industry. Exclusive of the railroad workers there are probably not more than 40,000 organized workers in the state. The State Federation of Labor at its last convention a year ago reported only about 80 unions affiliated. The Detroit Federation of Labor has less than a hundred unions affiliated.

Politically the organized labor movement is just as weak and backward. The railroad unions were until this year part of the republican machine. It is significant that at no time did the socialist party in Michigan gain that influence among the American workers that was attained in many cities in Ohio and other states.

The Detroit Federation of Labor in 1920 supported the farmer labor party, but this year it returned to the fold of Gompers, and is vigorously supporting LaFollette. And it must be admitted that Labor has swallowed the LaFollette bait as it had never before swallowed anything.

Only One Class Party.

The revolutionary movement—the Workers (Communist) Party—is not very strong. But it has become clarified and has no competition. The socialist party is practically non-existent, and the proletarian party consists of a few old self-admiring individuals who have not yet become tired of hearing themselves talk.

The Workers (Communist) Party is going forward in its efforts to educate and organize the workers for the final struggle, and in the present campaign it is taking advantage of every opportunity to point out the LaFollette illustion. In the course of the last year particularly it has gained a number of very valuable new comrades.

There can be no question that the future belongs to the Workers Party even as it does everywhere else in America and as it does to the Communist International everywhere in the world.

W. H. JOHNSTON DEFENDS UNITY WITH MASTERS

All the Co-operation Done by Workers

The Federated Press is running a series of articles on the "B. & O." plan, which is the result of a conspiracy between the management of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad and William H. Johnston, president of the International Association of Machinists, to turn that organization into a "company union" and become part and parcel of the B. & O. system with the exception, of course, that the railroad owners keep all the profits and the union workers do all the work.

No more vicious scheme than this was ever foisted on any section of the American trade union movement. It is more dangerous to the trade union movement than the Chicago Landis award. That at least is open and unashamed in its attempt to smash the unions.

But this B. & O. plan of the ex-Salvation army drum thumper William H. Johnston, is represented to be the highest development of trade unionism, in the form of class-collaboration, or if that term is too unwieldy, let us say that the union instead of using its power to fight the boss for more of the product of the toil of its members, actually lends itself to fasten the shackles of wage slavery tighter on their limbs and reduces the workers to the status of chattel slaves. Much has been written of the spectacle presented by the black slaves of the south who fought in the southern armies during the civil war, but their ignorance and the power of the masters prevented them from choosing the lesser of two evils. There is no such excuse for the treachery of William H. Johnston. It is nothing else but a clear case of selling out the organized workers to the railroads.

The following article is the second of the series. The first was a result of Tom Tippet's interview with the Glenwood Shopmen's co-operating committee. We are publishing this apology of Johnston's secure in the belief that his defense of the B. & O. system is the strongest indictment of it and of his own treason to the working class.

By Federated Press.

"Briefly I might summarize the development in co-operation on the Baltimore & Ohio first as the acceptance by the B. & O. management of the standard shop craft unions as the proper agencies representing the shopmen," says Pres. William H. Johnston, International Association of Machinists, in discussing the Glenwood, Pa., experiment which has been extended to the other shops of the road.

Class Collaboration.

"But instead of being simply tolerated as a necessary evil with a purely negative attitude towards the welfare of the railroad," Johnston asserts, "the standard craft unions are now regarded as desirable agencies in the stimulation of human efficiency on the B. & O. Thus the ordinary negative attitude which results from the usual status accorded the shop unions by most managements is here displaced by a constructive helpful attitude towards the management.

"On the basis of this understanding we have among other things placed at the disposal of the B. & O. a service to help improve the morale of the mechanical department thru our union organizations. It is our purpose to align the locals, shop federations, districts and system federations of the B. & O. shopmen definitely behind a constructive program of improved shop, yard and roundhouse operation, better maintenance service, increased production, safety and the elimination of waste.

More Work Less Work!

"The management on the other hand has assured us that it will do what it can to make this improved maintenance-economy count in the direction of steady work the year round. Thus the men need have no fear that better production on their part is going to result in furloughs just that much sooner.

"The idea underlying our service to the B. & O. may be compared to the idea which underlies the engineering services extended to railroads by large supply corporations which have contracts with these railroads to furnish let us say, arch brick, superheaters, stokers, or lubricating oils. The union members furnish their services to the best advantage to all. In response to the recognition accorded us and by virtue of the agreement or contract existing between us and the management it becomes peculiarly feasible for us to take steps between management and men and create as it were an all-pervading, collective will for the major purposes of railroading, namely efficient satisfactory service to the public, a fair return to the investors and adequate wages and steady employment for the workers.

United Front With Enemy.

"The effect of the new policy of co-operation on that road is clearly manifesting itself in the splendid service the road is rendering the public, the high economy with which it is being operated and the excellent morale which prevails thruout the rank and file.

"The legitimate standard genuine unions of the shopmen are more than eager to offer the same positive co-operation to any railroad management which is intelligent enough and courageous enough to see the inevitable logic of events and on whose railroad conditions are ripe for such co-operation. I maintain that such a management would never again or long let retains its good senses desire to see the affiliated shop crafts effaced from the scheme of things on its road."

Value "Penn" Road.

FOOD WORKERS BACK COMMUNIST CAMPAIGN IN NEW YORK CITY

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Saturday, Oct. 25, the food workers in the Bronx will hold a campaign meeting at Workers' Hall, 1347 Boston Road, in support of the Communist candidacy of Foster-Gitlow. This meeting is being arranged under the auspices of the Foodworkers' Section of the Trade Union Educational League. Prominent speakers including the local candidates and several rank and filers of the foodworkers will address the meeting.

LIBERAL PARTY IN ITALY BREAKS WITH FASCISTI

Salandra Fails to Win Aid for Mussolini

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LIVORNO, Italy, Oct. 9.—The liberal party of Italy, in convention here, has rejected by a vote of more than two to one a resolution favoring collaboration with the Fascisti.

This action was taken in spite of the fact that Salandra, former liberal premier, called on the delegates to help Mussolini.

Salandra had returned to Italy from Geneva, where he had been representing Italy at the congress of the league of nations, when the fascisti premier notified him that the liberal party was in danger of repudiating the policies of the government.

The convention also went on record in favor of the dissolution of the black-shirts, which, they pointed out, form an army outside of the regular army and are called upon whenever acts of violence are to be committed. The black-shirts have been used chiefly as agents of the government against the working class.

Claim Spanish Prince Can't Take Care of Himself in Paris

PARIS, Oct. 9—The prefecture of police issued an order today for the expulsion from France of prince Luis Ferdinand of Spain.

"A matter too delicate to explain gives us reasons for the expulsion," the chief of the foreign department of the prefecture said. "But the prince must leave France before tomorrow noon."

On October 3 the Paris Matin printed a story that the Spanish crown prince, while sightseeing at night was lured into a house and nearly robbed by two sailors. The police intervened just in time. Later the police revealed that, instead of being the Spanish crown prince, the real near-victim was Prince Luis Ferdinand, a cousin of the Spanish king.

Night Work Abolished.

NEW LONDON, Conn., Oct. 9.—Striking workers of the Edward Bloom Sil Co., are returning to work now with night work abolished and increases of two cents on single end satins, one cent on double end satins, two cents on double end wool satins, and one cent in single end wool satins. The weavers have been out for three weeks.

FINE RESPONSE TO APPEAL FOR SACCO-VANZETTI

500 Workers Pledge Aid to Victims

Over five hundred working men and women of Chicago crowded into the West Side Auditorium to protest against the murder of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, the two Massachusetts workers, who have been condemned to die on a framed-up charge of murder; called by the Workers Party of America.

William F. Dunne, editor of the DAILY WORKER, and Comrade Alexander Bittelman, reviewed the events which led up to the conviction of Sacco and Vanzetti on a trumped-up murder charge.

They told how these two labor organizers had taken up the cudgels for another worker, Salredo, who was in the clutches of agents of the department of justice. They told how the man whom Sacco and Vanzetti had tried to defend was later thrown from a window on the fourteenth story of an office building by men who were acting as tools of the government. Organization and agitation in every city was urged by both speakers.

The apathy of the labor officialdom of the United States towards the fate of Sacco and Vanzetti was scored by Comrade Dunne.

"Nothing could furnish better evidence of the backwardness of the labor movement in America than that the Saco-Vanzetti case is still on the order of business of the courts," said Comrade Dunne. "We must begin a new campaign—a campaign whose slogan is to be: Sacco and Vanzetti must not die!"

Comrade Max Salsman, of the Young Workers League, urged his hearers not to permit the government to go thru with this murder by allowing it to throw over the whole matter a veil of silence.

"When Sacco and Vanzetti first came to trial, the workers of foreign countries stormed the American legations and demanded freedom for the two prisoners. This movement had that if the trial were put off for a number of years the workers would forget. But the workers did not forget."

Antonio Presi, editor of "Il Lavoratore," Italian Communist daily, made a stirring appeal to the workers to bring Sacco and Vanzetti back to the ranks of the labor movement. His views were echoed by cries from the audience demanding "Down with the murderers of the workers."

Cheers greeted Pietro Nigri, an Italian worker who had been sentenced to deportation for his activity in the Industrial Workers of World. Nigri told the audience that the attempt to do away with Sacco and Vanzetti is but another link in the long chain of atrocities which the capitalist rulers have committed in their unending warfare against militant workers.

Comrade Alexander Bittelman, acting as chairman of the meeting, announced that the workers present had given $94.89 to help the Sacco and Vanzetti defense.

Fine Type of Christian Layman Talks About Use of Cold Piece of Steel

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the secretary of the National Council for Prevention of War, Mr. Frederick J. Libby, exclaims with horror at the outspoken utterances of Mr. Wilbur, the verbose secretary of the navy.

The special declaration of Coolidge's naval chief, that got under the celluloid collar of the God-fearing pacifist, Libby, was something to this effect:

• • • •

Wilbur said that in a speech at San Francisco. Libby calls it "Ludendorffian insolence." But why pick on Ludendorff? He is no worse than the Pershings, the Leonard Woods and other American experts in human slaughter. Ludendorff was part of the German branch of world capitalism. But the American money lords, today, have greater ambitions, both at home and abroad, than the kaiser ever had, even in his rosiest days.

The declaration of Coolidge's navy secretary is a good statement of American ruling class policy, not only in its war upon the workers in this country, but in its dealings with subject nations everywhere. And there are few nations on the globe today that have not been colonialized, in greater or less extent, by the Wall Street money power.

• • • •

Cold steel for the textile workers.
Cold steel for the silk strikers at Paterson.
Cold steel for the coal miners.
Cold steel for the railroad shopmen.
Always the cold steel of ruling class bayonets for workers who demand higher wages or the shorter workday from their oppressors.

• • • •

Cold steel for the Haitians.
Cold steel for the Hawaiians.
Cold steel for the Filipinos.
Cold steel for the Santo Domingans.
The cold steel of the United States army and navy, at the beck and call of Morgan's debt collectors.

• • • •

Morgan's government at Washington tried cold steel on the liberated Russians under Soviet rule. But the Russians met steel with steel, at Archangel and Vladivostok, in North Russia and in Siberia. The cold steel of Morgan's government lost out. Soviet Rule still lives and daily grows more powerful.

• • • •

Morgan's government supports the cold steel of the counter-revolutionary Chinese military cliques, that can be bought to wage war upon the rebellious masses in their own country. Always the cold steel with the imprint of the dollar mark upon its blade. But in China, as in Russia and Siberia, the Soviet Power, hot tempered against capitalist misrule everywhere, faces the imperialists of the world and they are afraid.

But let the God-fearing pacifist, Libby, speak some more:

"No official utterance of a member of an administration for years has been so outrageous as the sentence spoken by the head of the navy department:

"'There is nothing so cooling to a hot temper as a piece of cold steel.'

"A few days before this was delivered, Secretary Wilbur was entertained by the Washington Congregational conference in Seattle. The invitation to the dinner said: 'As you know, Secretary Wilbur is a fine type of Christian layman . . . He was prominent in California, the leader of large Bible classes in Los Angeles and San Francisco. He is the kind of a man ministers and churches delight to honor.'

"The best we can say for Secretary Wilbur is that he had just come down the coast on a battleship surrounded by battleships. He was drunk with the sense of power and he spoke while in his cups."

• • • •

Let the heathen world laugh at secretary of the Navy Wilbur, fine type of Christian gentlemen.

Every nation, with few exceptions, that took part in the last world war, was a Christian nation. Millions of men were slaughtered in the name of every Christian denomination. Preachers and priests of every religious brand prayed for victory for their respective ruling classes.

• • • •

Libby may prate boldly in days of peace, and he will win some applause from those who follow Christian hypocrites in subsidized pulpits. But we doubt not that Libby will be cheering for murder and Morgan, when the next war breaks.

• • • •

It is so in all wars.

And it will so continue until workers take over all power and decide for themselves to live in a world-wide human brotherhood.

• • • •

The war to end all wars is the war of the workers upon their oppressors. When that war has been won, in every land, then peace will come to the world for the first time in all history.

In that war to end all wars, the conscience stricken, pacifist Libby will be on the side of Wilbur, Coolidge and Morgan. That is where all organized and entrenched religious denominations will be.

But the workers and farmers will win their emancipation in spite of them all. Wilbur did not speak "while in his cups." Wilbur spoke as he visioned the growing struggles of America's revolutionary workers, finally crowned with complete victory.

Wilbur spoke out of "the great fear" of the ruling class to which he belongs, to defend whom he was called to Washington to become the chief of the navy of Morgan's United States of America.

DAILY WORKER SPECIAL LOCAL EDITIONS GROW

48,000 in Three Days; 82,000 for Next Week

No feature of the DAILY WORKER activities, has met such instantaneous success as the special local editions.

These editions of which the complete front page carries matter only of interest to the city for which they are printed—and in some cases carrying inside pages, of news for local interest—are now running at a high peak.

Big Chicago Edition.

Wednesday night a special local Chicago edition of 30,000 to precede a Foster-Gitlow campaign meeting at which both candidates are to speak, left the presses for a three-day sale and distribution thruout the city. Thursday night has seen the special Illinois state edition of 10,000 and one of 5,000 for Detroit.

The Detroit edition, leaving tonight makes the second for this city that Comrade Owens is putting on the live wire map. This completes a record of four editions of the DAILY WORKER totaling 48,000 in three days.

District eight of the Workers Party has taken full advantage of this splendid means of campaign activity. Milwaukee has already distributed 10,000 of a 20,000 Wisconsin edition. Chicago received 30,000 and tonight sees the Illinois edition of 10,000. Milwaukee is laying plans for another edition of 10,000 and the Lake County steel district one of 15,000, making a total of 85,000 for this district under the leadership of the fighting Dane—Comrade Arne Swabeck.

Two Eastern Issues.

Next week will see giant editions going to two eastern cities. To precede the Foster meeting of October 19 in New York, the local will receive the record special of a total of 50,000. This will also make the third edition for the local and district at whose head is district organizer Chas. Grumbein and complete a total of 74,000 for one city. A record that shows the lead over all locals.

Philadelphia makes its first special of real size. The stamping ground of Blustering Butler is going to receive seed for the growth of future Communists.

Special Goes to Pittsburgh.

And to add fame to a state of infamous record in labor annals during the same week Pittsburgh will receive a special of 2,000 to continue the good work. District organizer I. Blankenstein for the territory is going to give the home of steel a jolt.

The success achieved in all cities that have seen these Red Specials opens another page in addition for future local editions for local campaigns in and out of election season. Something seems to have been started that is going to be mighty hard to stop.

Connecticut Party Activities

Weinstone on New Haven Green.

This Saturday, Oct. 11, William W. Weinstone, of the Workers Party, will speak at the Central Green bandstand, New Haven, Conn., at 8 p. m. He will discuss the election campaign. This meeting has been preceded by similar meetings, with Rebecca Grecht and Juliet S. Poyntz as the speakers. The meetings have been held at an interval of two weeks.

Simons in Stamford.

Thesecond of a series of open air meetings in Stamford will take place this Friday, Oct. 10, at 8 p. m., on the Town Hall steps. The previous meeting with Simon Felshin as speaker, was attended by a large crowd. The speaker will be District Organizer William Simons.

Carlson in New Haven.

This Sturday, Oct. 12, Carlson will hold two meetings. At 2 p. m., there will be a membership meeting of the Young Workers Leagues in Connecticut. Comrades from New Haven, Hartford, Bridgeport, Stamford, and other points will attend.

The evening meeting, which like the other, will take place at the Labor Lyceum, 38 Howe St., is a campaign meeting, which is being run under the auspices of the Young Workers League, with the co-operation of Local New Haven, W. P. of A.

Foster in Music Hall.

For the Foster meeting on Oct. 23, Thursday night, Local New Haven has secured Music Hall, with a seating capacity of 1,500. Publicity and advertising are being arranged on a large scale, in order to insure the success of the meeting.

Splendid Polish Meetings.

Organizer Kowalski, of the Polish Federation, has addressed several good meetings in Connecticut. His meetings in Bridgeport, New Haven and New Britain were well attended. As a result, two new members were admitted to the Polish branch in Bridgeport, and four in New Haven.

RUSSIAN COMMUNIST DAILY, NOVY MIR, CALLS ON LABOR TO WIN NEW READERS FOR THE DAILY WORKER

EDITOR'S NOTE—Here is another editorial, published in our foreign-language Communist press, urging support by foreign-language speaking workers of their English-language daily, the DAILY WORKER. Similar editorials from other Communist publications will appear in future issues. The Novy Mir says:

• • • •

(Editorial in Novy Mir, Russian Communist Daily, Tuesday, Oct. 7)

The DAILY WORKER: Its Importance to the American Workers and the Revolutionary Labor Movement.

The name of the central organ of the Workers Party of America is the DAILY WORKER. The DAILY WORKER is daily informing the American worker about the struggle between Labor and Capital in this country. Every day it carries the message of Communism to all parts of the United States, interpreting events from the viewpoint of the everyday interests as well as the final purposes of the working class.

The DAILY WORKER is unifying the American workers of all languages, unifying them with the language of their common needs, hopes and aspirations. It is the spokesman and leader of the American workers, their mouthpiece giving voice to their demands and needs. Without it the American workers would be like a man without a tongue. A revolutionary party and an effective struggle cannot be thought of without such an organ.

Without it we would find it difficult to recruit workers into the unions and fighters into the party. The voice of the Workers Party could not reach the masses without the DAILY WORKER.

But in order that The DAILY WORKER should function properly and serve as a lever to raise the masses to an understanding of the aims of the proletarian struggle, the masses must daily see it and read it. It is imperative that it should reach the workers. The responsibility to distribute the DAILY WORKER rests upon the party members. We must accept this responsibility and live up to our party duty.

Comrades, boost the DAILY WORKER. You distributed the "underground" literature at a time when it was dangerous. All the more must you as a party duty boost the DAILY WORKER, now that this does not involve any risk.

The masses will be with you when they become permeated with the Communist spirit. Permeation of the masses with the Communist spirit is possible only thru the dissemination of the living Communist message—of the DAILY WORKER and Communist literature.

Comrades, boost the DAILY WORKER!

Foster election campaign meeting Sunday afternoon, October 12, at Ashland Auditorium, Ashland and Van Buren. Branches of the party and Young Workers League shall appoint special squads to distribute at factories and shall assign territory to every member of the branch. 30,000 copies of the Special Chicago Edition have thus far been ordered. Branches can phone in at State 7985 additional orders at the rate of $8.00 per thousand. How many will your branch buy?

FOSTER, GITLOW AND DUNNE SPEAKERS AT BIG COMMUNIST CAMPAIGN RALLY THIS SUNDAY

By JOSEPH MANLEY.
(Campaign Manager, Workers Party.)

The Chicago Workers Party will hold its first great Communist rally Sunday afternoon, Oct. 12, at Ashland Auditorium. William Z. Foster, presidential candidate of the Workers Party, will be the principal speaker on this occasion. Foster's running mate, Benjamin Gitlow, will also speak.

The big gathering will be presided over by William F. Dunne, recently back from Soviet Russia, where he was a delegate to the congress of the Communist International and the Red Trade Union International. Comrade Dunne is now the Workers Party candidate for governor of Illinois.

Foster Best Known in Chicago.

William Z. Foster is known thruout the country for his activity as a trade unionist and a revolutionist. Well known as Foster is in the rest of the country, it is at home in Chicago where he is best known and has had his largest audiences. It was Foster's work amongst Chicago's railroad men, packing house workers and the steel workers of South Chicago, that earned for him a national and international reputation. The railroad men, thousands of whom he organized into the Carmen's Union, the packing house workers whom he organized and fought for—helping them to get the eight hour day—the steel workers whom he led in the great steel strike, are following the Communist presidential candidacy of Foster with great interest.

The Chicago Workers Party organization has spared on effort to make a huge success of the Ashland Auditorium meeting on October 12. An attractive program has been arranged. The Freiheit Singing Society and the Englewood Y. W. L. Orchestra will supplement each other in entertaining the big audience. Gordon Owens (colored Comrade) candidate for congress in the First District will also be one of the speakers.

Meeting to Reach Masses.

This rally will do much to get the Communist election program of the Workers Party before large masses of Chicago's workers.

SOVIETS TALK BUSINESS TO UNITED STATES

Threaten to Withdraw Their Trade

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, Soviet Russia, Oct. 9.—In view of the increasing orders being placed by Soviet Russia for America cotton machinery, the Soviet government is threatening to transfer the purchases to other countries unless Washington drops its hostile attitude.

American influence against Soviet Russia has been particularly hostile in France and in China. In France, Hughes succeeded temporarily in delaying the Soviet recognition negotiations. In the Far East the Soviet government scored a signal victory over the American manipulators.

A new and interesting turn to Soviet-American relations is being given by the conflict over insurance companies. The Soviet government is insisting that the foreign insurance companies protected by governments which have been so anxious to defend the interests of the big investors, pay the policies and premiums on the hundreds of thousands of holders, poor holders, in Soviet Russia. These claims now total more than 125 million dollars. The principal companies effected are the New York Life, the Equitable and L'Urbaine.

RAIL CLERKS' DEMAND FOR RAISE HEARD

Point Out Profits of the Railroads

By LELAND OLDS.
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

Railroad profits totaling $10,000,000,000 in the last 12 years and now running at approximately a billion a year were stressed by E. H. FitzGerald, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, in opening the wage hearing before the United States rail labor board. Following FitzGerald's presentation the railroads will present their side of the case.

FitzGerald cited the increasing prosperity of the railroads as ground for a reconsideration of present wage rates by the board. How long, he asked, will railroad owners go on making a billion a year before the railroad workers get consideration of their request for a living and saving wage?

The hearing involves the request of the brotherhood for a restoration of the 1920 wage rates. During the severe depression of 1921 and 1922 the board cut wages and asked employes to bear and forebear until the carriers were again on their feet.

FitzGerald said that in view of the acknowledged fine condition of the railroads today the board should make good the implied promise. He used national industrial (employers) conference board as well as government figures to show that wages of other wage earners were close to or above the 1920 level. He showed that the profits of the railroads in 1923 were with a single exception the largest in their history. Since 1921 their net profits have increased by more than 58 per cent and in addition they have increased their expenditures on equipment by more than $200,000,000. The railroad employes have failed to share in this prosperity. Their wages today fall more than 10 per cent short of as good a living as the wages of 1895 provided.

Figures based on government data showing how far the wages of railway clerks and station service employes have fallen behind the cost of living and other wages were presented by FitzGerald:

	Percent increase since 1895
Railway clerks' wages	131
Station service employes' wages	125
Cost of living	152
Average railroad wages	165
Trainmen's wages	199
Average wages in outside industry	164

Workers Underpaid.

Compared with standards fixed by experts as necessary to support families according to American standards of health and comfort, he contigued, the wages of these railway clerks and station service employes mean lack of absolute essentials of food, clothing and housing for the families affected.

Such extreme poverty results in the employment of mothers, lack of decent care for children, an appalling increase in the infant death rate and children forced into industry before their education is complete. It means undernourished bodies and starved souls. These unfortunate results can be avoided only by a steady and scientific readjustment of wages upward toward a living wage, FitzGerald pleaded.

THE POWER COLUMN

Twice every week—this column uncovers to your view the motive power behind the DAILY WORKER. Here for the interest and inspiration of every reader—and especially the DAILY WORKER agents and committees—are tried and proven suggestions and accomplishments to drive the DAILY WORKER to further conquests.

Here is POWER—the power of brain and effort of men and women of the working class who not only believe—but ACT!

D. W. B. U. LOCALS GROWING

BOILERMAKER BECOMES BRICKLAYER

HUNDREDS of members of organized Labor are joining the Bricklayers' Union. Members of the Steamfitters', Carpenters', Shoemakers', Barbers'—even Office Workers (delicate pencil pushers and ledger jockeys) are joining the hard working overall gang in the D. W. B. U. (DAILY WORKER Bricklayers' Union).

These members of the D. W. B. U. still remain in good standing in their old unions and are active in behalf of the new one—to help the old one. Everyday we are receiving subs from active trade unionists to "Build the DAILY WORKER" and give added strength to the daily paper leading the fight for the American Labor movement.

Some building bricklayers send in subs gathered everywhere. And a good job it is! Some have not yet realized the possibilities of getting bricks in a most important brickyard—RIGHT WHERE YOU W-O-R-K! This brickyard is the most promising in which to secure material to "Build the DAILY WORKER."

Read this letter from a boilermaker who has become a bricklayer. His deep interest to "Build the DAILY WORKER" and to build the Labor movement (notice he puts them together) is too good to be improved by comment. For obvious reasons his name is omitted:

Richmond, Va., October 4, 1924

Dear Friends: Enclosed find money order for $2.00 and sub blank for the DAILY WORKER for three months FOR ONE OF MY SHOP-MATES. I was expecting to have at least four but this being the first of the month, rent and other things due, the others could not spare $2.00 but they promised to subscribe next Saturday. And so by next Saturday I am in hopes of at least four more.

I am a boiler maker in the .....Locomotive Works. We have no organization of any kind the before 1921 we were about 100 per cent in the boiler shop and tank shop. The machinists were strong too. One never hears unionism talked now, they seem to have lost all confidence in the Labor movement so you see I have a hard time getting their interest aroused. I would like to get the whole two thousand or twenty five hundred to subscribe.

But lots of them talked to me like I was a book agent. One told me the other night (I am on the night force), "I would like to help you out, but I can't—winter is coming on." I am afraid I make a poor propagandist. If you can give me a little dope it will be highly appreciated. This is the first time I ever tried to sell anything but my labor.

Yours truly.

This builder of the Labor movement modestly says: "I am a poor propagandist!" We are going to look hard for more of them. And he wants "a little dope" to help him along. Alright, here it is: Keep it up! We are going to ask others to be "poor propagandists."

This list, like a Mack Sennett bathing beauty, is "easy on your eyes." Here are proven builders—men and women working to build up the standard bearer of the American Labor movement. Carrying bricks is a pleasure to these comrades laboring in a campaign to "Build the DAILY WORKER."

L. E. Katterfeld, business agent for Local New York, had a large campaign under way to "Build On It" in New York before the D. W. B. U. was organized. Live members of the Labor movement there were already working to "Build the DAILY WORKER." A banner going to the branch of the Workers Party or the Young Workers League securing most subs will be awarded at the Foster meeting on October 12. These members—PRESTO—became BRICKLAYERS! Today and until November 7 you will find them in the D. W. B. U. They're BRICKLAYERS.

Comrade Katterfeld writes us the brick campaign is "Quite a nifty idea." But so was it "quite a nifty idea" to have his local the first local in overalls in the campaign to "Build the DAILY WORKER."

Comrade Swabeck, district organizer for district No. 8, sends us a sub and writes, "Enclosed is my first brick returned, hoping they will fall thick and heavy from now on." Not so bad for a slogan—make them fall thick and heavy from now on!

SMALL IS HIT BY DECISION AGAINST I. C.

But There's Still Chance to Protect Friends

By KARL REEVE.

The Illinois Central railroad company has at last heard a decision rendered against it, after successfully stalling off the attorney-general of Illinois state for sixteen years.

Len Small, governor of Illinois, will be sorry at the news that Judge Samuel C. Stough of the Circuit Court of Grundy County has decided the suit instituted by governor Deneen in 1908 in favor of the state.

For governor Small is a director of the Illinois Central railroad, and stands to lose much money thru the judge's decision.

Still Chance to Cheat.

But a decision against such a powerful combine as the one which owns the Illinois Central does not always mean that the money is collected. Governor Small can be of good cheer. After election, when the political capital of winning a big suit has done its work in putting attorney general Brundage in a good light before the voters of the state, perhaps Len Small's railroad will find a means of cheating the state of Illinois out of its taxes after all.

Small's railroad was able to clog the wheels of justice for 16 long years. Even then several of the findings of Judge Stough were favorable to the railroad in which the governor is interested. However, the decision that the Illinois Central has for many years been dodging millions of dollars tax payments which were due the state, if carried into effect, means that the Illinois Central must pay seven per cent of the receipts from their charter lines to the state. The Illinois Central has managed to escape this payment for many years.

Backed by Labor Officialdom.

Len Small, who is "ex-officio" director of the Illinois Central, which means that during his term of office he does not officially vote, but takes part in all deliberations and decisions fo the road as director, is running for re-election this year. Small's most valuable support is coming from the reactionary officers of the Illinois State Federation of Labor, and from Frank Farrington, president of the Illinois miners. If Small, with the aid of his labor faker backers, can get himself re-elected, he may yet be able to save his colleagues on the Illinois Central their money.

And Small is associated with a very powerful group of capitalists. The board of directors of the Illinois Central railroad include, in addition to Small, William Vincent Astor, Cornelius Vanderbilt, R. S. Lovett, H. W. De Forest, Stanley Field, R. W. Goelet, and C. A. Peabody.

May Still Reward Friends.

Small has recently thrown over the LaFollette crowd and come out openly, along with his fellow financiers, including Elbert H. Gary, as a backer of Coolidge and Dawes. Small, who established the most corrupt record in modern political history as governor of Illinois, is however, indorsed by the Illinois Federation of Labor officials, who at the last convention of the Illinois Federation of Labor pushed thru resolutions indorsing his record, and Small has the indorsement of John Fitzpatrick, Oscar Nelson, Ed Nockels, and the Chicago Federation of Labor.

The state has won the victory in exposing, after 16 years' delay, the tax-dodging practices of the Illinois Central railroad. But it is doubtful, with governor Small retaining his position as governor, whether it will be easy or expedient for the state of Illinois to collect the millions of dollars due to it.

MICHIGAN HITS NEW BLOW AT WORKERS PARTY

Bridgeman Convention Saw First Attack

By CYRIL LAMBKIN.

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 9.—The state of Michigan has just struck its second blow at the Communist movement by ruling the Workers Party off the ballot.

The first blow was struck more than two years ago when it joined with the federal government in raiding the convention of the Communist Party at Bridgeman and arresting many of the leaders.

Blow Will Prove Boomerang

But just as the first blow not only failed to accomplish its object of destroying the Communist movement, but on the contrary strengthened it, so the second blow will prove a boomerang that will strike back at the capitalist class.

The Michigan election law contains a provision that the state central committee of each political party is to be elected at the first party convention held in the odd years. Obviously, this is meant for established parties and not for parties appearing on the ballots for the first time. As a matter of fact, such was the interpretation given our party representative by the office of the secretary of state.

The party held its state convention at which it nominated 15 electors and four candidates for state offices and elected a state central committee. The state central committee certified the nominations to the secretary of state and the 83 county election commissions.

LaFollette Ticket Gets O. K.

Such, in fact, was the procedure followed by the LaFollette forces. But the LaFollette ticket was not ruled off the ballot.

Without doubt, the capitalist government was glad of the opportunity to bar our party from the ballot. However, there is reason to believe that the state government which represents the big capitalists intends indirectly to strike at LaFollette also.

The politicians have not the courage to strike at him directly. But they reasoned that if we go to court and get an adverse ruling it would apply to LaFollette as well as to us.

The party has engaged counsel and is going to fight to enter the elections in this state this fall. There is a bare possibility that a favorable order will be had. It is more likely that the decision will be unfavorable and we shall then have additional proof that democracy is an illusion.

"LAW AND ORDER" AS SHE IS

DETROIT, Oct. 9.—The Detroit police department, accompanied by columns of publicity in the local press, conducted a city-wide "clean-up" lasting 72 hours, all policemen working 12 hours a day instead of eight. There were 1,185 arrests, of which 278 were prohibition cases. The day after the "clean-up" ended 11 stick-up men working in three cases robbed corporation paymasters of $26,391, in the hour between 11 and 12 o'clock.

Foster Urges Real Workers' Co-ops.

Editor's Note: In the following article, written especially for the DAILY WORKER, William Z. Foster, candidate of the Workers Party for president, states the Communist position on the co-operative movements. Foster declares himself in favor of the co-operative movement, when they are run by real workers' and farmers' organizations. Foster points to the co-operative movements in Soviet Russia as an example of co-operatives used as a means for strengthening workers' and farmers' control of government.

By WILLIAM Z. FOSTER.
Communist Candidate for President.

IN the matter of co-operatives, I would say, speaking as the candidate of the Workers Party, the party of the Communists, for president, that I am whole-heartedly in favor of genuine co-operative organizations of the workers. The Communist movement, thru its leadership of the most powerful co-operative movement in the world, that of Soviet Russia, has proved its devotion to the co-operative movement as a part of the general movement and not for profit, have proved emancipation from capitalist exploitation, and also the soundness of its leadership.

Co-operatives, when based solidly upon the needs of the exploited masses, controlled by them, and run for service and not for profit, have proved themselves powerful instruments in the hands of the workers and working farmers in the struggle against the gigantic organizations of the big capitalists.

It is necessary, however, that the co-operatives shall be controlled and directed by the rank and file workers and working farmers, and not by the capitalists, the professional bourgeois experts and intellectuals. Otherwise, the co-operatives will cease to be effective fighting organizations against the enemies of the working class and will be turned into organs of class collaboration, attempting to reconcile fundamental class conflicts, and therefore sabotaging the struggle against exploitation. Genuine co-operatives always work in the closest contact with the political and economic organizations of the workers and working farmers, and assist in their daily struggles. All labor union members, unorganized workers, and working farmers should do everything in their power to build up fighting co-operatives, which, in addition to their everyday tasks must militantly favor a workers' and farmers' republic as a necessary pre-condition to the full development of the co-operatives.

In conclusion, the Workers Party pledges its most energetic assistance, in every field of action, to the co-operative movement, upon the basis of the class struggle. We point to the glorious achievements of the co-operative movement in the Union of Soviet Republics as the proof of the soundness of our program. The homo of the most powerful and highly developed co-operative movement in the world is Soviet Russia, where the power of the capitalist class has been broken and the foundations are being laid of a Communist society.

Freiheit Singing Society Dance!

The Freiheit Singing Society of Chicago announces that it will hold its annual dance on Saturday night, Oct. 11, at Roosevelt Hall, 3437 W. Roosevelt Road, and invites every Young Workers League and party member to come and join in the merrymaking. The Freiheit dances are always a success socially. Come and meet the bunch.

course of three lectures to be given quarterly. These lectures are to deal with the elements of Communism and the program of the Workers Party. Thus we will make certain that new members will be better acquainted with the Communist position.

In addition, lectures are to be sent to the branches on questions based on the decisions of the Fifth Congress of the Communist International. In this way in addition to the regular courses in education, branch education can be extended.

The city central committee meeting indicated that the activities of the party were extending in all directions and that the party as a whole and its branches were going forward. Industrial activity must be increased many fold, and is now receiving more attention than ever before. The DAILY WORKER must be built at all costs. This is the big job before us. To aid in that direction the proceeds of the November 7th Soviet Anniversary Celebration will be given to the DAILY WORKER.

Every member of the party is expected to become a member of THE DAILY WORKER BRICKLAYERS' UNION, by subscribing to the DAILY WORKER or getting another worker to subscribe. Membership in the Bricklayers' Union is compulsory and comrades who fail to join this union by getting subscribers in this organization drive to build up THE DAILY WORKER BRICKLAYERS' UNION must answer to the party.

Get into the drive. Build the DAILY WORKER. GET into the membership drive. 66 new members at the last meeting is better, but it is only a start. INTO THE UNIONS! ORGANIZE against the reactionary bureaucracy and win the unions to Communism. Build the Workers (Communist) Party!

Next meeting of the City Central Committee, Tuesday, Oct. 21 at 723 Blue Island Ave.

By MARTIN ABERN.

Fifty-six new members were taken in by the Workers Party, Local Chicago, at the City Central Committee meeting, Tuesday, Oct. 7, which indicates that the membership drive is now on in earnest in Chicago. This meeting was the best attended and most lively one that has yet been held. Future signs point to even greater activity.

New members taken in were from the following branches: Douglas Park English, 1; Northwest English, 4; North Side English, 5; Irving Park English, 2; South Side English, 2; Englewood English, 1; Spanish Branch, 8; Lithuanian No. 5, 3; Greek Branch, 3; Ukrainian No. 1, 8; Italian 31st Ward, 1; Russian Branch, 2; Lake View Scandinavian, 1; Finnish, 8; Italian W. S. No. 1, 1; Lettish, 5; Lithuanian No. 2, 1.

A goodly number of union members were included in the 56, among them being four painters, machinists, typographical, tailors, bricklayers, furriers, window washers, musicians, one each. There were also a number who will have to join unions.

Spanish Branch Organized.

A Spanish-speaking branch of eight, made up mainly of Mexican and Central American comrades was organized by Comrade Gomez. The branch looks very promising. All but one of them are stock yard workers.

Comrade Tom Bell, T. U. E. L. local organizer, reported in detail on the industrial activity in the various groups. The Amalgamated Clothing Workers' group was in the best shape and was carrying on an excellent struggle in the union and in the shop, especially in connection with the election campaign, was collecting funds for Foster and Gitlow and getting out propaganda.

Discussion on policy in trade unions arose on the action of the Amalgamated Food Workers' group failto put up a Communist candidate and a Communist program in the elections. The matter was referred to the City Executive Committee to bring in a detailed report at the next C. C. C. meeting.

In the case of a peculiar situation also existing among a number of party machinists the city executive committee is also to take up this matter for final action.

Strengthen T. U. E. L.

More than ever the reports indicated that the T. U. E. L. groups must be strengthened and built and the minority movement in the unions organized against the reactionary and bureaucratic union leadership. This reactionary leadership, recognizing the force of a revolutionary opposition is using every effort to break down the left wing movement. Our party comrades must fight back and organize more strongly than ever within the unions and continue the struggle to win the trade unions to Communism.

At the next general meeting of the T. U. E. L. the machinists' and carpenters' international conventions will be taken up as well as the policy of the left wing in the next national convention of the American Federation of Labor. Meanwhile, union members, get to your group meetings; failure to attend will result in party action.

Shop Nuclei Among Clothing Workers.

A program is being worked out to organize shop nuclei among the Amalgamated Clothing Workers party members and in the near future it is expected that a number of shop nuclei will be in existence. Thus the first actual and practical steps toward reorganization will have been taken.

Some branches have not yet sent in their industrial registration. Only about 70 per cent of the registration cards in properly handled. Industrial trade union and shop nuclei work, we must have complete industrial registration of every member. Shock in your industrial registration.[6]

The Young Workers' League delegate reported that the Chicago Youth Workers League was doing better work than at any time during its existence. The league was reorganizing completely on a basis of the working area branch as a preliminary to complete reorganization on shop nuclei basis. The reorganization is to be completed by November 1, and 22 new nuclei are to be established within three months after the reorganization. A factory campaign on all mailing order houses is to be started in November.

Election Campaign Activity Increasing

A detailed report on the last activities in the election campaign was given by Comrade Abern.

On the whole, he said, the Workers Party in Chicago had responded well to the campaign to place Workers Party candidates on the ballot. All of the candidates went over and in the congressional districts we were successful in obtaining sufficient signatures to place five out of seven candidates on the ballot. (See other columns of the DAILY WORKER).

All the districts made excellent attempts in the work, District 5 alone not doing by any means as well as it should have. The Young Workers' League did especially good service in this campaign and in every district were responsible for a large share of signatures. The league is to be congratulated for its efforts. District 1 did a good job, the Englewood Y. W. L., South Side English and Scandinavian doing the best work.

District 4 also went over, with a number of individuals, reported Comrade Zokaitis, being mainly responsible for putting Comrade Podkulski on the ballot.

District 6, altho failing to get its candidate on the ballot, did very well towards the end of the campaign and if the comrades in that district had started out as well, there is no doubt that they would have gotten the district over.

District 7 made the best job. This district where Comrade Hammers mark was candidate was the best organized; altho having the most signatures to obtain, 4,000, the job was done. Karl Marx Scandinavian was one of the branches that did exceptionally well.

District 8 went over, with the Mid City English and Russian Young Workers League doing the main part of the work, and Italian, Greek and Polish comrades contributing their share.

District 9, Jack Johnstone candidate also went over. The North Side English, Finnish branch and Karl Liebknecht Y. W. L. doing the best work, tho there were contributions all around from the rest of the branches.

Altho the party organization responded well to this first part of the campaign there were many organizational defects, due mainly to our inexperience in this kind of Communist parliamentary activity. In future work of this sort we can be certain that even much better results will be obtained because of these experiences and the possibility of organizing the work much better beforehand. Nevertheless we can feel that a good start has been made and now the job is to put over the second part of the Communist election campaign, Abern concluded.

Many Meetings Being Held.

The congressional districts are now holding meetings in all of their districts for the candidates. District 1 Gordon Owens, candidate, will have a very large meeting Oct. 30, and will also distribute at that time, 20,000 leaflets on the Negro workers.

District 2, 3 and others have already organized meetings. These are in addition to regular street meetings being held and which, as Comrade Maurer reported, were still being held very successfully in many sections of town.

Branches must see to it that their delegates get to the congressional district meetings and participate actively in this work.

Foster-Gitlow Meeting on Sunday.

On Sunday, Oct. 12, the big election mass meeting of the year will be held at Ashland Auditorium at 2:30 p. m. Comrades William Z. Foster, Benjamin Gitlow and William F. Dunne to be the main speakers.

20,000 DAILY WORKERS are to be distributed for this meeting and comrades are requested to call at the local office to receive their share for distribution at factories and from house to house. This special Chicago edition also contains the state and local program which will very likely be issued in leaflet form.

To help at this meeting, we also wish the branches to send as many girls as possible. They should report at 1:30 at the Ashland Auditorium.

The straw ballot carried on by Workers Party, Local Chicago and the DAILY WORKER was very successful and was an excellent means of carrying on our propaganda, getting closer to the factory workers and getting the DAILY WORKER before them. The special DAILY WORKER Chicago edition will be distributed at the factories where we had held the straw balloting.

Poll Watchers Needed for Nov. 3.

Poll watchers will be required for the November 3 elections. Branches are asked to send in the names of comrades who will be able to act as poll watchers on that day. It should be easy to get a day off since it is common for workers to get off for that purpose right along. This is very important if we are to make certain of registering the full Communist vote. Comrade Korn has replaced Comrade Karsner as campaign manager in District 6, as Comrade Karsner has taken over other important work.

As a suggestion to the campaign managers, it was mentioned that wherever possible they get slides in the movies advertising the Communist candidates.

The left wing conference of Workmen's Circles and left wing trade unionists are active in the Foster-Gitlow campaign, raising funds, holding meetings and carrying on other propaganda. They are staging a parade Sunday morning for the Foster-Gitlow meeting. They expect to raise $1,000 for the campaign.

Get Campaign Funds.

It need not be detailed here how great is the expense of a campaign. All branches have not contributed as they are able to. Local Chicago can and must do a great deal better. An urgent appeal is made that the branches push the sale of the campaign stamp books as well as other means of raising funds and send in the money at once to the local office. Thousands of dollars more should come in from Local Chicago. We are sure that the comrades wish to increase the campaign activity and will therefore respond.

Collect funds in your shop as the Amalgamated Clothing Workers party members are already doing. Collect it from your friends, from house to house, get it any way you can, but get it and send it in.

At all the meetings comrades must make certain to have application cards and to have the speaker make an appeal for membership. Where branches have not yet done so, they should elect a committee which organizes a drive for new members, outlines work for every members in the branch and sees that members and the branch as a whole are functioning. Earn your merit stamp! Get a new member or a subscriber to the DAILY WORKER.

DAILY WORKER-Labor Defense Bazaar.

The DAILY WORKER-Labor Defense Bazaar to be held Nov. 26 to Dec. 1 is going ahead well. Local Chicago will also get 25 per cent of the proceeds.

At the last meeting of the bazaar committee a very large attendance was at hand. Branches, however, should make sure of sending regular delegates to the next committee meeting to be held Saturday afternoon, 3 p. m., Oct. 18, at 722 Blue-Island Ave., Greek Hall.

Branches shall also take note that the Labor Defense Council has extended its scope and is now handling all Workers Party cases. Much money is needed. Comrades paying their assessment this month should purchase as many additional defense stamps as they can.

The South Slav branch reports that they are selling stamps for the campaign fund as well as doing other work. The Jewish Central Committee is organizing an educational program for the branches and also will have a Sunday morning open forum in two places.

More Educational Activities.

In addition to the open forum and the regular courses to be given in Chicago, there are to be other educational activities. Recommendations of the educational council were accepted:

First, that all new members coming into the party are to attend a special

Stir the Shops!
The very best place to carry on a working class campaign is in the shops and factories where the workers gather to earn their living. It is there that minds are open to the measures, parties and candidates that stand for concrete solutions of the problems of bread and butter facing the working class. It is in the shops that the workers will see most clearly, for example, the difference between Foster, the union organizer and fighter for the workers, and LaFollette, the lawyer and fighter for the middle class. BATTLE TO GET RIGHT TO MEET IN SILK TOWN

Hold Protest Meetings and Fight in Courts

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Further meetings in Paterson, N. J., "to force recognition of the right of free speech and peaceful assemblage" are announced by the American Civil Liberties Union following the arrest of eleven persons at the free-speech test meeting on City Hall steps.

The day after the test Roger N. Baldwin, director of the Civil Liberties Union, was arrested and charged with "unlawful assemblage." Baldwin was held by Recorder Munson Force for the grand jury and released on $500 bail.

His case and that of John C. Butterworth, socialist-labor party candidate for congress and chairman of the meeting, alone go to the grand jury. The others will be tried on four separate charges before the recorder.

United Front Meeting.

The meeting at which the arrests took place was arranged by the American Civil Liberties Union, the Workers (Party and the socialist-labor party following the refusal of the Paterson police to allow strikers' meetings in the Turn Hall which they have been occupying for two months.

The reason given by chief of police Tracy for forbidding further meetings was the character of speeches made by H. M. Wicks, of the Workers Party brought into Paterson by the strike committee as assist in the conduct of the strike of 10,000 silk workers, now in its ninth week.

Regarding the Paterson arrests, the Civil Liberties states: "We welcome a test in the courts and on the field of public opinion of the right of peaceful assemblage in Paterson. The police have exceeded all authority in arbitrarily closing up a public hall and in forcibly breaking up a peaceful meeting called to protest against their action.

"Fifty policemen went wild at that meeting when John C. Butterworth started to read the bill of rights of the constitution from the city hall steps to a crowd of 700 strikers. Two men are in the hospital with their heads cracked; others suffered slight injuries.

Police Only Rioters.

"There was no riot except among the police. If anyone should be held for 'inciting to riot' it should be chief of police Tracy, who arrogates to himself the power to censor speakers and meetings according to his whims."

The American Civil Liberties is represented in the ligitation by Addison P. Rosenkrans of Paterson and will carry the cases to the highest courts if necessary, the statement adds.

Postpone Injuction Cases.

PATERSON, N. J., Oct. 9—The attempt of Paterson silk manufacturers to make their injunctions against the striking silk weavers permanent has been delayed again by vice-chancellor Vivian M. Lewis' postponement of the hearing on the 13 orders. The five contempt cases of picketing silk workers are also postponed.

Lewis declared the strikers had the legal right to picket when he announced continuances of the cases. He insisted that the pickets would be calm, orderly way attempt to persuade others to join them in their strike.

Sergeant Kelliher, who climbed the statue of vice-president Garet A. Hobart to read the riot act to the free speech test meeting is not being spoken of by striking silk workers as the hero he thought he was. The crowd jeered him at the meeting and strikers continue to show their contempt for the officer who so overstepped his authority.

All U.S. Power Is at Morgan's Command

in restoring Europe, with the sympathetic support of our government."

Thus the Magazine of Wall Street admitted in its issue of Sept. 13, 1924: "So far as we know this is the first direct attempt of this government, even unofficially, to encourage purchase of a foreign issue in recent times." Today the leading bankers are talking of having a special loan bureau in the department of commerce.

It is with the unquestioned and unquestionable aid of the United States government that the American financiers and industrialists have established their receivership in Europe —a receivership which is only an entering wedge to the complete economic and political domination of many continental countries other than Germany.

American Capitalists in Charge.

Clarence M. Wooley, head of the American Radiator company, is to be one of the arbitrators of the transfer of reparation payments. Gates W. McGarrah, chairman of the Mechanics and Metals Bank of New York has been chosen to serve as the American director of the new German Bank of Issue. S. Parker Gilbert, Jr., of the law firm of Cravath, Henderson, and De Gersdor, New York City, will be the first agent-general for reparations.

It is clear that American bankers and manufacturers will do most of the administering of the Dawes plan. What powers such administrative control will give the American capitalists can be seen from an enumeration of the duties and rights of the agent-general Gilbert who is only a tool of the Morgan-Mellon interests. Mr. Gilbert will be the virtual director of the German railways and other industrial monopolies. He will supervise the German budget in so far as it affects tax collections, expenditures for domestic purposes and reparation payments.

Mr. Gilbert will also have the power to direct the issuance of notes and the maintenance of reserves, demand all documents and statistics, conduct any investigation he deems necessary, to have full authority over currency, supervision over the two hundred million dollar loan, the collection of taxes on customs, beer, alcohol, tobacco and sugar. Truly, Mr. Gilbert will wield as much power in Germany as any Hohenzollern ever did. That is why Owen D. Young, whose place Mr. Gilbert is filling, was called by many in Germany "Owen the First." That is why the German minister of finance, Luther, confessed on Sept. 1, 1924, that "the whole German national wealth is controlled by an American."

Bigger Loot Ahead.

This domination of German resources and industry is only a prelude to a far more extensive receivership. The allied imperialists have been forced to hand over so much power to the American capitalists because they realize that the Wall Street financial wizzards will be the ones who will take the greatest proportion of the numerous other loans that are to follow the moderate two hundred million dollar flotation. In its issue of April 24, 1924 the Wall Street Journal discussed the liklihood of international financing to the extent of eight billion dollars as a result of the Dawes plan.

And Mr. R. F. Zinkann writing in the Annalist of May 19, 1924 summed up the enormous possibilities for American capitalists in this fashion: "Thus the United States may acquire a close economic interest in the other workshop of the world. This development is aided by the technical and economic combinations in 'vertical trusts,' etc., which occurred in Germany under pressure of need for economy. Thus would be made possible a better exchange of inventions and of rational methods of production and a world economic division of labor on a grand scale. For the preservation of European peace too, the interest of the United States in the heart of Erope would afford a good guarantee. And in this way also the economic contact of the United States with Russia could be far more effectually accomplished."

Within two weeks after the Dawes plan was put in force, the American capitalists were bold enough to propose a sort of a Dawes scheme for France. We have in mind the Hurley plan for France settling its debt to the United States. In this scheme France would have to pay annuities of $100,000,000 for sixty-three years and one-half the sum would be left in France in the form of American capital invested in French industries.

Small wonder, then, that the second most important magnate in Germany declared to a New York Times correspondent at Dusseldorf on February 5, 1924: "If conditions continue unchanged, Europe runs the risk to become a country of slaves."

No Prosperity in Dawes' Plan

Our employing class has been energetically trying to sell the Dawes plan to the American laboring and farming masses on the basis of its bringing prosperity to the country. There is not a grain of truth in this contention.

It is a sine qua non of the Dawes plan that its success depends on a huge German export surplus. In reviewing the prospects for the successful operation of the Dawes scheme Professor E. E. Agger, in the Annalist for March 24, 1924, made it plain that unless the United States accepted large excesses of imports from Germany the reparations program would fail. Prof. Agger said in part: "We are practically driven to the conclusion, therefore, that the main hope for German trade expansion lies in the United States. . . . It is reasonably certain that herculean efforts will be made to get the American market to absorb quantities of German exports." This much for the great boom that is supposed to overcome American industry as a result of the flood of German orders thru the Dawes plan.

But the American industries will face another serious problem, the danger of which will be menacing the workers, if the Dawes program succeeds. Mr. Albert Strauss of J. & W. Seligman Co., New York bankers, and formerly vice-governor of the federal reserve board, told the Williamstown Institute of Politics on August 19, 1249: "To pay reparations the payer must live frugally, work hard and export the product of his labor. . . . The payer of reparations will thus become a decreasing customer and an increasing competitor." In degrading the German workers, the international capitalists will be striking at the American workers.

Intense Commercial Rivalry.

The Annalist "Business Outlook" for August 25, 1924 views the situation in this light: "As European industry gets under way the industries of the United States are certain to meet a steadily increasing competition not only in the export field but in the domestic market."

James A. Farrel, president of the United States Steel corporation is also very dubious about the Dawes prosperity when he says in the Magazine of Wall Street for August 30, 1924: "There is no information on which we can base an assurance that the European market can be restored within a reasonable time, nor that Europe's economic interests may not eventually be in directions antagonistic to ours."

Mr. Rufus S. Tucker, acting chief finance and investment division of the department of commerce pierces all the Dawes prosperity bubbles when he sums up the likely events in this manner: "American manufacturers are going to meet with severe competition in the sale of goods of which the value is derived mainly from labor, not only in foreign markets but even at home. In the case of goods made of materials not found in Germany, competition will not be so severe, as the exchange rates will operate against Germany when importing the raw materials. In the case of many agricultural and mineral products there will be no increased competition." In short, not a word about the prosperity wave to overwheim the American workers.

Lower Wages Coming.

Let no one make a mistake. The American employing classes will not for an instance willingly pay the price of lowered profits because of intensified German and European competition. Our bosses will do their best to transfer the losses to the working class. For example, the New York Journal of Commerce frankly tells us: "The present reparation project, therefore, is essentially a plan which, if successful, would result in shifting our capital power over to Germany for German use, with the result that we must endure the competition that grows out of such development. There is no use in trying to obscure or ignore the fact that, exactly in proportion as these efforts succeed, the United States, like Great Britain, must look for keener competition and in the last analysis must meet such competition by reducing costs of production. This can come only thru a larger product on the part of labor or a lower wage cost." This means longer hours and lower wages.

The Magazine of Wall Street for Septl 27, 1924 also assures the workers that wage cuts are bound to follow the Dawes plan. It says: "The facts are that Germany cannot be resuscitated financially without at the same time offering her the opportunity to sell more than she buys. For this, she must find markets and these markets are only where British, French and American markets exist. It is to be assumed that in order to find markets Germany will undersell her competitors. This she can do because of her lower production costs. To meet such competition we shall be forced to cut our production costs. This means either an increased output which it will be hard to sell on account of prospective intense competition, or a lower scale of wages for the American workingman. It is toward the latter, probably, that we are drifting."

War Dangers Multiply.

And last, but not least, is the fact that the Dawes plan multiplies and brings closer to the American working and farming masses the dangers of a new world war. It is a fact that the Ruhr region, closest to French imperialist bayonets, holds the bulk of the German loan security. Here is source of conflict. To the American bankers, security for their money is the greatest concern. Our financiers will insist on priority for their loans or else the huge industrial credits so necessary to the success of the Dawes plan will not be forthcoming. The $200,000,000 loan is only a drop in the bucket of the loans to be floated.

The germs of a new imperialist war are found in the very guarantees that the American bankers are today getting. The United States government can be counted on to protect the sacred investments of its moneyed lords with powerful armies and huge armadas. Thus, Charles E. Mitchell of the Rockefeller National City Bank says: "We have taken the precautions that were necessary." On October 1, 1924 J. P. Morgan and Lamont declared the loans are safe investments. The Balkanization of Erope proceeds apace as the grond is being prepared for sending the next gigantic American expeditionary force "over there."

YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE ORCHESTRA ROUNDS INTO CLASSICAL FORM

AFTER a summer of hard practice, the Young Workers League Orchestra of Chicago has mastered an impressive repertoire and is all set for a season of real service. Composed of members of the Young Workers League, the orchestra boasts an array of musical talent which augurs well for its future reputation. This talent includes, among many other, such musicians as Alfred Frankenstein, Evelyn Mack, Lawrence, Karl Skalar, Chris Pavlov and Jack Edwards.

Altho concerned mainly with the musical proficiency of their orchestra the comrades have not neglected the political aspect. They have drawn up a preamble and set of rules which leave no doubt as to the revolutionary character of their organization. In part this preamble reads as follows:

"Not only does the capitalist class control the economic and political institutions of present-day society, but it commercializes and degrades art. Music does not escape this degradation, and is today the exclusive monopoly of the ruling class. In view of this it is incumbent on the working class to develop its own art and culture. It is in line with this necessity that the Young Workers League orchestra has been organized. As part of the Young Workers League this orchestra declares that its primary duty is to render service to the revolutionary working class movement to the end of realizing the emancipation of the working class and the establishment of the Communist society."

The next scheduled appearance of the orchestra is at the Foster-Gitlow meeting on October 12. In preparation for this day, the orchestra has been putting in extra rehearsals in perfecting its program. A big feature of the program will be a revolutionary medley—a piece of original orchestration done especially for the occasion by Comrade Evelyn Mack.

Window Cleaners in New York Put Fate in Hands of Kept Judge

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Judge Edward F. Boyle of the children's court will decide whether the members of the Window Cleaners' Protective Association are to get an increase in wages as they request. The union signed an agreement with the contractors' association leaving the wage question to the judge's arbitration.

Joseph Teichholtz of the Guaranty Window Cleaning Co. has abandoned the union and has not and is signed up with the workers again, according to Peter Darck, secretary of the union. Workers who were told not to wear the union button by Teichholtz are now asked to wear it and the employer has discharged the gangsters he had employed to attempt intimidation of the union workers.

Flow-Meters Company Machinists Strike Against Wage Cut

Machinists employed in the Flow-Meters company, 2040 Diversey avenue, were out on strike yesterday, following a cut in wages of ten per cent which the management insisted on forcing upon the men.

Every one of the machinists on strike has applied for admittance to the International Association of Machinists, J. J. Uhlmann, business agent of the district council, declared. The machinists were receiving from 75 to 90 cents per hour with an additional bonus. About a month ago the boss refused to pay the bonus any longer, and later reduced the wages ten per cent.

The men, who up until this time, were unorganized, circularized a petition which all of them signed, demanding that the boss give them their former pay. This the management of the company refused to do, and the strike followed.

Machinists and specialists are advised to stay away from the Flow-Meters company when looking for work.

Plan Mass Meet of Young Workers at Hamtramck, Mich.

(Special to The DAILY WORKER.)

HAMTRAMCK, Mich., Oct. 9.—Plans have been perfected for a huge mass meeting here on Sunday afternoon, Oct. 19, at which working boys and girls will have an opportunity to learn of the aims and methods of the Young Workers' League.

The meeting will be held at the Workers' International Home, 3014 Yemans street, and will begin at 1:30 p. m. Comrade Barney Mass of Kansas City, an active member of the Young League, will address the audience in English. For the benefit of those young workers who do not understand English, arrangements have been made for addresses in Polish, Russian and Ukrainian.

Opera Fights Union.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Ninety per cent of the striking laides' tailors have gone back to their work with the signing up of their shops by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Local 38. The Metropolitan Opera Company is holding out against the union and workers anticipate that this may be just the first step of the opera association to put all its employes on the openshop basis. The workers in the costume shop were in the smallest union of those with which the opera company deals.

Trying to Save Another Nut.

GENEVA, Ill., Oct. 9.—An intricate psychological pattern, with such terms as dementia praecox paranola and permanent delusion as its warp and woof, was being woven here today by a corps of alienists about Warren J. Lincoln, lover-horticulturist, in an effort to cheat the gallows of its prey.

Bloody Paterson

Paterson is again a bloody battlefield. Angered by the sticking qualities displayed by the strikers the silk mill bosses have ordered their armed forces into action. Clubbing, riding down and jailing of strikers has become the order of the day.

The development of the strike in Paterson could have been written before it was ever called. First comes the strike, complete closure of the mills. Peaceful meetings, organization, a successful picket line. The strike gets stronger and the police close the halls to meetings. The picket line continues and strikers are arrested. Still no break in the solidarity.

Then comes the discard of all pretense of legality followed by a charge of armed police upon peaceful and unarmed workers.

If there were no such thing as the agencies of the capitalist state every strike of workers would end in victory because the capitalists alone cannot run their factories. Neither will workers scab on one another without coercion.

This is the function, and the principal function of government—to force the workers to toil for what the capitalists are willing to give. When a strike cannot be broken by propaganda and the hungry mouths of the unemployed, the striking workers must be beaten, killed and jailed until they give up in despair. This is the role now being played by the Paterson police.

The strike in Paterson is not a big strike nor is it in one of the heavy industries yet in come the armed forces of government in answer to the mandats of the capitalists who own them. It is plain that every strike today has a political character whether the workers want it that way or not. A realization of this fundamental fact and new tactics to meet the problems that arise from it are necessary.

The strikes of workers everywhere today mean either bowing their heads to the blows of the mercenaries of the capitalist state or organization for offense and defense.

Staying away from the job is not enough to win strikes in this era of monopolistic production. The capitalists fear more the increased militancy of the workers that follows a victory than they do a temporary loss of profits. Organizations fit for titanic struggles with all the forces of capitalism must be built and on the revolutionists in the labor movement and among the unorganized workers, because of the cowardly desertion of the official leaders, is placed the task of constructing them.

The struggle in Paterson teaches a lesson to every worker who knows the urgent need for a labor movement that can maneuver in the difficult field of the American class struggle.

Misinterpreting LaFolletteism

If the reports of the Nearing-London debate are reliable Scott Nearing's ideas of the role of the La-Follette group need considerable clarification. He is quoted as saying that "LaFollette is against class rule of any sort" and is said to have proved this from LaFollette's utterances.

If Nearing proved this we are afraid that he is a better lawyer than a revolutionist. If one thing is proved, not only by the utterances but by the acts of LaFollette and his middle class henchmen it is that they are against working class rule but for the rule of the middle class to which they belong.

They break up farmer-labor parties, they denounce the Communists for their belief in the dictatorship of the working class and they maneuver the control of what organization they have into the hands of lawyers and small capitalists and some not so small—like Spreckles and Vanderlip.

The role of the LaFolletteites—the American expression of reformist nationalist socialism—is that of the left wing of the capitalist parties. In certain periods such as the present they engage in a struggle with the big capitalists because they feel that the middle class is being denied power that rightfully belongs to it.

When a real crisis comes for capitalism these middle class elements become its strongest supporters—they become fascist openly as in Italy or mask their terrorist activities behind a thin veil of parliamentarism as in Germany.

LaFollette does not believe in class government? Why then does he fight for the supremacy of his class—a section of the capitalist class?

Nearing thinks that the LaFollette campaign is a personal adventure but Communists look for the class alignments that produce mass movements like that headed by LaFollette. Class-conscious workers can discern these alignments and it should be easy for Scott Nearing whose training in economic and historical research is his chief claim to fame.

Nobody won the debate.

Real Disrupters in Minneapolis

The question of who the real disrupters of the labor movement are has been answered in Minneapolis in a manner easily understood by every honest member of the rank and file.

An open attempt, sponsored by the elements that have fought every move toward building a fighting labor movement, is being made to start a secession drive and split the labor unions into warring factions.

The disrupters have sent out a call for a meeting for October 10 for the announced purpose of organizing a new central labor council. The call is signed by [illegible] unions whose officialdom for years has been opposed to the policies of the Trades and Labor Assembly and which has time after time sabotaged all efforts for independent working class political action.

After having falsely charged the Communists with trying to break up the unions this group now seeks to give its disruptive activities organizational form and one of their complaints is that two members of the Workers (Communist) Party are officers of the MinneapolisTrades and Labor Assembly.

This disruptive movement is led by one Louis Harthill, a pie-counter artist of the first water. He was chief of police under Van Lear and now edits a red-baiting sheet since the Minnesota Star, thru its constant betrayals of the workers and farmers, lost its following and had to suspend.

There is a political angle to the situation which should not be overlooked inasmuch as the disrupters are composed of elements that have been peddling what portion of the labor movement they could control to the capitalist parties for years and wish to continue this lucrative pastime. Harthill, Van Lear and their tools in the unions whose names are signed to the call, are henchmen of the republican party machine and are trying to create a reactionary labor bloc which they can manipulate for the bosses.

We suppose that in spite of the endorsement of LaFollette the disrupters will receive support from the Gompers machine but we believe that the militants in Minneapolis will succeed in preserving the unity of the labor movement against this boss-inspired crew.

LaFollette "Strategy"

Governor Small, running for governor with the support of the LaFolletteites, has endorsed Coolidge without reservation. He is a regular republican, he says, and for the whole republican ticket right down the line.

The endorsement came as soon as the time limit expired for the filing of independent candidates and leave the LaFollette forces helpless. It is too late to discipline the astute Mr. Small who now has the support of the Coolidge republicans and the LaFollette independents.

The LaFolletteites are great strategists. They have been very much concerned lest someone might be able to hurl the charge of "red" at them and to prevent this have allowed the campaign plans in Illinois to be drafted by the labor fakers with the result set forth above. It is probable that the Small endorsement of Coolidge will throw Illinois, which LaFollette had a good chance to carry, into the Coolidge column.

We lowly Communists are supposed to have no conception of the finer points of political strategy and it is true that we make many mistakes. Nevertheless we have never employed the strategy that throws our entire movement behind our strongest enemy in one of the key states of the union as the LaFolletteites have succeeded in doing.

We speak of this painful matter from the standpoint of the revolutionary section of the working class but for the cockroach capitalists who dominate the LaFollette movement it is far less serious to strengthen the following of Coolidge and Dawes than to aid in any way the followers of Foster and Gitlow—Communist candidates.

A New Peace Plan

The European socialists are today simply the mouthpieces of the ruling class which utters plea after plea for the salvation of European capitalism by American capitalism. To the working class of the United States the social-democrats make no appeal. Their statements are directed to the American ruling class.

The latest appeal comes from the French socialists who have come back from Geneva. They have a wonderful plan to bring peace to a suffering world. Nothing rough, of course. The League of Nation's flag is to be flown by every nation and this is to make war impossible.

Say the socialists who supported their government in the world war and who have upheld it in its most oppressive features ever since:

"Armies and navies which fly the flag of the league beside the national flag would by that token become different organizations. They would become symbols of peace instead of war. Everybody would know whether the nation was devoted to peace or not by the presence or absence of the flag."

Here in all its shamelessness is the idea of a national unity under capitalism. No word of the warring class interests or any hint of the fact that the masses of all nations are for peace but that the rulers bring on war.

To depend upon an instrument of imperialism such as the league is to bring peace is the same as expecting capitalism to free the working class from wage-slavery. The social-democrats seem to believe that peace can be "flagged in" the same as a railway train.

British Trade Union Congress

Editor's Note.—In these days when the British Labor government under the premier, J. Ramsay MacDonald, is facing an end of its rule, it will be interesting to read of the events that transpired at the recent British Trade Union Congress, the powerful economic organization of the British workers that listened to an address by Tomsky, the head of the All-Russian Trade Unions. We have received an excellent article on the congress from Harry Pollitt, of London. It is as follows:

* * *

By HARRY POLLITT.
(London).

THE 56th Trade Union Congress held at Hull, attended by 750 delegates, representing 4½ million workers, was the most important congress yet held. Out of the 105 resolutions covering every conceivable subject, four definite facts, overshadowing everything else, emerge, and all these have an international significance and importance.

It would be very easy to place on record where the congress failed, what it ought to have done, the issues it ought to have faced, but here we are only concerned with what actually happened at the congress.

The national minority conference, held a week previously, had undoubtedly had its effect upon the Hull congress. And though the general council of the congress refused to place on the agenda any of the resolutions passed at the minority conference and sent on to Hull, these questions were introduced during the various debates that took place.

The Trade Union Congress and the Labor Government.

There had been no attempts or provision made for discussing the policy of the labor government during the nine months of its existence. In the annual report of the general council only a congratulatory reference was made to the labor government, and a sentence inserted declaring that it was not the business of the trade union congress to discuss the policy of the government, unless it was in relation to specific resolutions that had been previously discussed by congress. This part of the report was contested and a debate ensued. There was very evident a strong feeling in the congress against the labor government's actions, particularly in regard to the Dawes report; its policy during strikes and in regard to the Dawes report were roundly condemned, and Robert Smillie was put up to try and defend the government, but he was unable to make out any defence. When the vote took place the motion criticizing the government was lost, but a very considerable support was gained for the motion, to the surprise of the general council.

Thruout the week, on a variety of resolutions, many strong criticisms were made of the labor government. It was easy to see how nine months of such a government has disillusioned many workers' representatives as to its attitude and policy. This disillusionment is also spreading amongst the masses, but it would be a great mistake to assume that the labor government was not still very popular with the organized trade union movement.

At all past congresses, a special resolution dealing with foreign policy has been discussed. This year the resolution was only confined to assuring the government of the support of the congress in its intentions to carry out the agreement with Soviet Russia. Congress was unanimous on this point, and the hands of the government in dealing with the opposition against the treaty will be greatly strengthened.

Perhaps the most significant thing was the absence of any resolution congratulating Ramsay MacDonald on the results achieved by him at the London conference. At the very time when the London conference and the Dawes report are being claimed as triumphs for MacDonald and the labor government, the trade union congress is silent, and for a very significant reason. That is because the opposition to the Dawes report was so strong within the congress, that had the general council introduced a resolution backing it up, they would have run a serious risk of it being defeated; this would have been a grave political defeat for MacDonald and so an opportunity was given of having a discussion on the question, and throughout the proceedings of the congress many references to the Dawes report were made, all indicative of a growing opposition to this slave plan. I now hear that the miners are to convene a special national conference to discuss the Dawes' report, and what is to be their future attitude to this report.

Towards National Unity

The British trade union movement is very sectionalist. There is no central organization backing up the various unions in a common struggle against capitalism. Two resolutions that make for closer working and also towards creating a general staff were adopted at the congress. The first resolution makes it the duty of the general council of the T. U. C. to prepare a scheme for the adoption of the principle of organization by industry. At present there are over 1100 unions in Britain, all overlapping, jealous of each others' rights, constantly quarrelling with each other over the right to organize various classes of workers. The adoption of this resolution means a real step towards the unification of the movement.

The second resolution was brought before congress by the general council itself, as at present this council has no real powers or functions. It has been looked upon with varying degrees of tolerance, suspicion or distrust, as the case may be. But it has been a main plank in the platform of the opposition now organized in the minority movement, that if the workers are to fight successfully, there must be a central organization and leadership, directing and coordinating all their struggles.

In every strike and lockout, the opposition has repeatedly shown the necessity for such centralization, and it is the direct result of this propaganda, that the following general council has been forced to come and asked congress to give it increased power and authority. Two years ago at Southport, a similar resolution was overwhelmingly defeated. Last year at Plymouth it was again defeated, this time by a narrowing an overwhelming majority in favour of the general council having this power, and so by its resolutions on organization by industry and increased powers to the general council, the Hull congress has done much to solidify the ranks of the trade unions in Britain.

Towards International Unity

The general council submitted a report of the Viennese congress of the I. F. T. U. It was on this report that a discussion was initiated on the question of international unity. While approval was expressed of the attitude of the British delegation at Vienna, strong criticism was made because the Vienna resolution was expressly framed to exclude all the organizations affiliated to the R. I. L. U., with the exception of the Russian trade unions. A proposal was made that the general council should at once take measures on the executive bureau of the Amsterdam International to arrange for the convening of an all-in-International conference, at which should be present all the organizations now affiliated to both the Amsterdam and Moscow Internationals.

There was a strong demonstration in the congress favouring this proposal and A. A. Purcell, the congress chairman, then stated that this question of such importance that the congress itself should decide what steps the general council should take. The debate then continued, and all the right wing leaders took part. It was very noticeable the way they all concentrated on two things. First a general complaint about the personal criticism they had received, secondly they all went on record for unity with the Russian unions, but were silent as to what was to happen to the other organizations affiliated to the R.I.L.U.

The leaders of the German social-democratic, French and Belgian trade unions will derive no pleasure from this debate, for Tillett of the Transport Workers, Robinson of Distributive Workers, Pollit and Hullsworth all levelled strong criticism against these leaders and their attempts to sabotage unity. The debate then concluded on the understanding that an emergency resolution was to be submitted to congress.

A resolution was then submitted to the standing orders committee, but was rejected on account of the wording, a second resolution was then drafted and accepted by the standing orders committee and was then brought to the congress. In informing the congress of the nature of the resolution, the chairman gave it as his opinion that the points in the resolution were covered by the Viennese resolution. The right wingers seized on this statement, as providing an excuse not to debate the question again and allowed that the congress refuse to discuss the resolution.

A fight then took place on this issue, the writer pointing out, how the resolution came to be drafted and what was the vital distinction between this resolution and the Vienna resolution. At this stage a delegate was stated to have made some remarks derogatory to the authority of the chairman and a scene then took place. It gave an opportunity for the reactionaries to focus attention on this incident and so pass on to the next business. This was done, but there was a very strong opposition to this course. The next day came the speech of Tomsky, and afterwards telegrams were read from Italy and from Finland who was stated to be in Moscow. These telegrams indicated that the workers of all countries were looking to the Hull trade union congress to take real steps towards establishing the unity of the international trade union movement. Having in mind the strong support of the congress delegates for unity and with the effect of Tomsky's speech upon all the delegates present, the chairman, A. A. Purcell then made the following statement:

"I think I should take this opportunity of impressing upon congress the significant fact that we have now received from practically all those continental nations where the labor movement is in a disturbed condition, indications that they are looking to the British trade union congress for a demonstration of that unity which is so vitally necessary. From Italy, Germany and now from France, the dissident sections have intimated their desire for that unity, and if our movement is to fulfil its great destiny, something must be done to consummate that desire. In no country is unity so firmly established as in Great Britain and it seems to me incumbent upon this congress that, without passing any formal resolutions or indulging in prolonged discussions, it should take such steps as will bring together the different elements of the labor movement in Europe in an effort to establish that solidarity that will make for world peace. I would therefore suggest to this congress that they empower the general council thru the international federation of trade unions to take all possible steps to bring the parties together."

The congress unanimously agreed to this suggestion, and the position now is, that the general council of the British trade union congress is pledged to work for the unity of the movement and will, I am convinced, after the discussion which took place at Hull, see that all the organizations affiliated to the two internationals are brought together.

The Russian Delegation.

The reception accorded to the delegation from the Russian trade unions was the greatest ever given by congress. It completely over-shadowed all the others. It was the first time that the representatives of the organized workers of Great Britain and Russia had faced each other, and there was no doubt as to the spontaneity and the warmth in the tribute of the British workers in welcoming these Russian comrades.

Comrade Tomsky's speech was in such marked contrast from those delivered by the fraternal delegates from other countries, that this fact alone made it the more impressive. The acute analysis of the economic situation, the lessons from the past struggles of the workers, the implications of the Dawes report, the growing danger of war, and in this situation the essential need for the unity of the organized workers—this was the theme of the speech and it created a profound impression, and has been responsible for many influential leaders now working harder than ever for the unity of the movement.

The capitalist press realized the importance of this speech, for the next day it was given in full in all the most powerful newspapers. The British trade union congress is to send a delegation to visit Russia, and this will mark a further step towards forging real bonds of solidarity between the Russian and British workers, and thru them between the workers of the world.

The Hull congress has therefore been of the greatest international importance. It neglected to face many important issues, but its work alone on the question of the unity of the trade unions, both nationally and internationally, marks a progressive step in the history of British and international trade unionism.

To All Proletarian Prisoners of the Bourgeoisie

THE First International Conference of the International Red Relief issued an appeal of which we reprint the following extract:

Our International Red Relief was formed in a period of furious capitalist attacks. It was established thanks to the endeavors of the workers and peasants of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics in close co-operation with the revolutionary working class and peasantry of the capitalist countries. Its task is the material and moral support of the victims of the revolutionary struggle. The International Red Relief supports the prisoners in the bourgeois prisons and the families of the fallen and imprisoned revolutionists.

However, the work of building up our organization is not yet at the end. We strive to establish a still stronger red bank for the support of the International workers' and peasants' movement. We must strengthen the connection between the various parts of this organization which constitutes one of the best means for the establishment of the united front of the working class. In order to carry thru this task, the First International Conference of the International Red Relief took place in Moscow. The millions of organized workers and peasants of all countries, represented by the International Red Relief, are united by one idea: to double and even treble their help for the imprisoned and persecuted fighters of the revolution.

We call today to the prisoners of capital: "Do not lose courage! Behind you are the millions of the workers, the members of the International Red Relief, and first of all the workers and peasants of the Socialist Soviet Republics. The invisible ties that connect you, the prisoners of capital, thru the iron bars of capitalist prisons with the millions of the workers and peasants outside, will never be separated!"

We are convinced that soon the hour will come when the masses of the workers and peasants will rise for the final struggle against capital.—The First World Conference of the International Red Relief.

VIEWS OF OUR READERS

Owens Hits the Tribune.

To the DAILY WORKER—The prejudice breeding, race riot creating, Negro baiting capitalist newspaper, The Chicago Tribune, has an incurable mania for seeing non-existing things. Every single time that some Negro felon is apprehended, a near lynching occurs, according to this lying and filthy newspaper. Carl Sandberg, of the Chicago Daily News, stated that the Tribune was one of the chief instigators of the Chicago race riots of 1919.

The Tribune, of Tuesday, Oct. 7, tells in screaming headlines on the front page, of the identification of "Negro Killers," and of the attempt made to lynch them by a crowd of infuriated whites in Evanston, Ill.

This lie sheet also states how one of the slayers stated that he and his girl needed money to make the rounds of the Black and Tan joints on the South Side. The lecherous Chicago Tribune has a hatred too awful to contemplate, for any amusement or recreational place frequented by both Negroes and whites and sneeringly refers to them as Black and Tan.

No doubt most of the slush contained in this prejudice breeding news story was concocted in the distorted and twisted brain of one of the paid morons on the Tribune staff, who are experts at putting over anti-Negro articles and stories. Other races in Chicago constantly commit unheard-of and unbelievable crimes, but never does the Tribune refer to their racial identity as Jewish Killers, Irish Killers, German Killers like they always do in the case of a Negro.

The Chicago Tribune, owned and controlled by the employers of Chicago, does everything in its power to keep alive prejudice against Negroes, and to keep the Negro and white workers separate and divided and from uniting or coming in contact with each other. The Tribune always associates the word Negro with crime in order to create in the minds of white workers that Negroes are criminals and the inferiors of whites, and unfit to associate with or mix with the whites. This is the capitalist's trick to keep Negro and white workers divided and apart in order that they, the capitalists and employers, may rob and exploit them both.

The one and only way to destroy this Anti-Negro propaganda is to destroy the system which thrives on same, the present iniquitous and rob system of capitalist wage slavery. The Communists, the people whom this Negro baiting sheet also prints vicious lies about, are the ones who advocate this remedy. Negro workers should unite and join forces with the Communists and add them to carry out their program and thereby destroy this vicious system under which they, the Negroes, are the worst sufferers. —Gordon W. Owens, Chicago.

They Don't Do It in Russia.

To the DAILY WORKER:—As we are aware that slogans are being used to good advantage by the capitalist class, I herewith suggest to the membership of the Workers Party and the DAILY WORKER to use the following slogan every time they come in contact with the iniquities of the capitalist system—They don't do that in Russia.

I thot up the slogan today, using it during the course of conversations. In each case the question was asked, "What do you mean?" thus giving me a chance to give out some Communist propaganda.

The fact that the words (slogan)—They don't do that in Russia—at once raised the ear of each one I conversed with struck me as a good slogan for the use of the party.—Louis Reguera.

The United States and Great Britain

By L. TROTSKY

The chief source of world antagonism is the struggle between the United States and England. Why? Because England is still the richest, the most powerful country next to the United States. England is the main competitor, the chief obstacle on the path of American imperialism. Were England driven into a corner, were her strength undermined, or still better, were she knocked down entirely, then America could have a free hand in her imperialist adventures. Surely, Japan could be easily taken care of. America has all the advantages on her side: money and iron, coal and oil, and also comparatively good prestige in her political relations with China; which country, as we know, America is supposed to be "liberating" from under the yoke of Japan. For America is always "liberating" somebody. That seems to be her vocation. The main antagonism then is between the United States and England. This antagonism is growing and gaining momentum.

The English bourgeoisie has felt somewhat uneasy ever since the first years after the treaty of Versailles. The English bourgeoisie is thoroughly familiar with the intricacies of finance. And she cannot very well shut her eyes to the fact that the American dollar carries more weight than the English pound. She knows that predominance on the money market inevitably results in predominance also on the field of politics. The English bourgeoisie has always exploited to the utmost the power of her pound sterling in her international relations, and now she is watching with horror the dawn of a new era, the era of the American dollar.

The English bourgeoisie is trying not to succumb to despair and is creating all kinds of illusions for herself. The most authoritative English newspapers thus view the situation. They say: "True, the Americans are rich, but after all they are only novices in the imperialist game. They don't know all the tricks and tactics of world politics. We, Englishmen, are incomparably more skillful. The Yankees will need our advice and leadership. Our inexperienced American cousins, who have suddenly grown so rich, will have to call on us for guidance in matters of world politics. That will not be bad business at all. We shall be able to preserve our dignity and at the same time secure a decent fee for services rendered."

Of course, there is a grain of truth in that. I have already given expression to my scepticism regarding the accomplishments of American senators in the field of European geography. In order to do business with Europe on a large scale it would not seems superfluous to be equipped with a good knowledge of European geography. However, for the wealthy classes, the road to knowledge is always open. We all know that the bourgeoisie has easy access to the arts and sciences. Many a millionaire son whose fathers may have been illiterate look almost like they were born into lordship. It is only the oppressed classes, the proletariat, that are having a hard time in getting education, trying to acquire mastery of the elements of culture. The rich can always find, develop or hire specialists in all the branches of science. The Americans are only beginning to realize their importance in world affairs, but have not gone yet very far in that respect. The development of the consciousness of American capitalism as to its world mission has lagged behind the development of its economic and political power. The whole question must be discussed not from the point of view of present day events, but must be taken in the perspective of time, not of many decades, but rather of a few short years.

The mighty high tower of American industry and economy will soon be commanding the world. It is already dominating world affairs to a considerable degree, but not yet to its full extent. The leading role of capitalist Europe in world politics is only an heritage of her past economic strength, but that role no longer corresponds with the impoverished state of Europe of today. It is true that America has not learned yet to fully utilize her strength, but she is gaining that knowledge in the laboratory of Europe's miseries. For some time to come America will still need England as a guide in the ways of world politics. But only for a short time.

AFTER WAR

We know how fast a wealthy class in its upward climb changes its character, its appearance and its mode of behavior. Let us take, for instance, the German bourgeoisie. It was not so very long ago that the Germans were considered shy, blue-eyed dreamers, a nation of "poets and philosophers." And only a few decades of capitalist development have turned the German bourgeoisie into a most aggressive, iron-bound imperialist class. It is true that the day of judgment came too soon for the German bourgeoisie. And now we can again observe how the character of the German bourgeoisie is changing. He is fast acquiring on the European stage the habits and methods of a beast of prey. The English bourgeoisie, on the other hand is of a more settled and heavier disposition. Its character has been formed during long centuries. Class consciousness and pride has penetrated the very flesh and blood, the very bones and marrow of the English bourgeoisie and it will be a difficult problem to root out from her the feeling that she is the ruler of the world. But America will do that job when she seriously takes it up.

In vain is the English capitalist cherishing hopes that he will take on the role of guide to the inexperienced American. Yes, there will be a transition period. The issue involved, however, is not one of skill and experience in matters of world diplomacy, but of actual power, of capital and industry. And industrially, beginning with varieties of oats and ending with the best types of fast liners, the United States occupy the first place in the world. The production of necessities of life in the United states is from one-third to two-thirds of the production of the whole of humankind. Two-thirds of the world's output of oil (in 1923—72 per cent), which has now become the most important factor in industry and war, is being produced in the United States. It is true that the Americans are complaining that they are threatened with an oil shortage in the near future. I must confess that soon after the war I regarded such complaints of the Americans as camouflage, as a means to conceal their greed for foreign oil. But geologists actually confirm the fact that, at the present rate of consumption, the resources of American oil will be exhausted within 25-40 years. But by the end of such a period of time, with the aid of her industry and fleet, America will have grabbed the oil resources of all the nations of the world.

The predominant position of the United States is expressed in the following statistics. The United States are producing: wheat—25 per cent of world production, oats about 35 per cent, corn about 75 per cent, coal—50 per cent, pig iron—50 per cent, cast iron —60 per cent, steel—60 per cent, brass —60 per cent, zinc—47 per cent. America has 36 per cent of the world's mileage of railways, and her commercial fleet, which was practically non-existent before the war, aggregates 25 per cent of the world's tonnage. And, finally, America alone owns and uses 84.4 per cent of the total number of automobiles of the world. If in gold production America occupies a comparatively modest place (14 per cent), she has managed, however, due to her favorable balance of trade, to hoard up in her vaults 44.2 per cent of the entire gold reserve of the world. The national income of the United States is 2½ times more than the national incomes of England, France, Germany and Japan combined. It is these statistics that will settle all disputes. These figures spell eventual domination over land, sea and air.

What do these figures presage to Great Britain? They foretell that even England will not be able to avoid the common fate of all the capitalist countries. England, too, will be put on a ration by America. Whether Lord Curson wants it or not, he, too, will have to go on a ration. But we must add this. When England will have reached such a stage that she will have to accept openly the American ration, Lord Curson will no longer be at the helm of state affairs. No, he is too proud and snobbish. This job of reconciling England to the inevitability of an American ration will be assigned by the English capitalists to MacDonald.

The self-respect of the politicians of the English bourgeoisie will not permit them to acquiesce in relinquishing to America the political prestige and power of the greatest empire in the world for the price of a scanty ration. There will be needed here the pious eloquence of a MacDonald, Henderson and the Fabians in order to exert pressure over the English petty bourgeoisie and to persuade the English workers that it is best to have peace and agreement with America on the terms of American capitalism. But what does reconcilation with Uncle Sam mean? The above - mentioned statistics tell an eloquent story. And the substance of that story is that England can have peace, if she agrees to go on a ration or else she will have to get ready for war.

All this time England has been retreating before America. The Washington "disarmament" conference is still fresh in our memory. President Harding had invited to the conference England, France and Japan and in the most cold-blooded manner had offered England to limit her navy. This was done despite the fact that England had always preached the doctrine that she must remain, in view of her peculiar geographic position, the "ruler of the seas," and that the strength of her navy must always exceed the combined strength of the two next strongest navies in the world.

The United States have once and forever put an end to all such notions. President Harding began his speech at the Washington conference, as befits such an important occasion, with the solemn statement that "the conscience of civilization has awakened," etc., etc. He wound up, however, in a more business-like language: To you, England—he said—I will allow 5 units of strength on the seas, for myself I will take (for the present) 5 units, to France we shall give 3 units and to Japan 3 units. Why such a co-relation? Before the war the American navy was a good deal smaller than the English, but during the war the American navy grew con-

Machinists' Union Marks Time

By ANDREW OVERGAARD.

In order to understand correctly the machinists' convention held in Detroit Sept. 15, it is necessary to examine the different groupings in the convention and what role they played.

There were three distinct groups. Only one of them had a real program, namely the left wing led by the Communists. The "centrist" group was led by the insurgent faction in the old executive board and by the Fry-Keppler group, and its policy was simply to smash the machine and establish a few election reforms. It was not in favor of any fundamental changes in the organization. The third group was, of course, the old Johnston machine that stood for things as they are and fought against the proposals of both the other groups.

The policy of the lef wing was, first, to establish itself as a definite independent group, around its own policies, and then in relation to the other groups, to make what use was possible of their differences by supporting whatever good measures were submitted by either one and bringing pressure to bear on each. The program that the left wing fought, for in the convention was one that every progressive could unite upon.

Amalgamation of the metal trades unions into one industrial organization in order to effectively fight against the steel and electrical trusts, was one of the first questions dealt with in the convention, the issue being raised by many left wing resolutions. The Johnston forces proposed only to reaffirm the union's former stand of endorsing it in principle and allowing the officials to ignore it as they have done hitherto. Against this the proposal of the militants was to elect a rank and file committee in the convention for the purpose of carrying on negotiations with the other unions and among their membership to bring it into effect. The center group was not interested, however, and the result was that real amalgamation was voted down, the left wing only casting 70 votes, or less than one-third.

The center group learned a lesson when this question was taken to a vote and disposed of, and they began to organize their forces and also began to look for support somewhere. Of course the only group possible to approach was the left wing which had decided about the various "center" proposals it would support, such as bi-annual conventions, election of officers every two years instead of four years terms, an election board to count ballots, etc. The left wing was also in favor of cutting the salaries of the officers; the centrist group, however, was for high salaries, but conceded that point to the left wing. The left wing demanded also that the center group fight on two more fundamental issues, namely, the reinstatement of the suspended members in Toledo, and opposition against the B. & O. plan.

When these issues were finally taken up, the "center" adopted a typically indecisive attitude; some of them voted with the lefts, but none of them fought very hard for these issues. As a matter of fact, the centrists did not like to be mixed up in any affairs which would identify them with the reds. Most of them, of course, fought against the left wing as a matter of principle, and would be as bad as the present administration if they capture the official positions in the organization.

The compulsory insurance feature submitted by the General Executive Board was voted down by the convention. This was a left wing victory. The fight against the administration was led by the left elements in the convention.

One of the weaknesses of the Johnston machine in this convention was its lack of floor leaders. The former administration forces, like Keppler and Fry, and the so-called insurgents on the board, as well as the vice-presidents who were about to lose their jobs, had deserted and formed a group of their own. Due to the relation of these forces and the antagonisms between the "center" group and the Johnston forces, the administration had to retreat on many issues. Especially did some of the red baiting schemes fall flat. Davidson and Johnston had to resort to fake letters and telegrams in order to discredit the writer, but even these childish tactics failed to bring about the desired prejudice.

The majority of the delegates were intelligent enough to understand that the I. A. of M. cannot afford to imitate the capitalist class in red hunting, that there must be room for the militants to ensure the healthy growth of the organization. Of course, the usual "arguments" were resorted to by the right wing charging the Communists with breaking up the labor movement all over the world. Such renegades as Haberman, who was brought from Mexico, was used to spill the usual tirade against the revolutionists. This of course, was very easy for Roberto, who admits he is out to make money, and is quite unscrupulous as to methods. But the "anti-red" legislation was withdrawn because the sentiments of the convention was against it overwhelmingly.

The resolution on international solidarity was killed in the course of these developments. The resolution on the labor party was shoved aside by the argument that LaFollette will form a party in the next convention of the C. P. P. A., altho the delegates listened quite attentively when the Communists pointed out the illusion and the political class collaboration of the LaFollette movement and about 50 votes were cast against the LaFollette movement.

The question of the B. & O. plan was undobtedly the most important issue that came before the convention. The administration kept it off the floor until the last minute in order to rush it thru without having to go into a thoro discussion of the plan. Even then, however, the plan was not given a 100 per cent endorsement. The left-wing attack had seriously shaken the B. & O. plan and the delegates were very critical. The resolution that was adopted on this question states that where the membership desires to have the plan it may be put into effect.

The administration had to compromise on this issue and modify their intentions of introducing it in the organization as a whole. It was quite significant to note that the Canadian delegation voted almost unanimously against the plan, except for one delegate from Winnipeg, who voted consistently with the old administration. The railroads where the machinists are 100 per cent organized were against the plan. The whole convention took note that the local union at Glenwood shops, where the plan was first tried out, was not represented in the convention. According to the story brot upon the floor of the convention by delegates from Pittsburgh, the men working in the Glenwood shops are opposed to the plan, while the unions have dwindled in membership rather than grown, under its operation.

The minority report condemning the B. & O. plan was, however, voted down and the officers allowed to experiment some more with class collaboration.

The question of admission of the colored machinists into the organization was bitterly opposed by the southern delegates who went before the ritual committee and had the committee recommend that the colored brothers be not admitted. This question was also put thru in special hurry by the president, supposedly due to the fact it would probably create a long debate, as in the Rochester convention.

One bright spot in the convention was when the recognition of Soviet Russia was endorsed by a practically unanimous vote. This is one of the issues on which the Machinists' Union is completely opposed to the blackly reactionary policy of Samuel Gompers, and the convention in Detroit held its ground on this issue. The machinists are friends of Soviet Russia, even tho they do not yet realize the necessity of unification of the labor movement of the world including the Russian unions.

To sum up the total results of the convention it can be said that a few necessary internal reforms were adopted, but no plans were laid to organize the great masses of unorganized machinists in this country. No changes of a fundamental nature were made by this convention and all basic issues of the class struggle were ignored. Even so, however, this convention did not go to the lengths of reaction that have marked other conventions this year. The left wing went into the convention with a constructive program and established itself as a force to be reckoned with in the I. A. of M. They left the convention with more prestige and respect than before, in spite of all attempts to discredit them. All of the proposed law changes such as the two year election, establishment of election board, bi-annual convention, decrease in salary, etc., will go to referendum and it is up to the militants to carry on a campaign in the local unions for the adoption of these measures, and at all times point out the needs for fundamental changes in the structure and policies of the organization, and fight for further progress.

Automatism In Education

By a Teacher

(Being the Full Confession of an Examiner)

Confession has never been my hobby. The success of an examiner depends upon the pose of inscrutability. But for once, under these extraordinary auspices, I shall consent to reveal the whole truth about my unenviable position.

If an examiner were omniscient (you'll pardon me for suggesting anything so extravagant), he could not possibly accomplish the work set him by our top-heavy educational system. English, French, German, Music, Biology, History, Bookkeeping, Drawing, Chemistry Physics, Stenography, Latin, Greek, Spanish, common branches, uncommon branches, physical sciences, the arts—not Comte, Spencer and Darwin rolled into one Great Being could adequately or intelligently stand sponsor for so many departments of knowledge.

But I, a mere humble examiner, with no startling originality, no famous books to my credit, no conspicuous scholarship, I am expected to be a Pan-Sophistist. If vanity were not deeper than intellectual honesty, no fair-minded person would volunteer to do (!) the impossible. But pretence, repeated and familiarized, become one's second nature, and a modest man will gradually adopt the pose of omniscience because it pays to appear all-wise. Hence the examiner's habituation to the pose of inscrutability.

The world of mediocrity is awe-inspired by the silence majestical. In a commonplace world, looking wise is almost as convincing as being wise. A fallible examiner, conscious of a thousand defects, must support a devout aspect of perfection and take his chances of not being found out. Precarious existence!

To be more specific: Not only must an examiner pretend to omniscience (that merry masquerading pleaseth one's vanity); he is supposed to be endowed with the powers of white magic and of clairvoyance.

The days of the palm-readers, astrologers, phrenologists-by-intuition, clairvoyants, telepathists, are not numbered in the land of the godly. Far from it. Intuition is the short-cut to wisdom. Intuition is intellectual laziness erected into a philosophy of faith. Mental laziness is necessarily prevalent in a world too busy to stop to think, and to reflect. When we don't know, we apprehend by intuition. An examiner is a transcendental intuitionalist! He knows without analyzing, he apperceives without observing, he understands without reasoning, he judges without reflecting.

If this revelation of the truth shocks you, please listen to this bit of telltale evidence. The most important part of any examination (from our intuitionalist standpoint) is the "personality" test. Now, frankly, are there three unacquainted persons in the whole wide world who can agree upon a "rating" for personality? Why, what is personality? Is it something static or dynamic? If dynamic, at what particular stage of its unfoldment shall personality be appraised? Does personality shine in clothes or in character? If in character, how can the unfamiliar observer detect its presence or absence?

What relation has personality to the observer's own conventional prejudices and provincialism? Is the personality test to gain validity, for example, from an appraisal of any one or more of the following attributes?

(a) An indefinable something.
(b) Good breeding.
(c) Self-poise.
(d) Gentlemanly carriage ("House of Lords" test).
(e) Charm (womanly woman's test).
(f) Magnetic power.
(g) Polish of culture.
(h) Pleasing first impressions.
(i) Dignified address.
(j) A man who knows his place.
(k) Feeling of reserve force.
(l) Quiet and unassuming manner.
(m) Record of achievements . . . ?

What is this mysterious and misty something called personality? To my knowledge as examiner, no scholar or educator or publicist has ever analyzed that mystic entity! And yet we examiners (for, whatever you think us, don't think us fools) continue to mar or mold the destinies of thousands of men and women, about whose inner lives we know absolutely nothing.

On the inprovable assumption that we can estimate, judge and accurately mark personality, we commit an unforgivable sin against the dictates of conscience. Why do we proceed on so unreasonable a presupposition?

The explanation will give some simple-minded folk pain, but the truth will out; at least if there be people clever or honest enough to state it. Since this is to be an unmitigated expose of "inside facts," let nothing relevant or illuminating be concealed. As an examiner, fond of introspection, I may be relied upon to speak the unvarnished truth.

We employ the personality test as a weeder-out of non-conformists. Efficiency—that is, unquestioning obedience to official superiors—depends upon a smooth routine. Smooth routine depends upon willing routineers. Willing routineers are the conscript army of the faithful. The faithful are recruited from among the meek conformists.

The ideal we consciously have in mind is the meek conformist, for upon him we depend for the smooth systematization of pet policies. How

Fire from the Red Volcano

By ROBERT MINOR.

History of the Russian Communist Party, by Gregory Zinoviev, president of the Communist International. First English translation appearing in The Workers Monthly, into which new magazine have been combined The Liberator, The Labor Herald and the Soviet Russia Pictorial. Subscription (combined magazine) $2.00 per year. 1113 W. Washington Blvd., Chicago.

MOST of the events of history—the big, transforming phenomena which swing the human world to new orbits—passed by without their real significance being known to masses of men of the time, even to those whose lives were most affected, and even to those most active in bringing about the change. The masses of men when tumbled about by the mighty phenomena of revolution, are likely not to know or even suspect the real cause, tho it comes from within themselves, and are likely to attribute it to some unknown "superhuman" power, as tho the world were an ant-hill suddenly disturbed by some outer agency. The real significance, the essence, the cause of great upheavals are lost in a maze of misinterpretations based upon fetishes and feeble theories of a dead and gone past, or a dying present. Only in generations later are the real historical essences painstakingly dug up by men freed of the ideology of the dead order.

Hardly more than the dreamy peasant girl, Joan of Arc, did the French Dauphin or his military or political leaders understand the meaning of the then revolutionary nationalism whose active agents they were in clearing away the feudal seperatism and making France a political unit. Covered with the molasses of idealism were the bourgeois revolutions of England, America, and France; and their meaning hidden until later interpreted by the new materialist philosophers.

But Now a Change.

But in these modern times of proletarian revolution—led and governed by materialist philosophy—will the biggest events ever breaking upon the world be hidden again in the fog of past conceptions? Will the Russian revolution, which is only the first of a whole series in a world-revolution,—will it, can it be understood by any great numbers of those who live today?

We have the bourgeois interpretations of the Russian revolution—a crazy maze, an hysterical application of petty shop-keepers' conceptions of "good" and "evil," of big bankers' conceptions of "normalcy," and of Grand Dukes' conceptions of "civilization." A smothering avalanche of such "interpretations" of the present revolutionary epoch has, of course, fallen upon the masses from on high; it has submerged a great part of the masses. To the petty shop-keeper the Russian Revolution is due to "bad men" whose motives are the same as the motives of a petty shop-keeper himself when he gets drunk, or when he falls into temptation to beat his wife or to burn down his shop in order to collect the insurance.

Then we have the "revolutionary" idealistic interpretations of those fond persons, usually now in middle life, who ten or twenty years ago pictured themselves as one day standing on the barricades fighting for "Liberty, Equality and Fraternity" without realizing that this is but an idealistic version of the business slogan of free mercantile pursuits. Or the more timid section of the same school, who saw themselves voting in the "new day."

But the proletarian revolution of this time differs from all that have preceded, in not a few respects. It is more than any other a conscious revolution—a revolution the leading participants of which understand the real significance of what they are doing, understand the place in history of their performance. In this instance the need is not to cover up the essence of the revolution with the molasses of idealistic terms—not to conceal its meaning from the masses. This time we have not a case of one class fighting the battles for the benefit of another class, and requiring to be deceived as to the outcome! The need is above all other things to clarify sharply the masses' understanding of the great phenomenon. Above all, to clarify the understanding of the vanguard, the workers who must lead the revolution as members of the revolutionary party.

In this case, the clean, sharp sword which first clove the head of capitalism, is the Russian Communist Party. Unlike all revolutionary parties in the past revolutions, this party has no secrets to conceal from the masses whom it leads; and unlike all other revolutionary parties of the past its very life depends upon unmasking its motives to the masses.

The Workers Party of America.

Is the Workers Party of America a Communist party? The Workers Party has accepted all of the conditions laid down by the Communist International. It accepts and has accepted any and all decisions without hesitation, undertaking with no less zeal than is shown by the most grizzled veteran of revolution in the heart of Leningrad, to carry them out.

But is the Workers Party a Bolshevik party?

This is no idle question. And it is forced to the front by the raising of the slogan by the Fifth Congress of the Communist International: "Bolshevize the Party! Make it a Party of Lenin!"

Not the American party alone, but every Communist party in the world has this question on the order of the day. At the Fifth Congress it was recognized that the present period of "democratic-pacifism" (as witnessed by the "Labor" government in England, the "Socialist-radical" regime in France, the LaFollette "progressive" fake in America, and the resurrection of illusions thru the Dawes' plan in Germany) has brot about a general tendency to revive those social-democratic illustions which if established are suicidal for the working class. Even Communist parties are not immune from the poison of so general a fever. The International has chosen this time as the best for raising the question of the Bolshevik character of each of its affiliated parties. Bolshevization must be undertaken immediately by all. And: "These beginnings of Bolshevization must be steadily, systematically, indefatigably and consciously developed. The consciousness of the Communist Party and the Communist International as the leaders of the revolution must become part of the blood of every party organization and of every individual member, so that out of this consciousness of a Communist fighting fraternity, may arise the iron faith which will fuse the party into a Bolshevik organization and the International into a victorious World Party." (From a resolution of the Fifth Congress).

History of Bolshevism Published.

And so it is well at this time that the new consolidated monthly magazine of our Party, the Workers Monthly (the combination of The Liberator, The Labor Herald and the Soviet Russia Pictorial) begins to publish in its November number the History of the Russian Communist Party, by Gregory Zinoviev.

To bolshevize our party, we must know what Bolshevism is. In no manner can you know what Bolshevism is unless you know historically how Bolshevism came to existence as a political program. None can show how it came to be as well as those who made it. The president of our Communist International is the most fitted living member of that "Old Guard" of Bolshevism to tell us of it.

Zinoviev does so in so vivid a manner as to pass our expectations.

The book opens with a modesty which we, philosophically starved American bolsheviks, will think rather uncalled for; for Zinoviev thinks he is giving but an inadequate "sketch" of the tremendous history of the Russian Communist Party. Perhaps so, but it reads to us as a condensed but monumental classic.

"What is a Party?"

Zinoviev's simple discussion of "What is a Party?" will come as a revelation to many who have been using that word with a looseness that has carried them around in a circle. To learn what sort of an instrumen'—class instrument—a political party is, and to learn thereby the character of the mighty sword that was forged by Lenin and his assoicates, is to clear up many foggy questions now before the American comrades. Zinoviev gives the bourgeois definiton of a "party," and he gives the proletarian revolutionary version of the same thing—and between reading the two the reader sees many formerly obscure phenomena falling into a clear and definite place. The author makes unmistakable the process of the development of the Bolshevik wing of the Russian Social-Democratic Labor Party into that which was eventually to be the instrument of leadership of the Russian revolutionary working class.

Curiously enuf, Zinoviev, the Bolshevik, the fighter against the older school of Russian "Narodniki" (populists), and against the "Marxian" vulgarizers of Marxism, finds time and patience to give even these their share of credit. Many who had the habit, common in America, of idealizing the old "Narodniki," and who were somewhat bewildered by the sudden falling of their heroes, will find here a sympathetic appreciation of the work of the old, once-heroic school—an appreciation mingled with an explanation that blasts away the question of the ludicrously debased role of their present-day successors.

The book is the history of an ideological struggle in the midst of, and in connection with, the events which which it had to deal. We who in the young American Communist party have floundered and fought our way thru so many ideological combats (already so numerous for a party so young), will find a peculiar satisfaction and benefit in this. The book is not merely a record of happenings—"on this date we did so-and-so, on that date such and such happened"—no, there is the political explanation of all that happened. Not only the objective history, but also the subjective history—the study of the unswerving devotion to the revolutionary principles, as well as the doubts, waverings, convictions, back-slidings and recoveries. In the long and illuminating story of the disputes that arose in the Russian socialist movement, and later in the Bolshevik section of it, not only is every point of view clearly given, but how that point of view came about is also explained in a way that makes the reader feels as tho some great novelist were probing the psychological depths of these men of history. That's probably not fair to the author, who is anything but a writer of romance—but this scientific handling of history is done so well, with such a fine appreciation of human psychology, that the tensest tale of a Tolstoi could not be more intriguing to the reader.

Not even are the mishaps of the Russian Bolsheviks with the Tsar's police lacking in this book,—and after all, this, too, is of political importance. (We who, much to the mirth of some of our yellow socialist friends, were arrested at our 1922 convention, will find reassurance as well as interest in the similar events in the life of our older sister party of Russia.)

The description of the manner in which the Bolsheviks early in their history took up the question of "Terror," and the answer they gave to the question, is as good as a classic essay on the subject. The Marxian revolutionists who were afterward to apply the Terror as a mass weapon against the enemy class, did not fall into the primitive childishness of the romantic and ineffective individualists. But early they forged in their party ideology the weapon of mass terror, administered by the hand of an organized proletarian state, that was destined to break the resistance of a defeated bourgeoisie and to save a proletarian revolution.

"Hegemony of the Proletariat."

So, too, was early developed the key question of the "Hegemony of the Proletariat,"—the question on which the petty bourgeois socialist fractions were sure to break and show their real class in'ards, as soon as they struck it. Here, in the question as to which class would take the hegemony, the dominance over the revolutionary period, of course the leader Lenin rose to the height of his greatness; here, the raising of this question aided Bolshevism to crystallizo itself. The many petty bourgeoise currents of "socialism," forming in fact one consistent stream, beat in vain against the rock of Lenin. "Legal Marxism"—another question, or another phase of the same question of petty bourgeois conception of proletarian revolution, came in turn into conflict with the revolutionary Marxism of Lenin.

In a rather reminiscent style, Zinoviev describes the development of Peter Struve—the evolution of a traitor. This and other recitals connected with the names of famous historical figures, gives the book a certain biographical color that is entrancing. The early role of the Jewish comrades, in laying the cornerstone of the party, and the story of the "Bund" are there.

Those of us who remember the period of dispute in the American socialist party about "direct action" will get a peculiar thrill out of the account of the discussion and disputes about the more accurately phrased Russian party questions of the "general strike," "armed insurrection" and "arming of the workers."

Closely related to the question of the "Role of the Proletariat in the Revolution" and that of the "Hegemony of the Proletariat" and "Legal Marxism" came the question of "Economism"—another phase under which the petty bourgeois ideology arose to battle. The leading of the revolution by the proletariat, the taking over of power by the proletariat, the dictatorship of the proletariat, being barred from correct procedure of course the rest followed logically. This "Economism" was a movement, historically of a breed with menshevism, to confine the demands of the revolutionary proletarian movement to "economic" demands—demands for economic betterment—a movement which attempted to take upon itself the glory of getting closer to the masses, and which went so far as to raise the question of abstaining from the slogan "Down with the Autocracy," to avoid frightening the working masses. Against it the Leninites gave successful battle.

"Professional Revolutionists."

Also the question of "professional revolutionists" played in its turn a significant part in the welding of the Bolshevik party. "Professional revolutionists"? It sounds like a scornful epithet, and it was, at first. But it was a challenge accepted by the Leninists. With the fearlessness in facing facts which characterized him, Lenin showed that exactly that—the organization of "professional revolutionists" was required. Many Americans need to read this.

A singular appreciation of just what a political party program means to a revolutionary party is obtained here, and it is particularly timely at this time when the Communist International is expending large energies upon the formulation of a program for all Communist parties—for the single world-party which we are. It's a far cry from the shallow conception of a program as a hastily-thrown-together document of a day, to the sight of an enormous world organization put into deliberate motion for the purpose of producing a single document! But you begin to under-

The Rock-Bottom Foundation

(The Russian Working Class and Its R

By Moissay

ON May 1, 1924, the number of Russian adult Communists was 680 thousand. The number of young Communists, between the ages of 18 and 25, was 570 thousand. The army of Russian Communists thus counted one and a quarter million. Since then the number has grown.

The total membership of the Russian labor unions is five million, embracing all persons engaged in a useful occupation. If we were to discount a million and a half office workers employed in the state machinery and co-operative organizations, most of whom are no less devoted to the new order than many other groups of workers, there would remain three million and a half proletarians engaged in factories, mines, mills, in the transportation system, partly in the forests, partly as hired laborers on the land.

Those five million organized men and women, especially the three and a half million manual workers, form the foundation of the new order. The one and a quarter million Communists is the cement that keeps them together. Communism is the motive power that lends their work both aim and direction.

"Masters" and "Slaves"?

It is quite obvious at a glance that there can be no "domination" of the working class by the Communist "rulers" as the social patriotic liars would have us believe. "Domination" implies a small group commanding large masses. There can be no domination of one and a quarter million over five million people. Where each third or fourth member of the working class is a Communist, the Communists merge in the masses, especially under conditions where each proletarian can join the party any minute and thus become a "ruler." The doors of the party open with great difficulty before an intellectual, a son of the bourgeoisie. But the doors of the party are wide open before a worker, a proletarian of the factories and mills. Each one is free to become one of the chosen. Each one may do the work of administration.

No Definite Line Between the Party and the Working Class.

The truth is that it is almost impossible to draw a line between the Communists and the rest of the workers. The working class is animated by the same ideas as the Communists. The working class lends a sympathetic and attentive ear to the advice of the Communists. Among the so-called non-partisan workers there are many who understand their revolution and class interests no less clearly than the Communists. If numbers of workers do not belong to the Communist party this is due to causes that have nothing to do with conviction: some are in bad health, others are overbusy, still others are not possessed of requisite abilities, some, recently arrived from the countryside, have not yet sufficiently adapted themselves to urban life, others are handicapped by family conditions, still others think that the interests of the workers will be sufficiently guarded even without their participation. It is not easy to be a Communist. Communist duties are severe. Communist activities are varied. The Communist party gets hold of all of a man's time, all his abilities, all his attention, all his strength, health, life. Not everyone can, therefore, become a member of the Communist party. The workers themselves distinguish as to who should and who should not be a member of the Communist party. In the practical day-by-day work, however, it is impossible to find the line where the Communist party ends and the working class at large begins. The sessions of the Communist shop nucleus (local group) are being attended not only by Communists but by non-partisan workers as well. The discussions of the nucleus are being participated in by all present, Communists and non-Communists alike. Meetings called by the nucleus are being frequented by all the workers of the plant. The life of the Communist party is of absorbing interest to large masses of workers. Whenever the party calls, whenever a demonstration of readiness to fight or actual sacrifices are required, the bulk of the working class responds.

Proletarian Dictatorship.

This major part of the working class is the rock-bottom foundation of the Soviet Republic. This mass of workers is carrying thru the proletarian dictatorship.

The white guards with their socialist satellites would make the world believe that the Russian worker is a boob, a stupid beast of burden, a stunned, ignorant creature on whose back the Zinovievs and Kamenevs do their roughriding, hammering its head with the mallet of dictatorial power. The white guards with their socialist Abramovitch crew appeal to world capitalism to free the Russian working class from the Communist bandits. The fact is that the white guards would have long been victorious if the Russian working class were the dope they depict it. Proletarian dictatorship would not last a day if the rank and file workers of the Soviet Republic would not understand the meaning and the significance of the proletarian revolution, if they would not see the road that leads to a bright future.

The rank and file workers of the Soviet Republic understand a lot more than all the professional "friends of labor," all "radical" bourgeois editors and even those honest philanthropists who deplore the "lamentable fate" of the Russian workers. The rank and file worker is fully alive to the fact that he has made a revolution, that it has been a victorious revolution, that the revolution broke the backbone of capitalism, that he has seized the entire economic apparatus so that enuf may be produced for the welfare of all, and that only this road will lead him to ultimate liberation.

The rank and file worker is no angelic creature, no bloodless dreamer. The rank and file worker is a human being with all human weaknesses and passions. He would certainly like to lead a peaceful, comfortable existence. He understands no less than his socialist, well-wishers that clean clothes and large rooms are preferred to rags and crammed quarters. But he understands also that were he to follow the lead of the menshevik counter revolutionaries he would not only have no hope of clean clothes and decent quarters, but he would be mercilessly shackled by the bourgeois, his lifeblood would be so thoroly squeezed out of his body that the very idea of a secure future for him and his kind would appear utterly preposterous.

Down with the Capitalists!

The rank and file Russian worker does not want the capitalists. He has driven them out of his land, and he will never permit them to get into power. In times of stress, under the pressure of a severe economic crisis, the private trader was in 1921 allowed to do business. The nepman came into being. But he is looked upon by the worker as a temporary evil. The Russian worker has not admitted the nepman either into the big industrial establishments, nor into the mines, nor into the oil fields, nor into the railroad business, nor into the business of foreign trade. The Russian worker tolerates the private businessman in the retail more than in the wholesale trade because the state economic apparatus has not yet created the agencies that are necessary to reach the mass consumers especially in the village. The rights of the nepman, however, are not allowed to be extended. If the last congress of the Russian Communist party decided to start a struggle of competition against the nepman, this was in accord with the wish of the working class. If the nepman's freedom of movement will further be restricted in the not far future, so will be the command of the working class. The rank and file Russian worker wants no bosses, no businessmen, no fat paunches, no individuals living on others' work, on capital, on profits.

Slow Patient Work.

The rank and file Russian worker knows that one cannot get everything at once. The Russian worker is fully aware of the fact that the Russian factories are inferior in equipment to the factories of the capitalist countries, that in point of technical knowledge and efficiency the Russian worker is far behind his Western brother, that there will be much experimenting, much hard labor, much trying and blundering and correcting errors and starting anew before Russian industrial work reaches a high level. The Russian worker knows that his industrial apparatus is weak, undeveloped, unwieldy, absorbing over-much energy. But he knows also that it is his own apparatus, secured in fierce bloody battles after years of struggle. The Russian worker says to himself that a weak economic apparatus in the hands of the working class is better than a strong economic apparatus in the hands of the bourgeoisie. A weak economic apparatus can be improved, can be perfected, can be made to serve the best interests of the working class. A capitalist apparatus, however technically efficient, is ever and ever a means of oppressing the working class. This elemental truth, which is Chinese to the average bourgeois economist, has become ingrained in the mind of the worker thru the very practice of his daily life.

Responsibility Before the Country.

The rank and file Russian worker is conscious of his responsibility for both the political and economic advance of the country. His behavior therefore, is that of a wise husbandman who will not consume all of a year's crop, but leave a part for seeds, a part for the cultivation of new fields and a part for a rainy day. The Russian worker knows that it would not be economical to pay out to the workers in the form of wages all the wealth produced by their labor. The Russian working class is the supreme power, it can take as much as it pleases. It is aware, however, that economy is imperative at present. Equipment is to be improved, capital is to be accumulated, productivity of labor is to be increased, the output of commodities is to be made to grow. The working class exploits itself in the present in order that its life may be easier tommorrow and ever after. The working class allots itself a smaller wage than the pre-war standard in order that it may be possible to improve and enlarge the factories, the mills, the railroads, the entire economic life. If there are some workingmen who do not understand this economic foresight and are therefore dissatisfied, the others bring them enlightenment. A work of education is being conducted among them so that they may realize that this policy is only conducted in their own class interests. And if the mensheviks attempt to utilize this ignorance of a small section of the workers to arouse them against the existing order, the workers will hit hard and without mercy.

Sacrifices.

The rank and file Russian worker knows how to make sacrifices for his proletarian order. A few days before the present writer departed from Moscow, Kamenev, the economic spokesman of the R. C. P. delivered a speech before an assemblage of responsible Communist workers. Reviewing the economic situation, the speaker stressed the idea that in consequence of bad crops in a section of the Volga region and the additional burden thus put on the state budget, it was incumbent upon the workers to increase the productivity of labor: i. e. to work more intensively, to produce more than they produced in a unit of time, which meant additional expenditure of energy on the part of the workers. Kamenev's message was carried by the responsible communists all over Moscow factories and mills. Workmen's meetings were called everywhere, facts and figures were put before the audiences, the entire mechanism of the economic life was laid bare; the situation of agriculture, the currency problem, the exchange of commodities between village and town, the role of cheap goods, the system of foreign trade. The demand of the hour was explained to the workers in unequivocal language. What was their response? Did they revolt? Did they go on strike? Nonsense! There is nobody to revolt against, since the carriers of the message were themselves in the main part manual workers, factory hands who were to be affected by an increase in the productivity of labor no less than their fellow workers. There is no sense in striking since the workers know full well that the surplus created by increased productivity of their labor will not be appropriated by private owners but will serve to satisfy the needs of the state.

Five or six years ago the Russian worker shed his blood defending his proletarian revolution against inner foes and world imperialism. Four years ago he ate dry bread and drank "carrot tea" without sugar in his stubborn fight for the October conquests. Now his situation is incomparably more advantageous: he has shaped his life more comfortably, he has removed the grossest manifestations of poverty, he feeds and clothes himself more or less decently, the outlook is encouraging, the future bodes well for the proletarian country,—the more reason for the rank and file worker to stand ready to suffer temporary privation if such be the supreme command of the defense of proletarian power.

The Workman and the Peasant.

The rank and file worker is drawing the poorer peasant into the work of building a new life. There is no basic contradiction between the interests of the workers and the interests of the poorer peasants. It is good for the worker when the peasant produces more and better agricultural products, but this is also to the interest of the peasant. It is to the peasants' benefit when the industrial establishments produce more and better manufactured goods to satisfy their wants, but thi

Against Luxuries.

The rank and file worker is accustomed to scant earnest living. The rank and file worker looks askance at those who revel in a luxurious life. The rank and file worker exercises the most relentless control over the officials of his state, the leaders of his party, the functionaries of his institutions. The workers' control gives no quarter, especially to people identifying themselves with the revolution. A stranger, a man who does not share in the interests of the workers, may sometimes receive excessive renumeration. A "spec" (specialist), be he an engineer or a chemist or a trade expert, often receives ten times as much as a Communist responsible worker. The nepman is allowed to grab, tho he is often being skinned by means of taxation and other duties. The worker pays to all these characters because he realizes that this is his tuition fee which is indispensable as long as the worker himself has not yet acquired the requisite knowledge and skill. The worker pays, at the same time hating the receivers, gradually replacing the outside specialists by the proletariat's own "red specs," managers, technicians, experts in various realms, starting a severe battle of competition against the nepman so as to replace him by co-operative undertakings. The workingman pays only because he knows that it must be so and that it is only a transitory measure. When he deals with his own kind he makes proletarian mode of living, proletarian severity, proletarian simplicity the law and the standard. With the amassing of wealth, with the raising of the level of general well being, everybody will lead a more comfortable and more refined existence. For the time being the demand of the worker is that there be no marked difference between the standard of living of the highest Communist leader and that of the average worker. The worker stands for equality as far is it can be realized in everyday life. This proletarian psychology has put a stamp on the Soviet Republic as a whole, on all its classes. It has already become bad tone in Soviet Russia to shine in resplendent attire, in jewels, in luxurious habitations. This proletarian public opinion is in itself a powerful check on all those weak elements who would be inclined to misuse their official position for personal profit.

Collective Activities.

The rank and file Russian worker is a collective being, a member of a social unit. All his life is spent in co-operation with fellow workers. In his factory he is an integral part of an industrial organization. In his labor union he is part of a collective whole. In the Communist party he feels a soldier of a well-disciplined army. In his political activities he always appears hand in hand with workers' and peasants' masses. In cultural life he is never confined to himself, he is never centered upon his individual self-sufficiency, he is always working in co-operation with his comrades. The club, the singing group, the lecture, the reading circle, the dramatic organization, the mass performances, the sport field, the street manifestations,—everything is shared with others, everywhere the worker expresses himself as part of a social organization. The political activities of the working class,—Soviet elections, Soviet work, party work, union work,—are mass functions, creative efforts for the benefit of the class, of the proletarian state, of the proletarian future. The rank and file Russian worker knows that he himself must do the political work, he himself in co-ordination and conjunction with the rest of his class. Therefore he scoffs at a system where a "citizen" casts his vote once in two years and rests inert the remaining time. Therefore the Russian worker fails to understand a system of "democracy" where politics is the specialty of professional politicians while the masses have no share in the entire work of legislation, administration, judiciary, diplomacy, in shaping the budget and managing the other economic activities of the country. The rank and file Russian worker has had a taste of real democracy where not the ballot is the expression of self-government but the practical day-by-day political work. Therefore the Russian worker knows something that is hidden from the patented jurists,—that the Soviet system is as much superior to formal bourgeois democracy as socialism is superior to bourgeois exploitation. The Russian worker is not a legal "spec," he does not split hairs over the finest judicial definitions. He knows the value of his proletarian order from his own practice. This order is the reverse of individualistic: one does not say, "I," one says, "We"—economic, political and cultural work is done on a collectivist basis.

Organization.

The Russian worker is thoroly organized. The Russian worker has passed thru a powerful school of social work. The Russian worker never looks upon a meeting as upon a picnic, never thinks of a conference as a "good time." The Russian worker has an earnest attitude towards his problems and duties. In Russia, non-attendance of committee meetings, of party school lectures, of union sessions, is an unusual occurence. In Russia, highfalutin firey speeches are almost unknown. In a business-like, practical, prosaic manner does the Russian proletarian functionary deliver his oration. Seriously, patiently and attentively does the audience listen, tho it may be tired after a day's work. Not even the term "speech" is now current in the Russian political practice: instead the worlds "lecture" or "report" are commonly used. Every lecture and report must contain an array of facts which could be jotted down in a notebook and retold to others. The Russian worker has learned to listen, to comprehend, to judge, to decide. The Russian worker has learned to remain silent where the problem is clear to him or where others have made the necessary remarks. The Russian worker has learned to untangle the most complicated problems and to find solutions. The Russian worker seems to be continually preoccupied with immediate practical questions of state interest; he seems so restrained; cool, unconcerned; back of this absorption in the pressing immediate work, however, there is a tremendous endurance, an iron-clad will, a readiness to guard the October Revolution to the very last breath.

Ruthless Toward Foes.

The rank and file Russian worker is severe towards himself and severe towards his foes. The Russian worker has no use for kid gloves. He has never cut intellectual capers. He does not coat bitter facts with a saliva of sweetish words. The Russian worker has an adequate name for every fact and a proper valuation for every action. The Russian worker does not claim to have introduced universal equality; he bluntly and brazenly declares that what he has introduced is proletarian dictatorship, i. e., a system where the working class and part of the peasants dominate all other classes and groups. The Russian worker declares in the frankest and most outspoken fashion that the aim of the proletarian dictatorship is to uproot, exterminate and annihilate all exploiting groups and classes. If anybody appeals in the name of abstract "justice," the worker will say that it is a supreme act of proletarian justice to abandon exploitation together with the exploiting classes. If anybody shields himself with the claim of "equality," the worker will say that there can be no equality between the workingman and the nepman since the workingman is the creator of all and the nepman is a pest. And if anybody complains of "oppression," the worker will say that this is his avowed aim,—to oppress his class enemies and to continue his oppression until they disappear from the face of the earth. If a bourgeois watchdog of an Abramovitch wags his tail and spits out a question as to why, then, the workers are dissatisfied when they are being oppressed by the capitalists, the Russian worker would answer: "Stop your slimy blubbering! We know that the aim of your question is the defense of capitalism. We, the workers, have nothing to do with 'eternal justice.' We are fighters in the class struggle. When we are being oppressed, we kick, we fight, we revolt, knowing that we are right, that we have produced all the wealth of the world, that we are being robbed of the fruit of our labor and that without us humanity cannot exist. Now that we have acquired power we shall exterminate the bourgeoisie because it is useless, because it interferes with the program of mankind, because it is a parasite and because the future will witness a society devoid of class divisions. You mensheviks have pity with the bourgeoisie, you demand equality and justice for the parasite class: we, the workers, understand you full well and we send you to the devil together with your masters."

The Russian worker is relentless in self-discipline and merciless towards his foe He is not sentimental. He is a man of iron. He has created a police and a secret service, an army and a judiciary to protect his power. When the white guards and the black socialists, equipped with the money of the imperialist governments and blessed by international capitalism, start fomenting revolts and upheavals in the Soviet Republic, the working class hits hard, hits ruthlessly so the plotters may forget to try again.

MAN AND WOMAN

By Robin Dunbar.

In the upper bourgeois circles, man is known by his success; i. e., his ability to exploit a great number of slaves. Woman is recognized there by her ability to fasten herself parasitically on a successful man, and to cling there tenaciously. Illustrations: Henry Ford and any of the Vanderbilt women or the Goulds, or Mr. and Mrs. Hearst.

In the middle bourgeois strata, man is known by his talents; i. e., his power to extract money from the higher bourgeoisie. Woman is famous there for the same thing plus her ability to exploit her sex attraction. Examples: Nicholas Murray Butler and Peggy Joyce; Albert Fall and Evelyn Nesbit.

In the lower or bohemian bourgeois clans man is known by his knack of knocking the mazuma out of the next higher class, for instance, Rudolph Valentino, Fatty Arbuckle, Cal Coolidge. Woman precisely for the same thing plus her knack of selling her sex favors; Mabel Norman and the movie stars, actresses, and demi-monde of ill-repute like Castle, Thaw, et al.

Among the militant sections of the working class, the unions, the Communists and the revolutionists, man is known by his ability to organize his class to fight the bourgeoisie; Lenin, Foster, Zinoviev. Woman here becomes prominent partly as a fighter and partly as the supporter and protector of those who fight. Examples: Krupskaya, Luxemburg, Zetkin.

BEDACHT AND BROWDER START PARTY CLASSES IN MARXISM

If you are a Marxist—or want to become a Marxist—you will be interested in the class in Advanced Marxism which the Chicago Local of the Workers Party is conducting this fall. The first session of the class will be held on Sunday, Oct. 12, at the Workers Lyceum, 2733 Hirsch Blvd., at 10:30 a. m.

An examination will be given at the first session of the class, so that prospective students who are uncertain of their standing may learn whether they should join a class in advanced or another in elementary Marxism. The test will consist of twenty-five questions on Marxian theory, and candidates for the advanced class are expected to be able to answer at least two-thirds of them correctly.

Another class, for those who are beginning their studies of Marxism, is to be given under the direction of Earl R. Browder, editor of the Workers Monthly. Comrade Browder's class will be held every Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock, at 2633 Hirsch Blvd. The first meeting of the class will be held on October 15.

In addition to these courses, Comrade Manuel Gomez will conduct a class in "Imperialism, the Final Stage of Capitalism," on Sunday afternoons, beginning October 26. The course in the history of the American Communist movement, which will be conducted by Comrade James P. Cannon, is to begin on November 11.

The tuition fee is $1.50 for each course, and 75 cents extra for each additional course.

Fire from the Red Volcano

stand the purpose of a revolutionary program,—you learn that it is not only a document—as you pursue the history of the Communist movement.

All thru the work, Zinoviev pays a certain delicate deference to the once mighty leader of proletarian revolutionary theory, Plekhanov. Plekhanov, once a Bolshevik and for a time a battler at the side of Lenin for the revolutionary Marxian cause against petty-bourgeois opportunism, Plekhanov is remembered tenderly for his earlier services, and for his later desertion he is—explained.

War and Revolution.

Zinoviev carries his account thru the Japanese war and the clashes with the mensheviki over the question of the socialist attitude toward that war. Then into the revolution of 1905 and 1906—the "Dress Rehearsal" thru which the Bolsheviks learned so well the parts they were to play in the grand opening of 1917. Altho there is not as much recital of the actual happenings of that tremendous time as the thirsty American Bolsheviks would like to have Comrade Zinoviev give us, nevertheless that which is given is put in such a setting as to give it brilliant clarity of meaning. And after all, Zinoviev is writing the history of the party and not of the revolution, if the two can be distinguished.

And after the crushing of the 1905 revolution, during the terrible period of reaction, despair and consequent wild aberations, we find again the clash between the steadfast Marxian revolutionists and the petty-bourgeois-minded reformists, taking this time the form of the question "1847 or 1849," meaning the question of whether the period ahead was a period of long and peaceful capitalist development or one of a lull between revolutionary outbreaks. And what a tremendous help this is, to understand the present similar dispute! And during the depression of revolutionary hope came the pressure for unity which resulted in reuniting with the mensheviki—and further clashes all of which are as the acted out for the purpose of teaching us of this day what Bolshevism is.

The "Liquidators."

There was the rise of the "Liquidators"—what a curse the use of this term was to the American party!—but here in the history of the Russian party we learn just what Liquidators really were—and that is something different from the thing which was miscalled by that name in America. But read it from Zinoviev's pen, not mine.

This history does not purport to go into the detail of the world war and the 1917 revolution, but only gives a few sharp, clear pictures of the beginnings of the crystalization of the revolutionary left wing of socialism, the Zimmerwald conference, the work of Lenin in Switzerland, with which the stage was set for the coming of the final revolutionary world-organization, the Communist International.

The work closes with some exceedingly interesting historical documents and very appropriately with "The Bolsheviki and the Hegemony of the Proletariat," by Zinoviev.

The first installment of this epoch-marking work will undoubtedly arouse a keen interest among the Workers Party membership, and especially at this time, when, as I say, we have before us the stern job of making this a truly Bolshevik party, to do which we must know what a Bolshevik party is.

well-known revolutionist and writer, who has just returned from Russia, will be one of the leading articles in the November issue of The Workers Monthly.

Olgin's writings about Russia and the revolution have won him high praise thruout the world. The Shop Nucleus and the Branch

By Martin Abern

In reorganizing the Workers Party from its present territorial branch foundation to the work shop or shop nucleus basis, one of the big problems to solve is the relation of the shop nucleus to the branch. The relations between them will not be of a single or everlasting type.

We have to consider:

1. The relations of the shop nucleus to the present territorial branch, and

2. The relation of the shop nucleus to the shop nucleus branch, or the branch composed of shop nuclei.

The former is the big transitional problem; the latter takes up the relations between the shop nucleus and the branch when the party has been more or less completely reorganized, and somewhat definite relationships and activity have thereby developed.

In America, it must be said, the problem of the shop nuclei organization is more difficult than in other countries, due chiefly to the existence of the many language organizations or federations in our party. The only other country which really approaches America in this particular difficulty is Czecho-Slovakia. But even there, after many attempts to side-step and evade the reorganization of the party into shop nuclei, the Czecho-Slovak Communist party is (the Young Communist League of Czecho-Slovakia already has) now proceeding to organize shop nuclei.

Shop Nuclei Will Aid Work Among Foreign Workers

We must face the issue of the language branch and try to find means of reorganizing the entire Workers Party on the shop nuclei basis, at the same time not hurting the Communist propaganda among the foreign language speaking workers. On the contrary, that must and will be extended when the shop nuclei work is really started and understood. It is very likely that many other practical suggestions and methods will be evolved in making and experimenting with the change and work. However, to begin with, some forms of relation must be set up.

First, Organize the Shop Nucleus.

Assume that a shop nucleus has been formed from a branch or a number of English and language territorial branches. What shall be the connection, then, of the members of the shop nucleus toward their former English or language branch? (Here the relationship to the language branch is mainly considered; the English branch question is much easier of solution). In the shop nucleus, as mentioned in previous articles, the member pays his dues, carries on the economic and political work, and has full power as a party member, that is, with voice and vote on all matters.

The shop nucleus member, however, is not removed entirely from his territorial (or old style) branch. He still remains a member of his former English or language territorial branch.

To be realistic in reorganizing the Workers Party, the most feasible method, at present, is to have the members of the shop nucleus remain also members of their former territorial branches.

What shall be the powers and duties of the member of the shop nucleus in his territorial branch? Does he have the full powers of a party member in the territorial branch? To give him also full powers in the territorial branch would mean that he has more rights than a party member who as yet does not belong to a shop nucleus but only to a branch. It would give him two votes, one in the shop nucleus and one in the territorial branch, on all matters. Therefore, in his territorial branch, the shop nucleus member should be given a voice only on all matters, but not a vote.

The question arises: What about the activity of a shop nucleus member in his territorial branch? Is he responsible in any way to it? Shall he be active in it? Yes; naturally. If the members of the shop nucleus were to lose all contact, during the transition period, with the language territorial branch, then, in all probability, the language branch activities would cease before the shop nuclei are properly established. It would be very difficult to carry on propaganda work among the foreign workers. This is especially so because the shop nucleus members are, in most instances, the comrades who were most active in their language branches.

Shop Nucleus Work Effective Because Planned

The shop nucleus meetings will, with few exceptions, (perhaps in some places among the needle trades) be carried on in English. Yet that does not and cannot do away with language propaganda work in the work shop. Members of the shop nucleus, who speak foreign languages, can carry on work in the shop in the languages that the workers understand. For example, in a large shop, clothing, textile, machine, etc., if there are workers employed who speak Italian, Russian, South Slav, Jewish, Lithuanian, English, etc., and if the shop nucleus has comrades speaking these languages, it is expected that each comrade does some part of his shop nucleus work in other languages in order to reach the other workers with our propaganda, literature, etc. The formation of shop nuclei, hence, instead of interfering with the work of the foreign-speaking comrades, helps to broaden and extend their activities. This is plainly so, because the WORK OF THE SHOP NUCLEUS FOR EVERY ACTIVITY IN THE SHOP IS PLANNED AND THEN CARRIED OUT. Since the fundamental problem of the language member in the shop nucleus is the matter of continuing language propaganda activity among the foreign workers, we can already see that the language work will continue and increase in the shop nucleus. We should, however, see what technical or organizational ties there will be between the shop nucleus members and the language territorial branch in the transition period. As a measure, the following is possible.

Shop Nucleus Member Continues Work In Language Territorial Branch.

The shop nucleus member, as pointed out before, has full powers in his shop uncleus and carries on his main activities there. In the language terirtorial branch, he is subject to carrying on propaganda work assigned to him, such as raising funds for the language press, educational activity etc. All the members of the shop nucleus must regularly and continuously participate in the work of the territorial branch: visit its meetings work in the educational groups, classes, and carry thru the various tasks of the branch. A transitional relationship in thus actively entered into between the shop nucleus and the language or English territorial branch.

Participating, as he does, in the territorial branch, while primarily active in the shop nucleus, the matter of the powers of shop nucleus members in the teritorial branch must be settled The following, on the basis of activities of the members, can be satisfactory to all.

The shop nucleus member shall have voice and vote on all Federation organizational matters, that is, on press, internal Federation problems, such as means of conducting the work among the foreign workers. But the shop nucleus member has voice only in the territorial branch on Party political matters, sluch as the right to send delegates to higher bodies, the C. C. C., conventions, political issues in the Party and so on. Those latter and other rights he has in the shop nucleus. It can be said, then, inversely, that the Federation or language branch still has power over the shop nucleus member on Federation matters, but not on direct Party organizational and political matters.

It follows too, that even as there are active relations between the members of the shop nucleus with the branch, there is need also of committee relations between the shop nucleus and the branch in order to outline and co-ordinate the work. A few points which are accepted are:

1. The shop nucleus, during the transition period, is subordinated to the existing (old style) teritorial branch;

2. The shop nucleus executive committee meets regularly with the territorial branch executive committee;

3. The shop nucleus members participate in the arrangements and work of the branch;
